There is no appeal in the case of Joel Codington, he having entered a plea of non-suit, but Horace Codington, through his counsel, W. V. Steele, gave notice of appeal on a writ of error. Both men were turned over to Sheriff Ross. Joel Codington will be taken to Trenton soon, while Horace Codington may secure bail pending a decision on appeal. The writ of error was allowed later in the day and is now on its way from Trenton to Somerville.

When the Codingtons were arraigned for the imposition of sentence, Judge Schenck began by *saying that it was the most trying or*deal in his whole career on the bench, that of sentencing two personal friends. He said that he was one of five men who signed the application of Horace Codington for admission to the bar. However, he realized that he had a duty to perform and he hoped that the conviction and sentence would deter other officials from misappropriating trust funds.

Judge Schenck then stated that the maximum penalty in the cases before him was seven years in State prison or a $2,000 fine or both. He then pronounced sentence as stated above.

Prior to the announcement of sentence, W. V. Steele called John B. Dunster, of Bernardsville, a witness in the trial, to prove that Thomas Holmes, a juror, made a remark to Dunster, the night after the first day of the trial, showing that he, the juror was prejudiced. The conversation, it is said, was to the effect that all the evidence was against Codington. The conversation was alleged to have taken place at the Bernardsville inn, in the presence of Fred Valentine. When the latter was called he declared that he never heard such a conversation and refuted the statement by Dunster.

Numerous technicalities were raised by counsel for defendant, Horace Codington, but all were dismissed by Judge Schenck. Just before sentence was pronounced, earnest pleas for clemency were made by Alvah A. Clark, A. M. Beekman, Daniel H. Meekins and W. Stevens.

The sentences are considered light. The words of Judge Schenck in pronouncing sentence were generally considered fair.

WATCHUNG HUNT CLUB IN SEASON'S FIRST RUN

Several members of the Watchung Hunt Club enjoyed their first hunt of the season Saturday afternoon meeting at the Netherwood tower. The gallop was a stiff one, taking in Scotch Plains, Mountainside, Glenside, Baltusrol, Westfield and finishing up at Dog Tavern.

Among those who rode were Miss Gertrude Noe, of Westfield; Mrs. H. R. Stockton, Charles F. Wildey, Chas. W. Fisk, Henry Bourne, Lewis E. Waring, C. E. S. Bellows, C. W. Holland, Hugh Germley, Harry Finch and Chris. Cumins, whip.

Although the going was very heavy, there were no spills. The new hounds purchased by the club recently were used and they worked out in good shape. There are nine new couples in the pack, six old couples having been sent to Orange county, Virginia.

YOUNGSTERS RAISE $332 FOR CHILDREN'S WARD

Under the auspices of the Hartridge School, a children's fair was held at the school auditorium, Saturday afternoon for the purpose of starting a fund with which to establish a children's ward at Muhlenberg Hospital. This morning Miss Hartridge turned over to the hospital authorities $332 as the profits of the affair. The children entered into the spirit of the affair with enthusiasm and it was a great success.

The whole thing was conducted along simple lines, the tables being divided among the various departments as follows: Elementary—first grade, marbles, kites, etc.; second, Dutch articles; third, fruits and nuts; fourth and fifth, toys; sixth and seventh, useful articles; elementary, boys, grab bag, candy, woodwork, etc.; academic—first grade, dolls; second, candy and flowers; third, tea, coffee and sandwiches; fourth and fifth, fancy articles.

All the tables were liberally patronized. At one table where nothing but ten cent articles were sold the proceeds were $32. The children hope that the fair will prove an incentive for others to do something toward increasing the fund. Miss Hartridge had general supervision of the affair and was assisted by her corps of teachers.

HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS PRESENT A PLAY

The presentation of the play "Silas Marner" by high school pupils, in the auditorium on Saturday night was a distinct success. The success of the play was in a large measure due to the efforts of Miss Gilbert, the sophomore English teacher, who dramatized the sketch and coached the youthful thespians. The entertainment was given for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital, and a substantial sum was realized.

There were nine scenes in the production and the part of Silas Marner, was ably filled by Edward Hanrahan. He portrayed the part of the old man with marked ability. Mr. Hanrahan's little sister, Koronia, took the part of "Eppie" and won considerable applause.

Fred Fenno, as a realistic villian in the past of Godfrey Cass and Burnett Doane *acquitted himself credi*tably as Winston Cass. In the second part Louis Mattack took the part of Marner and the scene between "Eppie" and "Silas" was very touching. Miss Margaret Loizeaux also starred in the part of "Eppie." Stephen Haff played a number of Schumann's selections and Fred Loizeaux was stage manager. Those in the cast were:

Fred Fenno, Burnett Doane, Ted Hanrahan, Louis Mattack, Louis Strong, Fred Conlin, Raymond Manley, Gardner Bristol, Sam Kroney, Margaret Brownlee, Gladys Chase, Jennette Neighbour, Margaret Loizeaux, Jack Todd, John Uhler, Ruth Douglas, Jane Maxwell, Frank Cullen, Elmer Hunting, Jack Zeragi, Miss Webster, Miss Viola Zarda, Theo Champlin, Miss Helen Ryder gave the prologue.

Borough Court Cases.

After hearing a number of witnesses Recorder Dolliver let Pina go on the latter's promise to keep away from the Cacici domicle in the future. F. X. Moore and William Handford, who were arrested for drunkenness, were fined five and two dollars, respectively.

AGAINST AUTO BILLS PENDING IN LEGISLATURE

Automobilists from all parts of New Jersey are stirred up over the complex situation resulting from the stand taken by the Legislature of this State in the question of automobiling. The defeat of the Edge bill last week and the introduction of two others, aimed at the automobilists, was the signal to the automobile men for the call to arms.

The Edge bill, which suffered defeat, was to allow motorists registered in other States to tour New Jersey without further formality. The bill was expected to become a law, but it did not meet with the approval of Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, President of the Senate, whose influence was sufficient to beat it.

One of the two bills subsequently were introduced provides for an increase in the license fees of automobiles, as follows: $3 for 10 h. p. or less; $5 10 h. p. to 15 h. p.; $10 for 16 to 20 h. p.; $15 for 21 to 24 h. p.; $20 for 25 to 29 h. p., and $25 for 30 h. p. or over, all of which are in addition to the drivers' licenses, and contains a joker which will do away with the present limited tourist privilege permitting nonresident motorists registered in their own States to tour New Jersey for eight days in any one year upon the payment of $1.

The second bill allows the State of New Jersey to pay one-half of the cost of the proposed new ocean boulevard, instead of the quarter of the cost of the construction of new roads, which the State usually bears, and also permits the funds in the State Treasury accrued from the licensing of automobiles to be applied to the maintenance of the boulevard, instead of dividing such funds pro rata among the counties.

Both bills, which are favored by Senator Frelinghuysen, are strongly opposed by the automobile interests of the State.

Resolutions attacking both measures have been passed by the leading automobile organizations of the State, the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club of Newark, N. J., which has a membership of more than 2,000; the Associated Automobile Clubs of New Jersey; a federation of the clubs in New Jersey; the Automobile Club of Hudson county, with headquarters in Jersey City, and the North Jersey Automobile Club of Paterson.

The North Jersey Automobile Club held a special meeting yesterday and passed a resolution against the bill.

The members of the club also pledged themselves to work against any candidate for public office who votes either of the two bills or any other bill imposing added taxation on automobiles.

During the course of his remarks in the morning he gave the congr*egation some* excellent advice apprapos to the coming of the new pastor, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire. He urged everyone to give the new pastor full co-operation and help him advance the interest of the Kingdom of God.

PALM SUNDAY SERVICES

Episcopalians and Roman Catholics Observe the Offices of the Church.

THE PALMS ARE DISTRIBUTED.

Appropriate Sermons Delivered by the Rectors on Christ's Entry Into Jerusalem—Special Music at Grace.

Large congregations were the rule in all the churches Sunday morning particularly in the Episcopal and Catholic. At Grace P. E. one of the largest of the year attended the services in celebration of Palm Sunday, and were well repaid for it. The rector, Rev. E. V. Stevenson, preached a strong sermon having for its subject the triumph of the Savior over the world and His triumphant entry into Jerusalem. Preceding the sermon the rector admonished his congregation that Good Friday should be observed not as a holiday for pleasure but a day in which the full significance of its meaning should reach the heart of those Christians who in truth are servants of the Lord.

Speaking of the worldly side of observing church holy days Mr. Stevenson said that the world is growing more and more to think of them as days upon which the time may be given over to pleasure. He asked both the men and women of the congregation to consider the serious advisability of avoiding anything that will give the world a chance to criticise. "Let us be strong enough in our loyalty to the Master to show the world that we are trying to live up to the standard of Jesus Christ," he said.

In his sermon Mr. Stevenson showed the superficiality of human passions and impressions by their very changeability from one day to another. He drew a word picture of the triumphant entry of Jesus into Jerusalem and showed how He was first acclaimed and afterward slain. However, the Savior entered that day into the very arena of triumph and throughout the days of sorrow and suffering which followed He saw better than His disciples the ultimate glory and His victory over death.

He advised the people to take worldly applause for what it is worth, but cautioned them to remember that it makes a very poor foundation upon which to build. He said that in the day when we are brought face to face with God our consciences will set in judgment upon us so that we shall know whether eternal life is to be our portion.

The choir under the direction of S. Frederick Smith sang for the offertory "Hosanna in the Highest" from the sacred cantata "Olivet to Calvary." It may be said that the choir sang splendidly, showing careful training and practise. The organ recital in the afternoon was another treat by Mr. Smith. All four selections being played with sense of a fitness for he hemes. Faure's "Palms" was a magnificent rendering.

Large congregations also marked the observance of Palm Sunday in the local Catholic church Sunday morning. At the celebration of the high mass at St. Mary's church, Father Bogan delivered an appropriate sermon on Christ's entry into Jerusalem. Father Miller, at St. Joseph's church, also preached an appropriate sermon. Palms were distributed at all the services in both churches.

At St. Mary's church in the evening the various societies of the congregation attended a vesper service which was conducted by Father Bogan. At St. Joseph's church in the morning, the children participated in a palm procession.

At the Congregational church Sunday Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, the pastor, read the scripture account of the entry of Jesus into Jerusalem and the subsequent events leading up the crucifixion. The reading was accompanied with stereopticon views illustrating the scripture. Owing, in part to the stormy weather, the attendance was not very large, but those who were there were greatly impressed by what they saw.

From the blessing of the infants and healing of the sick to the final scene at the tomb the portrayal of Christ's suffering and passion were vividly portrayed.

Easter Sunday there will be a sunrise prayer meeting at 7:30 o'clock at Trinity Reformed church, to be conducted by Herbert E. Parker, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. There will be special musical program at the regular morning service and Easter exercises by the Sunday school in the evening.

DAUGHTER NEED NOT PAY JUDGMENT AGAINST FATHER

George Ball, attorney for Charles G. Brown and his daughter, Roberta Brown, of Westfield, in the chancery action instituted by Aaron T. Hageman, also of Westfield, received notice today from Vice-Chancellor Emery that he had dismissed the bill, and the costs will be charged against the complainant. The case was argued on January 24 at Newark. Paul Q. Oliver, of Westfield, represented the complainant.

The complainant filed a bill in Chancery in October, 1908, seeking to charge land belonging to Roberta Brown with a judgment, obtained against Charles G. Brown in Justice Toucey's Court, charging that Charles Brown paid a consideration price and caused it to be conveyed to his daughter to defraud creditors. The complainant failed to produce sufficient evidence to offset that offered by the defendants. It was shown that Roberta Brown was a preferred creditor.

FUTILE EFFORTS MADE. TO RECOVER A WHEEL.

The efforts of the police to locate a wheel stolen from a son of Ernest Hand, of Netherwood avenue, have so far proved unavailing. The wheel disappeared from the side of the Daley millinery store on Front street last Monday March 16, and it was taken within two minutes after young Hand had dismounted and entered the shop.

Several boys, mostly pupils in the Randolph class at the Stillman School, have been in the habit of "borrowing" wheels of the other pupils in both Stillman and Franklin schools, and riding them around for short periods, then returning them to the place where they were taken. But at times the wheels were not brought back because the borrowers were afraid of punishment for having taken them. In such case the wheel was generally abandoned in the street and after being notified the police would recover it.

This wheel of young Hand's though, has got 'em all guessing. Yesterday morning six boys were arraigned before Judge William Runyon in an effort to discover the whereabouts of the missing wheel. But although the boys confessed to riding others' wheels none would confess to having even seen the Hand wheel. Thomas Babbitt, colored, one of the number, said he had not had in the incorrigible class, declared he had seen William Harrison, a diminutive colored boy, riding a wheel which corresponds in color to the missing one, but Harrison stoutly maintained that the wheel he had borrowed was black and not red as Babbitt claimed.

Several other boys corroborated Harrison as to the color of the wheel he was riding and there the case rested. Judge Runyon got the whole bunch of boys before him and said that if the wheel was not returned to police headquarters by last night someone would have to be punished. But the wheel has not been returned nor found and the case stands just where it was before.

TO PERMIT JOINT SEWER

Bill in Legislature to Enable City and Borough to Construct System.

INTRODUCED BY ACKERMAN.

Prelinghuysen Sponsor for Measure Which Provides for a Mutual Agreement for the Undertaking.

State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman introduced a bill at Trenton last night for State Senator J. S. Frelinghuysen for the direct benefit of Plainfield and North Plainfield. It authorizes any two or more municipalities in this State, without regard to their form of incorporation, to provide and maintain a system of sewerage, or a system of conveying sewerage from said municipality, and constructing one or more outlet or trunk sewers, disposal plants or station for the treatment of rendering of said sewerage. The measure further provides for the cost of the same to be arrived at by mutual agreement and for the assessment of benefits and damages sustained. It was referred to the judiciary.

The bill was drafted in the interest of Plainfield and North Plainfield, the municipalities being desirous of uniting in a joint sewerage plan. The residents of the borough have already voted on the question of establishing a sewerage plant, and as Plainfield must of necessity make a change within a short time, it is planned to build one large plant in the extreme western end of North Plainfield township.

Dunellen is also anxious to join such a system, the matter being discussed at a meeting of the borough Council last night. It is possible that some arrangements may be made whereby Dunellen can join with Plainfield and North Plainfield in the one system.

BINGEMAN ADDRESSES DUNELLEN ATHLETIC CLUB

C. William Bingeman, director of boys' work at the Y. M. C. A., gave an interesting talk on club and association life at the monthly meeting of the Dunellen Athletic club, at the latter place Monday. There was a big turnout of members and Mr. Bingeman was enthusiastically greeted by the suburban athletes.

In his remarks Mr. Bingeman gave the outline of purposes in Y. M. C. A. work and suggested that the association is a good body for other clubs to pattern after. He declared that physical, spiritual, educational and social developments of men are the necessary qualifications for all successful clubs. Mr. Bingeman urged the members of the D. A. C. to always play the game clean and be loyal to their organization. "In loyalty is success," said the speaker.

Interesting remarks were also made by Frank R. Wynkoop, Councilman Lewis Churchill, Jesse Ayers, the founder of the club, Dr. Hogan, Professor Guy Rentschler and others.

The speechmaking was interspersed by selections by the Black Diamond quartet, of this city, mandolin selections by George Martin and piano selections by various club members.

During the evening refreshments were served by the committee which consisted of Jesse Ayers, Benjamin Dodwell and Corwin Agpar

CONTRACTS AWARDED FOR STREET MATERIAL

Councilman Gloak, chairman of the street committee, reported back the bids for crushed stone, crosswalks, culverts, etc., at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, Monday. The bill of N. B. Smalley & Co., for furnishing crushed stone was accepted, and that of J. W. Manhattan for furnishing crosswalks, culverts, etc., was also accepted. Both were the lowest bids, although it was stated that the prices quoted are about fifty per cent. higher than last year.

Mr. Gloak explained that he had compared the prices quoted the city and those to the borough and that there was about ten cents difference, due, he thought to the extra cartage necessary in the city. Both bids were accepted and the Mayor and clerk were authorized to sign the contracts on behalf of the city.

DRINK CAUSES TROUBLE

Some Men Boisterous, Other Somnolent, All Drunk and Sorry.

GLEASON HAS A LONG RECORD.

Palmer Clubbed for Breaking Window—Case Adjourned to Next Monday.

Several delelicts were up before Judge William N. Runyon Monday in the city court and varying sentences meted out to them. Michael Gleason who has a long record of appearances in court for being drunk and disorderly, was fined five dollars. In connection with this case Judge Runyon has made up his mind that the custom of buying liquor for those against whom an order has been issued to the saloon keepers must stop. Gleason is one of those to whom the saloon men are prohibited selling liquor, but Gleason has been enabled to procure the stuff through the efforts of his cronies. It was this circumstance that caused his intoxication Saturday night. Orders will be issued against the men who act as messengers and they will in future be unable to buy the stuff as fast as they are found out. One man will have the source of supply cut off today.

Harry Hayle, of Dunellen, got more of a load than he could conveniently carry on Saturday night, but as he was quiet about it he was allowed to go with a reprimand this morning.

Harry Palmer, a colored man, and Elvin Marsh got into trouble with Joseph Meyers, a lunch wagon keeper, of East Second street, with the result that all three were up before Judge Runyon this morning. Marsh was fined five dollars for being drunk and disorderly and the case of Palmer on the charge of breaking glass was adjourned until next Monday when witnesses will be on hand to enlighten the judge as to exactly what took place.

Palmer claimed that he went into the wagon to buy a sandwich and that in going out he slammed the door so hard that the glass was broken. Meyers, he claimed, became angry at this and followed him as far as Watchung avenue with a club which he applied to Palmer's head in an endeavor to collect the value of the broken window. Palmer paid the damages amounting to one dollar, when Patrolman Tobias Nolan hearing some loud and vigorous talk in the neighborhood investigated and arrested both Marsh and Palmer, the former, however, not being directly connected with the window smashing episode. The affair is so complicated that Judge Runyon wants the witnesses to the affair to elucidate and he will also make strict inquiries into the matter of clubs for collecting bills.

EARTH'S GREATEST SHOW OPENS ON THURSDAY NIGHT.

Interest in the approaching season of the Barnum and Bailey Greatest Show on Earth is manifest. This big circus has always given the public the very greatest novelties obtainable, and nowhere else in the world will you see such an exposition of entertaining wonders and sensational features in one vast enclosure.

There are 400 artists who take part in the big program and most of them are from abroad. 1,000 rare animals will be found in the big zoological collection, and among these will be seen Little Baby Bumbeeno, the tiny nursing giraffe, born at Bridgeport, Conn., January 12, 1910. Great interest will be centered around this little animal as it is the only giraffe that has ever been known to be born in captivity.

This circus program promises to be one of many surprises. All the noted riders, gymnasts, acrobats and novelty performers of the world have been engaged to take part and these, with an army of 50 clowns, promise to provide an entertaining exhibition. Besides Jupiter, the balloon horse, who with a fearless young lady rider mounted upon his back, ascends to the dome of Madison Square Garden in a baloon and descends in a shower of fireworks, a new sensation will be sprung in the appearance of Despero, a young Italian man, who leaps from a small platform in the highest point in the big building and alights on his chest upon a small curved skid, placed on the ground 50 feet below. The very simplicity of this act, together with the absence of all mechanical effects, makes it all the more wonderful to know that this young man could live to repeat his daring performance. Desperado has no imitators. No other performer has ever dared to attempt an act as hazardous.

Charley, the first, a chimpanzee with almost human intelligence and who has astounded all Europe with his remarkable performances, will be seen at each exhibition.

Barnum and Bailey's Greatest Show on Earth opens at Madison Square Garden, New York, Thursday night, March 24, and will continue giving performances twice daily for a short season only.

DUNELLEN SCHOOL TO HAVE A GYMNASIUM

Members of the Dunellen Board of Education are interesting themselves in plans to install a gymnasium in the Whittier School at that place during the summer vacation which will be in readiness for use at the beginning of the coming fall term. Data is now being secured from the Russell Sage Foundation, which was created by the dead millionaire, for the purpose of providing an incentive in playgrounds and school gymnastics, and it is possible that a representative of the concern will be invited to enlighten the school board and citizens of the place as to the needs of the school in the athletic line.

Professor Guy Rentschler is an enthusiastic advocate for the installation of a gymnasium for the use of the pupils as it will pave the way for athletic competitions with Plainfield and nearby schools. Under present conditions the pupils do not enjoy this privilege. About the only athletic attraction is an open air basketball court in the school yard and this is considered inadequate for the needs of the school in this direction.

The school board has a balance of more than $3,000 in the treasury, not to say anything of the State appropriation which will be added later, a part of which case the sentiment of the board is said to be in favor of establishing a gymnasium and to encourage sports in the schools.

CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY OF A GREAT COMPOSER

The meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club held Monday at the Hartridge School auditorium was one of rare enjoyment. The opening exercises were of a musical character, in recognition of the 225th anniversary of the birth of Johann Sebastian Bach. A paper giving an interesting sketch of the great composer, prepared by Mrs. Arthur H. Chamberlain, was read by Mrs. Robert Lowry. This paper was supplemented by Dr. Leonard Waldo, who added some facts relative to Bach and his compositions, quoting the opinion of another, that music owed to Bach what religion owed to its founder.

Dr. Waldo illustrated a number of the compositions of this great master on the 'cello, assisted by Mrs. Cobb, who accompanied him on the piano, and who also played two gavottes. The purity, harmony, tenderness and spirituality of the great musician's work were brought out under the exquisite playing of Dr. Waldo and Mrs. Cobb.

A musical full of interest was presented on "Dryden and the Drama of the Restoration" and was followed by another on "Sentimental Comedy" by Mrs. Herbert E. Baright, both of which merited and received hearty applause.

BANKRUPTCY COURT DISCHARGES APGARS

After opposition being raised to their discharge and an adverse report of the referee and master as to one of them, Theodore Apgar and George I. Apgar, of Dunellen, who have been large builders and contractors under the firm name of Apgar Brothers, in this vicinity for a number of years, were granted their discharge in bankruptcy by Judge Cross in the United State District Court at Trenton Monday.

Apgar Brothers were forced into bankruptcy by some of their creditors in the early part of 1908. In January of the following year they applied for their discharge. Their application was held up by objections filed by Judge Isaac P. Runyon, who appeared for one of the creditors. The court referred the matter to Captain James Parker, one of the referees in bankruptcy in this district, master to take testimony and report the result to the court. Testimony was taken in this city in November last. One of the witnesses who gave testimony in opposition to the discharge was Judge William Newcorn, one of the attorneys of the bankrupt firm.

The master filed his report in February recommending that a discharge be denied Theodore Apgar, but stating that the objections had been with drawn as to George I. Apgar, and, therefore, recommending his discharge.

Exceptions were filed to this report by Counsellor W. L. Angleman for Theodore Apgar, and the case was set down for hearing at Trenton yesterday before the United States District Court. After argument by Judge Cross, and reading the objections and the testimony, Judge Cross sustained the exceptions made, and granted Mr. Angleman's motion for a discharge in bankruptcy to Theodore Apgar notwithstanding the adverse report of the referee.

Counsellor J. Henry Crane appeared for George I. Apgar and moved for a confirmation of the report as far as George I. Apgar was concerned and applied for his discharge. His motion and application were granted by Judge Cross, and a discharge in bankruptcy granted to George I. Apgar.

HERE AND THERE.

When the Common Council met in adjourned session last night, George B. Wean, city stenographer, was not present, and the motion of Councilman Gloak that William R. Townsend be appointed stenographer protem., prevailed. The collector took the position, but Mr. Wean walked in two minutes later and much to the amusement of the members who had planned the joke on the Mayor's secretary. Mr. Townsend was game, however, and he remained at the stenographer's table throughout the session, until Councilman C. C. Randolph moved that his office be vacated. Several times during the evening attempts were made to have Townsend read his notes, but something interferred each time. As he was leaving his position a vote of thanks was extended and Mr. Mygatt moved that the official be given the privilege of the floor next Monday night. After the meeting adjourned all the members adjourned to Timbo's restaurant on North avenue and partook of a repast. It was reported to be a "Dutch treat."

PROTESTING AGAINST UNDESIRABLE BUILDING

William A. Coddington, representing L. V. F. Randolph, sent a protest to the Common Council at its adjourned meeting, Monday, against granting a permit to an Italian to erect a one-story addition to his house at 721 East Second street. The Italian proposes to place the addition on the building line and use it for a store. The property is directly opposite that of L. V. F. Randolph and the latter objects.

The Italian made application to Building Inspector T. O. Doane, but the latter returned it because it was faulty. It has not been sent back to Chief Doane, but probably will be within a few days.

At the request of Councilman Taylor, a recess was taken last night to discuss the matter. No decision was reached, but it was the opinion of all the members that the application should be denied. However, Chief Doane is quoted as saying that according to law there is nothing to prevent the man from building the addition. He says that similar questions have been threshed out time and again in the Supreme Court and that no law has been found that would prevent the erection of such buildings. If the application for a permit is returned no doubt it will be referred to Corporation Counsel Marsh for an opinion.

BRIGHT DAYS AND DARK

By REV. DONALD SAGE MACKAY D. D., LL.D.

But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound.—Rom. 5:20.

How much the countenance plays its part in the activities of human life! Our bright days are counterbalanced by dark days. Our times of prosperity are offset by times of adversity. For every sorrow there is in the divine providence, a corresponding gain, and at the heart of every defeat there is for the man of faith the prophecy of new victory. Go where we will in the great universe of love and we find everywhere the working of this divine law of counterpoise—the divine love compensating of every earthly loss. "Where sin abounds grace doth much more abound." Where death walks with insolent feet life triumphs in exultant song. When earthly joys wither heavenly hope blooms in eternal beauty. When time wears out its venture into threadbare decay eternity robes herself in immortal splendor.

We want to realize, of course, that these bright days and dark in life which alternate in such swift succession are all part of a divine plan. These meeting chances of prosperity and adversity, joy and sorrow, life and death, are not haphazard. They are not the chance happenings of a cruel and heedless fate. Nor are they ebullitions of lightness in God, or forgetfulness of his children. Not to tantalize and tease the soul, not that we may take our joys with trembling and our sorrows with cringing does our Heavenly Father set the dark days over against the bright days in life. God sends these seasons for the growth of what is worthless and best within us. The dark days and the bright days are as necessary to the poise of your character as the counterbalance is necessary to the equilibrium of the wheel. It needs no profound thinking to realize what a grinding monotony life would be if there were no shadows to offset its sunlight. What an insipid thing joy would become—a sweet in the banquet of life—if there were no bitters to cleanse the palate of the soul.

These bright days and dark days in life as they come and go, sometimes in rhythmic cadence and sometimes in bewildering confusion, are also part of a divine revelation. They are days of revealing as well as days of discipline. God sends these alternating seasons into your life to reveal certain qualities within you, to call into play certain capacities, to make vital certain possibilities in your nature which the monotony of an unbroken experience could never bring. The changing days of life unmask the reserves of character. It is, of course, a truism that a man never knows how much he can endure until the day of adversity comes. It has been pointed out that Walter Scott became great as a man and realized the highest expression of his genius not until the wave of adversity swept over his life. A writer has pointed out the commonplace character of Scott's personal journal up to the time before the failure of his publishers took place. But after that failure a new note became vocal in the great writer's journal, a new personality emerged. One remembers in this connection the letter which upon the day succeeding the news of the disaster Scott wrote to an intimate friend: "I have walked for the last time in these halls which I have built, looked for the last time in all probability at the domain which I have planted, but death would have taken these things from me if misfortune had not." The letter concludes with the words, "Adversity is to me a tonic and a bracer." "Look at that manuscript," says Ruskin, referring to Scott's novel of "Woodstock" which was in course of writing at the time, "written in the very maelstrom of that adversity and not by the quiver of a hair stroke, not by the suggestion of a single tremor in the hand, not by an erasure or change, not by any falling off in the creative interest of the story could any one detect that when Scott wrote the second part of that novel he did so under a cloud of bitter adversity."

And biography is full of such unmaskings of the pressure of the dark days succeeding the bright days in life. Milton's personality became a far more potent influence after blindness had stricken him. The loss of physical sight intensified the keenness of spiritual vision. Had Bunyan never lain in Bedford jail he had never dreamed of "Pilgrim's Progress." Had Tom Hood never known for himself the bitterness of want and the ache of pain he had never sung the "Song of the Shirt" or sobbed out his immortal dirge, "The Bridge of Sighs." Had David never fallen as he did the world would never have felt the passion of penitence and aspiration of heart which breathed through some such psalm as the fifty-first. Had John never been banished to the island of Patmos we should never have had the revelation of heaven as he has unfolded its glories in the last book of Scripture. In a sense, most solemn of all, had Christ never passed through the darkness of Calvary and tasted the bitterness of death. He had never been exalted as the Saviour of the world. It is a blessed experience surely if for any one of us from whom the sunlight of prosperity had been withdrawn for a season the light of a new purpose and the beckoning of a hand of divine strength are made manifest.

Don't Be A Furnace Slave

The BOYNTON Square Fire-Pot FURNACE

reverses the usual order of furnace facts. It requires the least amount of fuel and the least amount of care. In return it gives the biggest, hottest fire you ever knew; a clean, clinkerless fire. It burns all the coal and when you shake it all the dust goes up the chimney. BOYNTON furnaces are clean. They give the maximum of heat for a minimum of expense. We will gladly give you the name of the nearest BOYNTON dealer, so that you may investigate.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Also Boynton Coal and Wood Burning Boilers for Steam or Hot Water. Also Ranges.

COUNDED QUEER.

The editor called the new special writer up to his desk.

"Young man," he said, severely, "we don't mind a few exaggerations, but you have been going a little too strong."

"In what way, sir?" asked the surprised pen pusher.

"Why, in your article on Col. Roosevelt in the jungle you state that immediately after dispatching the ferocious lion he called for a taxi. Now, any greenhorn would know that there are no taxicabs in Africa."

"I didn't allude to a taxicab, sir."

"You didn't?"

"No, I meant a taxidermist."

Surprised Her.

She had refused to listen to his suit while the big car tore along at a 50-mile clip and he was desperate.

"Suppose," he shouted above the roar, "you should see me under these wheels, would you be surprised?"

"I certainly would," responded the haughty beauty with great coolness. "I didn't know the machine needed repairing."

Just the Thing.

"Got anything that's good for corns?"

"Take this home and try it."

"Is it good for corns?"

"I've used it on mine for the last five years and I've got the healthiest corns you ever saw."

Possible Explanation.

Roderick—"The astronomers report that there is a great disturbance at the pole on the planet Mars. Wonder what caused it?"

Van Albert—"Hm! Maybe two explorers discovered it at the same time."

Not Modern.

"You say that he is a modern philanthropist?"

"I said a 'modest' philanthropist."

"Oh; I was going to say that I had not seen any of his deeds of philanthropy advertised."

A SOFT LANDING.

Friend Inside—A little to the left, Bill! The pile of soft coal's over there!

The Difference.

When a fighter strikes a hard blow
He grows bold as seven whales;
When a sailor strikes a hard blow
He gets scared and reefs his sails.

Appropriate.

"He has invented a new drink."

"What does he call it?"

"Love."

"Why?"

"Because it makes the world go round."

Most Men Are.

"He's perfectly at ease in any situation."

"I'll bet he isn't. I'm willing to wager right now that he'd be embarrassed if some one should ask him to say grace at a dinner party."

Too Much.

"The trouble with me is that I am eating too much."

"Why, I took dinner at your house to-day and you only ate one biscuit and a piece of pie."

"I know, but my wife made them."

An Honest Confession.

Bilkins.—"Hello, old man! What do you know?"

Wilkins.—"Well, I believe a good many things, but as a matter of fact I don't know anything."

The Right Term.

"I wonder that dentists call their offices dental parlors."

"Why shouldn't they?"

"A more appropriate term would be drawing-rooms."

Out of Natural Order.

"Papa, dogs always chase cats on land, don't they?"

"They do everywhere, my son."

"But, papa, do ocean greyhounds chase a sea puss?"

Too High.

"Are you going to take any stock in this aerial trust?"

"No; I never cared to invest in inflated securities."

A Good Idea.

"Maud has lots of new things on hand, just now, I understand."

"Yes, including an engagement ring."

To Be Expected.

"I wonder why that arctic play was a failure?"

"Could you expect it to be anything but a frost?"

DUTCH ARMS BANQUET

Eloqtent Speakers at Trinity's Club Entertain Men and Women.

COLABORATION THEIR THEME

Plea for Local Option by S. S. Swackhamer—Mr. Martine's Opinion of Woman Suffrage.

If laughter is any criterion then the company of members and guests of the Dutch Arms which gathered in the Sunday school rooms of Trinity Reformed church Friday were care free and chappy. The spontaneous bursts of laughter which followed the witty sallies of such jokesmiths as Robert Clark, Jr., Rev. J. W. Gowen, Samuel S. Swackhamer, Rev. A. A. Pfanstiehl and Rev. John Y. Brock. The occasion was the banquet of the club at which the women, wives and friends of the members were entertained and naturally the speeches which followed the feast were directed toward the feminine element in social, religious and domestic life.

Toastmaster Clark was introduced by the president of the club, Fred S. Cutler, in a few appropriate words and from the opening sentence of Mr. Clark's introductory speech to the last continual bursts of merriment interrupted him. Mr. Clark had a fund of humorous stories which seemed inexhaustible. He paid in a serious moment, a high tribute to the mothers of the land and to the daughters of Trinity in particular.

Rev. I. W. Gowen, pastor of Grove Reformed church, of Weehawken, was the first speaker and referred to Mr. Clark, who had told a story of a preacher carrying a hot sample of the infernal regions, as being worse than the fellow who lives in Plainfield and is forced to do business in Newark, "he goes from Paradise to hell every day." Dr. Gowen paid humorous attention to the other speakers, including Farmer "Jim" Martine, who later was induced to say a few words. Dr. Gowen also referred reverently to the Irish whose day was celebrated on Thursday and said that there was a people who had the best conception of happiness and the value of fellowship and knew how to show it. He applied the Irish attitude toward mankind to the necessity for similar cohesion among members of the church for in this fellowship and colaboration were to be found the sure foundation for persistent and successful work for the Master whom all should serve. He said it was getting to be a close race between the women of the church and the men as to which of the sexes was doing the most work for the Master in this twentieth century, but this is an indication of the awakening which the church has long been waiting for. It is a man's job as much as a woman's the speaker said, to keep the holiest and highest principles ever before them and strive for the ultimate good of all mankind.

Miss S. Etta Raybert sang a solo and encore after Dr. Gowen's speech, and then followed Rev. A. A. Pfanstiehl, of Somerville, who told a good story about Mr. Brock's ancestors, requesting Trinity's pastor to close his ears to avoid blushing.

Dr. Pfanstiehl took a text upon which to elaborate the duties of the men of today. "Be that are men now-a-days?" His talk was filled with the meaning of the words and asked the men of the club to prove their attitude toward their fellow men with a sincerelty of purpose and earnestness of heart that would show that in their hearts as well as in their actions they were of the true sons of the Master, and that now or never was the time to do it.

Mr. Swackhamer followed Dr. Pfanstiehl who as usual relieved his system of some of his well developed humor, but in a peroration marked by strong sincerelty he appealed to the men of the club and their friends and to every member of a church in the city to send delegates to Trenton to urge the passage of the local option measure which has been under consideration by the Legislature. James E. Martine followed Mr. Swackhamer and paid his respects to woman suffrage in unmistakable terms. He denounced the movement as being unfeminine and hardly worthy of the support of women with sense. "Why should women," he asked, loiter around the polls on election day when they should be at home attending to their babies and other household duties. May woman's suffrage never come to pass in Plainfield."

Rev. Mr. Brock in a few choice words answered to the toast: "Is it a good thing for one bird to flock alone," propounded by Toastmaster Clark and when he was through nobody was any the wiser as to whether Mr. Brock felt it incumbent upon himself to enlighten the company as to his opinion on the subject or not. Mr. Brock, in a digression said that he believed in these banquets as they served to bring the congregation closer together and they ought to be encouraged. The company was dismissed with the benediction after a verse of "Auld Lang Syne" had been sung.

The banquet initself was a dainty and tastefully arranged menu, satisfying without being burdensome, and it was served with unusual smoothness while violin and piano music entertained the diners. The attendance was greater than had been expected, but all who came were cared for. The rooms were handsomely decorated with flags and bunting with streamers of green and white intertwined between the pillars and arches. The speakers' table had other green emblems including a harp which sat immediately in front of Toastmaster Clark. This harp formed the means of a joke by the pastor in which he intimated that it might be the only one upon which Mr. Clark would have a chance to play.

MRS. BRANDT VS. KERWIN IN THE CITY COURT

Lawrence Kerwin, of Rock avenue, and Mrs. Annie Brandt, of the same street, were in court Saturday to have their troubles adjusted by Judge Runyon, who was assisted by William G. DeMeza, for Mrs. Brandt and Francis J. Blatz for Mr. Kerwin.

Mrs. Brandt caused the appearance of Mr. Kerwin upon a charge of disorderly conduct in which she alleged that Kerwin used indecent and profane language to her at the corner of West Front street and Rock avenue last Tuesday about noon. Kerwin denied the charge and brought Applegate & Baker, painters, to prove that he was not in the vicinity at the time of the alleged misconduct.

Mrs. Brandt's six-year-old daughter, Dorothy, who is scarcely able to know the serious meaning of an oath told enough of the alleged meeting and the fact that Kerwin had spoken to her mother that the Judge was probably convinced that there was some truth in the allegations of Mrs. Brandt. Judge Runyon suspended sentence reserving his decision subject to future happenings in the turbulent district where encounters of the character indicated are frequent.

EAST END'S RESIDENTS TO PETITION RAILROAD

The residents of the Netherwood section of the city desirous of securing lighting facilities at the Netherwood Station, have prepared a petition which has already been signed by forty people, and it is the intention of sending it to W. C. Hope, general passenger agent of the New Jersey Central. It is also desired that the station be kept open in the evening from 7 to 8 o'clock to accommodate the large number of people arriving and departing between those hours.

The station park is dark at night, making it unsafe for patrons, especially women, and it is the opinion that the railroad company should be willing to afford proper lighting facilities. And the fact that the station is closed during the evening makes it a source of great inconvenience and annoyance to the traveling public. The petition was started by Joseph Harrigan, of South avenue, and persons wishing to sign it are invited to call at his office.

Mrs. Matthews was a communicant of the Holy Cross church for many years. The couple were married fifty-one years ago. They had resided here for at least three decades and were prominent in society.

Surviving Mrs. Matthews are the husband, a daughter, Mrs. Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, and a son, Peter B. Matthews.

Fold in the yolks of three eggs beaten hard and then the beaten whites. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake for thirty-five or forty minutes, according to the heat of the oven. The souffle should be served as soon as it is puffed high and is nicely browned Serve in ramekins, this makes a delicious entree. Of course, when baked in small dishes, it takes much less time to cook it.

HAD LIST TO STARBOARD

Capt. Houtaling and His Spouse Almost Wrecked in Sight of Crowd.

SURVIVED THE LONG VOYAGE.

Rescued by Chief Kiely With Landlubbers' Help—They Return to the Louise G.

When the stout barge, Louise G., tied up at the Wayne dock in Elizabethport after a tempestuous voyage from the Delaware capes Wednesday, Captain William Houtaling and his good wife Sarah, determined to stretch their sore limbs with a tour of Newark and nearby towns.

The sea trip was a lengthy one and on board the Louise G. only the usual provender incidental to a short voyage was to be had. So, acting upon the principle that "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," meaning that these chances are to be taken advantage of, the gallant captain and his mate sallied forth to sample on the way some of the good things of which they had been deprived for a month. Their first halting place was a wanderers' retreat in Newark, where liquid refreshments enough to fill their starboard scuppers were taken abroad and when Newark was left behind and the intervening towns between there and this city had all been seen and likewise visited all the bunkers were filled and flowing over.

The happy mariner and his spouse arrived in Plainfield along about 5 o'clock with a distinct list to port and navigating under great difficulty. Although the chief officer of the expedition had an anchor to windward the ship continually dragged and was soon upon the shoals of Watchung avenue and Fifth street, where she came up suddenly hard and fast. The signal for a pilot was set and likewise distress signals. The latter were answered as soon as Chief Kiely hove in sight and after a strenuous period the craft was again launched and with the assistance of a pair of landlubbers the happy twain finally anchored in police headquarters.

Judge Runyon heard the story of the shipwreck Thursday and had pity on the storm tossed pair and allowed them to seek their berths on the Louise G.

THE EMBARRASSED GIRL.

If you are so shy that it is painful instead of trying to brazen it out or retiring into your shell, you begin by cultivating self-forgetfulness.

It is misery to be conscious of embarrassment, for one knows this better than the victim; yet often she goes no way to conquer her feelings.

Sometimes she makes the attempt by fighting her failings. Generally she errs in overdoing and appears pert, or, if aggressive, when in reality she is working hard to feel at ease.

Too often she doesn't put up any fight. Because she is shy she shuns everyone and every place where she will feel uncomfortable, and too soon is hopelessly submerged by her unfortunate self-consciousness.

The only certain cure for embarrassment is self-forgetfulness. There is an old saying that the one sure way to make friends is to be a friend. This applies to everybody. Bear in mind that the one way not to think too much of yourself is to fill up your thoughts with some one else.

The next time you dread going into society try to recall some one of your acquaintance who is shyer and more awkward than you are. Determine to make her enjoy herself for one time at least. If your efforts are honest, you will be surprised to find that you have been so busy in good time giving that you have forgotten to be embarrassed.

The next time you are caught by your failing, hunt up another buffer for your embarrassment and before long not only will your shyness be in hand, but you will find you have become popular where before you were pitied or shunned.

FOR DINNER.

Carrots in Turnip Cups—Cut a cupful of diced carrots, and cook slowly in boiling salted water till tender. Peel half a dozen small turnips. Cut a slice off the stem end and scoop out the centre so as to make each turnip into a cup Cook the cups and covers in boiling water till tender. Mix the cooked carrots with a well seasoned cream sauce, fill the turnip cups with the mixture and put on the covers, garnishing each with parsley.

To Serve with Ice Cream.

For a novelty in sandwiches run orange peel, dates and preserved ginger through the meat chopper and spread between lady fingers. They are delicious. Serve with ice cream.

Dainty Cotton Challies.

Very attractive designs are to be found in the cotton challies. There are especially dainty for kimonos and negligees.

DR. COOLEY MENTIONED FOR BOARD PRESIDENT

The re-election of Dr. Justus H. Cooley as a member of the North Plainfield board of education makes is exteremely possible that he will be the candidate of the board to succeed Dr. James R. Joy as president. The new board will be organized on Monday night, March 27.

Dr. Cooley is the dean of the board having served twelve years as a member of the body. During the greater part of the time Dr. Cooley has been a member of the building and grounds committee and his labors in that department are being commended on all sides.

In reversing his decision not to retire Dr. Cooley made a popular move and as is only natural that sentiment among the members and citizens generally is that he be honored by being elected presiding officer of the board.

YAMA YAMA'S DANCE A BRILLIANT AFFAIR

The Yama-Yama Social Club gave its first ball Wednesday in Saengerbund hall, in the borough, and it was largely attended, some 600 guests being present when the grand march led by President Jacob Schlick began. The spacious hall never was more handsomely decorated and reflected great credit on John Schropp, who arranged the color scheme.

The original flag and bunting adornments of the hall were added to by liberal applications of green streamers and festoons of flowers making a most pleasing and satisfying combination.

The music was by Suhr's orchestra, which played upon a stage illuminated with Japanese lanterns and amid a bewildering array of green and red.

The success of last night has encouraged the club members to plan a summer excursion and President Schlick said that a ball would be an annual fixture. Dancing continued until 3 o'clock this morning. The officers of the new club are: President, Jacob Schlick; vice-president, Percy Haberle; secretary, George Egel; treasurer, Charles E. Pagliuca. The floor manager last night was John Caulfield.

BOYS' CLUB HOLDS ITS ANNUAL SUPPER

The Junor Boys' Club of Hope chapel held a supper at the chapel, last night, with thirty-five of the thirty-six members present. An excellent menu was enjoyed after which the boys listened to interesting talks and addresses by John Leal, Rev. A. R. Howard, G. Herbert Condict, James Penney, William Doig and Charles G. August, guests and honorary members of the club.

The talks were a feature of an unusually pleasant evening. John Heron, president, was toastmaster and his introductory remarks were full of wit. The committee in charge comprised Arthur Walls, chairman; George Leighs, John Heron, William Marsh, Thomas Heron and Guy Snyder.

Under the leadership of Charles G. August the club is showing renewed interest. Basketball, bowling and other indoor games have furnished good sport for the boys on Wednesday night when they meet at the chapel. Any boy in the Sunday school over fourteen years old or over is eligible to membership.

DR. P. W. HARRISON SENDS A MESSAGE FROM NAPLES.

Dr. Paul Wilberforce Harrison, the missionary of Trinity Reformed church to Arabia, writes from Naples to Rev. J. Y. Broek, that he has begun the study of the Arabic language, which he will continue from now on. He says that he has had a pleasant voyage thus far and has not been seasick.

At the present time he is crossing the Indian ocean, but at the time of writing could not tell what port would be touched in Arabia. When he lands he will be met by many of missionaries and it will then be decided where Dr. Harrison is to make his home for the present.

Lobster Served in Shell.

Broiled live lobster is always served in the shell. Either a whole lobster or half is passed to each person. With it is eaten drawn butter or Hollandaise sauce. Lobster farci is also served in improvised shells made by joining the back and tail. They are served on an oblong platter, garnished with lemon and parsley, and each guest helps herself to a portion from the shell.

To Have Celery Crisp.

Celery will not only be crisp, but when cut in small pieces it will curl nicely if laid several hours in iced water before using.

MAJOR W. B. MARTIN AMONG COMPETITORS

Among those who will try for a place on the American team. If the American accepts the challenge made by Canada for an international shoot to be held at Sea Girt in September, will be Major William B. Martin, of Elizabeth, military champion of the United States, and, formerly captain of Co. K of this city.

The Canadian challenge comes from the Association of American International Rifemen, which is limited to those who have represented America in international contests, such as the Palma trophy and the Olympic games, and includes a number of the foremost military shots of the country. Brigadier-General Spencer, of New Jersey, for so many years president of the National Rifle Association of America, has given a handsome trophy for perpetual competition between Canada and the United States, the match to be called "The North American Match."

By the terms of the challenge, the match is to be shot alternately, first at Sea Girt and then at Ottawa, between September 1 and November 1 each year. The teams are limited to six principals and two alternates, all members to be citizens of the country they represent. They are to use the military arm of their respective countries, with any ammunition and sights. It will be the longest range international match so far as known, including 15 record shots at 200, 600, 900 and 1,200 yds. At 200 yards the targets of the N. R. A. of Great Britian will be used, and also at 900 yards; at 600 yards and 1,200 the targets of the N. R. A. of the United States will be used. Another novel feature of the match is that all shooting will be done in a prone position at all ranges.

Major Martin said yesterday that he would certainly try for a place on the American team.

JAMES E. MARTINE SPEAKS AT NEW DEMOCRATIC CLUB

James E. Martine addressed the newly organized Tioga Democratic Club, of Jersey City, in their rooms, corner of Hilliside avenue and William street, in that city Wednesday, and met with the usual ovation. Perhaps it might better be said that Mr. Martine's talk was an exceptionally hearty demonstration of affection from his confreres of the new club, as he received round after round of cheers for his enlightening arraignment of the Republican legislators and politicians.

The burden of Mr. Martine's talk had to do with the topics of the day and he laid great stress on the iniquitous tariff and the processes of present day legislation. Mr. Martine characterized the Public Utilities bill as passed at Trenton yesterday as "an insult to the intelligence of the people of the State of New Jersey."

Among the other speakers were Police Commissioner Patrick Gleason and Assemblyman James Baker, of Hudson county. After the entertainment furnished by professional talent and a band of music the members and invited guests sat down to a fine repast. Incidental speeches and toasts kept the gathering in good humor until 1 o'clock this morning.

HOPE CHAPEL LADIES' AID ELECT NEW OFFICERS.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Ladies' Aid Society of Hope chapel was held Wednesday afternoon. It was largely attended and considerable interest was shown in the reports presented for the past year. They showed great activity in the chapel work. The reports touched all phases of the work done at the chapel.

Mrs. L. R. Howard, treasurer, reported that $350.20 had been raised during the year and all but $15 had been expended in church work, while $150 went to the church fund.

These officers were elected for the year:

President, Mrs. Robert Hangliter; vice-president, Mrs. James Heron, succeeding Mrs. Gertrude Rittenhouse, who held the office for four years; treasurer, Mrs. L. R. Howard; secretary, Mrs. Willard H. Cook, succeeding Mrs. M. W. Clark.

It was regretted that Mrs. Rittenhouse and Mrs. Clark felt compelled to resign their positions. Both have served efficiently in their respective offices. Following the business meeting refreshments were served in the dining-room.

National Staff Band Coming.

The National Staff Band, of the Salvation Army, will give a concert at the Y. M. C. A. on Saturday evening, April 2, and on Sunday morning following will take part in the services at Trinity Reformed church. In the afternoon the band will appear at the First Baptist church and will take part in a religious service at Cranford in the evening.

Figured Coat Lapings.

Figured linings will be used more than ever for coats this spring.

DUNELLEN MERCHANTS TO ADVERTISE TOWN

For the purpose of advertising Dunellen, the publicity committee of the Board of Trade, of that town, of which John R. Campbell is chairman, has adopted a plan to furnish merchants with free cuts to be used on their envelopes, calling attention to home seekers the advantages of that growing municipality.

The idea has struck a popular chord among the merchants and storekeepers of the town and from now on Dunellen will be extensively advertised through the mail by this method. The publicity committee also has plans to advertise the borough by issuing and sending through the mails 50,000 postal cards during the coming summer.

FARMER'S WAGON AND BEAN POLES STOLEN

Henry Kennedy, a Stirling farmer, encountered a piece of real hard luck Wednesday which resulted in the theft of a wagon and about 2,000 cedar beanpoles.

Mr. Kennedy left Stirling early Wednesday morning with a cargo of beanpoles for delivery to a Piscataway farm. While coming down the Stirling hill Mr. Kennedy's wagon struck a soft patch of ground with the result that two wheels of the vehicle sunk into the ground to a depth of two feet. Mr. Kennedy, although assisted by a number of farmhands in the vicinity, was unable to extricate the wagon from the mudhole and started back to his farm to secure another wagon.

When he returned to the Stirling hill he was surprised to see that the wagon and beanpoles had been removed. Kennedy was quick to realize that his property had been stolen and hastened to borough police headquarters and notified Chief Weiss. The borough sleuth is now investigating the case.

HELLER & CO., OF NEW YORK WIN FROM CHAS. ROGOFF

Judge William Newcorn handed down a decision in the District Court Thursday in the case of Heller & Co., of New York, against Charles Rogoff, of West Second street, giving the New York concern a judgment for $82.76 and costs.

The plaintiffs claimed that Mr. Rogoff had not returned certain goods which he alleged he have send in and which were a part of a consignment of cloth delivered in September last year. Miss Jennie Levy, bookkeeper for Heller & Co., who testified to the non-receipt of the goods in question was corroborated by one of the firm, which made the burden of proof fall upon Rogoff. The latter could not prove by any direct evidence that the goods were returned to Heller & Co and Judge Newcorn gave them a judgment for the amount stated above with costs. Harry C. Runyon appeared for Heller & Co. and Francis J. Blatz for Rogoff.

DEATH OF PIONEER PLAINFIELD RESIDENT

Andrew J. Ryno died at his home at South Plainfield, Wednesday, with gangrene, following an illness of six weeks. He was in his seventy-second year and was a native of this city where he resided all his life, up to one year ago, when he removed to South Plainfield.

Mr. Ryno conducted a wheelright business at the latter place until illness overtook him. For forty years he conducted a similar business at Lambert's Mills. He was born at the old homestead on Terrill road, and was a charter pupil of the old Jackson school house. Surviving him are a wife and five sons, Jess, Kaiser, Joseph, Henry and Peter, all of whom reside in this city.

CORK DUST PILLOWS.

One need not necessarily use the old reliable feathers or down in pillows, for there are many substitutes which have proved somewhat satisfactory.

For instance, the cork dust used in packing fruit will make a fairly good pillow, and may be bought at most any grocer's or fruit dealer's. When the dust with water and spread it out in the sun to dry thoroughly before using.

Some of you no doubt have heard of and perhaps possess a cushion filled with balsam pine needles. Pillows of this kinw are known to be healthful and the pungent odor will frequently relieve headaches.

Old letters cut into small pieces take the place of feathers, and again the pillow stuffed with rose leaves is a very desirable one for those who prefer the roses to pine. Dry the rose leaves in the air, but not in the sun. Scatter orris powder over them and sprinkle with oil of roses. Allow the petals to remain in an open box for several days before filling the pillow.

TO SWEEP A ROOM.

To sweep a room is little—but to get it ready for sweeping takes some time.

Each upholstered piece of furniture should be carefully brushed and plain polished surfaces wiped with a slightly damp cloth, then rubbed with a dry one and moved out of the room.

A paint brush is excellent to remove the dust that will lodge in carved parts, or if in crevices a very tiny brush or a wooden skewer can be used. If there are moldings at the top of the wall, use a long-handled brush if it is perfectly clean. If it isn't, tie a duster over it. Brush the ceiling and walls in the same way.

Do not open the windows till the actual sweeping is finished, or the current of air will scatter the dirt over the room again.

Sprinkle salt or tea leaves on the floor and work from the corners to the centre of the room. The stroke should be long, the brooms always on the floor pushing the dirt before it, not setting it in motion by swinging it around.

DAINTY DESSERTS.

Boil some rice until it has become soft, then add the pulp of oranges, some thin slices of banana and a few canned cherries. Put in a mold to harden. When turned out, cover with powdered macaroons and serve with whipped cream or soft custard as a sauce. If desired, sugar to taste may be added to the rice with the fruit.

A ring of crumbled macaroons on dessert plates; fill the centre with whipped cream or ice cream and arrange some kind of preserved fruit or maraschino cherries on the top just before serving.

Fill half a canned peach with a macaroon and cover both with a thick custard; on, if in order, fill the peach with the custard or whipped cream and crumble macaroons over the top. This is sure to prove palatable.

WHEN IRONING.

The backs of old kid gloves, sewn together and used as an interlining to kitchen kettle or laundry iron-holders are invaluable as a means of giving protecetion to the hands without adding materially to the bulk of the holder. A piece of felt, flannel, blanketing, serve or even velveteen may be used as the outer covering.

When heating flatirons it is always best to lift them and wipe after being on the gas stove a few seconds, as the moisture found on the irons causes rusty when fully heated. This will also save labor in cleaning while ironing.

Instead of having an iron stand on which to rest your irons, use an ordinary brick for the purpose. The brick being a good non-conductor, the irons will retain their heat longer than if placed on an open stand.

NEW DESSERT.

Take one pound of best prunes; wash them thoroughly in hot water, then cover well with cold water and cook until they are tender, but not quite done. Remove from the stove and drain them until only a cupful of the water remains in the pan. To this add a half a cupful of sugar and cook slowly. Cream a heaping tablespoonful of butter with a level tablespoonful of flour and add this to the prunes, stirring constantly. Then add a liberal half-cupful of English walnuts cut into large pieces and two teaspoonfuls of grape juice. Stir until the sauce thickens, then serve. If desired, the prunes may be seeded immediately after their hot-water bath.

Must Light Hallways.

First Chief T. O. Deane has instructed all owners of apartment houses in the city that they must keep the main hallways well lighted all night, as a means to aid escape in case of fire. Some of the owners have neglected to do this in the past, the numerous cases the halls are so dark that there would be serious results in case of fire or accident.

Straw Pompons on Hats.

Pompons of straw will be used for trimming some of the smart tailored straw hats this spring.

SANG SACRED CANTATA

"Message from the Cross" Deeply Impresses Large Congregation.

AT GRACE EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

Macfarlane's Sombre Historical Theme Masterfully Rendered By Choir of Thirty-five Voices.

Grace Episcopal church was nearly filled Monday night when the rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, gave a short introductory speech about the sacred cantata, "The Message From the Cross," which was admirably sung by the full male choir. Mr. Stevenson said that the presentation of the cantata demonstrated what could be done in the way of devotional music, but that had already been shown in the one previously given, "Oliver to Calvary," by Maunder. The work by Macfarlane is simply the inspired work of a genius who felt the words of the Master from the Cross.

Like the rumblings of a distant thunder the first chords awoke a feeling of impending disaster. Anon the storm breaks and amid the crash of tumultuous sounds the sweet, plaintive voice of the tenor in recitative with a chromatic crescendo breaks forth in a minor story of Christ's suffering for sinful man.

Perhaps no more mournful sound can be imagined than the music accompanying the chorus which follows the solo, "Oh come and mourn with me a while," a plaintive cry from one of the waiting women and a chorus of weeping disciples finish the illusion that one is witnessing the agony and death of the Saviour on the Cross.

Throughout the cantata the sombre, overhanging thought of imminent disaster, emphasized by the emotion evoked by the weird music lends to the whole performance a thrilling effect, which at the Lord and the final giving up after the torture are vividly portrayed. The various solos by William and Bert Tallamy and Vincent Miner, and the trios by the Messrs. Tallamy and Raymond Manley, and the work of Masters Arthur Martin, Benjamin Cook and Carlyle Wright was finely done. No little part of the success of the cantata is due to the organist and choirmaster, S. Frederick Smith, whose manipulation of the big instrument demonstrated his complete mastery of it.

WM. R. GEORGE'S ADDRESS

one who came in at the last moment is one of the best helpers we have at the republic."

Mr. George told the story of the toughest boy who ever came to the republic. He was a leader of a tough gang on the east side in New York and attempted to kill a policeman. He served two years in Trenton for horse stealing and finally drifted back to New York, and came to see Mr. George. He tackled the job of being a "man" and died a year ago in San Francisco after becoming one of Cornell's most brilliant students and making a name for himself as a civil engineer and bridge builder.

One of the workers in the George Junior Republic is coming to Plainfield within a few weeks to talk up the matter and only awaits the necessary invitations to speak. He will tell of the new republic which is to be established at Flemington Junction in this State, and wants to interest the people of this city in the project.

Branch republics, all of which are connected with what is now the National Association of George Junior Republics, have been established in other parts of the country and are repeating the successes of the Freeville republic.

The present population of the George Junior Republic is about 160, 100 being boys and sixty girls. The girls vote as well as study and work and they earn their board just as the boys do. And they turn out to be just as useful as any other citizens. One beauty of the whole program is that when they leave the republic they have obliterated their pasts and have a whole new life before them which they invariably make the most of.

Religion cuts a large figure in the republic, but none of it is compulsory. Over ninety per cent of the citizens are regular church members and all religions are represented among the citizens. There are now more than forty buildings occupied as homes, stores and factories. There are scholarships for those too poor to pay their way through college. The rich boy has no more chance nor is shown any favoritism more than the poorest. He must work for what he gets.

Mr. George answered many questions relating to the inner working of the republic and left at a late hour. Before the close of the meeting he was elected an honorary member of the Seventh-Day Baptists' Men's club. He was introduced by President John B. Cottrell, and at the end of his lecture was roundly applauded.

MR. RANDOLPH TELLS OF PLEASURES ABROAD

Something of the interesting time former Mayor and Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph and their daughter, Miss Blossom Randolph, are having abroad may be gleaned from the instructive letter which Mr. Randolph has kindly sent to this paper at its request. The letter follows:

Tunisia was good to us, and we loved her. The entire North African littoral from Tunis to Oran is, in its present condition of advancement and prosperity, a fine example of French government. Algiers is a Department of France, one of the States of the Republic, so to speak; having her own Representatives in the Congress, or Parliament, at Paris. Tunis is a protectorate, nominally governed by a Bey under Turkish direction, but really controlled by France, and now under active and rapid French development. We motored four hundred miles through Tunisia and traveled by rail half that distance, and found the Arabs apparently content, both in the cities and in the country districts, too; they appeared to have more life and useful activity in them than we had observed amongst their brethren in Algeria or in Egypt.

The French respect the Mahommedan religion and on that score no complications arise. Catholics and Protestants fraternize freely also. As a Catholic said to me, "We all worship the same God;" and the numerous Jews belong to the same happy monotheistic family. Devout missionaries, or evangelization might do good in any of the great churches. But there is hardly occasion for the exploitation of additional religious doctrine in North Africa. And this is particularly the case in view of the fact that the Protestant thought it worthily represented there, as it is everywhere, where French civilization prevails, by the evangelical or "Reformed" church.

Time was when, in France, in the middle ages, or just afterward, religious belief and French religious destiny were almost equally balanced between the Waldensian, or Albigenslan, type of conviction and tradition, and the tradition handed down through the ages by Rome. It is, in effect, the same type of French protestantism which we have found exemplified in recent years throughout France and her colonies. In Paris, in Marseilles, in Mentone and in Tunis alike you will find the devout congregations, the simple, unadorned edifice, the eloquent pastor, the unaffected service with hearty congregational singing. We have heard the like amongst the mountains of Wales. Its sincerity and harmony appeal to the true spirit of worship.

From Tunis to Marseilles we crossed in a tottlish French boat of 2,300 tons burthen—not so big as the General Chanzy (owned by the same line) which went to the bottom of the Mediterranean with all her passengers save one, a few weeks ago. The first two-thirds of our voyage proved a joy, the last third was as much of a misery as our worst enemy (if we have any) could have wished for us—particularly for the ladies.

Marseilles is a splendid city, full of maritime and manufacturing enterprise. Its population exceeds half a million, and it glories in holding only second place to Paris amongst the cities of France.

We are resting at Nice on the French Riviera. The season is on, and the great hotels are full. We have made the motor drive over the splendid Corniche road to Mentone. We have looked on the throngs—thousands that surround the gaming tables at Monte Carlo—but without feeling any temptation to play—and we have witnessed a fine ascent by Monsieur Rougier in his flying machine over the sea.

A DAY OF PLUMES.

It may be that the tariff on artificial flower gave ave an impetus to feathered hats, for surely we see many of them. Plumes are short and long, curled and straight, cut in many devious ways, and often made out of all resemblances to their original habitat. No ostrich would know them. He would be right in repudiating such kin.

The willow, expensive and perishable, is the kind most sought. In its limpest state it is now called a drenched plume. It is in all colors and sometimes all these colors are on one plume. The effect is not bad how much work they do this season, and it seems one of their sports to dye each little tendril in a different color.

The result is the iridescent feather that, if it was natural, would make an ostrich an outcast among his kind.

The especial fashion in these iridescent plumes is to dye them in intense blues, greens, purples and blacks all on one spine. These are draped over the length and breadth of the black velvet turban, and they are quite glorious.

The cut ostrich brush is in the class with the bob-tail horse. It is an unnatural treatment of an ostrich feather, but it has attained wide popularity when used on the Cossack and Uhlan turbans. It looks something like a peacock feather with the "eye" cut off.

Another idea is to build up a mongrel affair on the central spine with a quill feather on one side and a wide drooping ostrich on the other.

Proof Positive

By Jane Church Rosenberg

"I can give you Tom's address now," Mrs. McAllister said, addressing Joe Bailey, who had stopped at his friend's house on his way down town. "Oh, dear!" she added, under her breath, tearing open a letter the postman had just handed to her. "I wonder if he has missed it."

"Anything wrong with Tom?" asked the man, anxiously, as he saw the letter fall, half-read, from her hand.

"Joe," she said, "Tom has written as if he had my picture with him, and he left it at home. Here it is"—she added, picking up a heavy brown envelope—"all ready to send to him."

Taking out the photograph she looked earnestly at the pictured face, which bore no trace of doubt or sorrow.

"No, Joe," Mrs. McAllister said, turning suddenly to the man, "I shall not send it to him now; I can't even write to him—how miserable I shall be!"

"Don't feel so badly—don't doubt Tom," Joe Bailey pleaded, "he may have another picture of you."

"No, he hasn't," she returned, quickly, "I gave the last one I had of any kind away last week."

"Let me see it, Mrs. Tom? Oh, yes," he said, as she handed the picture to him, "Graves made it, didn't he?"

Mrs. McAllister had not heard him. She had given up to her misery and sat on the couch, her face buried in the pillows.

Joe Bailey arose, and looking at his watch, said:

"I've engagement at ten—five minutes past now. Good-by, little woman, don't-cry any more."

No answer came from the woman who had received her first jolt upon the highway of life.

It was Sunday of the same week, and Joe Bailey had spent a few hours playing golf at the Country club links. Upon entering the smoking compartment of the belated traction car he found Tom McAllister occupying one of the wicker chairs.

"Hello, Mac!" he exclaimed, dropping into the adjacent seat, "I thought you were off on a two weeks' trip."

"Your letter, Joe, spoiled me for business, and I am going home to Sunday with Alice.

"I was sure, Joe," he added quickly, "that I left that picture at the office; I wrote as I did because it pleases Alice to think that I am comforted by looking at it when I am away. It was good of you to send me another photograph, but I'll tell her all about it when I get home. The little girl is pretty level-headed, and will take it all right, I know."

Joe Bailey's reply did not carry the emphasis of conviction:

"Of course you know best, Mac."

Mrs. McAllister sat at her desk, en*deavoring to compose a dignified yet* sufficiently resentful letter to her husband, but found it a difficult task.

A step on the porch and the sound of a latch key made her rush to the hall, every nerve quivering in glad surprise. The next minute she was in her husband's arms and his voice was saying:

"You did not write, Alice, and I had to come home."

She released herself, but all the studied words she had intended to say were forgotten.

"How could you do it, Tom; how could you?" Her voice was low and full of tears.

"Do what, little girl?" he asked.

"Write as you did about the picture when you had left it here."

Tom McAllister gave one quick look at his wife's pale, sad face, and, stooping, he quickly opened his suitcase.

"Alice, dear," he said, "I have another picture of you—here it is."

Her body relaxed, the rose tint came to her cheeks again, and a deepfetched sigh escaped her lips.

"I am glad," she cried rapturously, as she grasped the piece of cardboard in her outstretched hands. Then, with sudden decision, she added:

"Joe is a very loyal friend, Tom. He said you might have another picture, and you did."

University on a Novel Plan.

The American university at Washington is beginning the erection of buildings to cost $2,000,000. The Methodists hope to crown their educational system with this post-graduate institution.

In two respects the American university will be unique, says the Educational Review, in that it will be the only educational institution in the United States which will confine its instruction to post-graduate studies and will not have any undergraduate schools attached to its scheme of education, and that the university will not enroll any students until every building is erected. The total assets, property and endowment, amount to at least $10,000,000. The buildings now being constructed are for the law department, the colleges of medicine, technology, art and a great museum.

Waistcoats for Dogs.

Fancy cold weather waistcoats for pet dogs, made by experienced tailors, is the announcement that meets the eye in a London west-end shop. These waistcoats are made in all the latest colors and of the finest materials. They are braided and beautifully finished, and must take hours to manufacture. Charms in the shape of mirrors, tiny brushes with the dog's monogram on the back, and silver beads are other novelties advertised for dog wear.

DUNELLEN WANTS SEWERS

Board of Trade Asks Council to Take Matter Up With North Plainfield.

UP-TO-DATE DEPOT WANTED.

Committee Appointed to Confer With Jersey Central Railroad Officials for Station—P. S. C. Refuses to Lay Track.

The Dunellen Board of Trade had an extremely busy session Monday discussing several live topics. One of these was sewerage, and the unanimous adoption of a resolution suggesting that Mayor William A. Sanford appoint a committee to confer with the North Plainfield sewer commission relative to the town cooperating with the borough in the installation of the proposed sewerage system. The resolution was as follows:

Whereas, the borough of Dunellen is greatly in need of an up-to-date system of sewage, and

Whereas, the general sentiment of the community is that sewers are a necessity to the prosperity and health of the said borough, and

Whereas, there has been a tentative agreement entered into between the said borough of Dunellen and the borough of North Plainfield that Dunellen would co-operate in the building of a joint sewerage system, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting of the Board of Trade that the Mayor appoint a committee to meet and consult with the sewerage committee of the borough of North Plainfield on the subject at as early a date as possible.

Addresses favoring the resolution were made by Wilson Frederick, Alvah A. Gray, F. D. Baerman and others. Frank R. Wynkoop presi*dent of the board, declared that if a* vote was taken now in the borough on the question of sewers 90 per cent. of the citizens would vote to join issues with North Plainfield in the proposed system. "Dunellen needs sewers, the town must have them as it cannot get along without them any longer.

As forecasted exclusively in The Daily Press last week the matter of a new railroad station was also taken up. The need of a new depot will be presented to the officials of the company within a week by the Civic Committee, of which Dr. Edward Perkins is chairman. As the present station has done service for more than thirty years and is an "eyesore" to the municipality, sentiment is unanimous that the company will yield to the popular demand for a new and up-to-date building.

The board also went on record as being in favor of proposed legislation which will extend the charter of the Plainfield Horse Car Railroad Company to 1915 which will enable the company to make connections with Metuchen, South Plainfield, Dunellen, Warrenville and other towns. The board will be represented at Trenton by the following committee when the hearing on the proposed measure is held—Dr. Hogan, Assessor A. B. Peters, Henry B. Garretson, George W. Day and Wilson Frederick.

A communication was presented from Colonel E. S. Hine, of the Public Service Corporation, stating that the company was opposed to laying another track through the borough.

John B. Eick was appointed chairman of the membership committee to succeed J. Newton Apgar.

MOTOR-CYCLE MEET HERE ON APRIL 16

Plainfield has been placed on the motorcycle racing circuit and on Saturday afternoon April 16 a race meet will be conducted at the Plainfield Driving Park. Judging from the interest displayed in the coming meet the new sport is sure to be a go here.

The promoters of the meet are Claude Holgate, automobiling editor of the Newark Evening News, and Joseph H. Gunn, also a member of the racing staff of the newspaper. The Newark men will be asisted in promoting the meet by A. D. Honeyman, the Plainfield Bicycle club, and other local interests.

*The race program is now being ar*ranged. The card will probably consist of six motorcycle contests and two cycle races. In the motocycle contests will be seen all of the Eastern cracks including Walter Goerke, of Brooklyn, the national champion.

The complete program will be in readiness for the newspapers within one week. One of the feature races will be a contest limited to motorcyclists and this event should excite keen rivalry between local speed merchants.

A LOVE TRAGEDY.

Ruskin's Adoration of the Lovely Rose La Touche.

In 1858, when Ruskin was in his fortieth year, he was asked by a friend to give some lessons in drawing to a child named Rose La Touche, whose name, indeed, was French, but whose family were Irish. There sprang up between Ruskin and this young girl a very charming friendship, which, of course, in time could be nothing but a friendship. They wrote each other letters and exchanged drawings, and then for awhile they did not meet.

Ten years passed by before they saw each other. Meanwhile the child, whom he had remembered as a blue eyed, saucy, clever little blond with ripe red lips and hair like fine spun gold, had become a very lovely young woman of nineteen. They resumed their old acquaintance, but in a very different way. Though Ruskin was now nearly fifty, he gave to Rose La Touche an adoration and a passion such as he had never felt before. On her side she no longer thought of him as "very ugly," but was singularly drawn to him despite the difference in their years.

The two met often. They took long strolls together in the pleasant fields of Surrey, and at last Ruskin begged her to make him happy and to be his wife. Oddly enough, however, she hesitated, not because she was so much older than herself, but because he had ceased to be what she regarded as "a true believer." Some of the things that he had written shocked her as being almost atheistic. She was herself, moreover, a devout type of woman, a rigid and uncompromising Protestant. She used phrases from the Bible in her ordinary talk, and when she spoke of marriage with John Ruskin she said that she could not endure to be asked to act in disobedience.

Yet her heart was torn at the thought of sending him away, and so for several years their intimacy continued, he pleading with her and striving hard to make her see that love was everything. She, on the other hand, read over those passages of the Old Testament which seemed to bar all compromise.

At last, in 1872, when she was twenty-four and he was fifty-three, she gave him her final answer. She would not marry him unless he could believe as she did. His honesty forbade him to deceive her by a pretended conversion, and so they parted, never to see each other again. How deeply she was affected is shown by the fact that she soon left off the work of which she was so fond. She grew weak and ill, and when Ruskin read this his very soul was racked with agony, and he cried out:

"No, no; then I cannot go to her, for I love her even more than God!"

When she died, as she did soon after, the light of his life went out for Ruskin.—Lyndon Orr in Munsey's Magazine.

The Ocean's Age.

The ocean, of course, is not as old as the earth, because it could not be formed until the surface of the globe had sufficiently cooled to retain water upon it, but it seems preferential to try to measure the age of the sea. Nevertheless Professor Joly undertook the task, basing his estimate upon the ratio of the amount of sodium it contains to that annually contributed by the washing from the continents. By this reached the conclusion that the ocean has been in existence between 80,000,000 and 170,000,000 years. This does not seem a very definite determination, but then in geology estimates of time in years are extremely difficult because of the uncertainty of the elements of the calculation. The most that can be said for such results is that they are probable.

Couldn't Signal It!

During some tactical operations one of the ships of the squadron had made some bad blunders, and at length the admiral completely lost his temper. He stormed about his quarterdeck and informed his hearers of his opinion of the officer in command of the erring ship. When he paused for want of breath he turned to the signaler and said to him, "And you can tell him that, sir!"

The man scratched his head meditatively, "I beg pardon, sir," he ventured, "but I don't think we have quite enough flags for your message."—London Answers.

Cannibalism.

Among regular cannibals the most varied motives have been found. There are Indians who are said to eat their enemies by way of insult and Australians who consume their deceased parents as a mark of affection. Some tribes devour the dead enemy to establish him utterly, others to assimilate his virtues. Africa has revealed cannibalism of every sort, from the most solemn religious rite to the most prosaic gratification of appetite and taste.

PROVISION MADE FOR FIRE ALARM SYSTEM

The adjourned meeting of the Common Council, Monday, was devoted chiefly to a discussion of matters pertaining to the fire department. Councilman Duncan W. Taylor, chairman of the committee, being prepared to put through various contracts and agreements.

The question of the city making an agreement with Allen B. Laing to take eating charge of the fire alarm system caused considerable discussion. It was not perfectly clear to Mr. Mygatt that the contract submitted covered the ground, he having the impression that the city would be obliged to bear the expense for all materials furnished in addition to paying the cost of services and maintenance.

Mr. Taylor explained that the intent of the contract was that Mr. Laing is to maintain the entire system as at present but if a any time it is necessary to purchase new wiring, boxes or other material, the city must pay for it. Mr. Laing agrees to do the work for the sum of $1,440 a year. Mr. Taylor said that this contract was suggested because the New York Telephone Company which had charge of the work charging $670 a year, plus $25 extra for the care of the auxiliary system at the Stanley Organization and the State organization is an auxiliary to the National American Woman Suffrage Association, which in its turn is associated with the International organization, which represents twenty-three countries.

Why do women want the ballot? Because the ballot is a tool to meet our responsibilities—we could do our best now. As to means of forwarding the cause Mrs. Laddey spoke of the propriety of women taking an interest in civic improvement. The child—at school, at play, at work, in the juvenile courts, are women's concerns and women should be represented wherever women and children are concerned. Women should be on the school boards, they should be on the Board of Health. Women should be probation officers, truant officers and factory inspectors. Mrs. Laddey's daughter is probation officer in Essex county.

Mrs. Laddey told of the forming of college leagues. Two years ago the first league was formed and now there are forty-three such leagues. She also talked about the "equal pay" for women, saying that in Newark the woman truant officer receives $600 while the man gets $900. Mrs. Laddey recommended parents' organizations for schools and approved of the self government plan in them, where boys and girls vote and hold office, thus preparing themselves for future good citizenship.

Referring to the English suffragette Mrs. Laddey said: "We cannot indorse violence, but we admire their spirit." In concluding her address she said that the American idea of government is wrong if Woman Suffrage is wrong—if all are not free and equal in the sight of the law.

Following Mrs. Laddey, Mr. Champlain L. Riley read a notice to the effect that next week in Newark *the men of New Jersey are going to or*ganize a league to promote Woman Suffrage.

Oliver H. G. Leigh, a former resident of Mancester, England, gave an exceedingly delightful account of the beginning of the movement for Women's Rights in the English city. He mentioned among other prominent women Frances Power Cobb, the poetess, Emily Faithful, Lydia Becker and down a long list to John Stuart Hill, the great literary exponent of the movement. He told how Mr. Pankhurst, the husband of the now famous suffragette leader, was the first to begin to get hearings to work to not only write, but to fight for the cause. This fight for justice he undertook when a young man and before his marriage. The speakers were all liberally applauded and the next meeting promises to be as interesting as this one was.

The following men were elected to membership in the league last night: Champlain W. Riley, Allen W. Cowperthwait, Isaac L. Miller, William L. Saunders, Dr. Edward S. Krans, P. DeLacy Hyde, Stephen Haff, Jr., and Howard Colby.

On April 25 the league will meet with Mrs. Stephen Haff, Sherman avenue. This will be the annual business meeting and election of officers. The meeting in May will be with Mrs. T. W. T. Maxwell, of West Seventh street, when Mrs. Tomlinson will read a paper on "Ways Newark Women's Votes Would Help the Community."

The officers of the league are: President, Mrs. Stephen Haff, vice-president, Mrs. Isaac L. Miller; secretary, Mrs. Champlain L. Riley and treasurer, Mrs. Samuel Huntington.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE PLEAS

State Association President Makes Argument Before Local League.

MEN ARE MADE MEMBERS.

Mrs. Clara Laddey Tells of the Growth of the Movement for Votes for Women—O. H. G. Leigh Speaks.

The Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield met Monday at the home of Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, 212 East Seventh street, where there was a large attendance of women and some men. Mrs. Clara Laddey, president of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association was the speaker of the evening and had for her subject "Best Means of Forwarding the Cause."

Mrs. Laddey said that the New Jersey Association has been in existence for forty years and its work is still progressing. On February 2 an Equal Suffrage club was organized in Jersey City with thirty members, some of them men. Great interest has also developed in Passaic and a club will no doubt be organized there. These clubs are connected with the State organization and the State organization is an auxiliary to the National American Woman Suffrage Association, which in its turn is associated with the International organization, which represents twenty-three countries.

MARVELLOUS CALIFORNIA

Its Beauties and Glories Ably Presented by James W. Erwin.

AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

A Lecture Without a Peer in Interest and Instruction—Magnificent Views.

"The Beauties and Glories of California" was the title of a lecture given by James W. Erwin, of San Francisco, in the Congregational church last night and it is safe to say that no lecture of recent years has afforded greater pleasure. Mr. Erwin's pictures which included the trip from New York to New Orleans by steamer and thence through the South and West over the Southern Pacific route, delighted the eye and furnished pleasure and instruction to those who have never visited those places. Stereopticon views alternated with moving pictures, one of the steamer and these was the "battle of flowers," which took place during the visit of the White Squadron in their famous trip around the world.

The Texas cotton fields with the colored pickers, packers and compress were also interested the audience, as did the baling and shipping of the cotton. To views along the route of the Southern Pacific railroad were added the interesting and ancient landmarks of various States until upon the arrival at Pomona, California, one was plunged into the midst of the fruit orchards and veritable gardens of Eden, where even a cane thrust into the soil will take root and grow. From Pomona to San Francisco, through the Santa Clara Valley, Santa Barbara, San Jose Los Angeles and the Yosemite Valley one is bewildered by the successive beauties displayed, especially the magnificent array of flowers seen on every hand.

The recent aviation meet at Los Angeles provided some of the most thrilling views and a picture of Paulhan taken in the evening when the aviator was 500 feet in the air evoked round after round of applause. The public gardens, 30,000 pigeons in flight, the ranches and mission buildings at Santa Barbara, a panoramic view of the White Squadron passing in review of the beach at Coronado and other splendid photographs roused the audience to enthusiastic applause.

Sunset pictures of the "golden gate" were among the most admired. Mr. Erwin told how the name was given to the great entrance to the harbor of San Francisco. It was named by General John C. Fremont after such a view of a particularly beautiful sunset. Among the other interesting views were those taken just after the big earthquake and fire in San Francisco, and along side these were shown the rehabilitated city.

The scenes in and about the Yosemite valley were perhaps the most wonderful ever shown. They included the famous falls known as the bridal veil and various rocky trails with sure-footed mules and horses carrying a party of tourists. In one of the moving pictures Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, then President, was seen smiling at the top of a huge coach. This view of the ex-President evoked prolonged hand-clapping. The final picture "El Capitan" showed this promontory silhouetted against a sky like of blue and gold which almost made one gasp at its collossal magnificence.

The lecture was given under the auspices of the Men's Club of the church and was one of a series of entertainments which this club has prepared for members and friends President Frank Clawson introduced Mr. Erwin who made a little preparatory speech. Mr. Erwin said he had been traveling through the golden west for upward of twenty-two years and each one of those years had revealed some beauty previously hidden to his eyes.

Mr. Erwin started today on a four-teen thousand mile trip through the Eastern States and will finally land in California. During the past year some of the views have been shown by Mr. Erwin to English audiences and he said last night that the astonishment and incredulity with which some of his lectures were received would have discouraged anyone who was not thoroughly conversant with the facts about California. Some of the slides thrown on the screen of magnified pictures of flowers brought gasps of astonishment and pleasure from the nature lovers present.

The North Plainfield Park Commission had a short session in the borough Council chamber last night with a number of property owners who are also interested in the scheme. Another session will be held at 8 o'clock this afternoon.

ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN AT HEAVENLY REST

Under the auspices of the Sunday-school of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, an excellent entertainment was held in the parish house last night. The affair was planned and arranged by a committee of which Miss Elizabeth Forster was the chairman, and much credit is due both Miss Forster and her assistants for the success attained. There was a large attendance of members and friends of the parish. This was the program;

MEYERS REPRIMANDED AND PALMER LECTURED

Joseph Meyers and Harry Palmer, colored, the former the proprietor of a lunch wagon on East Second street and the latter a former customer, were lectured by City Judge Runyon this morning and warned against repeating their conduct of last Saturday under penalty of severe chastisement.

Last Saturday night Palmer, who had been drinking, entered Meyer's lunch wagon and ordered some food. Meyer refused to serve him because of Palmer's condition. There ensued a scuffle in which a window of the wagon was shattered. Meyer grabbed a club and started after Palmer who had taken to his heels in the direction of Watchung avenue. When he brought up with Palmer, as alleged, Meyer attempted to use the club on the colored man, but the latter dodged, protesting meanwhile that he was willing to pay for the broken pane of glass.

Before Meyer and his Palmer was about to go home when another fellow created a disturbance and unfortunately for Palmer he was arrested because he was near the second fracas. Meyer was reprimanded for taking the law into his own hands and Palmer was lectured on the evils of drinking and the case against both dismissed.

GRACE SUNDAY SCHOOL TO GIVE ENTERTAINMENT.

Under the auspices of the Sunday school of Grace church, an Easter Mart will be given in the parish house, East Sixth and Sycamore streets, on Wednesday and Thursday, April 6 and 7, from 4 to 10 o'clock. IS THE GANG ORGANIZED?

Bicycles Disappear as if by Magic, But Where do They Go to is the Question.

TEN STOLEN IN TWO WEEKS.

Suggestion Made that Special Cop Be Appointed to Watch for Thieves—The Culprits Reap Harvest.

There is ample evidence that a gang or it might be termed as organized gang of bicycle thieves is operating in this city with an impunity born of facility in eluding the police. The total number of bicycles stolen during the past few weeks would indicate that the occupation is one studied from the ground up and is productive of enough income for the thieves to warrant the taking of the chances which sometimes lead to arrest, but in Plainfield apparently lead to affluence.

Nearly all the bicycle dealers in the city who have recently sold wheels have some story of loss of wheels to report. Perhaps the one most vitally interested in the matter is "Pop" Thorn, of Park avenue, who has had several of his customers complains of new wheels stolen immediately or soon after their delivery. Thorn who is questioned this morning furnished a list of some ten wheels which have been stolen within the past two weeks and, as he says, he cautions his patrons every time a bicycle is sold to be sure good care is taken of it because it is likely to disappear.

There is no doubt whatever that some measures are due to be taken to stop the practice of stealing wheels and riding them out of town for sale to some "fence." As Mr. Thorn says, "The wheels are not shipped away in the ordinary manner and they are not found among the dealers, therefore they must be taken away by the only natural method, riding." Someone has suggested that the police committee of the Common Council appoint some one bluecoat, who is himself a cyclist who is acquainted with the riders in the town, to do nothing but watch for the gang who is enriching itself in most cases at the expense of young men whose savings of months are invested in a wheel.

Among those who have lost bicycles during the past two weeks are C. W. Bingeman, of the Y. M. C. A.; Dale Warren, of Hillside avenue; two pupils at Leal's School, two at Hartridge School and three at the Plainfield High School. There are others which have still to be heard from and in nearly every case the wheel has been one recently from the factory and in fine condition.

As to who is responsible for the non-apprehension of those industrious sneaks, who is to say? Just one thing remains to be done; let the proper authorities get busy and corral the thieves.

ANNOUNCE WEDDING OF MISS MARY COLLIER.

Cards have been received here by friends announcing the marriage of Miss Mary Collier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Collier, and Fred Hillman, both of this city. The ceremony was performed in New York on Thursday, February 17.

While the announcement comes as a great surprise to many friends of the couple, the marriage was known to a few persons who were intimate with the bride and groom. They are now residing in Jersey City. The bride is a graduate of the Plainfield High School and both she and Mr. Hillman have a host of friends in this city.

Funeral of Jasper Wilson.

The funeral service of Jasper Wilson was held at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon from the home of his brother, Andrew Wilson, on Craig place, and was private. Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, officiated. The burial was in Hillside Cemetery and the pall-bearers were James Demler, William Demler, Jr., Douglass Demler, H. B. MacDonald and Simon Mantz, all nephews of Mr. Wilson.

Complain About the Dust.

The dusty condition along West Front street is such as to arouse considerable indignation on the part of residents. The trolley cars and automobiles are constantly stirring up the dust making it practically impossible for householders to open their windows or sit on their porches these fine days. The taxpayers believe that it is time that the councilmanic street committee did something.

WILSON FORESEES VICTORY

Princeton University's President Declares Time is Ripe for Democratic Success.

DENOUNCES G. O. P. METHODS.

Local Democrats Hear Party's Probable Presidential Candidate Speak at Big Dollar Dinner at Elizabeth.

Local Democrats who attended the one dollar Jeffersonian dinner in Elizabeth Hall at Elizabeth last night had the opportunity of listening to Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University, and probable Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1912, denounce the methods of the Republican party in a forcible address. Among the Jeffersonians who attended the function were the Hon. James E. Martine, Leroy J. Ellis, president of the Democratic club, James Caulfield, Frank Wagner, Walter L. Hetfield, Alexander Kane, P. P. Reville and Frank J. Shattle.

Dr. Wilson, and the other guest of honor, United States Senator Thomas P. Gore, of Oklahama, received volleys of mighty cheers when introduced to their audience. Other notables who made addresses were State Senator George S. Silzer, of Middlesex; Assemblyman Charles P. K. O'Brien, of Hudson, and the Rev. Dr. Otis A. Glazebrook, of Elizabeth. In being introduced Dr. Wilson was hailed as a "scholar and statesman."

Dr. Wilson declared that the signs of the time are most encouraging to the Democratic party. He declared with emphasis that the Republican party caters to special interests and disregards the wishes of voters in the matter of legislation. He referred to the prevailing high prices and said the time is ripe for a change.

"If the Democratic party see this opportunity," said Dr. Wilson," and takes advantage of it without selfishness, with patriotic enthusiasm with an ardor for the things a new age is to bring forth, it will win not mere party success but a glory which it will itself be glad to see merged and identified with the glory of the nation itself."

At that time the society will take up the water question and inaugurate a lively campaign. The members propose to undertake the task of getting the voters out on election day, April 19. CHARLES R. MALTBY DEAD

Succumbs to Acute Pneumonia and Heart Disease After Brief Illness.

AGED SEVENTY-THREE YEARS.

Mr. Maltby Made a Large Fortune in Wholesale Business—He Owned Much Property Here.

Charles R. Maltby, one of the best known citizens of Plainfield for thirty-five years, died at 8 o'clock this morning at his home, 1203 Putnam avenue, from acute pneumonia and heart disease with which he had been ill since Saturday. The best of medical skill was employed, including a New York specialist, but owing to Mr. Maltby's advanced age, all efforts were of no avail.

Mr. Maltby was born at Monterey, N. Y., and was seventy-three years of age. When a young man he went to New York city, where later he engaged in the wholesale grocery business. Afterward he established a large branch at Corning, N. Y. He continued in the grocer business for forty-five years, being active up to the time of his illness on Saturday. The concern was one of the best known in the trade and goods were shipped to all parts of the country.

When Mr. Maltby came to this city thirty-five years ago he purchased a farm on Plainfield avenue, where he lived until a few years ago, when he sold the handsome estate to the Watchung Hunt Club. Afterward he removed to 1203 Putnam avenue. He owned considerable property in the Washington Park section of North Plainfield and at one time owned what is now the Hotel Iroquois. He also had several fine properties on Putnam avenue.

Although he never held public office in this city, Mr. Maltby always showed a lively interest in city affairs. He was identified with All Souls church, Unitarian, on Park avenue, and frequently attended services there.

Surviving are three daughters, Mrs. W. S. Heyniger and Mrs. Hugh H. Kendall, of Corning, N. Y., and W. S. Maltby, with whom he lived in this city; also two brothers, Erastus C. Maltby, of this city, and Jerome B. Maltby, of Corning, N. Y.

The funeral service will be held from late residence, 1203 Putnam avenue, Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

FRANKLIN COUNCIL IS HOST TO THE LADIES.

The annual "ladies' night" of Franklin Council Jr., O. U. A. M., which was conducted at Debele's Hall last night was an enjoyable event. About three hundred juniors, their friends, wives, sisters and sweethearts, participated in the pleasures of the occasion. There was dancing and an entertainment by professional talent from New York.

State Councilor Gray, of Jersey City, was the guest of honor and delivered an interesting talk in which he extolled the benefits to be gained by membership in the order. The committee in charge was George D. Wilson, Harry Nole, Wm. J. Firstbrook, George Townley and Harry Southard.

COLORED CHURCH FAIR MAKES A FINE START.

A large crowd was in attendance at the fair and bazar inaugurated at Mt. Zion A. M. E. church on West Fourth street last night. The affair is being conducted by the pastor and junior stewardesses, the Trustees Aid Society and the Men's Club of the congregation, and will continue until Friday night. The interior of the church was prettily decorated in lavender and white.

Fancy articles and notions were on sale at decorated booths and all departments did a rushing business. Refreshments were also on sale. The joint committee in charge of the bazar is Mrs. Agnes Holmes, Miss Lizzie Grobes, Mrs. Annie Jones and Spencer Kelly.

NOVEL LUNCHEON AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

The Women's Association of the Congregational church were entertained and instructed and helped to entertain others with a "shredded wheat" party in the church parlors yesterday afternoon. The food was served in half a dozen different ways prepared by an expert in that line and the regular menu printed for the occasion were a source of wonder to the sixty or seventy women who were present.

The proceeds of the novel luncheon went to swell the total which the association is gathering for the building fund of the church and a tidy sum was realized.

BOROUGH FIREMEN SAVE AN UNFORTUNATE HORSE

The reserves of the North Plainfield fire department were called out last night to rescue a horse belonging to George Voehl that was imprisoned in a quagmire of quicksand in Greenbrook near the residence of Councilman William L. Smalley, Jr. Voehl's horse had been enjoying the day pasturing on the first crop of spring grass on West End avenue. At nightfall the animal started to wander home. A crowd of small boys were pilotting the animal when Councilman Smalley informed them that it belonged to Voehl.

It was about 8:30 o'clock when the animal got away from its escort and ran over an embankment into the brook. The horse struck quicksand and sank to a depth which covered its whole body the only part being visible being the animal's head.

Fire headquarters was notified and a party of reserves headed by former Police Chief William Campbell, Howard Sharp and Richard Hooper hastened to the scene. After three hours of labor with rope and planks and another horse the Voehl animal was extricated from its predicament apparently none the worse for the experience.

SMALL FIRE THROWS DANCERS INTO A PANIC

A couple of hundred or more young people who attended a dance given in Sebring's auditorium last night under the auspices of the W. O. W. club were given a scare while in the midst of the festivities. A blazing pile of boxes and rubbish in the rear of Leo Zeisel's bicycle establishment resulted in an alarm being turned in from Box 12.

Some one shouted "fire" and as the flames which were visible from the rear windows in the hall, together with the clang of the fire apparatus, many of the merry makers were given the impression that the building was on fire. Several young women added to the excitement by fainting and screaming while the orchestra stopped playing.

The committee, however, in a short time restored order and after a brief breathing spell the festivities were continued. The firemen had little difficulty in extinguishing the flames. The cause of the fire is attributed to one of the young men at the dance who dropped a lighted cigarette out of the window.

During the progress of the fire some of the young men at the dance amused themselves by throwing empty cans and bottles at the firemen. Captain George Feiring of Company No. 2 was struck by a couple of cans and a bottle scaled Chief Doane's head. Chiefs Doane and Kiely visited the hall and closed the windows, and the practise desisted. An investigation is being made and it is probable that arrests of the guilty parties will follow.

ANNUAL MEETING OF TEMPLE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Reports were presented at the annual meeting of the Sunday school of the Temple Baptist church last night. The election of officers was postponed to a future date. Superintendent L. W. Randolph presided at the meeting calling for the reports from all departments.

There are 192 active members in the school, sixty-five in the Home department and sixteen on the cradle roll making a total membership of 273.

ANOTHER BIG FIRE LOSS

Blaze in the Old VanDeventer Structure Results in $10,000. Damage.

CAPT. DALY HAS CLOSE CALL.

Knights of Columbus Hall and Drake's Business College Gutted by Flames and Water—Defective Wires.

Fire, smoke and water, partially wrecked the old Van Deventer building, situated at 112-14 East Front street, early last evening. Cause of the blaze is attributed to defective electric light wires. The loss to the building, and to the different occupants, it is believed, will reach the $10,000 mark. A. J. Brunson, president of the First National Bank, is agent for the building, the owner of the structure being his sister, Mrs. Bonnell, of South Orange.

The blaze made its start in a small closet in the southeast corner of the handsomely equipped lodge rooms of Watchung Council, No. 552, Knights of Columbus. The flames burned their way upward through a small stairway leading to the banquet room and it was in that section of the building that the flames did the most damage. It is the general presumption that the flames had been smouldering all the afternoon.

Smoke filled the building quickly and the firemen experienced considerably difficulty in their battle to check the flames. One of the thrilling features of the blaze occurred at 8 o'clock when Captain James Daly, of 6 headquarters, was overcome by the smoke and heat while feeding a stream of chemicals on the blazing stairway.

Captain George Feiring, of Company No. 2, at the time was endeavoring to get a line of hose to Captain Daly, when the latter staggered and fell to the floor. Daly retained his presence of mind, however, groped his way to a window through a cloud of smoke, and quickly recovered. Daly was ordered back to headquarters and exhibited a gritty spirit by remaining on his post until the blaze was extinguished.

An alarm was sounded from Box 12 at 7:25 o'clock and the downtown companies hastened to the scene. Ten minutes later a second alarm brought Captain George Smith, Jr., and Hose Company No. 3 into commission. At 9:20 o'clock the recall was sounded, The downtown companies returned to the building again at 4:20 o'clock when a small fire was discovered in an ante room in the front part of the building. This blaze was quickly extinguished, although the contents of several lockers were destroyed.

The loss to the Knights of Columbus will probably be between $2,500 and $3,000. The hall was also tenanted by Court No. 2071, Independent Order of Foresters; Greenbrook Council, No. 1725, Royal Arcanum; Plainfield Council, No. 402, of Commercial Travelers; Mianonoma Tribe, No. 118, Independent Order of Red Men; Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias; Union Lodge, No. 340 F. and A. M.; Division No. 4, A. O. H., and the Plainfield Letter Carriers Association. All of the fraternal organizations involved are covered by insurance.

Drake Business College is closed as the main study room was thoroughly gutted by water and the loss will be about $1,500 to $2,000. The institution occupied the second floor and all of the furniture in the rear section was wrecked. About sixty three-quartered solid oak desks and a large quantity of text books and other paraphernalia belonging to the pupils were destroyed.

The management of the college announced this morning that temporary headquarters will be engaged immediately and studies resumed in a day or so. It is not expected that the old quarters will be ready for use for fully a month.

On the ground floor of the building are situated the stores of the United Cigar Company and S. H. Whitney, dealer in carpets and dry goods. In one of these instances the stock was considerably damaged by water. The people estimate their loss at about $300, while Mr. Whitney represented no loss.

Jere Van Winkle rang in the alarm. He was standing on East Front street, and noticed smoke issuing from a window on the top story. As Van Winkle was standing by the fire box John McCaffery, the janitor of the building came along. He was on his way to open the K. of C. lodge room and make preparations for a meeting of the St. Mary's Alumni Association.

McCaffery stood around and watched the apparatuses respond and asked a bystander, "Where is the fire?"

"The Knights of Columbus hall," was the answer and McCaffery hastened to the building, opened the door, and was greeted by a huge flame which leaped out of the door.

No time was lost in instituting ef-

vary Baptist church in that city was crowded to bid him goodby.

Rev. Mr. Maguire was the guest of honor at a dinner tendered him by the ministers of Cleveland on last Monday and on Thursday night his congregation tendered him and his wife a farewell reception. Mr. Maguire in making the change from Calvary Baptist church is doing so at a great personal sacrifice, but he views the matter from a purely spiritual standpoint and makes the sacrifice willingly. Under his ministrations the Cleveland congregation has doubled and the seating capacity has been increased in the auditorium to more than a thousand and at all the services has been filled. He will deliver a course of thirty lectures at Chautauqua during his summer vacation.

Among the practical charitable associations which he has been able to establish among his congregation is one of brotherhood which has for its object the uplifting of men has been most successful. Many men who otherwise might have succumbed to adverse circumstances have been saved, given employment and otherwise uplifted, besides establishing a sick benefit fund for them. His departure leaves a great void in Baptist circles in Cleveland. Rev. Mr. Maguire will preach his last sermon in Cleveland tomorrow.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HEAD SENDS OUT EASTER GREETINGS.

John T. Sproull, president of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union, has issued his annual Easter greeting to state societies, in which he expresses the love and esteem of Rev. Dr. F. E. Clark, known as "Father Endeavor" Clark, as well as himself, to all Endeavorers and reviews briefly the important events for the coming year, which includes the convention to be held at Atlantic City. He also makes an appeal for funds for the erection of Clark Memorial Building.

Overdress of Velvet.

The master builders of wonderful gowns are restricted by nothing this season. Unlimited license is theirs, lovely fabrics, laces, metal, tissues, fur and jewels. Never before have these been such evening gowns, such blending of colors, such combination of materials. A new idea is to drape an overdress of chiffon velvet over a gown of satin, lace and metallic tissue. The velvet is hung.

And All Are Turbans.

Among the new shapes in turbans are the Rembrandt, the Henry III., the Hussar, the De Stael, the Drum Major and the Napoleon.

Border Materials in Favor.

Border materials are still favorites in the productions for spring and summer gowns.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

Governor Fort, which means Strong, makes a sweet Easter offering to the ladies of New Jersey, whose responsive chorus will be sung fortissimo. His proclamation is at "if," pianissimo.

"The Audubon Society bill put in by Assemblyman Radcliffe of Passaic, making it a misdemeanor for women to wear feathers, wings, or bodies of birds for personal adornment, was put through the House today by a vote of 32 to 11.

"If the Senate passes it Governor Fort will sign it, and Spring styles for New Jersey women must undergo a change at once or many women will be in jail."

There is, as we know on Shakespeare's authority, much virtue in an "if." It pricks a hole in every bubble of bluff. Tender headed womankind need not tremble, it is only a feathery blow at worst. The blockers are the ones who will get worsted.

We are the terror-stricken multitude, brother baldheads. What! for bid us to cultivate the scanty crop of downy herbage we fain hope will spring up and flourish like unto the mighty mustard tree! Where are these swashbuckler legislators going to stop in their crusade against personal liberty? If they will kindly postpone these exhibitions of tomboy tomfoolery until they have performed their paid duty of legislating all high and low rascals into jail we and our posterity may safely count on a millenium of indulgence in our right to enjoy life and happiness unworried by flea-bite law, weaker than the paper they are written on and perhaps even than the brains that hatch these sillybilly blue rules. If in a lucid interval legislative apprentices striving for glorious immortality would stamp out the crimes of plucking feathers from live birds; of exterminating those of beautiful plumage for heartless women who think that fine feathers outside their heads make up for the lack of fine feelings within; and the barbarity of using plain feathers to rob their more civilized neighbors of their legal right to see that they pay for the public assemblies, then we will gladly stick a spread eagle quill in their hats for their bravery and sense.

President Taft's spacious smile seems to be getting a little frayed with the edges, for when so sacred a thing as a genuine smile becomes automatic it is likely to lose its glow; the gold gets a lacquer of Dutch metal. Or is he only smiling with the other side of his mouth? Failure as an epigram maker is natural with a president, but at the dinner of the American Peace and Arbitration League the President condescended to borrow a used-up saying from Gen. Sherman, who borrowed it from a heap who borrowed it from Napoleon, who borrowed it from a line of borrowers from every man-jack in the rank and file of the winners and losers in the first battle that ever was. "War is hell!" the reverberating echo of all the ages. His next effort was feebler than even that—"The Lord looks after children, drunken men, and the United States." After! A wide-awake figure-head of a nation is put there to look—not after, but before the child is killed by criminal neglect or recklessness, and before the man maked himself drunk and dangerous, and before the nation makes legislative blunders, petty wars, and tolerates unjust "Justice" betwen the rich and poor.

Pittsburgh sticks to its h. denied it by most othertown papers. What can be the secret of its cliaging to the h? Certainly the smoky city looks and smells like the Sherman-Taft place. And it is now exhibiting a procession of its citizens, honored by election to its select Council Chamber, in the act of departing from the h city into a paltry penny ten-tiary in the wilderness. Mr. Carnegie, who owes it much for smelting the gold from the human ore so abundant there, even he will not make it his home. Will he now clean his furnaces to purify the material of which so many shining lights of the gold-plated social firmament are made? Or is he courtier enough to echo the shitless sentiment of his smiling President and leave the Lord to look after poor Pittsburgh's petty grafters and ahler wholesale smelters?

The Yellow Peril used to be regarded as a bogey to frighten weak-witted Europeans. That is to say—weak-witted journalists and book writers used to try and scare those of us who used our eyes to see and our ears to hear the signs of the times. If there is one thing we know better than another surely it is that wheels go round. Then we believe we know that worlds go whirling round the sun, but this we take upon credit. That nations go up and down with the universal wheel we learn from schoolbooks. What we might know if we sifted our newspapers and give thought to the news which is news and not sheer drivel and transparent lies, is that the universe wheel which revolves by force of nature's law is now lifting the Orient to the top and we know-alls of the up-to-date races are sliding to the bottom.

With all our boasted skill and intellect the ancient East can laugh at our ignorance of mysteries and arts long familiar to them. We have mistaken their slowness for stupidity, and their patient endurance for helplessness. We have supposed because they never think of Declarations of Independence, and are too feeble to fight for it. But nations that believe in majority rule ought to keep well in mind that they are a feeble minority when we count the East. China holds 400,000,000 patriots, India 300,000,000, Japan 46,000,000. Not reckoning other Eastern populations these amount to 740 millions of dusky people. The United States may number 85,000,000, and the British Empire, omitting India, say about 160,000,000, and if we count Russia in 135,000,000, Austria-Hungary 46,000,000, Germany 55,000,000, and France 40,000,000, we get a total of say 450,000,000 Americans and Europeans. If someday the 740 millions of Orientals, joined by perhaps ten millions of united peoples in sympathy with them, come swooping down upon us saying they are tired of us and intend to manage their own affairs, what then?

LITERARY

Benj. B. Hampton, editor of Hampton's Magazine, in an article in the forthcoming April issue of that periodical printed over his own signature, comes out boldly for government construction and operation of railroads in Alaska and for a system of leasing the vast resources of the territory which he declares are now rapidly passing under the supremacy of the Morgan-Guggenheim celebration. "What we need to apply to the Alaskan situation is some good hard sense," says Mr. Hampton. "We need to put the whole proposition on a business basis that will permit individuals and corporations to make liberal returns on the big investments that are absolutely essential to developing Alaska, but also, while they are making these liberal profits, to see that a fair percentage is paid to the owners, the people of the United States.

Important timely interest is characteristic on many of the articles of the April Century. In the spirit of the Easter season is Robert Hichens' account of his journey "From Damascus to Nazareth," with reproductions in color of Mr. Guerin's paintings of the Garden of Gethsemane, the Mount of Olives, and Tiberias and the Sea of Galilee. George von Skal's "If Germany Were Called Upon" is of special interest as "the wonderful organization by which a million soldiers could be placed in the field within a week. Charles P. Miller, editor of the New York Times, who has made a special study of Socialism, presents some of his conclusions, giving cogent reasons why Socialism is undesirable and impracticable, and considering the latest program of the Socialist party, chiefly as it would affect the management of finance. An article of constructive social interest in the numerical is Jacob A. Riis' "The People's Institute of New York," a remarkable organization which has brought about the censorship of moving picture films for the entire country, the supervision of theatres for the people, and which conducts an annual Cooper Union where important questions of the day are freely and helpfully discussed.

The Editors of Everybody's seem to have set out to cover, la their April number, about every phase of life, and to provide entertainment and interest for every member of the family. In "Sanity and Democracy," which opens the magazine, they urnish some remarkable facts about the success of American cities under Commission Government. From this start the ytalk about wild animal photographing in Africa; athletics, straight and tainted, the question of gold, its romance, and its effect on high prices; the makeup of an orchestra, and all the complicated machinery that goes into the pleasant sounds to which we dance and sing.

The Red Book Magazine for April, much enlarged, comes in a cover at once alluring and artistic. Illustrating, as it does, Hulbert Footner's story in the same issue, "The Pulse of Spring," it indicates the engaging qualities of the entire number. A powerful African story by Percival Gibbons, entitled "The Thoroughbred," serves to lead the literary contents o the issue.

Recently an eight million dollar smelter was closed by the people of Utah on the grounds of smoke damage and the smelter owners everywhere awaited with anxiety the final outcome of the great Montana suit which will probably be accepted as a precedent.—From "A Million for a Smoke Eater," in April Technical World Magazine.

OBSERVE GOOD FRIDAY

The Evangelical Congregations Gathered Together Friday Night.

HAYDN'S "PASSION" WAS SUNG.

Quartette and Chorus Give Superb Rendition of Musical Masterpiece—Offering for Charity.

Under the direction of R. A. Lasley Smith, organist and choirmaster of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, a quartet composed of Miss Hilda Wade, soprano; Miss Grace Carroll, contralto; LeRoy Pilcher, tenor, and Berney P. Pettigrew, baritone, and a chorus of forty voices selected from among the choirs of the various churches in the city, there was given one of the best rendered musical services Friday night ever presented in this city. Haydn's Passion in six parts was the cantata and its rendition was as near perfection as such a work can be.

The service for the evening was the annual Good Friday union meeting in which pastors of the various churches took part and the whole congregation joined in singing the hymns. The church was filled to its utmost capacity with an appreciative gathering and had applause for the singing been permissible there is no doubt that the people would have lent their approbation of the magnificent singing in some unmistakable way. Much of the success for the excellence of the performance was due to the splendid work of Mr. Smith, but he as well as others concurred in the statement that to Howard M. Case, who presided at the organ, was due a large share of quality for those who took part. The reading of the score with its diminuendos and climaxes precisely timed was a treat not often offered to the average church goer and the memory of the glorious, uplifting cadences of Haydn's masterpiece will be a lingering memory of soul happiness.

Rev. Dr. John S. Zelie, pastor of the church, delivered the invocation; Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church read the scripture; Rev. Dr. John A. Chambliss offered the prayer and the whole congregation repeated the creed. The benediction was pronounced by Dr. Chambliss.

An offertory was received for the benefit of the Children's Home. The union Good Friday is a time honored custom here.

WANT ARMORIES USED FOR MILITARY PURPOSES

Declaring that New Jersey has no law which requires military armories to be used exclusively for military purposes, Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr. has received from the war department a circular letter calling attention to the fact and suggesting that State legislation be taken against any use of armories excepting the purposes for which they were built and equipped.

The war department now has a claim over such State armories, inasmuch as they contain federal property in the shape of guns, clothing, etc., and it is the purpose of the department to force the fairs or armories to be closed to exhibitions, conventions, political meetings, and everything else, including fairs, charity balls, etc., everything except for military purposes.

The government realizes that those in charge of armories have pressure brought to bear upon them to open the buildings for fairs, charity balls, athletic events, etc. and that they should have some protection in order that they may say "No," and have a law to base them upon. This is what the war department wants, as it suggests to the adjutant generals of the various States that the work of the guard is being harmed by the constant use of State armories for other purposes than for which they were erected and equipped.

The war department tells Adjutant General Sadler that only four States —Massachusetts, Michigan, New York and Washington—have within a few years put in their military code regulations forbidding the use of State armories for political or other purposes. In Massachusetts the Governor has discretionary power to allow a limited use of armories for public purposes; in Michigan a "board of control" can rent an armory to "outside parties for temporary purposes" subject to the control exercised by the State military board. In New York armories may be used by veteran organizations, if allowed by the authorities, but not for political purposes, and in the State of Washington the same condition prevails as in New York.

The war department suggests to Adjutant General Sadler that this matter be taken up.

SCHOOLS' SONG FESTIVAL

Elizabeth Will Take Part in Music Tests to Be Held Here in April.

MANY OTHERS ARE TO JOIN.

Newark, New Brunswick, Somerville And Others to Take Part in the Singing Contests in This City.

To arrange for a preliminary festival for the purpose of raising funds for the singing contest between the children of the public schools of this city, Newark, New Brunswick, Elizabeth, Somerville and other New Jersey cities and towns to be held here April 28 and 29, Superintendent of Schools Clement, of Elizabeth, has appointed a committee composed of the principals of four of that city's schools.

*The following letter, which is self-*explanatory, has been sent out to the principals of the different Elizabeth schools by Mr. Clement:

"In order that funds may be secured for the purpose of meeting necessary expenses connected with the musical festival to be held in Plainfield on April 28 and 29 it seems necessary and desirable that we hold a preliminary festival in Elizabeth. I have accordingly appointed Dr. William F. Robinson Joseph A. O'Brien, Miss Sophie M Braun and Miss Isabel J. Cameron as a committee to have general charge of our local festival, working in connection with Mr. Wilson, our supervisor of music, and the principals of our schools.

Three Divisions of Festival.

"Our festival will be held in three divisions. (1) A junior section; chorus not to exceed fifty pupils from each of the elementary schools and primary departments in our city grammar schools. Each chorus will sing a unison song required and a unison song from a selected list, the music to be supplied by the supervisor. The junior section will sing in the auditorium of School No. 2 on the afternoon of April 14, beginning at 3 o'clock. This will constitute concert No. 1, for which an admission will be charged.

"(2) Grammar section, chorus not to exceed forty voices. Schools 1, 2, 3, 4, 9 and 10 will be represented. Two-part song required; two-part song from selected list, and two-part sight test, music to be supplied by the supervisor.

"(3) Chorus of not more than thirty voices from different grades to sing two-part chorus required; two-part chorus from selected list music to be supplied by supervisor. All schools may be represented. This will constitute concert No. 2, and will be given in the auditorium of Public School No. 3 on the afternoon of April 15, beginning at 3 o'clock. An admission will be charged.

"(4) On the evening of April 15, beginning at 8 o'clock will be given concert number three in an auditorium to be selected. An admission fee will be charged. Any grammar grade may supply a chorus not to exceed fifty voices. To sing a two-part song requires a three-part song from selected list and a three-part sight test, each chorus drawn from one school only.

"A high school chorus of not more than forty-five voices, to sing selections made by the supervisor. Individual sight singing tests. Open to any pupil from any public school in the city.

"Solos. Open to any pupil from any public school in our city.

"(4) All vocal work must be judged as to tone, diction and interpretation.

To Name Three Judges.

"(5) Three judges to be appointed, two by Mr. Wilson and one by the committee. These judges will determine Elizabeth's representation in the festival to be held at Plainfield, and will award the certificates of excellence to those entitled to them.

"It is the intention of the supervisor to use in our local festival the music to be sung later at Plainfield, all other selections to be taken from our school music readers.

"The committee will arrange for having suitable programs printed and for advertising as extensively and as economically as possible, our three local concerts. The committee will also arrange for necessary rehearsals, using as little as possible of the regular school time.

"The committee will also determine the admission fee to be charged for concerts two and three and in general perform such duties as may properly devolve upon such committee.

"The Liederkranz Singing Society has been invited to supply one or two numbers for concert number three on the evening of April 15."

HOWARD P. GOODWIN SUES FOR A DIVORCE

Howard Parker Goodwin, of Newark, has applied for an absolute divorce from his wife, who was formerly Miss Gertrude Van Doren, of New Brunswick, but now a resident of this city.

The petition sets forth that the couple were married in this city on October 2, 1897, and lived together until April, 1904, when it is alleged Mrs. Van Doren left him and their relations have since never been resumed.

The action is based upon the allegation that on June 19, 1906, an illegitimate child was born to the defendant. No co-respondent is named in the petition.

There was one child born to the couple by their marriage, Helen L. Goodwin, now twelve years of age, who is in the custody of the petitioner, who requests that she remain in his care.

MAYOR SMALLEY OBTAINS SOME ENGLISH PHEASANTS

A crate of English pheasants has been received by Mayor Newton B. Smalley after much effort and the birds will be released in the borough after they have become used to their new surroundings. William J. Butchfield will have charge of distributing the birds. With the law against shooting properly enforced in the borough it is likely that this covey of pheasants will increase largely in numbers in the next few years and finally enter the surrounding country where it will be possible to bag some of them during the shooting season.

Mayor Smalley got the consignment of birds from State Fish and Game Warden Harry L. Cook, of Trenton. There is an ordinance in the borough against the use of firearms and now that there are English pheasants about the law will be strictly enforced.

WOOLSTON & BUCKLE BUY A FINE BUSINESS BLOCK

Woolston & Buckle have acquired the business property at the southeast corner of North and Park avenues, formerly known as the Taylor property, having traded two residential properties in the borough and one in the city, with F. C. Jennings, of the borough, who was the owner of the Taylor property. Charles H. Lyman, the real estate broker, made the deal.

Woolston & Buckle will make extensive improvement in the property, especially in the store where they will put in a metal ceiling, paper and paint the interior for the purpose of leasing it. This property is considered one of the best in the business section. It was formerly occupied by George W. Rockfellow and F. W. Dunn as a grocery store, but since the latter retired it has been vacant.

MRS. EDWARD KLINE HEIR TO ENGLISHMAN'S ESTATE

Mrs. Edward Kline, of 307 Plainfield avenue, has received information that she is an heir to a large fortune left by an uncle who recently died in England. The latter uncle was Peter Mullen, who, in his active days, was a large cattle raiser in Leeds and Manchester. The latter died about March 1.

Mrs. Kline was notified of the windfall by her nephew, H. J. Kearney of 2836 North Orkney street, Philadelphia, who sailed for Ireland to make an investigation on the steamship Haverford of the American Line on March 15. As to the extent of the estate Mrs. Kline expects to hear from her nephew almost any day.

Before her marriage Mrs. Kline was Miss Rose Kearney. She was a native of County Derry and resided near Garva.

NEW SLEEVES.

There is a revolution in the style of sleeves. The long, tight severely plain ones are steadily giving way to the elaborate models. The new sleeves show a variety of ornate shapes with gathers, puffs, pleatings, slashes and smockings galore.

Some are full length, some end above and others just turn the elbow. There are wide and narrow cuffs of net and lace, with full puffs above held by bands of velvet or saatin ribbon, gold, silver or bronze tissue.

Sleeves need no longer be of the material of the gown, indeed, they are more often of fabric far removed from that of the frock. Lace, net, gold and silver tissue and chiffon cloth are used in creating the majority of the sleeves of smart gowns. On one frock one or two of these materials may be used; on another all of them may be combined to form a ravishing arm covering.

TO HEAR MME. DESMOND

Celebrated Soprano to Sing at Anti-Tuberculosis Society Benefit.

OTHER ARTISTS ARE ENGAGED.

Dr. Carl Dufft, Edward Strong and Hans Kronold Also Booked by Dr. Joseph McIntyre for Concert.

For the purpose of raising funds with which to continue its fight, the Anti-Tuberculosis League, through an arrangement with Joseph McIntyre, will give a concert at the High School auditorium on Tuesday night, April 12. A notable gathering of men and women, socially and philanthropically inclined, will lend their presence towards making this one of the most brilliant of the post-Easter functions.

Through persistent effort and by rare good luck, Mr. McIntyre today concluded arrangements with Mme. Mary Desmond, one of Oscar Hammerstein's highest priced song birds, to appear at this concert. Mme. Desmond, it will be recalled, was first heard in New York at the Manhattan Opera House in Strauss' masterpiece, "Electra," and she shared honors with Mme. Mariette Mazarin, who sang the title role.

Mme. Desmond is an English woman and is regarded as one of the best mezzo sopranos in the world. She is in great demand in French, English and German operatic circles and on several occasions she was "commanded" to apear at Buckingham and Windsor Palaces to sing for King Edward, Queen Alexandra and their Royal suite. Aside from her beautifully cultivated voice she is a stunningly handsome woman and possesses a charming personality.

The concert is to consist of old and new ballads, all to be sung in English, and for this reason the function might be termed an "English Ballad Concert." Dr. Carl Dufft, the basso and a prime favorite here, will appear, as will Edward Strong, a New York tenor who is in great demand in musical circles. Hans Kronold, a cellist and an artist of the first calibre, also will appear and Mr. McIntyre will preside at the piano.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace P. E. church, and president of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield, said today that the keenest interest is being manifested in the forthcoming concert and that many prominent men and women would lend it their presence. Applications for the "Standing Room Only" sign to be displayed long before the doors of the concert hall open.

The officers and heads of committees follow:

President, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson; first vice-president, Dr. William H. Murray; second vice-president, William Dutcher; secretary, Dr. F. E. DuBois; treasurer, James P. Murray; chairman finance committee, E. F. Feickert; chairman membership committee, Mrs. William H. Murray; chairman house committee, Miss Georgiana Smith; chairman educational committee, Miss M. C. Phillips.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 3, 1910.

Topic—Christ our teacher.—John xx. 24-29. (Consecration meeting. Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The world has had many great teachers, but it is generally conceded that Jesus Christ is the greatest teacher of all times. A delegation went by the Pharisees to arrest Him came back without Him and gave as their excuse for their failure, "Never man spake as this man." They so wondered at His teaching that they were afraid or personally disinclined to fulfill the mission upon which they had been sent. No greater testimony as to the convincing power of Christ's teaching ability can be found than this testimony of His enemies. But it is also proved by the character and source of Christ's teachings. "He taught as one having authority and not as the scribes and Pharisees." The Jews' leaders taught upon the authority of moses and the prophets, but Jesus said, "Thus saith the law and prophets." Jesus, teaching upon his own authority, began His teachings by saying, "But I say unto you." He appealed to no one except the Father and Himself, who was one and the same.

As a teacher Christ possessed divine and therefore perfect knowledge. He also had the ability of attractively imparting His knowledge to others. Mere possession of knowledge does not make a teacher. There must also be possessed the ability to impart that knowledge to others and to inspire them with an enthusiastic desire to study the subject in hand. Some men are walking encyclopedias of knowledge, but would fail to be good teachers because they have no power of the impartation of knowledge. In selecting teachers for our Sabbath schools those known to possess great knowledge are often rejected, since they may be absolutely void of the first principles of teaching. On the other hand, one who possesses half the knowledge that they do may be most successful teachers because they have the instinct of holding the scholar's attention and of imparting to them as much as they know. Jesus possessed as no other human being all the qualifications of a teacher. He knew what to teach. His method of teaching by parables He gave divine truths when man could not grasp them if abstractly presented has never been improved upon, and this method may well be imitated by all religious teachers. Following Christ as a teacher, be fully prepared upon the subject, teach the word of God in such a way that it will be grasped by those who are taught, and to this end use the natural as a mirror to set forth the spiritual. If these methods be followed the truth will be implanted, souls will be converted and built up in their faith and made eager to "search the Scriptures" and to lead others into the truth.

What Christ taught is of vast importance. In this last part of the twelfth chapter of John the apostle sums up some of these teachings not by using his own words, but by quoting the words of Christ, used at various times. The Jews have manifested their unbelief, and He withdrawn from them. The time of His death is near. In this summary of Christ's teachings Christ does not speak, but John represents Him as speaking what He had on different occasions taught before. "I have cried and said." According to John, what had He said and what does He still say to us?

First.—He teaches that faith in Him is faith in God, and seeing Him is seeing God. "He that believeth on Me believeth not on Me, but on Him that sent Me. And he that beholdeth Me beholdeth Him that sent Me." Great truths. Faith in Him is the only true saving faith in God. Seeing Him is seeing God, thus declaring that He Himself is God.

Second.—He teaches that He is the Light of the World—its spiritual light. Faith in Him is elimination of darkness.

Third.—He teaches His relation to the world. He came not to judge those who disobeyed His commandments, but to save them. But the day will come when Christ's teachings will judge us if we persist in the rejection of Him.

Fourth.—He teaches that His commandment is from God and that obedience to it will be rewarded by eternal life.

Australia's New C. E. President.

J. B. Spencer, who recently assumed office as president of the New South Wales Christian Endeavor union, has been "a burning and shining light" in Christian Endeavor ever since its advent to New South Wales in 1891. He has been the honored state treasurer since 1893 and Australasian treasurer since 1900. It is unique in the first layman to be elected to the presidential chair in New South Wales.

Contributions to a Convention.

A Christian of India rescued from drink through the Christian Endeavor society sent a gold ring to the Agra convention to be sold for the benefit of the work. The ring was a token of the third anniversary of his deliverance. A lady sent a box of artistic articles made with her own hands as her contribution to the convention.

International C. E. Convention Badge.

The badge of the International Christian Endeavor convention, held at St. Paul, Minn., was a handsome pendant supported by a blue and white ribbon suspended from an ornamental pin. The state flower of Minnesota, the moccasin flower, gophers and the capitol made up the decorations in relief.

Substitute for Gold.

In France a substitute for gold has been afforded by combining 94 parts of copper and six parts of antimony and adding a little magnesium carbonate to increase the weight. It is said that this alloy can be drawn, wrought and soldered much like true gold, and that it also receives and retains a golden polish. It is worth about 25 cents a pound.

Book Farming Pays.

The old-time farmers used to laugh at the book farmer, he who studied the earth and the products thereof scientifically, but here is a professor leaving an agricultural college with a salary of $5,000 to take the management of a farm with a salary of $3,000. And he will probably make good, too. There is a lot of farming in books, and the man who is willing to admit it will make the most money out of his farm.

Ways of Cecil Rhodes.

Cecil Rhodes always did things on a big scale. Sometimes his gardener would ask him for two or three dozen rose bushes or fruit trees. Rhodes would impatiently exclaim: "What's the good of two dozen of anything? Count by hundreds and thousands, not by dozens. A thousand is the only way to produce any effect or make any money."

Peculiar Cause of Death.

The coroner at Hackney, England, mentioned to the jury the other day that he had just inquired into a remarkable death. A child of nine weeks was ill, and the parents, thinking it was going to die went to a clergyman to baptise it. He poured water over the child's head, and medical evidence showed that this set up congestion of the lungs, and the child died of pneumonia.

MR. PETER'S DISCOURAGING FAILURE

By MAX ADELER

Upon the first day that Mr. Peters began to do work for the Argus as a reporter he came in early in the evening and wrote the following item:

"John Wilson was kicked by a mule yesterday on Passyunk avenue."

When Peters handed the item to the editor, that individual said:

"Peters, that is too short. It is not full enough. You must expand it a little."

So Peters sat down and rewrote it as follows:

"Yesterday, at ha'f-past 12 o'clock, a man named John Wilson, while walking along Passyunk avenue, near Clinton street, was kicked in the side by a vicious mule, and badly hurt."

"Peters," said the editor, as he looked this over, "this won't do; it is not sufficiently vivid. What you want in an item is a picturesque quality; you need the element of imagination. You must poetize your items, as it were. John B. will pay you by the column, so as to incite you to effort in the proper direction."

"You want it poetized, do you?" asked Peters.

"Yes; work it up with an eye to dramatic effect."

"All right," said Peters, "I'll put it through in the proper style."

So Peters went back to his desk, and an hour or two later he had produced an item something like this:

"Yesterday (ah!, yesterday was another day added to the rolling tide of years that sweeps backward into the mournful past bearing with it a burden of human sorrow!) an American citizen named John Wilson, whose face the glittering baubles of rank have stowed upon their creatures by pitiless despots; a title that our revolutionary forefathers bore covered with a halo of glory) named (What's in a name?) said name being borne by some of the greatest men that ever lived) Wilson, was walking (and no better physical exercise has ever been discovered. It develops every muscle, and gives all the organs of the body free and healthful play) down (that is to say southeast, with a slight inclination to the southward) Passyunk avenue (so-called because the Indians gave the title of Passyunk to the creek that erst meandered through that region) when (at a time when we are not positive as to the very minute, half-past twelve o'clock (high noon), the glorious sun was looming through the celestial vault of azure at the rate of millions a mile a second (that is approximately) which astronomers tell us that the earth moves and not the sun), and shining meantime upon a scene of more than loveliness. A mule (an animal well known to early Egyptians, and traces of which are found among the Ionian brick) stood at the corner of Clinton street, calmly (the mule is always calm. Where, where on earth is there a spirit more imperturbed and less excitable than a mule?) eating (with apparent relish, too) some cornstalks a dozen pounds of bay (timothy, we were informed) from the tail-end of a wagon. (It was a Jersey wagon, without springs, and with yellow labels.) Suddenly (without warning) a fellow-citizen, the bill passed the House with but a single vote in opposition. Last year it was adopted by the House by a large majority. Twice or three times before it was approved by succeeding Assemblies, but each time it was vetoed by the governor or to some one else equally antagonistic, and it was killed. This seems to be the trick, and thus far it has been successfully played this year. Why should any committee fail to report the bill and thus condemn to death children, unless the interests of the glass manufacturers are in some way made superior? Why should a bill which the fathers and mothers and all the labor, educational, medical and charitable interests of the State favor, be prevented from coming to a fair vote in the Senate? What obstructs it, other than the influence of wealthy industrial corporations? It is a capitalistic game which has been played for years, and the strangling process is being tried again. Any citizen or organization that can bring influence to bear to induce the Senate committee to release the Olwell child labor bill should exert it at once. There is no time to lose.—Newark News.

Psychological Moment, Jim!

Congressman Charles Newell Fowler, of the Fifth New Jersey district, was one of the forty insurgents who have been making trouble for the Republicans in Washington. His party was good enough for him so long as he could remain at the head of the Appropriations Committee on Banking and Currency. Whether he is good enough for his party will be decided by the Republicans of Union, Morris and Warren counties this year. The psychological moment for "Farmer Orator" James E. Martine may be drawing nigh.—Trenton Times.

For Lingerie Ribbons

The problem of keeping the ribbons for lingerie in some neat way has been solved by the inventor of a little winding stick, gilded and tied with a bow at each end. It is provided with a series of springs that hold down one end of the ribbon while it is being wound around the stick. It is small enough to be kept in the workbox, and large enough to accommodate several coils of ribbon at once.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Graft in Somerset.

It is not at all surprising, neither is it in the least gratifying, that in the midst of reports of graft in San Francisco, Pittsburg, Washington, Albany and other great places, the evidence of similar dishonesty and corruption is found in Raritan, Somerset. Warren Township in the county of Somerset. Two brothers, Joel and Horace Codington, one the treasurer and the other the clerk of the township, were recently convicted of appropriating the township funds for their own use. Joel will pay you by the column, so as to incite you to effort in the proper direction."

"You want it poetized, do you?" asked Peters.

"Yes; work it up with an eye to dramatic effect."

"All right," said Peters, "I'll put it through in the proper style."

So Peters went back to his desk, and an hour or two later he had produced an item something like this:

"Yesterday (ah!, yesterday was another day added to the rolling tide of years that sweeps backward into the mournful past bearing with it a burden of human sorrow!) an American citizen named John Wilson, whose face the glittering baubles of rank have stowed upon their creatures by pitiless despots; a title that our revolutionary forefathers bore covered with a halo of glory) named (What's in a name?) said name being borne by some of the greatest men that ever lived) Wilson, was walking (and no better physical exercise has ever been discovered. It develops every muscle, and gives all the organs of the body free and healthful play) down (that is to say southeast, with a slight inclination to the southward) Passyunk avenue (so-called because the Indians gave the title of Passyunk to the creek that erst meandered through that region) when (at a time when we are not positive as to the very minute, half-past twelve o'clock (high noon), the glorious sun was looming through the celestial vault of azure at the rate of millions a mile a second (that is approximately) which astronomers tell us that the earth moves and not the sun), and shining meantime upon a scene of more than loveliness. A mule (an animal well known to early Egyptians, and traces of which are found among the Ionian brick) stood at the corner of Clinton street, calmly (the mule is always calm. Where, where on earth is there a spirit more imperturbed and less excitable than a mule?) eating (with apparent relish, too) some cornstalks a dozen pounds of bay (timothy, we were informed) from the tail-end of a wagon. (It was a Jersey wagon, without springs, and with yellow labels.) Suddenly (without warning) a fellow-citizen, the bill passed the House with but a single vote in opposition. Last year it was adopted by the House by a large majority. Twice or three times before it was approved by succeeding Assemblies, but each time it was vetoed by the governor or to some one else equally antagonistic, and it was killed. This seems to be the trick, and thus far it has been successfully played this year. Why should any committee fail to report the bill and thus condemn to death children, unless the interests of the glass manufacturers are in some way made superior? Why should a bill which the fathers and mothers and all the labor, educational, medical and charitable interests of the State favor, be prevented from coming to a fair vote in the Senate? What obstructs it, other than the influence of wealthy industrial corporations? It is a capitalistic game which has been played for years, and the strangling process is being tried again. AN INDEPENDENT WEEKLY.

M. I. PORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

Plainfield, N. J., March 24, 1910.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Shakespeare's "A Winter's Tale" will be produced at The New theatre, New York, in the Elizabethan manner Monday evening. This will be the last presentation of the season by The New theatre company. On April 11 the company will open its road tour in Philadelphia, and a specially organized company will present Jaques Dalcroze's "Beethoven" on The New theatre's stage. The Elizabethan presentation of "A Winter's Tale" is made chiefly because in the case of this play especially, the absence of scenery enables the producer to obtain more clearly the free atmosphere and the effect of a rapid dramatic narrative which Shakespeare intended. The "properties" will be most elaborate. The stage will be of paneled oak and tapestries. The role of Hermione will be played by Miss Edith Wynne Matthison, and that of Leontes by Henry Holker.

Even the new Amsterdam theatre, the largest regular playhouse in New York, is proving far too small to accommodate the immense throngs anxious to witness "Madame X." Not in twenty years has there been presented an emotional drama in America comparable to this Paris-imported work offered by Manager Henry W. Savage. M. Alexandre Bisson has told his moving story of the wonderful depths of mother-love with sledge-hammer blows that thrill beyond all description just as the ineffable pathos of the mysterious woman's plight brings a flood of tears from every spectator, however callioused. Acted to the point of perfection by a brilliant company, "Madame X" is the electric triumph of the time—a sweeping, smashing hit that is on every tongue.

Harrison Grey Fiske announces two important engagements for the Manhattan Company to support Mrs. Fiske in the Ibsen play, "Pillars of Society," at the Lyceum theatre Easter week. They are Edward Mackay and Helena Van Brugh. The former was leading man with Bertha Galland in "The Return of Eve," and supported Henrietta Crosman in "As You Like It" and "All of a Sudden Peggy." He has also been leading man with Grace George and Mary Mannering. Miss Van Brugh is a member of the De Vay family, her sisters being well known in amateur theatricals. She is a niece of Jeanette Gilder, and her only appearance on the professional stage was with "The Harvest Moon."

George Evans and his Honey-boy Minstrels will be the Easter-week attraction at the Grand Opera House. Cohanesque minstersy which has proved so popular the past two seasons will no doubt be hailed with much pleasure by the patrons of New York's West-side playhouse. Mr. Evans still leads the organization and is assisted in his fun-making by many well known minstrel favorites. Prominent among whom are John King, Sam Lee, Earl Benham, Clar*ence* Marks, Thomas Scott and a score of others.

"Where There's a Will," that sensational play is is its last two weeks at Weber's and when it leaves New York the metropolis will lose the greatest laughing show it has had for many a moon. People are beg*inning to realize now that "Where* There's a Will" is not as naughty as it was painted at first. The play has raised wide discussion and in its three months' stay at Weber's has entertained crowded houses. "Where There's a Will" is leaving Weber's because of a contract made by Joe Weber with another attraction long ago. Maurice Campbell offered a large bonus for this contract for the play that is to follow so that "Where There's a Will" could remain indefinitely in New York, where it belongs, but was not able to make the deal because of the anxiety of the other attraction to get into New York. The last opportunity, therefore, to see this great laughmaker will be on Saturday, April 2. There will be the usual Saturday matinee and on Wednesday the usual one dollar matinee. On April 1, Friday, there will be a special matinee to accomodate the crowds during the last week of "Where There's a Will" in New York.

Gerson's Midget Circus at the New York Hippodrome made a pronounced hit at the big playhouse when it was shown first time in America on Monday last. This feature, which will doubtless make a strong appeal to the young as well as to the old theatre patrons, will remain for the rest of the season. The little midgets will run entire two ring and platform circus, unassisted by any full sized performers. There are acrobats, who do wondrous feats of tumbling; wee wrestlers who exhibit their skill in the Graeco-Roman art; tiny lady equestrienne on the smallest ponies imaginable; other miniature damsels who perorm on the revolving globes; do tightrope walking and lift weights of iron weighing three times as much as themselves. There are singers and dancers in the troupe and Ludwig, who is the smallest man in the world, is seen in his remarkable rapid fire painting, producing a large picture in crayon, in the space of a few minutes, in full view of the audience.

COURTSHIP OF A BASEBALL FAN

They were seated in the parlor, and the lights were burning dim;
He was a diamond hero—she a fan quite fair and trim.
But they knew not, as he opened up the game by murmuring
"Love—"
That father was the umpire on the stairway just above.

"I like your form"—he led off first —"with me you've made a hit—
You've got the curves—you've got the speed, and you are looking fit—
Now, if with you, my turtle dove, I make a hit likewise,
Won't you improve my single state and make a sacrifice?"

"I'll never play too far off base," he whispered in her ear—
My salary ship has got the stuff to put 'em over, dear;
Just give the signal for a 'steal'"
and I'll no longer roam,
And when I slide into the plate,
please call me safe at home."

"I've got to have the hope complete," the maiden softly sighed;
"Show me your batting average in Reader's Guide;
It takes a lot of speed these days
with cunning and intrigue,
To win a battle now and then within the Grocers' League;

"But give me errorless support"— his heart then took a bound—
"And let me live in big league style and I may come around;
Unwrap the tangle from the dope, and you can cop the bet
We'll play a double-header, pal, on any date you see."

He started warming up at once, and with a happy sigh
He whipped a fast one round her neck—the other was waist high;
But here the umpire butted in—she said 'Oh, father, please Don't call him out, he's showing me the way they work the 'squeeze.'"

The old man gave an irate snort, and said, "I'll help the fun
By showing him another play that's called the 'Put and run.'"
He swung like Wagner at his best—a sole-inspiring clot—
The Son of Swat slid down the steps
—the umpire yelled, "You're

SHAREHOLDERS ARE PAID TWENTY THOUSAND DOLLARS

The Union Building and Loan Association on Saturday presented Easter greetings to its shareholders in the shape of checks, amounting in the aggregate to $20,000, in payment of the first series of stock. This series has been running eleven years and two months, which is considerably less than the time it usually takes a series to mature. The customary period is about twelve years.

Each member in this series received $100 for $67 paid in, the amounts received ranging from $100 to $3,000. There were two hundred shares in the series and there has been subscribed 255 shares in the series which will end in January to take the place of the one matured. The association opens a new series in April and there is already a large waiting list of those anxious to subscribe. Wage earners or persons of moderate means find this a safe and profitable way to accumulate earnings by investing them in such associations.

HERE AND THERE.

Those who still have faith in Dr. Frederick Cook may find some comfort in the following extract from a speech made by Governor Joseph M. Brown, of Georgia, last Friday, who maintains that Cook is the real discoverer of the North Pole and that Peary has simply stolen Cook's thunder.

"Peary does not seem to realize that in order to destroy Cook's story of the journey to the pole he must tell a story as like story. If Cook were to admit that his story of his journey to the pole was false we could not accept it as being false un*less Peary should admit that his like* story was false or unless by other testimony Cook's story be proved false.

The Copenhagen professors did not assert that Cook's story was untrue, but merely rendered a verdict of "not proven." As they had not been into that region their verdict can be accepted as voicing their knowledge of the matter.

Yet when Commander Peary heard of the Copenhagen decision he "smiled," and presto! his identical story is proven true and he is acclaimed as the discoverer and poor Cook is branded as a faker.

"Representative Tom Macon deserves the thanks of the American people for his exposure of Peary's improbable, if not impossible, story of his journey to and from the pole after he parted from his civilized comrades.

"It seems to me that Peary read the synopsis of Cook's story and then told his story accordingly. Cook, besides being the real discoverer has proven himself a gentlemen of gen*erous characteristics,* while Peary has proven that he is lacking in the qualities which appeal to our higher nature.

"Cook's flight indicates an acutely sensitive nature, one which shrinks from caustic criticism, whether it be just or unjust. Peary, on the contrary, displays a reputative coarseness.

The world loves a good loser, as it condemns an ungenerous winner, but give it time and it discerns between a winner and a pseudo-winner.

"To cap the climax an attempt is made to make Mr. Peary a Rear Admiral of the navy in recognition of his discovery of the north pole. A more grotesque proposal monstrosity has never been attempted in the history of this Government."

The fear of an impending collision between the earth and Halley's comet gave rise to extraordinary happenings last week at Nagy St. Miklos, a village in Hungary. The word had gone round that the day of judgment was at hand, and when a night watchman in the early hours of the morning perceived a red glow in the sky—caused by a fire in a neighboring village—he gave a blast on his horn and began a terrifying message that the inhabitants must prepare for the worst.

Men, women and children tumbled out of bed into the open, and Father Kristoffsky, the old village pastor, after scanning the firmament, also came to the conclusion that the world was coming to an end. He comforted his flock and exhorted all to await their fate with resignation. It was, he said, only a matter of a few hours now.

The people were somewhat pacified and with one accord decided they might as well finish off what food and drink they possessed. Accordingly great fires were lit on the square fronting the church and a feasting began. A few lamented, others prayed, but the vast majority were intent on having a good time while it lasted.

As the dread moment approached the revelry became an orgy; all prudence was thrown to the winds; the fiery wine of the country did the rest and soon there was not a sober head among them. They sang and danced till they dropped and slept where they lay.

The sleepers awoke in bright sunshine and finding the old world still rolling on as usual they unanimously cursed the comet for not doing its duty, especially when they realized that their larders and cellars were empty.

COAL STRIKE APRIL 1.

Operators Certain of Trouble and Make Arrangements.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 20.—Coal operators having their offices in this city are now certain that a strike will be inaugurated April 1, and last night telegrams were sent to mine superintendents to make arrangements for guarding the property and keeping the pumps in mines at work so as to not let the property suffer.

Owing to the very warm weather this city and the fact that the mines have been running full force, there is a considerable supply of coal on hand, but there is a shortage of steam coal both at the mines and in the manufacturing districts.

The railroads have large supplies at all the coaling stations on their lines and for more than a month have been increasing the amount gradually though thirty days or more have not confiscated any coal of consequence. Superintendents say that there is no danger of immediate interference with traffic after April 1, but they admit that they would like to have more coal on hand.

JUDGMENT FOR E. H. ALLEN

Joel Codington and His Father Must Pay for Searches of Property.

BORROWED $4,200 ON NOTES.

Horace Codington Out on $2,000 Bail—Joel Codington to Go to Prison.

Joel Codington, former treasurer of Warren Township, now under sentence of one year in the State prison, was brought from the Somerset county jail in Somerville to the Somerset District Court Monday morning, as defendant in a suit for $500 brought by Edward H. Allen, attorney for the Bernardsville National Bank.

Joel Codington about a year ago, obtained from the Bernardsville Bank $4,200 on various notes which were indorsed by his father, William H. Codington, and his brother, Franklin B. Codington. When the notes went to protest the bank secured judgments against the Codingtons and was about to foreclose when the Codingtons attempted to stay judgment by offering the bank mortgages on several tracts of real estate.

The Codingtons agreed to pay Allen for making a search of all the properties in question and for executing mortgages and all other legal expenses that might be incurred in straightening the matter out.

Mr. Allen testified that he had paid searchers $140 cash out of his own pocket and performed legal services amounting to several hundreds of dollars. The Codingtons, he said, finally refused to give the mortgages to the bank and their property was seized by the sheriff to satisfy the judgments. After the foreclosure the Codingtons refused to pay Allen's bill. P. E. Henry, vice-president, and Arthur E. Brown, cashier of the Bernardsville bank, testified that Joel and William C. Codington made a verbal agreement to pay Mr. Allen for his services in making searches, executing mortgages, in order that their obligations might be discharged to the bank.

The case occupied the court for the day, and it is expected that Joel Codington will be taken to the State prison by Sheriff Ross today. Horace Codington, brother of the convicted treasurer, who was sentenced to eighteen months in the State prison is now out under $2,000 bail pending an appeal to the Supreme Court for a new trial.

William C. Codington, his father, became one of the bondsmen and testified that he owned property worth $10,000 free of incumbrances. Mr. Allen secured a judgment for $347 Tuesday morning before Judge Isaac P. Runyon for part of the bill for $500, several of Mr. Allen's claims being disallowed by the judge.

METHODIST PASTOR NOW EPISCOPALIAN

Giving an explanation of his attitude toward Methodism and Episcopalianism, and declaring that his experiences as a Methodist pastor and his study of the other church systems had convinced him that the future of united Protestantism rests with the Episcopal church rather than with any other denomination, the Rev. Francis T. Brown, of the First Methodist church, New Haven, Conn., yesterday told some of his reasons for his step from the Methodist to the Episcopal church, which he announced to the great surprise of his congregation Monday evening.

Yesterday it was learned that the Rev. Mr. Brown with Mrs. Brown, who is the daughter of a noted Methodist missionary and who herself was a missionary as a young woman, were both confirmed at St. Paul's Episcopal church in New Haven, Good Friday morning by Bishop Brewster and the pastor, the Rev. James De Wolf Perry. Mr. Brown's formal ordination as an Episcopal minister will be held at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, in New York, by Bishop Greer in the next winter, it is expected, and he will be appointed to the rectorship of an Episcopal church at that time.

Meanwhile the Rev. Mr. Brown will serve under a special license as an Episcopal preacher at the Protestant Episcopal Mission House in New York.

"As a student I inclined toward the Episcopal church," Mr. Brown said, "and after my graduated from Yale I thought seriously of entering the Cambridge Divinity School with the intention of taking up Episcopalianism. My father and my uncle and many other relatives and those who were most dear to me were stanch Methodists, however."

The annual meeting of the Seventh-Day Baptist church will be held at the church Sunday night.

"The Knees of Christ" will be the topic of the prayer-meeting at the First Baptist church this evening. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss will be in charge.

forts to save the furniture. John Carty, a member of the Watchung Council, was among the first to arrive in the lodge room, and he distinguished himself by saving the charter of the lodge. All of the charters of the other fraternal organizations were saved by Patrick Richard Birmingham and the firemen.

In the property belonging to the Knights of Columbus, which was totally destroyed, was a set of costly vestments belonging to the officers which had never been used. Robes belonging to the Red Men and Unity lodge, Knights of Pythias, were also destroyed by water.

Firemen, in fighting the fire, were obliged to wreck portions of the lodge hall, in order to get at the flames and keep them from spreading. To accomplish this a number of doors were cut and windows smashed. The firemen were again confronted with light pressure, in some instances there was insufficient force in the stream to break the window panes, which necessitated the use of the hose nozzles.

A throng of 10,000 people jammed front street from Watchung avenue to Somerset street to watch the spectacle, and it being one of the largest outpourings of congested humanity seen in this city for some time. Chief Kiely and a detachment of police with considerable difficulty established lines, but it was a hard job to keep the curious public on the outside.

The crowd was swelled by arrivals on east and westbound trolley cars, and so dense was the throng, that a delay in traffic ensued for about one hour, it appearing that almost every inhabitant from city and borough and from surrounding towns was out at the fire.

Last night's fire marked the second time in the history of the Knights of Columbus, that the organization has been burned out. At the Babcock building fire the lodge suffered a big loss. Temporary headquarters was established in the Coward building and about seven years ago, the lodge fitted up its present quarters at an expenditure of $3,000 or $4,000.

Until repairs to the hall are made, the lodge will use the Elks lodge room, which was tendered to them this morning by the trustees of that organization. Other arrangements are being made by the other fraternal societies of the city.

The Van Deventer building has for years been classed as a "fire trap," and Chief Doane declared this morning that it was the worst building in which local firemen were ever obliged to fight a fire. In former years the structure was used as a theatre and later known as Masonic Temple. The Masons vacated the building about fifteen years ago.

BUILDING AND LOAN OFFICERS ARE NAMED

The Plainfield Building and Loan Association at its meeting Monday re-elected the old board of directors who in turn appointed the officers who have administered the affairs of the association during the past year. The board is as follows: E. E. Barkalew, Henry Liefke, W. R. Codington, E. W. Titsworth, Louis Klein, Jacob Voehl, James P. Homan, W. A. Woodruff, Joseph C. Blimm, J. E. Flannery, B. F. Corlell and E. M. Laing. The officers are: President, L. E. Barkalew; vice-president, Henry Liefke; secretary, B. F. Corlell, and treasurer, W. R. Codington.

The past year has been one of the most successful in the history of the association, the seventeenth series was opened last night and three hundred shares were disposed of at once. During the past year nearly three hundred thousand dollars have been handled by the officers of this association at a cost of only $803.10, a showing hard to equal in any other purely co-operative financial association.

Another record which the officers are proud of is the fact that during the fifteen years just past no house has been left on their hands. The financial showing proves that this association is one of the most successful in the State.

All the officers of the association are stockholders and are well known business men of this city and vicinity. They take a personal pride in the association's success. With the exception of the secretary and treasurer the services of the directors and officers are given free in the administration of the affairs of the association.

WESTFIELD.

Ordinances have been passed to put tar on fifty pieces of road in Westfield. The cost of sprinkling the roads with the tar preparation is borne by the property owners, the cost being put on the yearly tax bills. The ordinances were passed at the meeting of the Council held Saturday night, which was the last meeting to be held in the old town room.

William Keiffer, while walking along North avenue Monday, suddenly became dizzy and fell in the middle of the road in front of an automobile. The driver of the machine brought him car to a stop just in time to avoid running over him. Emanuel Eckel and some friends assisted Mr. Kieffer to his home.

The Central Railroad is planning additions to the freight yard at Westfield, the present facilities not being large enough to accommodate the business.

A petition is being circulated for signers asking the Council that Dudley avenue be macadamized from Clark street to the town line.

SOMERVILLE.

The Woman's Missionary Society, of the Reformed church, at Harlingen has send $25 to the Board of Foreign Missions for the purpose of securing a life membership for Mrs. A. J. Walter, wife of the former pastor of the Harlingen church.

Mrs. A. Frank Murray, of High Bridge, spent the week-end with relatives in South Bound Brook.

HONORED BY THE POPE

Knightly Rank Conferred on David T. Kenney by Holy Father.

BISSETI SENDS THE DECREE.

Plainfielder a Steward of Papal Household and Chamberlain of the Cape and Sword by Pontiff's Order.

David T. Kenney, probably Plainfield's most distinguished Catholic citizen, has been signally honored by Pope Pius X. In a recent edict issued by His Holiness, he has been appointed a secret chamberlain, equivalent to a steward of the Papal household, and a Knight of the Cape and Sword, a distinction coveted by many, but seldom conferred. This is the first time this distinction has been conferred upon a Catholic layman in this diocese. The honor is in recognition of Mr. Kenney's zealous work in the interests of the Catholic church in the Trenton diocese and was made at the earnest solicitation of the Rt. Rev. Dr. James McFaul, bishop of Trenton.

Mr. Kenney's many bounties to Catholic institutions both here and elsewhere are well known and while the Papal appointment comes as a surprise to some it was, in the estimation of many of his friends, a well earned reward for self-denial and a consecration to the cause of the church.

Mr. Kenney was instrumental in bringing Mount St. Mary's College to this city from Bordentown, having given the valuable and picturesque land for its location on the Watchung hills and contributed toward the erection and establishment of the college with abundant portions of money. He has always been known as a liberal contributor to charities connected with the church and has given of his time in other enterprises for the betterment and uplifting of humanity. He is a member of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital.

Mr. Kenney is the inventor of the vacuum cleaner, which has taken the place of ordinary housework drudgery and his system has been adopted all over the world for cleaning theatres, office buildings, hotels, churches, department stores and private houses. He inventions connected with sanitary plumbing are also due to his inventive genius. He has been busy since the announcement of the honors were announced in receiving the congratulations of his many friends in this city.

The parchment bearing Mr. Kenney's appointment in which entitles him to attend all the functions in the Vatican and makes him a member of the Pope's household, is signed by His Holiness' Majordomo, Bisseti and bears the seal of the Pontiff.

It follows:

COMPANY K TO HAVE NEW DRILL HALL SOON

Company K members are considering the advisability of changing their armory quarters in the Scheplum Monday night and it is reported building on West Front street. The local militiamen engaged in their weekly drill in the Sebring auditorium last night and it is reported that they are greatly pleased over the anticipated change of headquarters.

Major William B. Martin, who was present at the drill, delivered an interesting talk on the practical side of rifle shooting interspersing his remarks by numerous minor calls. Major Martin also talked on bullets. He said that the ones used in the standard Springfield army rifle have a pressure of 47,000 to 50,000 pounds to the square inch.

He informed the local soldiers that bullets were manufactured of lead because of it being a cheaper process. Bullets made out of silver, he explained, would be better but the expense would be greater. Major Martin also described the diffent grades of powder used for military purposes.

Rev. and Mrs. Gabriel Reid Maguire and daughter are stopping in New York for a day or two waiting for the completion of the improvements at the parsonage of the Park Avenue Baptist church. Mr. Maguire will preach at the church on Sunday for the first as pastor.

AUDUBON BILL'S OBJECT

Measure Would Make it Illegal to Sell Wild Bird's Plumage in State.

WILLIAM DUTCHER EXPLAINS.

The President of National Association Corrects False Reports Concerning the Purpose of Proposed Law.

As president of the National Association of Audubon Societies, William Dutcher, of Central avenue, desires to correct false impressions as to the purpose of the Audubon bill now before the State Senate. He has been prompted to do so because many erroneous reports have been circulated, working considerable harm to the cause.

Mr. Dutcher made this statement today:

The question now before the Legislature is whether they will still permit the milliners to deal in property that belongs to the State as a whole and not to any individuals or a single class of persons. The vital point is whether the wild birds shall be conserved for the benefit of agriculture and forestry, or whether the milliners shall be permitted to have them killed so that the plumage may be sold for hat trimmings. By the census of 1900, New Jersey had 34,650 farms, covering 2,840,966 acres, the value of which was $189,533,660. Every acre is swarming with insect and weed pests, the ravages of which is wild birds, which were provided by an All-Wise Creator solely for this purpose. They certainly were not created for millinery ornaments, notwithstanding the claims of the milliners. The bill now before the Legislature simply amplifies Section No. 3, of the present wild bird law of the State, because it has been found that the present law does not sufficiently protect our local wild birds.

All the Audubon society asks is to make it illegal to sell the plumage of wild birds irrespective of whether the bird was killed within or without the State. After a bird has been killed and its feathers have been made into a millinery ornament, no living person can tell whether the bird was killed in New Jersey, or Pennsylvania, or Florida, or Canada, and therefore the birds of New Jersey cannot be protected. The amendment seeks to prohibit sale only and does not effect the woman who is willing to wear plumage except in so far as it restricts her to the use of plumage of domestic poultry and pigeons, ostrich plumes, the feathers of game birds and of certain exotic birds of which there is no representative of the family in the United States. The only question now before the people of New Jersey and their representatives in the Legislature is whether the milliners shall appropriate the wild birds for their pecuniary benefit or whether they shall be conserved for the benefit of the whole people as an aid to agriculture and forestry which are acknowledged to be the foundation of the wealth of the country.

This is a question of pure economics, and not one of sentiment. The writer is one of the recognized authorities in the United States on the relation of birds to agriculture, and he does not hesitate to say that if the Senate of New Jersey, before whom the bill now is, do not approve of the amendment and send it to the Governor for his signature, that they will be acting directly contrary to the best interests of the State.

A Small Loaf.

A half famished fellow in the Southern States tells of a baker (whose loaves had been growing "small by degrees and beautifully less") who, when going his rounds to serve his customers, stopped at the door of one and knocked, when the lady within exclaimed: "Who's there?" and was answered, "The baker." "What do you want?" "To leave your bread." "Well, you needn't make such a fuss about it, put it through the keyhole."

Local Realty Changes.

Miss Allen has sold her property at Summit avenue and Verdon street, to Letter-carrier James E. Bailey, who will take possession soon, and the Naylor property on Washington street, has been sold to Mrs. Mullen, mother of Mr. Bailey. Isaac Miles, real estate broker, made the deal.

PLAINFIELD DEFEATS THE BROOKLYN TEAM

The Plainfield Association Football Club achieved a great victory Saturday afternoon when it defeated the Brooklyn Football Club, on the Clinton avenue grounds by a score of 5 to 0. Despite the fact that the contest was one-sided, it proved interesting to a large crowd of spectators, while the local team was glad to score its first victory over the Brooklyn aggregation.

The Brooklyn club came here with four men short, and the local club loaned its opponents three men, playing with ten men. The Brooklyns kicked off against a strong wind and the play for the first eight minutes was around mid-field. The locals then got a line on the ball and a nice cross from Hosie was put through by Braidwood, scoring one point for Plainfield.

A few minutes later Hosie succeeded in adding another point on a fine pass from Sutton. The Plainfield goal keeper was only tried out once in the first half, and he was equal to the occasion. The visitors' goal keeper was kept busy, however, and he also cleared some nice ones. When time was called at the end of the first half the score was 2 to 0 in favor of Plainfield.

On resuming play, the home team got right down to business and Spalding made a nice run from mid-field and put in one of his dandy shots, scoring another point for his team. Shortly afterward, Hosie headed the ball through from a nice corner-kick from Spalding, making the score 4 to 0. In the next few minutes, when Plainfield was pressing the visitors, one of them made a foul, for which Plainfield received a penalty kick. This was taken by Craig, scoring another point. In less than five minutes Plainfield was awarded another penalty, which was taken by Heaume, but McCauslin managed to save it. The Brooklyns never got one shot at the Plainfield goal throughout the second half, so one-sided was the game.

During the last twenty minutes the Plainfield team kept shooting in at the visitors' goal, and they simply put it all over their opponents. When the game was called the score was 5 to 0 in favor of the locals. The lineup:

Miss Cheatham's Recital.

The recital by Miss Kitty Cheatham on Monday, April 3, should appeal to all lovers of singing and acting. Miss Cheatham was an actress of great ability in the Daly company of former years, and recently she has perfected a special and original concert entertainment in which she has won a high reputation. In such matters there are no keener critics than those of Paris, and her recitals there called forth unqualified praise and were pronounced a "tremendous success." Her annual recital in New York on Easter Monday is one of the events of the season. The Tribune says of this one, "She moved her audience to tears and laughter at will with a program which she has made peculiarly her own." Miss Cheatham comes here under the auspices of the Musical Club.

FAVOR WATER ELECTION

Protective Association's Executive Committee Wants a Favorable Vote.

FOR PROPOSED INVESTIGATION.

Movement on Foot to Arouse Interest for the Special Election to Be Held Next Month.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Plainfield Protective Association was held Monday at 125 East Front street, at which the forthcoming city water election to be held on April 19 next, was discussed. It was pointed out that the purpose of the election is to authorize the Council to investigate the relative merits of condemning the present water company's plant and purchasing it, building a new plant, and making a new contract with the present company. The proposition also gives the Council power to proceed as they think best in the event of the result of the election being favorable; thus opening the way for the city to own its own water works.

The meeting voted unanimously in favor of the proposition as it will be presented to the voters and decided to take steps to advocate the plan. Among those present were G. W. V. Hoy, D. M. Van Vliet, R. H. Depew, D. E. Titsworth, H. C. Dekmatel and C. L. Riley.

This action of the protective association makes the last of the civic bodies to approve the action of the Common Council in suggesting means of securing for the city improved water facilities. It will afford the people an opportunity to express their sentiments on the subject.

SABBATH SCHOOL HOLDS ITS ANNUAL ELECTION.

Officers were elected and reports were presented at the annual meeting of the Seventh-Day Baptist Sabbath-school, held at the church Sunday night, and the annual appropriations were made. These officers were chosen:

Superintendent, Orra S. Rogers; first assistant, Henry M. Maxson; second assistant, Asa P. Randolph; secretary, Nathan Hirts; treasurer, Roland Davis; chorister, Frank Langworthy; pianist, Mrs. William C. Hubbard; librarian, Miss Nettie Stillman.

The school now has a membership of 143, a decrease of eight over last year, due to the removal of families from the city. The total receipts for the year were $529.14 and the disbursements $371.06, leaving a balance of $158.08. These appropriations were made for the coming year:

Muhlenberg Hospital, $10; The Day Nursery, $10; Children's Home, $10; Loyal Temperance Legion, $5; Sabbath-school library, $10; Sabbath-school Board, $25; State Primary Union, $1; denominational theological seminary, $10.

EVENING FROCKS.

For young girls white is always appropriate, and nowadays the limited purse of mother need not detract from the most perfect of party frocks.

Many inexpensive white materials are being utilized, white washable silks, voiles and cashmeres wear well and stand the test of frequent visits to the cleaners.

Japanese silks are soft and pleasing when made on simple girlish lines. The newest frocks of this material are made in short and sensible length bengaline skirts which fall in full lines from deep belts or satin ribbon. The bodices are gathered into semicircular yokes of lace, and little puffed sleeves are all that is required.

Another dainty frock is carried out in white point d'esprit over silk or satin, with three or five ruffles bordering the hem of the skirt. A quilling or piping of satin is used to produce a fluffy standing-out effect. The bodice is of net draped in frilled lines in a fichu effect, and these ruffles (edged as those on the skirt are) are caught in front above the girdle with a huge satin choux or rose. Short transparent sleeves are edged at the elbow with tiny ruffles.

Artificial flowers lend a dainty touch of color to their festoons or bunches on skirts and sleeves. These are especially good-looking on tulle or net.

The best of the accepted evening dresses can be made at small cost which fact is worthy of thanks from the mothers of growing families.

A Practical Application.

"Do you think hypnotism has any real value in the practice of medicine?" asked the student.

"It might have," answered the professor, "if its use could be ethically recognized. The only way to get some people to pay their bills would be to mesmerize them."—Washington Evening Star.

The South Plainfield Field Club would like to arrange games with teams from Plainfield and vicinity. Address all communications to A. L. McDonough, South Plainfield.

MRS. MARY DISBOROUGH DIES IN NEW BRUNSWICK

Mrs. Mary J. Disborough, widow of Frederick Disborough, died Tuesday at the F. E. Parker Home, New Brunswick, where she had been under treatment since last August. She had been an invalid for several years. Prior to going to New Brunswick, she resided on West Fourth street. She was a member of Trinity Reformed church for many years, and was one of the most active workers in the Ladies' Christian Work Society, until her ill health prevented further endeavor.

Mrs. Disborough was born near Millstone, where she lived during the greater part of her life. She was a member of the Reformed church at that place. Her husband died before she removed to this city about eighteen years ago. She possessed a beautiful Christian character and had a large number of friends. The body will be brought to this city today and removed to the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Paul, 410 Central avenue, where the funeral will be held probably on Thursday.

'NEWEST OPERA GLASS BAG.

Most opera bags look like workbags improvised for evening purposes. The one to be described has not that objection, yet need not be expensive nor difficult to make.

The bag is made from two pieces of suede or soft leather shaped like the old-fashioned oval money pouches, broad and bulging below and narrowing to the top like an Egyptian vase, where it again spreads to form a top. The size is easily gauged by the size of the glasses to go in it.

Care must be taken that the neck is amply wide to take in the glasses, as it is not pleasant, in the hasty departure from the theatre, to be delayed by trifles.

Grosgrain or double oyelets are worked in silk the color of the bag, around the neck. These should be just long enough to hold the ribbon without crushing.

The two halves are sewed together in a narrow seam and lined with silk either in the same or contrasting color. When the latter is done the draw-strings may match the lining or outside, as preferred.

The material of the bag depends upon the inclination of giver. One for an evening affair might be made of white suede dotted with silver beads and with initials in centre of one side wrought in silver and coral, or silver and turquoise beads. The lining and drawstring may be of white or match the monogram.

More serviceable would be a bag of grey suede or satin dotted with silver beads and lettered with silver and dull grey or black beads. Only the body of the bag, not the frill above the neck, is studded; or the studding may be omitted and the monogram embroidered in raised letters and set in a medallion of beads.

A good-looking effect is in fawn-colored suede studded with bronze beads, with monogram in gilt and bronze, and the drawstring and linings of bronze.

Other pretty combinations are violet suede studded in amethyst beads with the similar tone, the monogram of several tones of purple, white with jet beads for one in half mourning, and pale pink in coral and dull black bags.

If one does not find it easy to set leather in artistic shades Ottoman silk could be used for the outside and lined with silk.

All Saints—Scotch Plains.

Easter services were held at All Saints Episcopal church, Scotch Plains, Sunday morning and afternoon. The music was in charge of Miss Alice Kyte, organist, who served in that capacity for the last time Sunday. The choir sang Easter anthems and the usual form of service was followed for Easter day. The church has not yet decided upon a rector to succeed the Rev. Mr. Mulford, who resigned a few months ago.

Gave a Post-Lenten Dance.

A delightful post-Lenten dance was given Monday at the Fanwood fire-house, by Miss Julia Clarke, of East Ninth street. More than twenty couples enjoyed the dancing. Miss Clarke was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. H. B. Clarke. There were guests present from New York, Westfield, Fanwood and this city. The affair terminated about midnight and during an intermission refreshments were served.

Borough Bank Up-to-Date.

The Borough National Bank, always up-to-date, has arranged to display an illuminated gilt sign in front of the banking institution every night until 9 o'clock. A row of electric lights is being arranged above the sign in such a way as to not only illuminate the sign, but also attract attention to the bank's place of business.

Funeral of Mrs. Thorn.

The funeral services of Mrs. Guillermo Thorn were held Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the late home on East Second street, and were largely attended by relatives, friends and neighbors. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson of the First M. E. church, was in charge of the services. There were many beautiful floral tributes. The burial was in Hillside cemetery.

EASTER MONDAY DANCE

Fourth Annual Subscription Event Held at the Auditorium.

CONDUCTED BY BACHELORS.

Mrs. E. S. Hooley, Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, Mrs. George P. Mellick and Others Among the Patronesses.

The fourth annual subscription dance, under the auspices of The Bachelor Committee was held at the Hartridge School auditorium Monday night, and was a great success. Society was well represented at the dance, nearly two hundred guests being present, the ballroom many persons from out of town. The auditorium was attractively decorated for the occasion with greens and flowers of the season.

The music for dancing was furnished by Brooks and Denton, and was a feature. The program was a popular one and there were repeated encores. Supper was served during an intermission about midnight, after which the dancing was continued until about 2 o'clock.

J. Hartley Mellick was chairman of the committee in charge of the affair, the other members being Gordon W. Abbott, Morris J. Dumont, C. Ames Brooks, Harvey Fisk, J. Whitney Baker and Lewis A. Williams, Jr.

The patronesses were Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, Mrs. Edwin S. Hooley, Mrs. Frank de Lacy Hyde, Mrs. De Witt C. Ivins, Mrs. Robert H. McCutcheon, Mrs. George P. Mellick, Mrs. John J. Stevens and Mrs. Percy H. Stewart.

FREEHOLDERS INSPECT SOME IMPROVED ROADS

Freeholders Krause, Meisel, King, Wilbur and county engineer, Frank J. Hubbard, and Jacob Bauer, comprising the road committee of the Union County Board of Freeholders, were the guests of Fred Margerum on a tour of inspection of several county roads in the southern part of the State Saturday. Among the highways inspected were the White Horse Tavern and the Haddon road. A new thoroughfare, about 1,400 yards of which has been improved, at Trenton was also inspected.

These roads have been repaired through the use of various patent preparations. In some instances the thoroughfares seemed to stand the wear and tear pretty well, while in other cases they do not give satisfaction. The county road committee will meet at Elizabeth Thursday afternoon to consider road matters in general.

The committee will start the work of spreading oil on county roads this week. A supply of oil has been shipped to Westfield and another to Rahway, which have been designated as starting points. The committee has decided to spread the oil as thinly as advisable and put it on more often than has been the custom.

AN APPRECIATION.

"If I wrote poetry," said a member of the First Baptist church Sunday, looking at the boxes of flowers in the Easter decorations of that church, "I would write a poem and I would call it "The Easter Box of Alabaster."

The beautiful flowers from the conservatories of Charles W. McCutcheon filling the house with their fragrance like "the alabaster box of ointment of spikenard, very precious," could not but remind the beholder of the costly gift that was an expression of Mary's love and devotion. It is in line with divine thought that such expressions of love and honor should not be forgotten, and wherever the Gospel is preached, this act of Mary's is told for a memorial of her.

An appreciation by the comrades of Mr. McCutchen is surely most fitting, for the rare out-put of exquisite flowers, banking the pulpit and chancel had in it the expression of Mary's thought, love and honor to the Lord.

In the absence of Mr. McCutcheon and family who did not see the beautiful sight, mention should be made of Peter Dorringer, superintendent of Mr. McCutchen's conservatory, who, with his assistants, have found it a pleasure to carry out the wishes of their employer. We cannot but feel that the spirit of Mary's offering has actuated Peter Dorringer's labor of love as well as Mr. McCutchen's gift.

EXPECTING 300,000 ELKS

Detroit Prepares on Elaborate Scale for Grand Lodge Reunion.

Detroit is preparing to take care of 300,000 visitors next July when the Elks' Grand Lodge reunion will be held in that city. The entertainment will be on a scale never before attempted in Detroit. Though the gathering is still three months away, all available accommodations have been reserved in the Detroit hotels and large boarding-houses, and arrangements are being made to quarter many of the guests in the hotels of Windsor, Mt. Clemens, Pontiac and other neighboring places.

The informal entertainment of the visitors will begin several days before the Grand Lodge assembles for business. On the morning of Monday, July 11, the grand exalted ruler and grand lodge members will be formally welcomed to the city. The arrival of the distinguished visitors will be made the occasion for a grand water pageant illustrating the arrival of the site of the approaching city of Detroit of Counts Pontchartrain, Cadillac and Lasalle. The boats and costumes will be faithful reproductions of the originals. The flotilla will be hemmed in by canoes bearing Pontiac and his Indians.

The grand lodge officials and members will be met at the landing place and escorted to the Lyceum Theatre, in that city, where the welcoming addresses will be delivered by Governor Warner, Mayor Breitmeyer and the heads of the local reception committee. It is expected to have the mayors of all the chief cities of Michigan participate in the welcome demonstration. The response for the visitors will be made by James U. Sammis, of Iowa, grand exalted ruler of the order.

Tuesday morning the grand lodge will assemble for business and daily sessions will be held until Thursday. The business of the convention, however, will be liberally interspersed with features of entertainment. During the week there will be free daily excursions for the visitors to Belle Isle, Tashmoo Park and other nearby resorts. Free band concerts, official receptions, luncheons, theatre parties and baseball games will be included in the program. Another notable feature will be a grand electrical allegorical parade, depicting the founding and development of the city.

The decorations and illuminations of Detroit during Elks' week will be on a scale of unparalleled magnificence. The finishing touch preceding the opening of the convention, Thomas A. Edison, at his home in New Jersey, will press a button which will be the signal for turning on the brilliant illuminations which will convert night into day throughout the entire length of the city. Public buildings and business houses will be festooned with thousands of electric lights, while mammoth arches of artistic design will be erected at the principal street intersections to bid welcome to the "Best People on Earth."

As at previous conventions of the Elks the crowning event of the week will be the great parade, which is scheduled for Thursday, July 14. Between 60,000 and 75,000 members of the order, mostly in uniform, will march to the music of 200 bands. The automobile manufacturers of Detroit, which city leads the automobile industry of the world, will furnish a score of handsomely decorated motor cars for the accommodation of the grand lodge officers and distinguished guests, who will ride in the parade. The manufacturers will also place a thousand automobiles at the disposal of the reception committee to carry the visitors on sight-seeing trips about the city. One of the concluding features of the week's program will be a grand automobile parade in which will be shown every style of motor car manufactured in Detroit and vicinity.

Prize drills and numerous other competitions will add to the attractions of the week. Several cash prizes will be awarded for the best bands attending the reunion. Among the competitors will be the full-blooded Chippewa Indian band from Mt. Pleasant, Mich. Two thousand dollars will also be distributed among the citizens who show the best decorated buildings downtown. Another feature of the week will be the free distribution of 6,000,000 oranges by the lodges of Southern California.

The liberality of the railroads is reduced their rates, together with Detroit's central location and its easy access from every part of the United States and Canada, is expected to result in the largest attendance in the history of the Elks' reunions. A rate of one and one-half cents a mile within the jurisdiction of the Central Passenger Association has been made for the reunion. Tickets will be placed on sale July 7, and will be good returning as late as August 20.

George Watts, who has been engaged in the butcher business on West Front street, nearly opposite Grove street, for many years, has retired and the market was closed Monday. Mr. Watts was one of the oldest business men of the city. He has not decided upon his plans for the future.

TO PRESERVE CARPETS.

A stiff broom will spoil a carpet in a very short time. Dip the broom in clean, hot suds once a week, then shake it out and hang out to dry. This will not only aid the carpet and make it last much longer, but it will also give the broom a new lease on life. All rugs should be beaten on the wrong side and then swept on the right side. Spots may be removed by the use of oxgall or ammonia and water. Use a soft sponge or a piece of flannel.

To brighten rugs, use slightly moistened bran or salt. Lime spots can be removed by vinegar. Soot can be removed by covering the spot with salt, which should be brushed up quickly. The color can be restored with ammonia and a piece of flannel. To remove ink spots cover with milk and after soaking up all that seems possible, either sprinkle with salt or with a pure white soap and rub with a clean brush and warm water.

Use powdered magnesia for grease spots. Housewives will have no trouble with carpet moths in the winter, but they should watch for these pests in the spring. When they are discovered the cracks in the floor should be soaked with benzine. The upper edge of the carpet should be washed with a solution of corrosive sublimate and alcohol, sixty parts of this first to one of the latter.

It is a chain mail dress, a sheath-like robe of coarse chenille threaded with jet beads, which the wearer insist upon calling black diamonds. The excessive brilliance of the dress is lessened by broad bands of chenille that are crossed in fichu lines and carried down the sides of the tunic. The wide band of velvety black is again used under the arms, so that the glistening black armor is not so aggressive as it sounds. Soft folds of chiffon form the shortsleeves, and white maline gives the chemisette the most attractive form.

STYLES IN HAIR

"It's funny about hair," said the girl who likes to talk. "People in former years didn't have such a time over their topknots! Why, when I was a little girl I can remember my mother taking her hair in one hand, combing it upward in three motions, giving it one twist—I think they called it a French twist—and then it ran up the back of her head to the top. Then with one more motion she coiled what was left up above on the roof somewhere, jabbed in three hairpins and that was all there was to it. And my mother was a stylish woman, too!

"I believe I had an aunt who wore a false front at that time, though it was considered a sort of disgrace to the family, and she was invariably spoken of as 'poor Aunt Amelia,' much as though she was feeble minded or afflicted with a cork leg. Hair was hair then and everybody seemed to have it. I still remember the girl named Abbie who walked up the hill by our home to school with her hair in two thick symmetrical braids tied with cherry ribbon. From the second primary grade to the first high school year Abbie's braids grew far below her waist and were just as thick at the ends as at the top. Every girl had thick braids and the mothers weren't behind in that respect, either. They wouldn't have known what to do with a 'rat' unless they had used it to stuff a soft cushion.

"I don't know where all that hair has gone to, I'm sure.

"At the present time," proceeded the girl who likes to talk, "to own a little hair attached to your scalp is taken as a personal injury by the hairdressers. They tell you in sad tones that it's impossible to dress your hair so that it looks fashionable if you have any of your own.

"I've never been exactly crazy about my hair," declared the girl who likes to talk, "because I was brought up in the belief that it was an entirely natural thing to have hair grow on one's head, and grow thick and long, just as much as it was natural to grow teeth or a nose. When I was in school I had occasional spasms of trying to arrange my hair after the prevailing mode, but somehow it never worked.

"But I've never been actually apologetic and unhappy till this winter. I've got so now that I blink and cower at the sight of a hair-dresser's sign and shudder with apprehension if I have to enter the shop. The first hair-dresser I approached this winter with a request to be made beautiful regarded me with unconcealed horror as she started to take down my locks.

"'Why!' she gasped, 'you don't wear a braid!'

"'Why should I wear a braid?' asked I, in a superior, comfortable way. 'I have plenty of my own hair to braid if I want to.'

"Thereupon the hair-dresser exploded. Didn't I know that a braid could not be arranged properly unless both its ends were free? The only thing to be done, if one was so unfortunate as to have hair, was to wad it up over a cage-like cap and pound it down into as near nothingness as possible and then wind around one's head a braid 30 inches long at least, made of the very best imported hair. Yes, such a braid was, expensive. Anywhere from $35 up to $100, and, of course, the more individual the shade the higher the price. My own hair always had looked a most ordinary brown to me. Firmly I refused the $60 braid and the hair-dresser threw up her hands. All she could do for me, it appeared, was to make an old-fashioned pompadour and an old-fashioned array of puffs at the back—out of my own hair, to be sure, but as nearly as possible like the false sets you can now buy at reduced rates. So after paying her I went home and took down my hair and did it up my own way.

"A few days later I surged into another hair shop and fell into the hands of a gum-chewing young person called Mabel, to whom I broke the news at once that I did not own a braid. Mabel didn't faint. She said to leave it to her, and as I was in a chair with an apron tied around my neck and helpless, I did.

"Some day Mabel is going to be perched on a pillar of fame. I don't know exactly what she did or how she did it, but when she was through with me I was a fashionable dream. She tied and divided and subdivided and twisted and wreathed and my hair till I emerged with the semblance of a perfectly lovely braid puffed out all around my face. Oh, it looked simple and lovely and most becoming and I was entranced.

"Do you know, it took me three-quarters of an hour to get the hairpins out when I took down my hair? Why, I had hairpins stacked up around me like cordwood, all over the dresser and the floor. I looked like a captive tied to the stake all ready for the match to be applied. I got delirious. I didn't know there were that many hairpins in the world or that one head of hair could be divided into millions of strands, as mine was.

"That coiffure was built like the pyramids—to stay. Further, it was like the catacombs for complexity. If I'd let it alone it would have lasted all this year. I don't believe Mabel could ever do it again.

"I believe after all I'll cut off three-quarters of my hair and buy a false braid that I can stick on with two pins—it'll be quicker!"

Parliament a Refuge.

Down to 60 years ago a seat in the British parliament was a prize much sought for by men who found themselves beset by importunate creditors, inasmuch as in those times no civil action for debt could be brought against an M. P. When a dissolution occurred, this privilege of course was automatically annulled, a fact of which the creditors hastened to take full advantage. Disraeli once wrote that the only way to keep some men "out of the house of correction was to get them into the house of commons."

Prolonging Life of Guns.

Henceforth all seacoast guns of six-inch caliber and over, except mortars, will be provided with double tubes, so that, should the inner tube give way, the damage will not extend to the outer tube and the enveloping jacket and hoops. This will permit the restoration at small cost of guns whose tubes give way, and will facilitate the rehabilitation of guns whose accuracy has been lost through erosion and wear of the bore.

Wail from Boston.

"It's disgusting," said Mrs. Waldo Beaconhill of Boston; "the makers of children's blocks never think of putting Greek letters on them; and there's my poor little Emerson simply dying of ennui, for the want of a good fairy tale in words of moderately extensive syllabification."

Unknown Eskimos.

There exists no connected account of the material culture of the great group of Eskimo dwellings around the mouth of the Mackenzie river. Still more meager is our knowledge of that extinct Eskimo culture of which the sole witnesses are the ruins in the islands in the north Canadian archipelago; these islands form the most northerly bridge between the western Eskimo and Greenland.

Good Substitute for Reality.

A New York woman who likes to have flowers in her windows but finds it impracticable to do so in the city has artificial ones painted on the glass. The windows are high up above the street and the flowers are in colors to enable them to be seen more easily. The apartment house in which the woman lives is on Broadway, and the effect of the art is very striking.

Showing World's Progress.

The average Frenchman of to-day can eat a smaller price have much better wine than the wealthy Frenchman of the fifteenth or sixteenth century, and this is made possible by the fact that wine is nowadays kept largely in bottles, while in the past only casks were used. Even at the table of Louis XV. wine was rarely served in bottles.

Devoured by Wolves.

A grim tale comes from Transylvania. While Baron Otto Orban, a Hungarian magnate, aged 76 years, was riding on his estate he was chased by hunger-pinched wolves. His horse became frenzied, and threw the baron, who was devoured by the wolves. A bloody knife, found in the snow, indicates that he fought for his life.

Cheap Railway Travel.

In the cities of Great Britain the population of which is 200,000 or more, the average rate of fare for street railway travel is 1.1 cents a passenger mile. In the cities of continental Europe the average rate of fare paid for urban transportation is one cent a passenger mile.

DISCUSS 'M. O.' ELECTION

Civic Societies Confer with the Councilmanic Public Affairs Committee.

COURTING FULL PUBLICITY.

Anxious to Have the Public Understand the Purpose of the Special Lecturer for Tuesday, April 19.

Upon the invitation of the Councilmanic committee on public affairs, representatives of the Plainfield Protective Association, the Civic Society and the Board of Trade attended a conference at the office of Mayor Charles J. Fisk Thursday, for the purpose of discussing matters relative to the coming water election on April 19.

The Plainfield Protective Association was represented by R. Henry Depew, George W. V. Moy, Henry C. Deknatel, Thomas M. Day, and D. N. VanVliet, while F. A. Duttenhofer and George M. Christian represented the Board of Trade. The councilmen present included President R. I. Tolley, F. E. Wyatt, Herbert Buxton, F. L. Holt, George S. Clay, Duncan W. Taylor, William L. Gloak and Charles C. Randolph.

The chief purpose of the meeting is the desire of the public affairs committee to enlighten the citizens regarding the objects of the coming election on the water question so that an intelligent vote may be obtained. The committee wants to secure the power to investigate to determine whether it is advisable to condemn the present water plant, build a new plant or not disturb the present agreement and renew the contract with the water company.

The committee, they say, believes that if this is done, it will place the city in a position where it will not be compelled to make a contract with the water company as practically the latter's own terms, and for this reason the committee seeks the co-operation of all civic bodies in the city, so that the greatest publicity possible may be given prior to the election on April 19.

The representatives of the Plainfield Protective Association, expressed themselves in favor of the proposition and it was decided to hold a meeting of the executive committee of that organization on Monday night to take steps to assist in the publicity plan. The proposition as outlined by Mr. Holt Thursday received the endorsement of the P. P. A. members, as well as those of the Board of Trade.

Y.M.C.A. OFFERS EASY MEMBERSHIP TERMS NOW

The membership committee of the Y. M. C. A. at its dinner Thursday inaugurated a new plan of boosting the membership of the association from 650 to 700 by May 1. The annual dues of the association is eight dollars, but in order to make it easier for young men of this city to affiliate themselves with the association, who are unable to pay down the regular price at a clip, it was voted to accept members on the installment rate of two dollars a month. This move is expected to prove popular and the committee is confident of reaching the 700 mark.

The dinner was an enjoyable affair. George A. Coe, of the Orange Y. M. C. A., who was the guest of honor, gave an interesting talk on the various attractions offered by Y. M. C. A.'s. He declared that membership in a Y. M. C. A. presents an opportunity for helpful friendship. A membership in the Plainfield Association, or any local organization, means a membership in a brotherhood of 800,000.

Members of the committee who were present were Joseph W. Gavett, H. W. Herrman, Philip S. Suffern, E. M. Daniel, A. J. Spicer, Alexander Doig, John Fritts and Robert H. Radford.

LOCAL DONATIONS FOR THE BERKELEY LIBRARY.

The aim of the Berkeley Heights Public Library Association to obtain 2,000 volumes will soon be realized if the present rate of donations continue. The library now has 750 volumes on its shelves. Among local people who made recent donations are Mrs. S. French, of West Front street, 150 volumes; Mrs. Tiffany, of Cresbent avenue, 70 volumes; Mrs. Hill, of Westervelt avenue and Miss O. Brown, of West Front street.

Crocheted Bedroom Slippers.

Bedroom slippers crocheted of the heavy mercerized cotton are most attractive. The changeable cottons are especially effective.

Avoiding Fruit Stains.

When paring any kind of fresh fruit, if the hands are washed off immediately with cold water, instead of being washed in warm water and soap, there will be very little danger of unsightly stains.

TAXPAYERS, ATTENTION!

If the bill introduced into the Legislature by Senator Oliver Huff Brown, of Monmouth county, on March 14, becomes a law the city of Plainfield will have to go down into its pocket for an amount of money which will make the taxpayers take notice in more than one way. Mr. Brown's bill is an "Act prohibiting the discharge of sewage, excremental matter, domestic refuse and other polluting matter into fresh water," and at a meeting held in the office of Mayor Charles J. Fisk last night it was the unanimous opinion of the Plainfield Protective Association, Plainfield Civic Association, Plainfield and North Plainfield Board of Trade and the members of the Common Council that every taxpayer in the city should write a personal letter to Senator Ernest R. Ackerman urging upon him the necessity for the defeat of the bill.

The present sewage disposal plant is so far as it relates to pollution of Green Brook, into which the distillation from the sewage beds is emptied, carries with it no possible danger, as the system of distillation disposes of the poisonous matter contained in the sewage.

Senator Ackerman has urged Plainfielders to protest against the bill and it was through the the Senator's efforts that the bill was held up yesterday in the Senate. The sewage plant which now serves this city has cost in the neighborhood of $350,000, and to saddle another and greater amount on the taxpayers of this city would be little short of a crime.

Therefore, it behooves the property owners of this city to protest vigorously against the passage of Senator Brown's bill which is numbered "Senate Bill No. 238." Personal attention to the advice of Senator Ackerman of writing the letters of protest will have the effect of delaying the passage of the bill, and its ultimate defeat and those who are interested would consult their own interests by heeding the advice. Do it now!

GOSSIP OF CONFERENCE

All Three Local Pastors to Be Returned to Their Charges.

AS TO REV. DR. A. C. M'CREA.

He Has Decided Not to Remain at Centenary, Newark—Dr. Cook Here on Sunday, April 3.

Sunday, April 3, will be known as "Conference Sunday" among the Methodist churches of the Newark Conference, the annual session of which will be held in Newark. On that day Rev. Dr. Richard J. Cooke, book editor of the Methodist Book Concern, will preach morning and evening at the First M. E. church for Dr. Anderson.

Dr. Cooke is a man of great ability and was prominently mentioned at the Baltimore conference for the office of bishop. Every book that is published by the Methodist Book Concern must first be passed upon by Dr. Cooke and he has a wide and extensive knowledge of men and affairs as well as religious matters.

As far as it is possible to tell, it is expected that the three local Methodist ministers will be returned to their charges. In each case the congregation has invited the pastor to continue another year, and unless the presiding bishop wills otherwise they will come back.

In connection with the coming session, Plainfielders will be interested to know that Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, now pastor of the Centenary M. E. church, Newark, does not intend to remain in that charge another year. In fact there is a mutual understanding between pastor and people to that effect. It is said, however, that an arrangement has been made that Rev. Dr. C. L. Mead, of Hoboken, who was pastor of Centenary church prior to the appointment of Dr. McCrea, is to be returned to that church a year hence. This may lead to complications as the bishop who will preside at the coming conference will have no jurisdiction a year from now and any arrangements that he might make would not be binding on another bishop yet to be selected for the next conference.

It is stated on the highest authority that Dr. McCrea and his people are united and the latter has no grievance, except over what they consider the arbitrary action of Bishop Neely a year ago in sending Dr. Mead to Hoboken, when it was believed that he would be continued for another year. Plans for Dr. McCrea's future have not been made known.

FLIM-FLAMMERS FOILED THROUGH LOCAL POLICE

A trio of flim-flammers came to town Thursday to try and work the diamond ring swindle on George Metzkopf, a butcher in the employ of the Endress Company, but their plans were frustrated by Patrolman McDonald. The policeman brought one of the men to headquarters and he was subsequently released for lack of evidence. The other two, Edward Luddington and James Andrews, got away but fell into the clutches of the New York police on a telephone message from Chief Kiely.

The two men were allowed to go when after a search nothing was found on them to incriminate them. The game is an old one and might have proved profitable but for the vigilance of the local police.

With one good diamond and several imitations the flim-flammers beget the interest of their intended victim. When he doubts the genuineness of the stone a jeweler is consulted and the worthless diamond submitted to his inspection. The genuine article is then supposed to be handed to the man who pays a low price for the diamond, but he invariably gets a "phony" substitute.

Boracic Acid Useful.

Boracic acid is a simple home remedy. Mixed with vaseline it forms one of the cheapest and safest ointments for cuts and bruises. Boracic acid dusted into the sleeves of dresses which have been worn when exercising removes all disagreeable traces of perspiration. Handkerchiefs which have been used when colds and influenza are prevalent should be sprinkled with boracic acid powder, or, better still, should be steeped in a strong solution of it and water before being sent to wash.

An Exception.

Wifey—You told me the other day we must avoid all luxuries and confine ourselves to absolute necessities only.

Hubby—That's so, my dear.

Wifey—Well, last night you came home from the club in a cab.

Hubby—Yes; but that was an absolute necessity.—Fliegende Blaetter.

Tailored Suit Buttons.

Buttons self-covered and set in black rims are being used on some of the early spring tailored suits.

Foulards for Linings.

Figured foulards are to be used as linings for many of the smart tailored costs this spring.

Avoiding Fruit Stains.

When paring any kind of fresh fruit, if the hands are washed off immediately with cold water, instead of being washed in warm water and soap, there will be very little danger of unsightly stains.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS ENJOY ENTERTAINMENT

About a hundred members and friends of the Seventh-Day Baptist church enjoyed an evening of delightful entertainment Wednesday in the Sabbath school room under the auspices of the Women's Society for Christian Work. A program of music, readings and recitations was rendered by local and New York talent appeared.

Mrs. Violet Truell Johnson, violinist, Miss Mabel Maxson, pianist, and Miss Jessie M. Utter at the organ, opened the entertainment with a trio, which was followed by a reading, "Elsie Venner," by Miss Ruth Maxson. Charles P. Titsworth received an encore for a baritone solo. Mrs. Allan Babcock, elocutionist, of New York, gave as her first selection "The Lost Word" by Van Dyke, and was compelled to respond to several readings, which Paul Lawrence Dunbar's poems were given with true negro dialect which were heartily applauded.

A piano duet by Mrs. William and Mrs. Frank Hubbard was splendidly received and Mrs. Johnson captured the audience with another exquisitely played number on the violin. The program ended with a glee sung by four women, Mrs. John Cottrell, Mrs. E. F. Champlin, Mrs. F. Langworthy and Mrs. William Hubbard.

Light refreshments were served after the concert and a silver collection taken.

Baby Pillow at Its Best.

White swiss or mull is successful material for the covering of the baby pillow when the transparency is an object. Linen, although of sheer quality will often conceal the colored cover beneath. One of the best swiss pillow covers has been sewn up each side and left open at each end, where it was scalloped and provided with eyelets two inches from the extreme edges for ribbons, which held the back and front together and the rose-colored silk pillow inside. The ribbons used are narrow and white, and to each corner of the pillow is attached a rosette-like bow of wider ottoman ribbon.

Fabric-covered Buckles.

Square and oblong buckles, huge in size and covered with spangled or jeweled fabrics, are seen on many of the new gowns.

FIRST BAPTIST FLOCK HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

The annual business meeting of the First Baptist church was held Wednesday, when F. W. Jones was re-elected a deacon for a term of five years and Mrs. George F. White was elected one of the three women managers from the church on the board of the Baptist Home Society for the Aged at Roseville. She succeeds Miss Mary J. Thickstun, who resigned after serving for many years. The other two members of the board are Mrs. J. A. Chamblias and Miss Laura J. Runyon.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chamblias, the pastor, presided at the meeting and Oliver B. Leonard, church clerk, filled his position. There were nearly two hundred members present and much interest was shown. The beneficence committee, of which Oliver B. Leonard is treasurer, reported that $2,800 had been received and expended for denominational purposes. This amount is exclusive of the money raised by the missionary societies and Sunday school.

It was decided to increase the board of deacons by two and an election will be held on Wednesday night, May 25. One will fill the vacancy caused by the death of M. Clark Dobbins in October last. Pastor Chamblias announced that on Sunday evening the ordinance of baptism will be administered to twelve candidates, many of whom are from the Sunday school.

RESIGNS AS TEACHER AND WILL RAISE CHICKS

The Board of Education of Berkeley Heights is in need of a schoolteacher in the primary grade to take the place of Miss Agnes M. Burgmiller, who has resigned. The teacher has laid down the textbook and chalk box to enter the new field of labor, that of chicken raising.

Miss Burgmiller, it is understood, will raise chicks on a large scale and will make a specialty of furnishing spring broilers to the New York market. She will act as superintendent of the farm and also be her own sales agent.

Miss Burgmiller has been a teacher in the school for more than a dozen years and many of her former pupils are among the happy parents of that vicinity. Some are grandparents, it is said. A few years ago, during a big snowstorm Miss Burgmiller gained considerable fame by walking through snow drifts to the schoolhouse, lighting the fire, and opening the school, though according to history no pupils reported that day.

WARREN LADIES' SOCIETY HAD PROSPEROUS YEAR

The year 1909 was one of the most successful eras in the history of the history of the Ladies' Missionary and Aid Society of Warren chapel, as indicated in the annual reports submitted by the different officers at the annual meeting of the society Wednesday afternoon. During the year $500 was raised for church and missionary purposes.

Officers were lecting for the ensuing year, as follows: President, Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman; first vice-president, Mrs. R. C. Stewart; second vice-president, Mrs. Randall; recording secretary, Mrs. E. G. Smith; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Joseph W. Gavett; treasurer, Mrs. J. P. Green; secretary of literature, Mrs. A. G. Jenkins.

GAITERS TO MATCH YOUR HAT.

It is English, and a custom which many women on this side have adopted, to look carefully to the gaiters when out for a walk.

They are checked, and are worn to match the covered hat. Blue and white gaiters look smart with a blue turban, gray and white with the gray, brown or black with the brown, and so on through the variety of tones of this winter's millinery.

This "mania for matching," as one observing man called it, necessitates a good supply of gaiters, but the possession of a variety gives a certain distinct individuality to the outfit of a woman.

Fig Sauce for Custard.

A fig sauce is delicious with baked custard. Take five figs and chop or cut them very fine; just cover with water and simmer gently for two hours or longer in a double boiler. Add the juice of half a lemon and a very little sugar and let it cool. Pour over the custard. For those who like flavor, sherry may be substituted for the lemon.

Bronze Lace in Vogue.

Bronze lace is used for trimming gowns as well as early spring hats.

Round Thread Linens.

The round thread linens will be found practical for any work which demands thread drawing.

TEMPLARS' CELEBRATION

Golden Jubilee of New Jersey Masonic Grand Commandery.

THE PROGRAM IS ANNOUNCED.

Trinity Commandery to Send a Delegation to the Festivities to Be Held at Trenton on May 9 and 10.

Knights Templar in particular, and the Masonic fraternity in general, in this vicinity are looking forward with interest to the fiftieth anniversary of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of New Jersey, which will take place in Trenton on May 9 and 10. As usual the Masonic organizations here, particularly Trinity Commandery, will be largely represented at the festivities.

The program as arranged will last two days and will include a banquet, a session of the Grand Commandery, a parade in which every commandery in the State is expected to participate, and for which practically every band in the State has been engaged, and the conclusion with a public installation of the Grand Commandery officers elected at the annual session.

The banquet, which will be presided over by Past Grand Commander I. Layton Register, of Camden, will be served on Monday evening, and will witness the largest gathering of the governing body which has ever taken place in New Jersey.

During the course of the dinner, addresses will be made by a number of guests, including Grand Master Rugg, of Providence, R. I., and J. Clarence Hoover, of Freehold. Most Worshipful Grand Master of Masons in this State; Samuel G. Rudderow, of Camden, Most Excellent Grand High Priest of Royal Arch Masons, and the Illustrious Grand Master of Royal and Select Masters, the latter being Harry Compton, Grand Master of Masonry in New Jersey; the Grand Commanders of Knights Templar of New York and Pennsylvania.

Others who will make addresses are former Governor Edward C. Stokes, of Olivet Commandery, of Millville; Right Eminent Grand Commander Charles A. Mohn, Mayor of West Hoboken; Very Eminent Charles J. Hazard, of Hightstown, Deputy Grand Commander, and Past Grand Commander I. Layton Register.

The great body of Templars in the State are more directly concerned in the festivities of the second day, when the celebration will take the form of a parade, and active preparation has been in progress in each asylum for weeks past. The order made commemorative of the event is being struck off and will be presented to each participant, and photographs will be taken of the line when in "cross" formation, which consists of forming a solid marching cross of twenty commandries, headed by the massed bands of the State playing "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

For this event the merchants and citizens of Trenton will decorate their places of business and dwellings, and all will join in welcoming the visitors.

Trinity Commandery, of Trenton, has accepted an invitation to act as a general reception committee, and has engaged Winkler's Second Regiment Band and what was formerly the field music of the Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., under an escort. They will meet visiting commanderies and conduct them to their quarters.

The Grand Commandery was organized at Burlington, February 14, 1860, by representatives from Hugh De Payne Commandery, of Jersey City; St. Bernard, of Hightstown, and Helena, of Burlington, at which time it was instituted and warranted, previous application having been made to the Grand Encampment for this authority. At this conclave it was decided to hold future meetings in Trenton, since which time that city has been their headquarters.

There are in the State twenty commanderies, numbering in the neighborhood of 6,000 men. Just what proportion of this number will engage in the parade at Trenton cannot at the present time, but there will probably be a large number to participate, the great majority of whom will be accompanied by ladies.

Creamy Candy.

A delicious candy is made with sour cream. The cream should be just clabbered and should not have stood long enough to become bitter. Mix a cupful of it with three cupfuls of brown sugar. Cook it on the stove until it forms a grain when a little is stirred in a saucer. Then add butter the size of a walnut and half a pound of chopped nuts. Walnuts or almonds may be used, or even peanuts. The walnuts are the best for the purpose. Let the candy or fudge—for this is

Some of the new cretonnes are reversible. These are especially nice for draperies or curtainings where both sides are seen.

NO WEDDING BELLS FOR THEM SAID 'SQUIRE

Stern justice clogged the wedding bells at Justice Thomas Snape's home in the borough Thursday.

While the justice was enjoying an after-supper snooze he was awakened from his slumbers by the jingle of his door bell. He responded promptly as possible to the alarm.

The squire was met at the outer door by a "good lookin' feller," accompanied by a pretty young woman, as the justice expressed it. "We want to get married, your honor," was the visitor's opening salutation, and as these words were uttered the latter slipped a sealed envelope in the justice's hand. The latter deposited it in his vest pocket, without inspection, and started to talk business.

"All right," replied Justice Snape, "I can tie the knot and kiss the bride in ten minutes. All that is necessary is for both of you to fill out the necessary papers, and I will go out and get a couple of witnesses."

While the justice was out to procure the witnesses the expectant bridal couple filled out the blanks. "I'll be ready in a few moments children, just as soon as I scrutinize the papers," said Justice Snape as he returned with the witnesses.

Then came the explanation, and the hopes of the couple were dashed to smithereens. "Sorry, can't do it, the young miss is only fourteen years old. I advise both of you to take the first trolley home." The couple left, the marriage altar in crestfallen spirits, and the bridegroom elect promised to return in a few days with the necessary consent of the young woman's parents.

The young man gave his name as William Penn Jones, and the young woman, Adelaide Parker, and their home addresses, Elizabeth. Jones put his age as thirty and the young woman registered fourteen, although she looked twenty.

The couple in their departure forgot to claim the sealed envelope. Justice Snape also had forgotten it until this morning. When he opened it he discovered a five dollar bill and a postal card bearing "Loving Easter Greetings."

MISSIONARY SOCIETIES OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

The anniversary of the Women's Missionary societies of the First Baptist church was held Friday afternoon in the lecture room, the meeting being in charge of the Young Women's Society and presided over by the newly-elected president, Miss Helen Armstrong. The devotional service was conducted by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, who spoke impressively on the importance of mission work and introduced Miss Edith Gurley of Boston, who for years visited the mission stations of the Orient.

Miss Gurley described the reception of her mother and herself on their arrival in India when Christians and non-Christians gave them honor, where they were guests of missionaries who had shown themselves true friends of the natives. Her story of Nellore and Ongole was full of interest. She told of the ascent to Prayer Meeting Hill of Dr. and Mrs. Jewett when there was not a single Christian in all the Telegu people about Ongole and the changes that were wrought until in 1878 the Telegu converts were numbered by thousands. The Christian conventions in Burma the helpfulness of the Karens the house to house visitation in China and the mission schools in Japan were vividly described by Miss Gurley. She quoted the saying, "Those who are least up in things are most down on a thing," and she believed from personal knowledge that anything done for missions counts for more than any other work. Playing with missions she said was playing with human souls, and urged more work for missions with power and zeal.

On account of Miss Gurley's limited time, the secretaries of the Home and Foreign Missionaries societies had asked to have the reading of their annual reports deferred until their regular meeting. Miss Ida Yerkes, treasurer of the Foreign Missionary Society, reported the amount received for the year $485.-65.

Mrs. Frank W. Jones, treasurer of the Home Missionary Society reported the year's receipts $500.24.

The report of the Young Women's Society was read by their secretary, Miss Pauline Denton, and showed interest and success.

The treasurer's report read by Mrs. Robin Brown in the absence of the treasurer Miss Bessie Flanders, showed receipts of $236.30.

A social half hour followed with serving of tea. Miss Gurley conducted a missionary rally in Elizabeth last evening.

Twilled Foulards.

Unusually handsome for gowns are the twilled foulards found in a large range of colors as well as in many rich designs.

Garyish greens are to be in demand this spring. Chicory, pistachio and olive are the shades most sought.

LYDIA CHAPTER'S NIGHT

Local Branch of Eastern Star Order Visited by State Officers.

LARGELY ATTENDED AFFAIR.

Mrs. Louise Emerson, of New York, most worthy past grand matron, and delegation were also present.

The grand lodge officers present were as follows:

Most worthy grand matron, Mrs. Elizabeth Winter, and most worthy grand patron, Peter Semler, of Jersey City; right worthy asociate grand matron, Mrs. Marie Baum and right worthy grand secretary, Mrs. Mary Martin, F. G. M., of Paterson; right worthy associate grand conductress, Emaline Covington, of Elizabeth; worthy grand matron, Mrs. Minnie L. Nighman and worthy grand Martha, Mrs. Jennie L. This was the fourth visit of the grand lodge officers since the institution of Lydia Chapter in May last. The local chapter is the youngest in the State and has been very successful in its work. Beside the women there was a large number of local Masons present last night and they enjoyed the work greatly.

A COCKTAIL TRAY.

Either for the bachelor host or one of your married friends who serves wine nothing is newer or more unusual than a cocktail tray. One can easily be made either by the girl who works in burnt wood or who can do the effective canvas embroidery.

Make the tray about fourteen inches in diameter finished. This allows for an inch rim and a seven inch seperate circle. If preferred, the tray can be square, though the rounded ones are more correct.

On the tray itself burn a gay cock with spreading tail and vivid, natural colorings, with burnt background of duller brown tones. The rim is burnt in the same shades as the background and has on it some appropriate motto.

Cover the body of the tray with glass before the rim is put on.

Another way to make such a tray is to have a thin circle of half-inch wood covered with canvas, on which is worked a cock with a solid cross-stitch or darned background of solid color. If the full strands of filo silk instead of cotton are used for the work the effect will be richer.

Cover the canvas with glass and have the rim in the burnt wood with motto or in mahogany moulding two inches wide.

It will probably be necessary to take the tray to a picture framer to be made up.

The Point of View.

Jean Paul Laurens, the famous French painter, was the son of an honest cart driver of Toulouse. At one time, when the painter was at the height of his Parisian reputation, it happened that two old women of Toulouse were talking about the Laurens family.

"Let me see," said one, "there were two boys, weren't there?"

"Yes."

"What become of them?"

"Oh, one's a grocer right here in Toulouse. He does a very good business."

"And the other one?"

"The younger one? He went off to Paris and became an artist."

"Dear, dear! And his father such a good, worthy man?"—Youth's Companion.

Cheese Fondu.

Put a tablespoonful of butter in the chafing dish, and when melted, add a half pound of cheese cut fine. Stir constantly, and as it softens add a cupful of bread crumbs moistened with as much milk as they will absorb. When these ingredients are well blended, add a little salt, a generous sprinkling of cayenne and the beaten yolks of two eggs. Next stir in a teaspoonful of baking powder and, when the mixture is fluffy, stir in the beaten whites of the two eggs. Serve at once on toasted cracker or triangles of toast.

HOW EASTER WAS OBSERVED IN THE CHURCHES

Large Congregations Heard Superb Music and Stirring Sermons on the Feast of the Resurrection.

The fine weather of Sunday brought out the largest congregations seen in the local churches for many a day. This was particularly true of the Episcopal churches. At all the communion services in the morning the attendance was large. At Grace church the number of persons to attend communion was the largest in the history of the church, and the offerings, which were for missions were very gratifying.

The music at Grace church was of the highest character and the male choir gave a splendid account of itself. At the organ recital in the afternoon and at Evensong immediately following, the attendance was also good.

At Holy Cross the same thing was noticeable. The church was filled with worshippers at every service and the choir under the direction of Will O'Brien, organist and choirmaster, rendered brilliantly. The church altars were beautifully decorated with seasonable flowers and the women's toilets added more color to the ensemble.

At the Church of the Heavenly Rest the special services also drew splendid congregations and the general feeling of happiness which characterized the various offices of the church was reflected in the faces of the communicants. One of the sweetest services of the day was that of the children in the afternoon, when the rector, Rev. Cortlandt H. Mallery, addressed the children. What has been said of the three churches above may be repeated of St. Stephen's with the exception that Rev. Morgan Ashley, the rector, sang the solos in the anthems and his splendid tenor voice did justice to the music which was under the direction of Charles M. Suhr.

At Trinity Reformed the altar and pulpit were masses of lilies, palms and ferns forming one of the most beautiful pieces of decoration seen in the city. The singing by the quartet choir was up to the standard and the work of Arthur L. Titsworth, organist and choirmaster, was highly commendable. The pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, preached a strong sermon from 1 Corinthians 15:55: "O, Death, Where is Thy Sting? O, Grave Where Is Thy Victory?"

At the Congregational church the morning services and the session of the Sunday school were both largely attended. The music was led by a quartet under the direction of Charles L. Lewis and met with approval. At the Sunday school exercises a great many of the congregation remained to hear the children sing and recite. There was no evening service in this church.

At Marcy-nier chapel, after the regular morning services conducted by the pastor, who preached upon an Easter topic, there was an old fashioned egg hunt, which was participated in by the children of the Sunday school.

Park Avenue Baptist church.

The Easter program given by the Park Avenue Baptist Bible school Sunday afternoon was especially pleasing and included exercises by the main school and primary department as follows:

Runyon; carol, school; cornet solo, "Calvary," Whitney Frasee; carol, school; recitation, "Making the Weather," Irene Moy; song, elementary department; recitation, "When the Pussy Willow Gray," Emily Van Winkle, Elsie Dayton and Gladys Hadley; song, elementary department.

Miss Ruth Angel, of New York, held the close attention of the audience as she told the Easter story in her pleasing way, in connection with which she touched many of the customs of the Jews in the time of Christ and at the present day. A feature of the program was the augmented orchestra led by Arthur S. Mosher including the following:

Violins, Arthur Mosher, Elmer Winckler, Charles Wheeler, Miss Arline Brown, Miss Marjorie Brown of G. W. V. Moy; flute, Elmer P. Wheeler; cornet, Whitney Frasee; bass viol, Dr. J. F. Berg.

Rev. Charles Hillman Fountain, of this city, preached two excellent sermons at the church services, morning and night.

First Baptist Church.

The Easter services at the First Baptist church were of unusual interest, while the floral display from the conservatory of C. W. McCutcheon was one of the most elaborate witnessed in years. The flowers were arranged in a solid bank about the pulpit platform.

At the morning service, the quartet and chorus choir was assisted by Miss Florence Wohlfert, violinist, and Howard M. Case was at the organ. The program:

Trinity Reformed.

One of the prettiest services of the day was that of the Sunday school of Trinity Reformed church, in which the junior, primary and beginners' departments took part. Some very tuneful music was sung and appropriate recitations given. The pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, spoke to the children on the parable concerning the King's house with its ten servants, a story which interested old and young alike.

James A. Smith read the annual report for 1909, which showed that the membership of the school, including teachers and officers, has passed the 1,000 mark, 1,023 being on the rolls January 1, 1910.

At the Sunrise service held at Trinity Reformed church at 6:45 Sunday morning there was an attendance of seventy-seven people, a most gratifying showing for so early in the morning. Herbert E. Parker, secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, was in charge of the meeting and spoke on the topic "The Lesson of Easter." The singing at this service was entirely congregational and was hearty. All enjoyed the early worship.

COURT ORDERS WOMEN TO KEEP FAR APART

All the parties which included several women of the neighborhood are said to have been present as needed to get at the facts. Miss Alexander claimed that Mrs. Milhelm insulted her, using vile language in the presence of her friends. Mrs. Meiheim denied the charge, but all the witnesses to the affair showed that she had been indiscreet. Judge William Runyon advised the two women to keep away from each other in future and dismissed the case.

TO MAKE CHANGE AT EAST BOUND STATION.

William Jeffery, president of the Board of Trade, has received from General Manager W. C. Besler, of the Central Railroad a letter in which Mr. Besler says: "While I personally feel that the expense of rearranging the plan of the lawn at the east bound station is not warranted and that the beauty of the lines of the landscape gardening will be marred, in deference to the request of the citizens whom you state you represent, we will make this change."

This is in reply to a letter from Mr. Jeffery to Mr. Besler in which Mr. Jeffery asked a change in the landscape gardening in order to improve the traffic service at the station.

AUTOS AFIRE, LOSS $75,000.

Twenty Cars Badly Damaged by a Big Blaze at Brokaw Bros. Garage—Many Machines Saved.

Vapor, which was caused by the escape of gasoline from a leaking carburetor, coming in contact with a hot exhaust pipe or lamp, resulted in a disastrous blaze at the Brokaw Brothers' automobile garage on East Fourth street early Sunday morning. Twenty automobiles, ranging from $1,500 to $10,000 in value, were badly damaged, while a dozen or more machines were put out of commission by smoke and water.

The total loss, including the damage to the building, will reach the $75,000 mark, it is reported. Fire insurance adjusters are now at work on the scene and it will be several days before the exact loss is ascertained. The damage to the garage is fixed at $5,000.

It was the most damaging fire encountered by the local fire department since the destruction of the Babcock building in 1901. The entire department was called out, and it was due to the effective work of the firemen at the risk of their lives that a far greater loss didn't ensue. Four machines were completely destroyed. The total value of the machines stored in the garage at the time of the fire is placed at $200,000. Auto owners who suffered by the fire are as follows:

J. L. Arrowsmith, touring car; T. B. Koons, Thomas car; John J. Kenay, Reo car; David T. Kenny, Thomas Limosine; William A. Codding, Chalmer's car, totally destroyed, loss $2,000; Fiat show car, loss about $2,000. The Chalmers car was not insured. Dr. B. VanD Hedges, Reo car; L. Hertz, Mitchell runabout; Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, Maxwell runabout; Dr. F. C. Ard, Stevens-Duryea; Oliver Reed, Renault car; W. A. Powlison, Maxwell delivery car; Hyman Adelberg, E. M. P. touring car; Dudley S. Taylor, Reo car; C. E. Dunn, Reo car; Robert A. Meeker, Buick car; C. E. Biddle, Reo car; C. C. Pierson, New York, Packard touring car; Brokaw Brothers, 1910 Reo car and two 1907 Reo cars, total wreck; Reo demonstrator and new locomobile, slightly damaged; A. B. C. Bodine, Flemington, Jackson car; Philadelphia owners, Buick car and Pierce Arrow touring car. The latter car is uninsured.

Among the cars damaged by fire and smoke are machines owned by George H. Chapman, Dr. Conover, of Hasbrouk Heights, and a truck belonging to the Vacuum Cleaning Company, of Jersey City, Werner Heidelolf, Clarence Varian, Walter Simpson, F. A. Duttenhofer, Albert Gildea, C. E. Lapsomb, Louis Morris, F. Wood, Roy Wolley, Joseph T. Vail, Armstrong Mulford and Frank Crawford.

The blaze started at about 1:45, or about ten minutes after J. L. Arrowsmith, of West Seventh street, left his car in the garage on his return from New York. Charles Vermeule, the night man, was the only person in the building when the fire started. According to his story he heard a sizzling noise, looked around and beheld a flame shooting out from the Arrowsmith car in the rear of the shop.

In an instant Vermeule declared he was surrounded by a huge flame. He sized up the situation quickly, however, hurried to the telephone and notified fire headquarters. In making his way through the flame Vermeule was burned slightly about the face. From descriptions of the origin of the fire auto experts believe it to be due to the vapor caused by the leakage of gasoline from the carburetor on the Arrowsmith car.

When Assistant Chief Andrew Jennings received Vermeule's word he immediately notified Chief Doane, who in turn, issued an order to call out all the companies. Captain James Dolan of headquarters was the first official of the department to arrive on the scene.

Orders were given to Vermeule to pull Box No. 21 and when Chief Doane reached the burning garage two more alarms were sent in and within half an hour the full force of the regular and call men were at work where they remained until about 5:30 o'clock.

When the first detachment of the fire reached the garage one solid flame was swooping over the area in the lower floor, while the second story was filled with dense black smoke. Flames were shooting out of the first story windows and the rear while clouds of smoke were pouring out of the windows of the second story on the north and west sides of the building.

The first two lines of hose put in commission were directed to the west side of the lower floor where the fire started while three lines of hose shot streams in the rear portion of the garage, for the purpose of protecting the station, should the flames spread in that direction. In all about 5,000 feet of hose was in commission.

The firemen were considerably handicapped by alleged low pressure from the city hydrants. The hydrant near the corner of Watchung avenue and East Fourth street, executed fine service with a strong stream. While the firemen were playing the water on the lower floor, Captain William Addis and the members of the truck company were engaged in operations on the second floor.

The firemen fought the flames in constant danger of possible explosions of gasolene tanks on the various machines, but fortunately no accidents or injuries were recorded. Chief Doane, in making an investigation of the origin, made the discovery that all of the tanks on machines in the building were filled with the fluid. It was fully one and a half hours before the flames were gotten under control by the firemen.

It was one of the hardest fires in the history of the city to cope with, according to Chief Doane. The firemen were handicapped by the heat from the flames, which was so intense as to spring two huge steel girders, which weigh 5,000 pounds each.

Among those who were first to arrive at the fire and render assistance to the firemen were Elton Giles and Elwood Waller. This pair of volunteers saved several machines from being damaged by pushing them out of the burning building.

Valuable assistance was also rendered by the police department and when the blaze was over there were seven watersoaked and smoke begrimed officers—Chief Kiely, Sergeant Herbert Overbaugh, Patrolmen Morris Higgins, Patrick Sweeney, Max Vanderweg, Dennis O'Connor and Flaherty.

The biggest loser among the auto owners is Judge William A. Coddington. While he carried an insurance policy on his Flat car his Chalmer machine, which was rated at $2,000, is uncovered. This car is a complete wreck and damaged beyond repair. From all accounts all the other cars except one of the Philadelphia machines are protected against loss by policies.

It was generally reported yesterday that there was no insurance on David T. Kenny's new $5,000 Thomas car, but this proved untrue. The damage to Mr. Kenny's machine is $400.

Brokaw Brothers announced this morning that they are equipped to take care of all repairing and other business for customers. The debris is being cleaned away and a gang of workmen is at work putting the gar*age* in first class shape.

FINED TEN DOLLARS EACH FOR FIGHTING YESTERDAY

A free for all fight in which a quintet of Polaks were the central figures took place Sunday afternoon near the home of John Polhanka on South Second street and resulted, as usual, with the peacemaker getting a broken head and the breaking of a small cross intended for the grave of Polhanka's sister.

Polhanka was putting the finishing touches on the little monument when Joseph Kavis and John Slonka interfered with him and after telling Polhanka that the cross would be no good unless it was properly baptized with holy water proceeded to smash it. This precipitated a fight in which Polhanka endeavored to save the remains of the cross, while Kavis and Slonka pummeled him and one Peter Ross who tried to prevent bloodshed.

John Shats took the police into his confidence and sent for the patrol wagon, but in the meantime Kavis and Slonka got away, but as they were known to the police they were easily apprehended while asleep in their homes Monday morning at 7 o'clock. Both these men have been in trouble for fighting on other occasions. Judge Runyon fined each of them ten dollars which their wives paid. Strangely enough there appeared to be no drunkenness preceding the scrap.

FORT'S ACTION ON BILLS

When Governor Cleared His Desk He Had Disposed of 206 Measures.

FIFTY VETOES ALTOGETHER.

Child Labor Act and Contributory Negligence Bill Are Approved by Him—Some Other New Statutes.

At exactly 9:30 o'clock last night Governor Fort walked out of his office at the State House at Trenton with his desk cleaned of all the 206 bills now ready for disposal by the Legislature when it adjourned last Thursday morning. His final official act was to file without his approval thirteen bills originating in the Senate and twenty-six originating in the Assembly, these thirty-nine measures thereby failing to become laws. As he had previously advised the Legislature when in session of about a dozen vetoes. This brings the total of bills that were disapproved of by the Governor up a half hundred. The Governor yesterday made clear the reasons for seventeen of his vetoes since the Legislature adjourned, and on Thursday will give out for publication the reasons for disapproving of the other tabooed bills.

One bill in which there is great interest and the fate of which is in his hands the Governor did not last night make public, is the Ramsey bill aiming to regulate the practice of osteopathy. "I have disposed of this bill," said the Governor as he left the State House last night, "but I shall not announce my action until tomorrow."

The last bill disposed of by the Governor was the annual appropriation bill. The only cuts he made in the appropriations were eliminations of five items, totalling $25,390, from the money which the Legislature authorized for the State Fish and Game Commission. The Governor believes that the commission is now receiving about $60,000 annually from the gunners' license law. It does not need all the appropriations fixed by the Legislature.

The Governor also vetoed Senate bill 243 which authorized the Game and Fish Commission to increase the number of wardens from twenty-five to twenty-eight, and also increasing their pay from $500 to $800 annually. His chief objection to this bill was that it proposed to take out of civil service the game wardens. The Governor said that he would not stand for any attack on the civil service system.

One of the last measures approved was the Edge bill authorizing the continuance of the work of revaluing railroad property in the name of the State Board of Assessors, for which $100,000 is appropriated. The actual work is to be performed under the direction of one of the special commissioners appointed by Governor Fort, who is to be chosen by the State Board with the approval of the Governor.

Two bills about which there was some apprehension as to their propedelivery to the Governor—the Olwell child labor measure and the Moore bill allowing juries to determine the question of whether there is contributory negligence on the part of plaintiffs in demands for damages from accidents at unprotected railroad crossings—reached the executive chamber at 2 p. m. and Mr. Fort promptly signed both of them.

Another bill of general State interest signed by the Governor late in the afternoon was the one introduced by Assemblyman Thompson, of Union, which requires slaughter houses and abbatoirs to secure a license from the State Board of Health.

By signing House bill No. 507, by H. H. White, of Camden, the Governor gives the State Water Supply Commission jurisdiction over all well, sub-surface or percolating water supplies furnished to municipalities. Senator Prince's bill enabling a municipality by its governing body to acquire lands for park purposes, was approved. The McCrea bill authorizing municipalities to join together in acquiring property and establishing systems of water supply, designed to help Paterson, Passaic and several neighboring places, also was approved.

Besides the vetoes mentioned, the Governor also disapproved of these bills: Senate 123, by Mr. Prince, increasing the salaries of judges of the courts of common pleas in fourth class counties; House 415, by Mr. Mellor, to permit shade tree commissions to pass ordinances; House 490, by Mr. Radcliffe, prohibits increase or decrease of salaries of municipal officials during term of office; House 420, by Mr. Coldingay, authorizes use of Military Park in Newark for a sub-surface station for the Pennsylvania Railroad.

APPLAUD MARY DESMOND

Prima Donna Contralto of Manhattan Company is Heard Here.

OTHER ARTISTS ON PROGRAM.

Dr. Carl Duft, Hans Kronold and Edward Strong Take Part in the Ballad Concert Benefit.

The ballad concert given at the Plainfield High School last night for the benefit of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield was a great success from a musical point of view and the audience, a thoroughly appreciative one, enjoyed every number of the fine program which was arranged by Joseph McIntyre, of this city.

The artists included Miss Mary Desmond, prima donna contralto of the Manhattan Opera Company, who made her first appearance here; Dr. Carl E. Duft, basso cantante, who is always a favorite; Hans Kronold, 'cellist, whose artistic work has won for him many friends here, and Joseph McIntyre, pianist, who long ago endeared himself to the hearts of the music-loving public.

Edward Strong, tenor, of New York, who was to have taken part, sent word at the last moment that he had been drawn on a jury in New York, and it would be impossible for him to appear here. Mr. McIntyre very kindly consented to fill in his two numbers with piano selections, and while Mr. Strong's absence was regretted, the audience seemed more than pleased over the change judging by the hearty applause which greeted the announcement of the substitution of Mr. McIntyre.

The appearance here for the first time of Miss Desmond was of more than usual interest. Her gracious manner and desire to please made for a lasting friendship and her singing will not be forgotten for years to come. Many expressed the hope that another opportunity to hear Miss Desmond would be offered in the near future.

Miss Desmond has a perfectly endowed contralto voice of exquisite quality and training; most pleasing in timbre, sensitive and appealing. She has the musical temperament of the great artist coupled with a judgment in its control most rare and satisfying.

The great singer was generous in responding to encores. Her two first numbers were "Beloved, It Is Morn," Aylward, and "Love the Pedlar," German. These were followed later by a group of three songs, "All Souls' Day," Strauss; "Summer Noon," Lang, and "Slumber Song," from 'Jocelyn," Godard, the last named being with obligato for 'cello. The audience was loth to let her go and to these numbers she gave an encore. Her concluding number was "Summer Night," Thomas, with oblizato for 'cello, which called forth long and hearty applause

Dr. Carl E. Duft fully sustained his reputation as a great singer. Always a favorite with Plainfield audiences, he was greeted with much applause. He opened the program with "Robin Goodfellow," Puck's Song, Morgan, and "After," Elgar. His other numbers were "The Land o' the Lord," Forster, "Border Ballad," Cowen, while for an encore he sang that old favorite Scotch song, "Turn Ye to Me."

Hans Kronold fully measured up to the reputation he made in his appearance here with Campanari early in the winter. He is a master of the 'cello and his work last night left nothing to be desired. He fairly captivated his audience with his exquisite rendition and in the obligato for 'cello, he shared with Miss Desmond and Mr. McIntyre in the honors. He played "Largehetto," Mosart; "Rondo," Baccherini; "Albumblatt," Wagner; "Vito," Popper, and for an encore he favored with Tannhausser's "Evening Star."

In substituting for Mr. Strong, Mr. McIntyre first played "The Trout," Schubert; then "The Nightingale," by Alabieff, and for an encore he rendered "Mazurka Caprice," which he had arranged for and dedicated to Mr. McIntyre by Krouse. His rendition was exquisite and round after round of applause was given.

Too much praise cannot be given Mr. McIntyre for his efforts in bringing Miss Desmond to Plainfield, and for the arrangement of the superb program which was perfect.

BIRD GETS FOURTH TERM

President Taft Re appoints Plainfield's Efficient Postmaster.

HAS SERVED TWELVE YEARS.

Business of Office Has Doubled Since Present Competent Official Took Charge of the Local Business.

Announcement was made today that Elias H. Bird had been reappointed by President Taft as postmaster of Plainfield for another four-year term to begin on May 1. The appointment is considered a deserved one. Mr. Bird was first appointed postmaster by President McKinley in 1898 and was re-appointed twice by President Roosevelt. Upon the completion of his present term he will have served as postmaster sixteen years. During that time the business of the local postoffice has increased rapidly.

When Mr. Bird assumed the office the yearly receipts were $30,000. The staff comprised eleven letter-carriers and four clerks. Today the receipts are $70,000 and the staff, including three rural carriers, numbers twenty-five and in addition there are ten clerks. Not alone in the clerical force has there been advancement, but there have been great improvements in the office. Much additional room was secured, giving greater floor space, and the latest equipment has been added to the office making it possible to hand outgoing and incoming mail in the quickest possible manner. Whenever Mr. Bird has desired additional help in the carrier force or extra clerks, the government has always been quick to grant his request. The postoffice in every respect compares favorably with those of the same class in any part of the country and with the prospects of a new Federal building Plainfield will undoubtedly have one of the best equipped post offices in the country.

ORCHESTRAL DIRECTOR FOR TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

The final concert of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra which has been carded for Tuesday night, April 19, will mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of Mr. Korff as an orchestral director. Mr. Korff has rendered service in this capacity at the local association for the past eight years. A marked feature of the anniversary concert will be the presentation of Haydn's Symphony Militaire. It will also be the final concert of the season.

A large audience was present at the concert given last night and criticism expressed it as the best of the season.

A large audience was present at the concert given last night and said is was the best of the season. The soloists were Mrs. L. R. Howard, soprano, who was accompanied by Miss Edith Knox Hoyt, and Vincent B. Minor, who was accompanied on the piano by S. Frederick Smith.

PARENT-TEACHER ASS'N. WANTS A CHILDREN'S COURT.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Irving School met yesterday afternoon, there being nearly one hundred members present. The most important item of business was the adoption of a resolution in which the association heartily endorsed the plan to establish a special session of the court where only children's cases will be allowed and it was urged that newspapers omit in their reports the names of juvenile offenders.

The association decided to meet in the future on the second Tuesday in each month instead of the last. The annual meeting will be held Tuesday, April 26, for the election of officers and presentation of reports.

Mrs. F. T. Ostrom was elected as the representative of the Mothers' meeting to the Parent-Teacher Association, in place of Mrs. J. W. Tyrell, who has removed from the city. After the business refreshments were served.

Vetoes Osteopathy.

Governor Fort left the State House this afternoon to go to Rahway to attend a meeting of the Board of Managers of the Rahway Reformatory without announcing officially what action he had taken in reference to the Ramsey bill passed by the Legislature to regulate the practice of osteopathy. Unofficially, however, it is known that the Governor has vetoed the bill. As the bill had not been approved before midnight last night, when the time limit expired for the Governor to act on bills left in his hands by the Legislature, it is a foregone conclusion that it has failed to become a law.

ONE DAY'S RECORD IN THE POLICE COURT

Vicente Calamino, an Italian fifty years old, caught stealing bags from a house in the Netherwood section yesterday afternoon, was discharged with a reprimand while this morning by City Judge Runyon in the police court, after the complainant, B. F. Tallamy told the judge that he did not want to prosecute the charge. Calamino told the judge through an interpreter that he saw the bags lying upon the ground and as he was in need of bed he thought the gunny sacks would make an ideal couch. He hid the bags in a nearby wood and intended to take them home after his day's work was done. He was arrested by Detective Sergeant Flynn.

Mrs Margaret Bimford, seventy years old, of College place, was remanded until tomorrow by Judge Runyon this morning to allow her family to make some arrangements for her care in an institution. She was drunk yesterday and created a disturbance among her neighbors.

NEW YORK "SPORTS" TRY TO SHOOT UP VILLAGES

Residents of Stony Hill, Watchung and other communities in the Watchung mountain district, have been terrorized for the last few days by a gang of New Yorkers, who have been having a good time" and incidently displaying their exuberance by the indiscriminate shooting of revolvers. Somerset county game wardens and law officers are on the trail of the men and arrests are expected.

According to residents at the above mentioned places, hundreds of robins have been slain, women and children frightened by pistol shots, dogs and cats shot at. From all accounts the visitors from Gotham, if corraled by the law officers will have an opportunity to recreate behind steel bars and incidentally pay some fines for the indiscriminate slaying of birds and dogs.

HOSPITAL IMPROVEMENTS

Refrigerating and an Electric Light and Power Plant for Institution.

ORDERED BY THE GOVERNORS.

Reports Are Received at Monthly Meeting of Muhlenberg's Trustees—Two Governors Resign.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital at its meeting Monday night, authorized the expenditure of a sum not exceeding $2,000 for the immediate installation of a refrigerating plant, and the expenditure of a sum not exceeding $4,000 for the immediate installation of a complete electric light and power plant at the hospital. It is believed that these improvements will mean a great saving in operating expenses over and above depreciation, interest charges and a substantial sinking fund to pay off the cost of these improvements.

The receipt of a bequest of $5,000 from the Arthur W. Talmadge estate, as reported yesterday, is for the purpose of endowing a bed in perpetuity. The treasurer also reported the receipt of $560.58 from the Patrolmen's Association and $234 raised by the children of the Hartridge School at a fair on March 19. The latter sum was donated to the hospital for the purpose of starting a fund for the erection of a children's ward. The donation from the Patrolmen's Association was given without restrictions and can be used for general purposes. A vote of thanks by resolution was extended for these gifts.

The governors learned with regret as told in this paper yesterday, that Samuel Huntington will retire on June 1. He has served as a member of the board continuously for twenty-nine years and has been a valuable official. Efforts were made to persuade Mr. Huntington to remain on the board but without success. The removal of George A. Beaton from Plainfield compelled him to resign, as told in yesterday's paper.

The medical report for the past month follows:

Patients remaining on March 1, 35; admitted during the month, 70; discharged cured, 61; discharged improved, 8. There were two deaths, leaving 34 patients remaining April 1. The total number of patients treated was 105, with 67 operations. Eight contagious cases were reported for the month, four patients being discharged and four remaining on the first of the month. The total number of dispensary patients was 88 and there were 117 daily visits to the dispensary. The total number of hospital days for the month was 1,284.

BANQUET OF MEN'S CLUB

Crescent Avenue Church Men Elect New Officers and Enjoy Dinner.

JUDGE F. E. CRANE SPEAKS.

Eminent Brooklyn Jurist Decries Hero Worship—S. S. Swackhamer and Others Heard.

The first dinner of the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church was held last night in Trust Hall, and so great was its success that in all probability an affair of a similar kind will become an annual fixture with the club. The occasion also marked the annual meeting and election of officers which resulted as follows: President, Henry J. Cockran; vice-president, Henry F. DeForest; secretary-treasurer, George H. Davey. The executive committee will be made up of the these officers and Lindsley Best, O. E. Hovey, DeWitt Hubbell and C. L. Wilson. It required but one ballot deposited by the secretary to make the nominations by the nominating committee effective. President Cochran immediately took the chair and a vote of thanks was extended to Lindsley Best, the retiring president. This formal meeting preceded the banquet and was held in the hall room.

Just prior to the adjournment of the business meeting D. M. Van Vliet made a short speech in which he urged the members of the club to vote at the special election on the water question to be held on April 19 giving some very cogent reason why every voter should do his duty on that day. His speech was received with applause.

Some forty members and guests adjourned to the prettily decorated tables in the private dining room of the hotel where a splendid menu was appreciatively discussed, after which the floods of oratory were opened and from 10 until nearly 12 o'clock the diners were highly entertained by some good speakers. The speeches of Supreme Court Justice Frederick E. Crane, of Brooklyn, and Samuel S. Swackhamer were masterpieces of eloquence and the results of deep thought.

Dr. Ellis W. Hedges made an ideal toastmaster and his preliminary remarks to each speech provoked great laughter and induced the orators to preface their addresses with some humorous stories well calculated to incite the blues of the blue to mirth. Dr. Hedges was presented by former President Best and immediately got to the business of making everybody welcome and at ease. Judge Crane in speaking of the great number of Brooklynites he had met in Plainfield said that he believed if his judicial duties did not interfere he would be inclined to remain here and become a citizen. His speech had to do with the "General Law of Average." He believed that the great guide and power of the nations lies in their people and that hero worship is a mistake. None of the great men of history have shown that they represented the feelings of the people of their times. They tell us nothing of the measure of the people of their day. Neither do the great men of later days tell us anything of the common people of their times. Judge Crane said that it was not so very long ago that ministers of the Gospel had their private bottles on their shelves, but a good man then would be a bad man now.

Hero worship, said the speaker, has always existed, but no great deed has ever been created by any man. The opportunity has always been thrust upon him and he seized the psychological moment and the deed went down into history and the man became a hero. The people create the opportunity and the opportunity finds the man. Lincoln did not create the condition which confronted him and which he successfully faced and for which he sacrificed his life, but he rose to the situation and while nothing is to be detracted from the glory of this fact remains that he was not responsible for his own opportunity.

The law never made a man good, the speaker said, nor will any statute ever accomplish that. Only when you can get a man to change his thoughts will you get him to change at all. Because a law is made and written on the books it does not signify that the law is going to be obeyed. None of those present could possibly evade jail if they obeyed all the laws implicitly.

Reference was made to Morley's life of Oliver Cromwell by Judge Crane and upheld by him as one of the greatest of books of history and in commenting upon the character of the great reformer said it was the influence of his life which occasioned thinking men to say and believe that it is by the great momentum of the

FIRE DESTROYS HENNERY

Otto Arens Loses Buildings, 5,000 Chicks and 6,500 Eggs But is Insured.

LOSS IS PLACED AT $9,000.

Although Handicapped in Their Work Firemen Did Splendid Service and Saved $5,000 Worth of Machinery.

Fire, of an unknown origin, almost completely destroyed the big poultry farm plant of Otto Arens, on Rahway road, early this morning. Two large henneries, an ice house, numerous small coops, a portion of the incubator house, about 6,500 eggs and about 5,000 chicks were wiped out by the flames. The loss, it is expected, will foot up to about $9,000. In the incubator house, which was partially destroyed 1,000 chicks had made their advent into the world yesterday.

While a portion of the incubator structure was destroyed, the firemen managed to save the chicken hatching machinery in the building which was rated as worth $5,000. Flames were discovered in one of the hen houses by Mr. Arens about 2 o'clock. He telephoned Fire Chief Dosne, at the latter's home, and the chief notified headquarters. An alarm was afterward turned in from Box 29.

Mr. Aren's place is situated on a hill and the firemen experienced considerable difficulty in reaching the scene of the fire. On their arrival two of the largest buildings and the ice house were wrapped in flames, while a number of the smaller buildings were threatened.

In trying to locate the steamer near the pond to get water the apparatus became stuck in the mire and the firemen were obliged to pull it out by hand. When a stream was finally secured from the pond the efforts of the firemen were directed towards saving the incubator house and other buildings, on which the flames were encroaching and in this the fire fighters were successful. The firemen battled with the blaze for hours and it was not until 5 o'clock that the flames were extinguished and the return to headquarters made.

Before departing to New York this morning Mr. Arens told a Daily Press reporter that 3,000 chicks were burned to death in Brooder House No. 8 while 2,000 perished in Brooder House No. 9. Both of these houses were totally destroyed. A total of 6,500 eggs were also destroyed. Mr. Arens estimates that his loss will be between $8,000 and $9,000 which is covered by insurance in the Herbert Buxton agency. Mr. Arens also paid a fine compliment to the fire department for its efficient work in checking the spread of the flames to other buildings

RECIPE FOR A POPULAR NOVEL

Make the hero tall and slim,
Make him brave and make him strong;
Put a "godlike head" on hom,
Make him suffer some great wrong;
Make the heroine so fair
That no matter where she passes
Everyone will turn to stare—
Make her parents stubborn asses.

Place her in some foreign land,
There a princess she must be;
Have them both misunderstand
Through ten chapters, he and she;
Let her scorn him at the start,
Add a lot of complications;
Gradually cause her heart
To take on wild palpitations.

Make him do things which no man

CROSSED BANDS.

There is at present in Paris a vogue for spiral effects and crossed bands, and respectially does this idea seem exemplified in afternoon and evening gowns.

Broad bands of gulphur are used like ribbon or in the nature of a sash, while embroidery of breathtaking magnificence (and consequent expense) is used on nearly all costumes that make any pretense to dressiness.

There is no denying the fact that the sashes used by some misguided dressmakers to the ultimate of the skirts above the ankles, curtailing any graceful, easy movement and producing a precariously small base for the standing figure, have had their days. But sashes and wide, ornamental bands can be made to give graceful lines in the figure and in no way impede a natural locomotion. Then it is good news that the great minds of the Parisian world of fashion have been sufficiently impressed with the idea to incorporate it in the scheme of many of their latest creations.

NOT ALL MAGNATES ARE MONEY CRAZED

Major league magnates are not so grasping nor so money mad as many fans and players would have you think. Some show the human interest of their character in one way and some in another. All, however, have a deep interest in the welfare of their players, and especially in those who have been in their service for years.

In the past few days two American league owners have shown their deep appreciation of past services on the diamond by releasing unconditionally men who have helped to make baseball what it is today.

Charles Comiskey, of the White Sox, has released George Davis and Frank Isbell, both of whom will remain in history as exceptionally brilliant players. Frank Farrell, of New York, has released "Wee Willie" Keeler, noted for a decade and more as a scientific hitter and a consistent one. This unconditional release may seem to some as a knockout blow, however. Nothing is further from the truth. The magnates could have sold or traded any one of the trio to a good minor league as a manager.

It was an unselfish interest that made Comiskey and Farrell let go Isbell, Davis and Keeler without a string tied to them, as the saying goes. It is an actual reward and appreciation. As the matter stands now, they are able to go where they please on the most advantageous terms.

Anything but an unconditional release would not have let Isbell play first base on the Wichita team, of the Western league of which he is sole owner. Anything else would not have let Davis ponder over several excellent offers to become part owner of some minor league clubs. It is a fact that one of the teams of the Northwest league wanted him badly. Comiskey could have reaped a neat sum on him. But he waved the money away.

Farrell kept Willie Keeler a year or so after the former star was valuable to him. He let him decorate the bench and draw down as big a salary as he ever did just to show that he held a warm spot for the man who had worked faithfully for him. Such things as these are bound to stimulate the work of the players and keep them on good terms with their bosses.

Good advice for a manager is contained in the "never let a pitcher do anything but pitch on your team." This was handed out in Chicago during the recent American league meeting and was authorized by Fred Lake, of the Boston Doves. Many a splendid twirler has lost his cunning in the box by doing odd jobs in the infield or the outfield. Throws from these positions tend to make his lose his idea of distance and accuracy and hurt him as a fielding pitcher.

"Doc" White, always a winning southpaw of the White Sox, was used in centre field by Comiskey last season in a number of games, and he could not do anywhere near as good work on the mound as formerly. It is a question whether he will ever be the some mighty twirler as of old. He may make a fine fielder, for he is fast, throws fairly well to the plate and certainly is a grand fielder. But his value as a pitcher has been decreased. It is harder to get a willing southpaw pitcher than a centre fielder.

Another pitcher who went back after he started to get an idea that he could play first base, was Nick Altrock, formerly of Washington and Minneapolis, and now signed up with Cleveland as a utility man of the Chicago City League. Once he practiced on the initial sack, he started right in deteriorating as a twirler, and he was relegated to the minors. Even there he was not a shining success as a pitcher and now he is with the baseball public, a fast drop for a once fine twirler.

An example who will be watched with great interest this season is Fred Liese, of the St. Pauls, who now belongs to the Boston Nationals. Liese was once a star twirler of the Cleveland American, and many big league clubs went after him. Eventually he was secured by the Cubs, who kept him for a while and then let him go to the Saints. For a few games he worked in the box he was regarded as a wonder. Then he slowed up a trifle, and he made an outfielder, he was used in the garden. He was a pretty good man there, but seemed to have lost his knack as a twirler. It is a great question whether he will be able to switch back again, or whether his ability as a pitcher is a thing of the past.

Some pitchers have left the position and have become even greater in other positions. Such a man as C. Seymour. He developed into such a fancy hitter and fielder that he startled the baseball world with Cincinnati and it cost the New York Giants a big sum to secure him. Seymour, however, is now getting past his age of usefulness as a big leaguer. Age and big league ball seldom mix.

Joe Tinker once was a pitcher. Few fans today know that Joe once was sold for about $25. Just think of the leagues that would scramble over themselves to get Tinker for that sum today, or hundreds of times as great an amount. Ty Cobb, of the Tigers, prides himself on his ability to pitch, and he doubtless would make a fine one. For Ty is a natural player and could fit in anywhere. The same is true of Lajoie, of the Naps. It would not surprise the world if Lajoie today could win a good percentage of games in the box.

Although a pitcher may lose his knack in the box by changing positions, there is another side to the question. A pitcher's life in a league is not as long as a player in another position. When he sees that he is beginning to slow up a trifle, is it not a wise move for him to see if he can't perpetuate his years of big salaries by becoming a valuable player in another position? This side is a fair one, and upon it rests the future of the pitcher.

Every pitcher can't develop into a great umpire like Hank O'Day. So the question has its two angles—one from the manager's side and the other from the player's.

MISSION BAND HOLDS ITS ANNUAL ELECTION

Reports for the year and the election of officers, together with the apportionment of the money in the treasury for missionary purposes comprised the chief business at the annual meeting of the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church Friday afternoon. There was a good attendance and much interest was shown in the business.

These officers were elected: President, Mrs. Leonard Smith; vice-president, Mrs. Charles M. Dolliver; treasurer, Mrs. A. B. Cole; secretary, Miss Winifred Rapalje.

The yearly report presented by Miss Gertrude Schlicht shows that nine meetings were held. After definite interest in Arabia was assured, the band studied the religion and conditions of women in that neglected country for three consecutive meetings. The interest in Kentucky increased through Mr. VanZanten's talk of his summer's work among the mountaineers and by study of this field.

A practical application of the band's sympathy and help was shown in a sewing meeting when the domestic committee planned the little gingham dresses to be sent to McKee, Ky. The Mescalero and Winnebago Indians were the subject of two meetings and enthusiasm in home mission work was the result of a report from the stirring missionary meeting of the Young Women's Branch of Domestic Missions at Dr. Vance's church in Newark.

Many of the members and the sick of the congregation as well as the shut-ins have been cheered and helped by the kindly visits and beautiful blossoms that have been carried to them by the flower and visiting committee. They have also worked with the C. E. Society in furnishing flowers to the church.

The birthday committee has done excellent work and added considerable money to the treasury. Under the direction of the foreign and domestic committee thirty little garments were made for Miss Sara Curry's work at Netherwood; fifteen children's dresses for the mountaineers; a barrel of clothing valued at $17 was sent to McKee; a box of Christmas gifts and candy valued at $13 was sent to Spring Valley Sunday school; two dresses and accessories, valued at $10 were sent to the daughters of a western missionary; by the gift of a friend the band sent $5 to Gray Hawk, Ky., for medical supplies.

Three-fourths of the extra pledge of $20 for Dr. P. W. Harrison was met by the penny-a-week system. The Forward Movement means that the entertainment committee has worked earnestly as figures will show. The Dutch Market added $91 to the treasury in 1909 and the one recently held netted $98, and the old-fashioned singing school in November realized $102. Of this amount $190 was divided equally between the foreign and home missions, making an increase of $40 over last year's appropriation.

Following the business meeting there was a social time and refreshments were served.

Scallop Scramble.

Simmer two cupfuls of scallops in salted water for ten minutes. Then drain on a colander, dashing cold water over them. Break each scallop in half. Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a hot frying pan and then stor in the scallops. Toss with a fork until they begin to brown. Add half a dozen eggs, not beaten, and stir until they thicken. Turn the mixture on buttered triangles of toast, sprinkling minced parsley on top.

Ture Sympathy.

"You are charged with stealing three pairs of trousers," said the judge. "What have you to say for yourself?"

"I'm guilty your honor," replied the prisoner, "but I stole them for my wife."

"You are discharged," said the judge, in a tone redolent with sympathy. His honor was in the henpecked class himself.

IN AID OF ST. STEPHEN'S

Splendid Concert in Hartridge School Auditorium Last Night.

A REPRESENTATIVE AUDIENCE.

Famous Composers' Works Admirably Interpreted by Competent Artists.

The attendance at the concert in the Hartridge School auditorium Thursday was limited by the seating capacity of the hall and it was the concensus of opinion that the affair, which was in aid of St. Stephen's church, was a most delightful and charming one. All the artists were in excellent voice and their contributions were received with unlimited applause.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McIntyre's magnificent piano interpretations of works by Chaminade and Rubenstein earned for them unstinted praise. The work of Mr. McIntyre and Mr. Loder, who accompanied the singers, was beyond criticism.

To do justice to the program at length would require a page of this paper, but in passing it must be said that for variety and excellence no better selection could have been made.

The quartet by Liza Lehman from "In a Persian Garden," evoked prolonged applause. Mrs. More, Miss Potter and Messrs. Young and Wheeler sang this charming music with a truly artistic touch, delightfully reminiscent of balmy days in a land of sunshine.

Mr. Young, who followed in songs by Jensen and Mary Turner Salter, was compelled to respond with an encore. Mr. Young's beautifully trained lyric voice is always charming and compelling. He has won by his sympathetic singing a warm place in the hearts of Plainfield's lovers of music.

Mr. Wheeler made a fine impression with his rendition of the Prologue from "I Pagliacci" and sang an encore number with distinction. Of Mrs. Loder's solos the best by far can be said. As she has charmed her audiences before so she did last night, only more so. In a group of airy sentimental songs by Daniels, d'Hardelot and Foote, Mrs. Gould won a deserved appreciation. Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre opened part II of the program with Rubenstein's Caprice Russe and were given an ovation at its conclusion. Their technique was well nigh perfect. One need not say more.

The two most contentious numbers on the program were the quartette from Rigoletto and the Sextette from Lucia di Lamermoor, the latter including Lewis J. Geary. Both selections were admirably rendered and evoked words of praise and high commendation from the entire audience.

Miss Mildred Potter, a contralto with magnificent range of voice and perfect control responded with generosity in an encore to "Angus Dei" which was rendered. Miss Sara More, soprano, was equally pleasing in a trio of songs as was Mr. Loder in baritone solos of a serious kind.

The concert was given under the patronnge of seventy-six women and netted a goodly sum for St. Stephen's. What the amount is will not be determined until all the returns are in from those to whom tickets were mailed.

The following were the artists engaged: Edith Chapman Goold, soprano; Sarah More, soprano; Mildred Potter, contralto; John Young, tenor; Raymond Loder, baritone; Frederick Wheeler, basso; Lewis J. Geary, basso; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McIntyre, piano.

HOPE'S ANNUAL MEETING

Reports Read and Committees Chosen at Chapel's Yearly Session.

REV. L. R. HOWARD PRESIDES.

Various Societies and Classes Give Account of Work—Minstrel Show and Excursion Planned.

The annual congregational meeting of Hope chapel was held Thursday with Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor, in the chair. Philip Braunsten was secretary of the meeting. A resolution was adopted permitting the selection of a ways and means committee of seven members. Willard H. Cook was elected treasurer and his assistants are Alexander Doig, Walter Firstbrook, William Baker and Harry Keen.

This is the ways and means committee: Charles Hughes, George Leighs, for three years; James Penny and Donald McInnes for two years; Harry Keen and William Baker for one year. A vote of thanks was given Walter Bradford, the retiring treasurer, and to Mrs. Willard H. Cook for her services at the piano.

The yearly reports show every department of the chapel to be in the best of condition. Additions have been made to the chapel, Sunday-school and various societies. Rev. L. R. Howard presented this report:

Members received on confession of faith, 14; by letter, 7; three restored from "separate list," this missed, 8; died, 3; put on "separate list," one, making a net gain of 12 members. The total membership is 424. There were twenty-two baptisms, fifteen being children and seven adults.

Treasurer Walter Bradford reported receipts for the year to be $1,298.85. Mrs. John Johnson, treasurer of flower fund of the G. Stuart Simons' Bible class, reported receipts of $28.10 and disbursements of $13.15, leaving a balance of $13.75. Mrs. Walter Bradford for the "Penny-a-Week Missionary Society," reported receipts of $77.76 and disbursements for a scholarship, $50, the balance being $27.76.

William Baker reported for the W. Stuart Simons Bible class Association, which has a membership of forty-five young men. They raised from all sources $412.91 and expended all but $5.41 for the benefit of the chapel. It was reported that a minstrel show will be held April 26, 27 and 29.

Mrs. L. R. Howard reported that the final payment due on the organ of $224.09 had been paid. The Ladies' Aid Society raised $754.05 and spent all but $15.79 on the chapel property. Mrs. Joseph Brown, treasurer of the missionary society, reported receipts of $83.51, disbursements of $81.95, leaving a balance of $1.56. G. Herbert Condict, leader of the Boys' Club, stated that 98 had been raised during the year. Miss Lona Baker, secretary, and Miss Elizabeth Becker, treasurer, reported for the Christian Endeavor Society. The members raised $26.65 and expended $20.81. C. G. August reported that the Junior Boys' Club has a membership of 35 and seventeen applications to be acted upon.

Frank Rimmer, secretary, and James Cullinan, treasurer, reported for the Men's Club. The receipts were $29.72 and the disbursements $26.65, leaving a balance of $3.06.

Thomas Hendry reported that the excursion committee has a balance of $249.01. G. Herbert Condict for the Sunday-school gave an interesting report. He stated that at present over 100 members of the chapel are working in the chapel as teachers, etc., seventeen being from Cresent Avenue church and four of the teachers staff from other denominations. The Home department, of which Mrs. Donald McInnes is superintendent, has an enrollment of 127 and raised $126 during the year. Frank Rimmer, treasurer, reported total receipts of $834.26, disbursements of $784.52, leaving a balance of $49.70 in the treasury.

The close of the meeting refreshments were served by Mrs. Donald McInnes, Mrs. F. A. Weber and Mrs. James Heron.

FOR A YOUNG GIRL.

There is undoubtedly an age for colors. The clear blues, red, pinks and yellows belong to youth, and youth alone should wear them.

The time will soon come when the pastel shades, the lavenders, the shaded purples and the shadowy greens must be our lot. Therefore, "gather ye rosebuds while ye may" and glory in all the fresh, beautiful colors of youth.

It is not one color that is too bright, too lond for a young girl, it is the combination of two or more colors. If this be considered when replenishing the wardrobe, and only those colors be chosen which will combine with those already got, fewer mistakes will be made and the number of "perfectly hideous" hats or frocks hung in forgotten clothes presses would soon diminish.

It is a mistake for a young girl to eliminate all the stronger colors from her belongings, for she, and she alone, can do them justice.

ALLEGED TRUANT'S MOTHER WINS SYMPATHY OF COURT

Several cases of truancy were brought before Judge Runyon Saturday by Miss Adelaide Ball, the truant officer, and all were disposed of summarily, excepting that of a colored woman, who is the mother of a family of six. This case so much enlisted the sympathy of Judge Runyon that he was compelled to announce his entire sympathy with the mother and the fourteen-year-old boy, who was accused of being delinquent in his attendance at school.

Mrs. Granby, the mother of the boy, told the court that her son had been attending school at Morristown, where he is living with an uncle and that she never had had any trouble with the boy. She declared that it was a pretty serious proposition for a woman to face who had as big a family as she acknowledges being the mother of, and it really hurt to have to spend time in court when she could be earning money at the wash-tub. (She told the judge that she had left the tub to come and defend her son).

Judge Runyon showed that he fully sympathized with the woman and told her that if her son was attending school in Morristown he might stay there and earn what he could to help his mother after or before school hours. Nevertheless, at the behest of the school officer the woman had been compelled to pay her son's and her own carfare from Morristown to Plainfield in order to get the boy here and now she must hustle to get the money to pay his fare back again.

It was a case in which the sympathies of all the court room attendants and spectators were with the woman and it was said by one man after the proceedings were over that had it not been for the feeling of being an interloper he would have *gladly paid for the boy's transporta*tion back to Morristown as well as the expense to which the mother had been put. The boy is fourteen years old.

MRS. VOSSELLER DIES AT A RIPE OLD AGE

Mrs. Margaret Vosseller, wife of the late Augustine Reger, aged eighty-seven years, died Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman, 806 Third place. Some time ago she suffered a fracture of the hip and for the past two years has been an invalid, during which time she has lived here with her daughter.

Mrs. Vosseller was a native of South Branch. Her husband, prior to his death about seven years ago, was engaged in business at Whitehouse and Long Branch. She was a member of the Second Reformed church, Somerville. Despite her infirmities, her mind was clear and active to the last and through her many excellent womanly qualities endeared herself to the hearts of a large circle of friends.

She is survived by two brothers, Elias Vosseller, a prosperous merchant of Flemington, and William Vosseller, of Raritan; also six children: J. V. Reger, editor of the Boston Journal; L. O. Reger, of Paterson; Mrs. H. D. Zinn, of Jamesburg; Mrs. William F. Metz, of New Market; Mrs. John Gaston, of Somerville, and Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman, of this city.

Sane Fourth.

The Women's Club of Camden has appealed to Mayor Ellis for a safe and sane Fourth of July in that city, and an ordinance has been introduced in the Camden Council to provide it. In Elizabeth the City Council has asked the city attorney to draw up an ordinance regulating the storage and sale of firecrackers, gunpowder and other combustibles and explosives. The City Council of Morristown has prepared an ordinance for that city prohibiting the storage and sale of powder and ammunition except by such dealers as are licensed by the fire chief and forbidding the use of blank cartridges, dynamite crackers, paper balloons, etc., on the Fourth. The Mayor of Philadelphia is beginning to be interested in the enforcement of the laws against the use of fireworks on the Fourth of July explosives and fire toys there, and Mayor Gaynor, of New York, has struck consternation into the hearts of fireworks and firecracker manufacturers and venders by giving notice that the ordinance on that subject is going to be strictly enforced. Hitherto it has been a dead letter, but hitherto Gaynor was not Mayor. On every side action is being taken to secure a bloodless, harmless Fourth of July, but Newark doesn't seem to be doing anything worth mentioning.—Newark News.

Rev. Dr. W. A. Knox Returned.

The members of the Methodist church at Dunellen are in a happy frame of mind over the action of the Newark M. E. church conference in returning their pastor, the Rev. Dr. W. A. Knox for another year.

YALE CLUB CELEBRATES

Annual Banquet of the Local Sons of Old Eli Held at Truell Hall.

E. A. STEVENSON TOASTMASTER.

Dean Frederic S. Jones Talks on "Yale University" and F. P. Garven, of New York, on "Any Old Thing."

Old college songs with a chorus which could not but raise the enthusiasm of those who heard them, resounded through the corridors of Truell Hall Friday after the banquet of the Plainfield Yale Club had reached the *stage of entertain*ment. More than seventy of the alumni of the famous college had enjoyed a substantial menu before the real festivities of the evening began and to say that the old timers enjoyed the feast would be putting it mild.

Boola, Boola wasn't one—two-six with some of the other songs beautifully sung by the quartet; nor was the yodle of Switzerland any better than some of the sentiments expressed by the erstwhile Yalenslans who had determined to enjoy the union, which always brings out the best, of either wine, or proclaiming, that there is in the members. What did obtain, however, was a feeling of brotherhood and plain faith n the old institution which has sent so many brainy and influential men out into the world to become successful. The speech of the evening, delivered by the toastmaster, the dean and it is the co-operation of the alumni and their help which is so much needed to put Yale on the basis of equality with Princeton and Harvard in certain ways.

Edward A. Stevenson was the toastmaster, and other speeches were delivered by William J. Murray and Francis P. Garvan, of New York. The music furnished by the quartet from the college was enjoyed by the company to the extent that all joined in the choruses.

Y.M.C.A. MAKES PLANS FOR CHILDREN'S PLAYGROUNDS

Desirous of doing everything in their power to further the establishment of public playgrounds in Plainfield, the directors of the Y. M. C. A. voted Thursday to equip the vacant lot in the rear of the Y. M. C. A. building as a children's playground and to open it as soon as possible under the direction of the physical department committee.

The action taken by the Y. M. C. A. has the approval of the city playground commission and will in no way interfere with the plans of the commission for playgrounds at the Stillman and Bryant schools. It means that another playground will be added to those already projected.

Because of the limited area of the lot, it will probably be necessary to equip it for the use of small children, six to twelve years of age. Competent supervision will be provided for them and such games and sports as have been found desirable for such children will be arranged.

The proposed play ground is easily accessible not only to the children of the city but to those residing in the borough as well. Steps are being taken to fit the grounds up immediately and it is hoped to have it ready by May 1.

DR. CALLAN INTERPRETS A SHAKESPEAR TRAGEDY

Dr. Callan interpreted the characters in "Hamlet" in a most realistic style before a select and interested audience at Mr. St. Mary's College Thursday. Women were present from this city, Westfield and Elizabeth.

With prefect ease Dr. Callan acted the subtle Claudius, now the fickle Laertes, and again the meddlesome Polonius or the noble Horatio. But as one should expect, it was in the part of Hamlet he did his finest interpretation.

With delicate skill he delineated the virtues of Hamlet, his tenderheartedness, his honor, his self-restraint and self-sacrifice, and above all the deep pathos of his situation. The sorrow and gloom cast over his life by the treachery of his uncle, the disloyalty of his mother, the treason of his classmates and the unfaithfulness of his best beloved were perfectly evident in the act of the actor.

His remarks on the soliloquies of Hamlet and his advice to the players bore weight and authority. Gifted with a striking personality, a strong and musical voice and grace in gesture, he made a deep impression on all who heard him. The rapt attention and favorable reception accorded him by the students give testimony of their appreciation of his work.

NIGHT OVER A GREAT CITY.

Across the miles I watch the city lights,
Burn with a myraid twinkling eyes,
Like fireflies in a midnight revel mad,
No sounds I hear, no endless cries.
No grinding harsh of ceaseless traffic—all
By distance stilled. The wind that sighs
Up from the dusk whispers of deeper themes.

I think of that great scene that lies
Beneath those lights—of Death, wide-reaching touch
Falls on the foolish and the wise;
Of venegeful Hate that greets the dark with joy;
Of where black Envy softly tries
To work another ill; of all the greed
The lust for gold, base enterprise
Of sin to blacken lives of things in brass
That men bend low to idolize;
Of broken hearts and lives, warm things for use,
Some Midas feast to solemnize.

I wait to hear a curse with blasting flame
Leap from the calm untroubled skies.
Where He still keeps His long eternal watch;
And then—the wild thought dies
I think of Love that shines in those dark streets
As long ago in angel guise
In Bethlehem—the deep, true human love,
Glad of its allto sacrifice,
Entwining heart to heart; and then as one
Who hears a [illegible] must rise
And drown the harsher voices of the night,
So in my sight Love sanctifies
The night-wrapped city, and all the lesser things
Its shining presence glorifies.

The Borrower

Now doth the thrifty citizen
Arise before the dawn
And heap the snow from off his walk
Upon his neighbor's lawn.
And when the job is nearly done
And polished is the track,
Why then he'll seek his neighbor's door
And hand the shovel back!

HEALTH BOARD'S WORK

Dairies, Bakeries, Barber and Butcher Shops and Stables are Inspected.

MANY PERMITS ARE GRANTED.

Plumbers' Bonds Filed—Milk and Cream Analyzed—City Water Found to Be Up to Its Usual Standard.

Reports, the granting of permits and a general discussion of the sanitary conditions of the city were features of the April meeting of the Board of Health Wednesday. The sanitary conditions were reported to be good, in fact the number of communicable diseases reported in March was less than during the previous month, as shown by the following figures.

Scarlet fever, 8 cases, no deaths; diphtheria, 4 cases, one death; typhoid fever, one case, no deaths; tuberculosis, one case, one death; measles, three cases, no deaths; chicken-pox, one case, no deaths.

There were fifty-three dairies and nine bottling places, also one creamery, inspected. A marked improvement in conditions was found. There was also an inspection of twenty-two stores from which milk is sold and these were found in first-class condition. Thirty-two samples of milk and two samples of cream were analyzed, with satisfactory results. In two cases dealers were notified to change their supply at once and they have complied.

A number of bakeries were inspected and in most cases conditions were satisfactory. One Italian bakery, found in a filthy condition, fifteen days ago, was re-inspected and it was found that the owner had complied with the law. A sample of city water was taken and sent to Trenton for analysis and was found to be of the usual good quality.

An inspection of the barber shops showed them to be in good condition, but in the case of some butcher shops an unsanitary condition was found and a general house cleaning was ordered. An inspection of the livery stables showed that there was plenty of chance for improvement, especially in the disposition of waste water and manure, and it is hoped that the unsanitary conditions will be abated.

There was a total of 962 inspections in connection with plumbing, milk supply and general work. During the month thirteen houses and fifty-two rooms were disinfected and there were six miscellaneous disinfections.

The proposed new milk ordinance was submitted to the board for its first and second readings. The following plumbers' bonds were received and ordered filed: B. C. Carpenter, W. R. Conover, Hugh Reilly, Herman F. Moosbrugger, Michael Armstrong and William L. Clark.

Joseph L. Burke was granted a renewal of his permit to carry on the work of scavenger; a permit was granted to Mrs. Margaret Jensen, of West Fourth street, to sell milk from the store; George E. Masenior was granted a permit to collect garbage and the application of George R. Carter, of Westfield, to collect garbage in Plainfield was refused. These returns were made to the office during March:

Marriages, 12; births, 48; still births, 2; deaths, 27. Over fifty per cent. of the deaths were among persons over sixty years of age.

Stuffed Tripe.

Cut the tripe in long strips and boil in salted water until tender. Make a stuffing as for roast turkey or chicken; spread it thin on the strips of tripe, roll each up and hold in place with a wooden toothpick. Arrange the rolls in a buttered pan and bake till done. This dish is delicious either hot or cold.

Miss Kathryn McGuirk and John J. Dorgan were married at St. Bernard's church at Raritan on Wednesday afternoon in the presence of a large gathering of friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Dorgan are now on their honeymoon and at its completion they will reside in this city.

HE TELLS OF TRAVELS IN BRIGANDS' COUNTRY

Rev. Dr. Morris A. Turk, of Natick, Mass., who with his wife, spent his summer vacation traveling from East to West on the bridle paths of Albania, gave an illustrated lecture in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church and the Congregational church. Dr. and Mrs. Turk came to Plainfield at the earnest request of Rev. and Mrs. Kennedy, who are well-known here, and who are now missionaries in Turkey, for the purpose of telling of the work being done in that far off land. Mrs. Turk is the daughter of Rev. Lewis Bond, of this city.

With the aid of one hundred colored slides, made from pictures taken by Dr. Turk, he blazed his recent perilous and exciting journey through Albania. The pictures in themselves were most interesting. Many of them were taken under the greatest possible difficulty as the party traveled over the mountains on their long and tedious trip to Albania, the objective point being Elbason. That country is filled with brigands and the lecturer told of many narrow escapes. He related numerous incidents where the party passed through sections of the country that were in a perpetual state of revolution, but as they were accompanied by a guard the members were protected.

Dr. Turk spoke words of great praise of the work being accomplished by Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy, of their sacrifice and devotion to the cause of Christ, and said that under their ministrations many natives are being won. The speaker in referring to the Albanians said that they are an unconquered people. On numerous occasions armies of Turks have come to pieces in trying to subdue and conquer them. They are, he said, a clean-blooded, noble people and are hungry for education and the Gospel of Christ.

Dr. Turk's description of the party's experience in various so-called hotels on the journey was amusing, especially that part describing the five-stock encountered in bed rooms. He said that there was scarcely a comfortable hotel on the whole trail and lodging was one of the troublesome features of the trip.

During the course of his lecture Dr. Turk displayed pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy, as well as the whole party, and the audience was quick to appreciate them. A silver offering was taken at the close of the lecture.

Dr. Turk is pastor of a Congregational church at Natick, Mass. He was accompanied by his wife, and while in Plainfield the couple were guests of Mrs. Grove P. Hinman, who is a sister of Mrs. Kennedy.

The Plate Showed It.

"Prisoner," said the judge, "you say your wife gave you the head with a plate. Is that so?"

"Yis, sorr," answered the prisoner who rejoiced in the name of Mulligan.

"But," said the judge, "your head doesn't show marks of any kind."

"No, sorr," answered Mr. Mulligan, with a touch of pride, "but ye should have seen that plate!"

GIFFORD COOLEY WEDS

Miss Mary M. Chambliss His Bride at Her Home in Tennessee.

DR. CHAMBLISS OFFICIATES.

Wedding of Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Chambliss to Son of Mrs. Martin I. Cooley at Brownsville.

Miss Mary M. Chambliss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Chambliss, of Brownsville, Tenn., and Gifford Cooley, son of Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, of Rockview avenue, North Plainfield, were married Wednesday night at the large and beautiful home of the bride's parents in Brownsville. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, and grandfather of the bride, performed the ceremony.

One thousand invitations were issued for the affair and nearly five hundred guests were present, including many from Louisville, Ky., Chattanooga and Brownsville, Tenn., as well as other cities of the South. Mrs. Cooley, mother of the groom, was the only one present from Plainfield, beside Dr. Chambliss, owing to the great distance.

Mrs. William G. Berson, of Brownsville, sister of the bride, who herself was married a few months ago, was the matron of honor, and her husband, William G. Berson, was the best man. The maid-of-honor was Miss Mary Caperton, cousin of the bride, of Charleston, West Virginia, and the bridesmaid was Miss Louise Mann, of Brownsville.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Chambliss home, during which the bride and groom received the congratulations of the guests, and supper was served. The bride received a large collection of handsome and costly gifts.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Cooley left for an extended wedding journey through the south. Upon their return they will reside with the groom's mother on Rockview avenue. The bride is one of the most popular young women in Brownsville. Her father is a prominent banker there and the family is highly connected. Mr. Cooley also has a host of friends here. NELSON MILLER HEAD OF SCHOOL BOARD

The North Plainfield Board of Education has elected Nelson A. Miller president of the board; Edward H. Joy, and the Rev. George A. Warner vice-president. The committees appointed are as follows:

Commencement—Messrs. Laing, Clark; finance—Messrs. Woodruff, Clark, Rushmore; grievance and truancy—Messrs. Cooley, Woodruff, Warner; teachers—Miller, Boyer, Warner; audit—Laing, Clark.

PRIMER PUBLISHED FOR INSTRUCTION OF MINERS.

One government bureau at Washington—the technologic branch of the geological survey—works so quietly that the owners of the Cherry mine, in which 300 lives were unware that the branch had a force of men in Pittsburg equipped for rescue work until many hours after the disaster occurred. The branch officials were equally ignorant. Had the mine-owners and the government employees been working together many lives might have been saved, says the VanNorden Magazine for February.

Now that neglect to inform has brought about, or at least made possible, the greatest mine disaster in the history of this country, a primer has been sent out to all miners. It tells all about the use of explosives in the simplest language possible. This humanitarian work was started in July, 1908, by authorization of Congress, which appropriated $150,000 for the purpose, after there had been four explosions in coal mines in December, 1907, costing 700 lives.

Statistics showed that 2,061 miners were killed and 4,800 were injured in the coal mines in 1906, and 5,215 killed and 5,800 injured in 1907. The death rate for 1907 was 4.43 for every 1,000 men employed. In 1908, 2,450 men were killed, or 3.60 in every 1,000 employed, a reduction of 675 in the number of deaths from 1907. European countries show death rates in coal mining as high as one in every 1,000 men employed and none more than two. This excellent showing abroad is due to the establishment years ago of government stations for the investigation of problems relating to safety in mining, including the proper use of explosives.

Governor Approves Measure for City-Borough Disposal Plant.

FOR A JOINT COMMISSION.

Beds May Be Built at Greenbrook and Land for Purpose May Be Condemned—Full Power for Commission.

Senate bill No. 266, as amended, introduced by Senator Ernest A. Ackerman, for Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, permitting Plainfield and North Plainfield and other municipalities to jointly construct a sanitary sewage system, was signed by Governor Fort Friday morning and is now a law.

The measure was prepared and introduced for the express purpose of allowing the city and borough to build a new sewage plant in the western end of North Plainfield township, but other adjoining municipalities may also join in the improvement. The act provides for the selection of a commission representing city and borough, and for a permanent chairman, secretary and treasurer, and also allows for a suitable place for holding meetings.

The commission representing the municipalities is given authority to purchase lands, rights of way and contract for the improvement and the cost of the same is to be paid for in the usual way, that is, the Circuit Court is to be asked to appoint a commission to assess benefits and damages, and each municipality is empowered to borrow money and issue notes and bonds for the cost of the work.

Where the commission cannot come to an agreement in the purchase of lands or rights of way condemnation proceedings may be used. The act further provides for the usual legal notices to be published in the newspapers advertising meetings to be held. The commission to assess benefits and damages is to be appointed after the completion of the work.

The measure was drawn by Craig A. Marsh and Sharred Depew, representing the city and borough respectively.

U. OF P. ALUMNI HEAR PRAISE OF ROOSEVELT.

Roosevelt and the Vatican incident were touched on at the annual reunion and banquet of the New Jersey Alumni of the University of Pennsylvania at Achtel-Stetter's, Newark, Thursday night. Dr. Addison B. Poland, superintendent of schools, called attention to the incident, when he declared that Colonel Roosevelt and Benjamin Franklin represent the true type of American citizenship.

"When the University of Pennsylvania was established in 1740," Dr. Poland declared, "Whitfield, the great Methodist evangelist, came to this country from England and visited all the cities and towns from Georgia to New England. The churches of Philadelphia refused to allow him use their pulpits. Benjamin Franklin, the wise diplomatist, with absolute non-sectarian impulses, went to work and built him a church so that he might speak. After he left and enthusiasm died out, this church became the perpetual legacy of the university until it was compelled to remove it."

Other speakers at the dinner were Assistant District Attorney E. Crosby Kindleberger, of New York; Josiah Penniman, professor of English literature at the university; Harry Bowers Mingle, of East Orange; Professor Edwin T. Darby, of the university, and Rabbi Charles I. Hoffman.

Professor Penniman spoke on the great advancement made in the number of matriculates, the beautiful buildings and the increase of faculty. He drew comparisons between the U. of P. and other institutions, and declared that it was the most cosmopolitan of all. Professor Darby enumerated the States and the countries represented at the university which he also lauded as one of the leading institutions of the world over. He dwelt for some time on the great number of Chinese attending there.

Before the dinner began the annual election of officers was held, as follows: President, Edward S. Hawke, '95 medicine; first vice-president, Mr. Mingle, '99 college; second vice-president, E. S. Sherman, '97, medicine; secretary and treasurer, Archibald E. Boice, '90, dentistry. There were about sixty of the graduates at the dinner. Dr. Richard S. Hopkins was toastmaster. The banquet hall was decorated with University of Pennsylvania flags and bunting.

Auto Fees for Roads.

The last bill introduced at the session of the Legislature came from Senator Ackerman, and provided that the money received in fees and fines from the motor vehicle department by the State Road Commissioner for road improvements be available at once for the commissioner's use instead of waiting until July 4. The bill was immediately passed.

BOYS IN ATHLETIC MEET

Franklin B. Newell Stars in the Running High Jump for Schoolboys.

CHAMPION FRITTS IN FORM.

Competition Provides Some Exciting Sport to a Large and Enthusiastic Crowd.

"Future Greats," of the track and field, to the number of fifty young athletes, participated in the Boys' Booster Athletic meet in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Friday night. The performances of the junior athletes were watched from the gallery by a large and enthusiastic crowd and the boys came in for a big share of applause in their efforts.

Perhaps the most noticeable performance in the meet was executed by Franklin B. Newell, who was the winner in the running high jump. This speedy athlete covered a distance of 5 feet 4 inches, or one inch higher than the record he made in winning the event in the Harlem Y. M. C. A. games three weeks ago. When Newell's record was announced the youngster was giving three rousing cheers.

John Fritts, the all around Y. M. C. A. champion, distinguished himself by carrying off first honors in the standing broad jump and in the shot put. In the broad jump, Fritts covered a distance of 9 feet 4¾ inches, and in the shot put he hurled the weight a distance of 34 feet 1 inch.

D. R. Miller had two wins to his credit. He finished first in the potato race and standing broad jump in the 120 pound class.

Y. M. C. A. led in the total number of points scored, 38; Brownie A. C., 5 points; Pastime A. C. and Leal's school 4 points; Stillman school 3 points. The summary:

Improved the Occasion.

"My father," said Senator Chauncey M. Depew the other day, "was a frugal and saving man. He never approved of any waste of anything, including time. One night he went to a prayer meeting. The brethren were backward. After a wait of a quarter of an hour my father arose and said: 'It is a shame to waste all this valuable time. Will not some brother tell us his experience?'

"No one rose, and my father continued: 'Will some one lead us in prayer?'

"There was no response to this appeal, and my father said: 'In that case I will improve the time by making a few observations on the tariff.'"—Pathfinder.

For Closing Windows.

A peice of bamboo, an old blind roller, or any strong, smoothly rounded stick about three feet long, with a small flat piece of wood about the same thickness, twelve inches long and covered with flannel, nailed across the ends, makes an admirable and useful article for closing top windows without either going outside or standing on a stool or a chair to reach, or straining one's self with the weight to be raised upward.

Visited Borough School.

Randall Spaulding, superintendent of the Montclair Public schools, was a visitor at the borough school on Wednesday. Professor Spaulding came here for the specific purpose of inspecting the methods and system used in the grammar grades by Superintendent H. C. Krebs. Professor Spaulding was a classmate of S. St. John McCutchen at Yale.

Plainfield, N. J., April 14, 1910.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

William H. Crane in "Father and the Boys," will open for a run at the Garrick Theatre on Monday, following the conclusion of Hattie Williams' engagement there, and will complete in that theatre his New York engagement, which was prematurely brought to a close last year by his illness.

Miss Julia Sanderson, the charming Eileen of "The Arcadians," has come to the defence of American men. She and some women friends were discussing the characteristics of the men of various nations and their fashions in clothes, and Miss Sanderson closed the debate by saying: "Well, the American coat may be a bit lacking in style, but the man inside of it can't be beaten anywhere. I do adore our American men!"

Musical comedy stars are generally supposed to be jealous of one another, but the two leading ladies of "The Arcadians," Miss Julia Sanderson and Miss Ethel Cadman, are very friendly and have formed a mutual admiration society. Said Miss Sanderson to Miss Cadman the other day "I love that Arcady song of yours and you sing it charmingly. Every time I hear it I completely lose myself, and just stand there and cry all through it." "That's very,very kind of you, my dear," replied Miss Cadman. "Believe me, I enjoy your 'Bit of A Brogue' song just as much, only it makes me feel like dancing, not crying."

Several changes have been made in the circus at the New York Hippodrome. A number of new acts have been added, amongst them may be mentioned Stamford, who is billed as the perfect man and who justifies his claim to the title, at least to the extent of an extremely fine physique. In his "Poses Plastique" he shows to good advantage a splendidly developed body and, the culmination of his charming, feats of strength of somewhat unusual order, i. e., Strongfort holds up by means of his body, a bridge over which a 40-horse power automobile containing six passengers and a chauffeur passes at full speed. There are ten acts in the complete circus program, besides the three big specjacles "A Trip to Japan," "The Ballet of Jewels" and "Inside the Earth." The tribe of Marois are still on the bill in their interesting dances and on the whole the Hippodrome show has never been bigger or better than this year, which is attested by continued capacity business twice a day.

AUTO SPEED TRIALS AT SATURDAY'S MEET

There will be an added feature to the motorcycle race meet which will be held at the Driving Association Park next Saturday afternoon in the form of automobile speed trials. This will be the first time that track auto races have ever been billed for this city and interest among the autoists and others who like the sport is keen. Carlton C. Brown, president of the Plainfield Automobile Club Association, is one of the entries to date, while Terry Manning is the other. Manning will drive the Herreshoff car which Monte Robertson drove in the hill climb last summer. Entries of other autoists are expected. The distances are to be from one to five miles.

Another feature will be record trials by Arthur Chapple on a seven and half horse power Merkle motorcycle. Chapple is at present holder of several world's records and he will try to establish new records here. According to the rules of the American Federation of Amateur Motorcyclists, under whose sanction the meet is to be held, a machine as high powered as Chapple's is not permitted to start in the races owing to the track being only a half-mile. A special permit, however, has been secured for the exhibition and something thrilling is promised. Recent entries for the races are Percy Drummond, Karl Segelbach and Howard Hill, the New Jersey Motorcycle Club crack, of Newark.

Work of preparing the track began today. The top is to be harrowed and scraped and put in the best of condition. It is to be finished by Friday. Workouts will be held there Saturday morning.

THE DUTCH PAINTER

By KATE LUBY

In the center of a quiet village stood an inn, the proprietor of which was named Fritz; nearly opposite was the cottage of the village painter, rejoicing in the odd name of Tunder, at whose door might be seen boards representing grotesque caricature paintings, as signs of his profession.

Of a truth, poor Tunder had a great love for his art; but, sorrowful to relate, his art had no love for him! He sat vain and conceited, as nearly all pretenders to excellence are, yet he found a liberal patron and an ardent admirer in old Fritz, who carried his patronage so far as to promise his lovely little daughter Lula in marriage.

Now Lula and her good mother had another young gentleman in their minds' eye; it was Rudolph, the handsome young gardener and huntsman, who loved Lula most fondly and truly, but who failed to make an impression on the flinty bosom of old Fritz.

The day was fixed for Lula's marriage with Tunder, and mother and daughter went bristling through their preparations with tearful eyes and saddened hearts, which ill befitted a bridal day.

To give more eclat to the wedding, Fritz ordered a new sign, and Tunder's talents were called in requisition.

Just then, a young artist, who had that day arrived from the city, offered to paint a sign, representing the archduke, on very reasonable terms. Lula and Rudolph looked for the artist's sign, and stubborn old Fritz swore that Tunder alone should share the glory with himself. At length a compromise was effected; both paintings should be done, and a place over the inn be awarded to that one which displayed most ability.

The wedding day had arrived, and Tunder was first in the field with his sign, but no one could make anything out of it.

"Behold!" cried the villagers, "a miserable abortion, which represents neither fish, nor fowl?"

"What is it?" asked one.

"It is mutilated Indian from the wilds of the west!" replied his neighbor.

"Ignorant wretches!" shouted Tunder, choking with indignation. "Ye have eyes and see not!" so saying, he seized his brush and painted underneath the portrait, "To the great Leopold."

Shouts and groans followed this announcement, not for "Leopold," but for Tunder, who had so shamefullly misrepresented him.

The city artist's painting was next displayed, and produced a spontaneous burst of enthusiastic applause.

Never before had the people beheld so lifelike and well executed a likeness of their very popular archduke; and the artist, in order to escape being embraced to death, beat a speedy retreat into the garden in the rear, and sat musingly on a bench.

In the midst of triumph his heart was bowed down beneath the load of some secret sorrow that was devouring him.

Unhappy Rollo! A few days since had seen him the favorite artist of a brilliant court, enjoying the reputation of a Raphael, and on the highroad to fame and fortune.

A noble lady of the court, and who was a ward of the archduke, had made a deep and lasting impression on his heart, and he soon perceived that his passion was returned.

He had not been long sitting in the garden, before he learned that there were others equally unhappy. Lula and her lover were sitting in an arbor, taking a last, loving farewell each other.

"Why not fly with me, dearest Lula?" murmured Rudolph. "If you will not do so, a few short hours will see you wedded to that hateful Tunder, and lost to me forever!"

Lula sobbed audibly; yet, drying her tears, she replied:

"I cannot fly with you, though you know how much I love you, Rudolph; to fly would grieve my father and break my mother's heart. I am full of hope that Heaven will yet smile on our love."

Archduke Leopold, with the beautiful archduchess, accompanied by her ladies and officers of the court, were on a hunting excursion and dashed through the village. The archduchess placed a chain of gold round Fritz's neck, demanding to see the village artist who had painted the sign. After a long search Rollo was found peacefully sleeping in the garden.

Great was their delight and surprise at finding the "glory of their court," as they termed him.

The archduke folded him in his arms, and declared he had never doubted his honor. He must instantly return to court, no longer in the capacity of a poor artist, but as Baron de T——, which title, with its estates, the archduke was ready to bestow on him. Then he said he was greatly in need of Rollo's services as chief physician to his lovely ward.

"And now is there aught you wish me to do for your friends here?" asked the archduke.

Rollo related, in a few words, the story of Lula and Rudolph, on hearing which the duke beckoned to Fritz, and in a few moments the old man called the young couple, Lula and Rudolph, and gave his consent to their marriage.

His First Case

By BELLE MANIATES

A reminiscent look came into Garret's eyes as he read the letter bearing the postmark of an up-state town. It carried him back to his early life of toil on a farm, where he had earned the money for college. From college by a stroke of fortune in attracting the favorable notice of Judge Larned he had been taken into a law office, where he had assisted in the preparation of many a case, but his first case, one in which he would have entire and undivided away, was yet to be, and to the gaining and winning of this case he had a great incentive.

The incentive now darkened the doorway, and a charming laugh rippled in, calling him back from the land of meadows.

"Were you dreaming," she asked with a fleeting glance, "of your first case?"

"No," he replied, reluctantly forced to the truth. "The letter I just received carried me back to my early life—on a farm."

"You never told me about those days," she said, reproachfully.

"There is little to tell. Such homely details—I was a ragged, hapless little chap, and I worked hard and grew up to be a gawky lad with a longing for the law. I saved enough to eke my way through college. Then your father took me in here. I met you, and now, oh, Denise!"

"What is it, Garret? It isn't. Oh, dear, I see! It is—your first case!"

"Yes."

There was only time for a rapturous glance before her father, the judge, entered. Garret read him the letter, which was from the son of a man who owned the farm on which Garret was raised, and who had advanced him the money to go to college. There were some complications in the will by which the young farmer had inherited his land, and a law suit was impending. He had written to Garret to employ his services. Garret explained at length the details of the case, Denise listening with concentrated attention.

"Some way, it seems like a call to me, and fitting that my first effort in a legal way should be for the good of my friend and the son of my benefactor. He was my chum."

There was an assumption of vexation in her fair brow and pouting lips as she turned away. She knew that Garret was "conditioned," and he concluded that the condition was the winning of his first case.

"He can win it, if it is to be won," predicted the judge. "He cannot refuse, of course."

The next day Garret went to the scenes of his early struggles in life to look over the ground. Two days later he returned, going directly to the home of the judge, where he found Denise alone. Her attitude was still reproachful—almost resentful.

"Well, Garret," she asked. "Did you find any encouraging evidence?"

"I fear not. I ran up for the day to let your father's focusing eye magnify a little speck that I see."

"Why, of course," she said a little coldly, "if so much hinges on your winning your first case, you would naturally want to win."

"Denise," he replied earnesly, "as deeply as I love you, our marriage is not the only incentive. My friend has a wife and babies. The loss of all his property would wreck a happy little household."

Her eyes were turned persistently from him.

"I must go to the office now," he said after a slight pause. "I go back to-night."

Her farewell was in a frigid tone, and he went away, depressed by her lack of sympathy and understanding. It took the entire day for the judge to go over the tangled evidence with him, and he barely made his train.

"I will be out when the case comes to trial, and I only wish, Garret," volunteered the judge, "I may see a point here and there to suggest."

"Oh, judge, it is more than I dared ask," exclaimed Garret gratefully. "It is awfully kind."

"Well," said the judge, "it seems to be a matter of importance to my family that you win."

Then noting the wince in the young man's eyes, he added kindly: "You mustn't put too much importance on a young woman's pique. Her heart is all right."

Two weeks later the judge informed Denise of his intention.

"I shall go with you, papa," she announced.

"That's a good idea, Denise. Your presence will sustain Garret even more than will mine."

At the tap on his shoulder Garret turned and saw her.

"Garret," she whispered, her heart aglow at the lovelight in his eyes as he slipped into the seat beside her. "I hope you will win this case."

"And if I don't don't, Denise?"

"Why, I shall love you, no matter what the case as your first. And, Garret, I want you to win—for his—for your friend's sake."

He pressed her hand and then went on. That was a splendid reinforcement a man can have.

"How did you happen to come, Denise?" he asked as they were leaving the courtroom.

"Papa thought you would lose, and I thought if you did, you would need my consolation. And you won against such odds, he says. I am so glad that—"

"That—what, sweetheart?"

"That I said 'yes' before you won."

GETTING READY

"When I decided to go south for a few weeks," said pretty Miss Carew, dolefully, "I thought I was going so very inexpensively that I deserved a medal for my cleverness."

"You haven't given it up, I hope?" asked her friend. "Your cousin has planned such a gay time for you that it would be too bad not to go."

"Oh, no; I'm going," said Miss Carew. "I couldn't back out now that my cousin has laid so many plans. She has d dance arranged for the very evening of the day I arrive, so I hope my trunk won't be late. But, you see, I've come to the conclusion that the economical way to go always turns out to be the most expensive. When my cousin wrote me not to fail to come I accepted her invitation at once, because I had so very little to buy in order to go."

"You always have nice things," said her friend. "You wouldn't need a single new garment."

"That's what I thought," said Miss Carew. "I decided that a little piecing out would fix me up and that's where I made my mistake. If I had started by getting a complete new outfit it would have been cheaper.

"The first things I looked at were my hats," explained Miss Carew. "Of course I couldn't travel in my plumed hat and my white one was out of the question. So I took old one to the milliner and had it retrimmed, but when it came home I wasn't satisfied and I went back for a new one. Though I told the milliner it was for traveling, she showed me all sorts of deformed and distorted things with miles of ribbon and feathers on them and calmly announced that the lowest price was $28. She said she wouldn't be giving the hats away for that ridiculous sum if it wasn't late in the season. Of course, I had to have a nice hat."

"People expect a stranger to be particularly well dressed," agreed Miss Carew's friend, politely. "Isn't it funny? If we saw the same girl at home every day we wouldn't care half so much what she wore."

"Well, I had to pay a terrible price for that hat," sighed Miss Carew. "Really, though, it is beautiful."

"Things have gone up so," said her friend. "You can't get hats for the old-time prices."

"Then I thought my old suit would do if I had it pressed and got a new waist to light it up," went on Miss Carew. "I ran all about looking for something to match the shade as my suit and finally found one for $15 that would do. I discovered that my supply of handkerchiefs was getting low and money that I begrudged went into new ones. My old belt was good enough for home, but not for visiting, so there was another expense."

"Belts make the finishing touch," said the friend. "I've seen lots of suits spoiled by poor ones."

"My crepe de chine had to be cleaned and sleeves had to be made over," related Miss Carew. "Then when it came back from the dressmaker's I thought it looked horrid and I got a blue meteor silk. Two suits had to be pressed. I had to get three pairs of gloves. Then my slippers cost me a lot more than I expected."

"You can use everything when you come home," said her friend, consolingly. "You'll be glad to have them when you get back."

"That's why," sighed Miss Carew. "Did you ever have anything to fall back on when you came home from a visit? There won't be a thing left of my old clothes and the things I have bought new will be lights to see."

"Personally I always rejoiced when my things go to pieces," said her friend. "For then I am absolutely forced to invest in new ones. It's when they're only half worn that I am in despair. Then my conscience forces me to make them do for any and all occasions. There's one consolation in going away—you can wear a lot of things everybody at home has seen, and the strangers will consider them new."

"Maybe that will be a comfort," said Miss Carew, more cheerfully. "You see, the railroad rates are so nice and low and I want to go so much. My cousin has planned the loveliest times! But when it came to getting three entirely new dresses—"

"You didn't!" exclaimed her friend.

"Why, yes," said Miss Carew. "Even when fixed over, all my things looked so shabby, somehow. My cousin is going to have much trouble to give me a gay time, arranging to have something every evening I'm there. I had to have two dance gowns and I absolutely needed something for house wear. I think I did pretty well not to get a new suit."

"Yes, but if you had stayed home you wouldn't— Oh!" her friend interrupted herself. "Isn't that where that handsome young Mr. Randolph lives who was here last summer at your aunt's-"

"I believe there are a number of men of that name there," acknowledged Miss Carew, with rising color. "But that has absolutely nothing to do with it. I am going for a rest, you know."

Increase in Rice Production.

Rice production in the United States grew from an average of less than 100,000,000 pounds per annum a few years ago to an average of 500,000,000 pounds per annum in recent years, and reached over 600,000,000 pounds in 1908.

SCRIBE HAS A DREAM

The scribe had grown weary of everlastingly tearing off "copy."

His eyes were heavy, and his pencil had lost its customary rapidity with which it scrawled across sheet after sheet of paper, grinding out imaginary incidents that revolve around the every-day actions of Stamford's heroes.

The drowsy glow of the electric bulb above him seemed to grow drowsier. The phone at his elbow rang harshly, but 'twas only as in the far-distance.

Again the 'phone rang, but—what was the use?— the son-of-a-gun was asleep!

A lake, shimmering like a great opal, lay just to the westward. It was cool and clear, in the shadows and glowing with fiery hues where the sunbeams struck the surface. The trees on the island rose majestically into the crystaline air, and their reflection sank deep and smooth down below the blue and glass-like surface of the water.

Little boats glided here and there, shooting across the sun-lit spaces, and then vanishing into the infinite cool depths of the shadow at the side.

But one boat did not vanish.

Instead, it drew near to the spot where the Scribe, on the shore, rested, plucking absently at the tiny delicate flowers that grew in the turf.

Presently it grazed on the pebbles, and from it there arose—a woman.

She was a vision of beauty, this dream girl. The bloom of her cheeks was exquisite, like the heart of the freshest rose, and was in deep contrast to the velvety darkness of her eyes and of her wavy hair.

Without hesitation, she approached the wonder-stricken Knight of the Pencil.

"I am the Godess of Wishes," she murmured, in self - introduction "Knowing your presence, and of your need and trouble, I thought I might at least be of some service to you."

Here, she made a low, sweeping courtsey, that caused the scribe to spring to his feet, and then to do a double-flip backwards in an attempt to perform a similar stunt.

"Well," he said, as he brushed the moss from his pair of $3.35 trousers, "this is rich. I believe you're only kidding me."

"I don't understand you, sir" she responded, her brows lowering.

"This fairy dope," he answered. "This line of talk about wanting to do something for me. If you had said you hoped to do me for something, I might have tumbled."

"But you did tumble!" the Goddess remarked, smiling.

"Sure," he acknowledged; "I forgot. Say, what kind of a cinch is this? I know I felt queer, but I never thought I was a somnambulist. Where to—say, am I anywhere near Coscob?"

"Coscob?" she repeated in visible surprise. "I never heard of Coscob. Is he any relation of 'Ty' Cobb, the baseball man?"

The scribe roared with merriment. "Little girl," he managed to gasp, between chuckles, "this is the first time I've ever met Miss Innocence. You're all to the merry, just the same. But, doggone it, I wish you'd put me wise to which is which, and what is what."

"Haven't you heard of the Goddess of Wishes?" she asked of him.

He shook his head.

Suddenly he gazed at her triumphably.

"Surest thing you know," he ejaculated, "You're a sister of Geo. Close, the fellow who's always wishing for a million."

"Don't be silly," she pouted. I have command over the fairies of power. Whatever I choose, I can make possible any wish ever made. We believe in the granting of desires in this Never-Never Land, and I am wielder of the wand. Whatever you may wish for, I will give you."

"Moldy bones!" thought the Scribe "I'm from Missouri, and you're here now!"

"Let me see" he mused, this time aloud. "Dutchmen are easy 'marks,' and Frenchmen are always very 'franc.' I wish I had 'em all skinned to death with a bank account of fifteen billions; and I wish I had a big, fat, juicy cheroot."

Like a flash, all was over.

In his hand was a bank-book, crediting him with the amount mentioned, while between his teeth there was the slickest cigar imaginable.

"Talk about luck?" he chewed, delighted, as the smoke curled lazily up among the branches. "Some folks claim Noah has them all going, when it comes to the jag-producing line. He is the only man on record who was able to float a company when the whole world was in liquidation. At last he is outclassed!"

"Have I got to stop now?" he asked, of the vision later.

"Certainly not," was the reply. "So well have you succeeded in past endeavors, that I shall grant you three more wishes. What are they to be?"

He glanced at her shyly out of the corner of his eye, and then lost himself, in silent reflection.

Patiently she waited. The glade was full of deep emerald shadows and the cool breath from damp mosses and ferns added to the enchantment.

There was a stillness all round them. Natire's own stillness, in which infinities of tiny voices rise upon the listening air, in such a choir of perfect harmony that it seems like silence.

Quietly the golden moments floated by, until suddenly, jarring upon the sweet, joyous sounds of the wood, the voice of the Scribe made answer.

"I'll not be selfish," he admitted, frankly. "My three wishes will be confined to 'Stamford the beautiful,' First, I wish to see a vision of the new Hallowe'en Park as it will look when finished."

This was granted.

Words could not describe the splendor of the sight. The crystal lake seemed to vanish, and in its place the park, with its winding walks, its rustic bridges, its lily-ponds, its magnificent playground. And every corner was filled with people, satisfied, delighted.

"Now," drawled the Scribe, "I wish to gaze upon a vision of Stamford's new buildings finished—the library, the postoffice, the hospital and the rest.

This was also granted.

My! how swell the old town did look!

It seemed as if fifty years had gone by, leaving Stamford like a new city, a wonderfully strange burg. Everything longed for had been erected, and stood up stately and strong, like a modern Hercules. There was even a new hotel!

"You have one more," warned the Goddess, smiling at the Scribe's amazement. "One more wish before I say farewell."

"You mean 'kiss farewell,' don't you?" he queried, softly, edging closer.

"I mean what I say," she replied, icily.

Her coldness sent a shiver down his spinal column, despite his recent acquaintance with the northern winter weather.

"In that case" he said, hesitatingly, "I wish to see a vision of Stamford, with Dr. Rowell as mayor."

This was never granted— she had vanished!

* * * * *

The scribe rubbed his eyes, and yawned.

Then he yawned, and rubbed his eyes!

"Oh, you kid!" he sung out "Come on back and make up. I didn't—I didn't—who the duce—say where am I, anywhere?"

With a start, he came to, and then sank back in his cane-bottomed chair, as the electric light dazzled his peepers, and he realized what had happened.

"Stung again!" he growled, "I must have been dreaming."

And once more his hand was chasing the pencil through the never-ending series of newspaper 'copy!"

HERE AND THERE.

"Truth is stranger than fiction," runs the old adage. This was perhaps true in the days of the old-fashioned novelist and playwright But fiction has grown stronger with the passing years. Writers of the modern "thrillers" of literature and the stage seem to write with a determined mad to outdo the utmost possibilities of truth. The opium-pipe fiction in plays and romances today may be stranger than truth.

But a story comes out of Texas which proves that truth is still in the race, and that, if it is no longer stranger than fiction, it is, once in a while, equally as strange.

The dramatic sequence of the tale is remarkable. A master dramatist could have marshalled the incidents in more effective order. The episode is one of life's made-to-order dramas which falls naturally into five acts in this way:

Act I.—Bernard Carter and Rexer Williams are cowboys on the Texas ranges. While following a cattle trail they quarrel. Williams stabs Carter. Believing his unconscious victim dead, Williams rolls the body into the Pecos River.

Act II.—Carter regains his senses and crawls to the bank. He is found and sent to a hospital in El Paso, When he recovers he leaves the country. Williams, believing himself a murderer, flees. Weeks after the stabbing a decomposed body is found in the river. It is identified as that of Carter. Williams is caught. He is tried and sentenced to forty years for murder.

Act III.—Carter remains in ignorance of his supposed death and of the fate that has befallen Williams. He drifts to Central America. He grows rich. He settles in Seattle ten years ago. In the meantime for, twenty years Williams is a convict in the Texas Penitentiary. He believes he, too, is a lifer. He does not know Carter is alive.

Act IV.—There is a prison investigation in Texas. The exposure of cruelties is telegraphed to newspapers all over the country. Carter, the wealthy citizen of Seattle, notes the name of Rexer Williams in the list of convicts who testified. It is an unusual name. He never heard of but one man of that name in his life. He writes a letter of inquiry to the warden of the prison in which Williams is confined. He is astonished to learn that Williams is serving forty years for the murder of Bernard Carter.

Act V.—Carter hurries to Texas. He proves that the report of his death has been "greatly exaggerated." He obtains a pardon for Williams. He hakes him to Seattle. He establishes the formed convict in his own comfortable home for the remainder of his life. (Curtain).

YEAR'S INCREASE 2,000

Royal Arcanumites Hear Good News in Statistics of the Order.

MEETING IN COWARD'S HALL.

Entertainment and Refreshments at Enjoyable Meeting of Members and Their Families.

Greenbrook Council, No. 1125, Royal Arcanum, enjoyed a social time in their temporary quarters in Coward's hall Monday night at which there was a large attendance. Speeches were made by Grand Regent Theodore Class, of Westfield, and Deputy Grand Regent Colby, also of Westfield, in which the amazing growth of the organization was commented upon.

During the past year the Royal Arcanum in the State has made a net gain of over 2,000 members, and according to R. A. statistics this State is second to Illinois in point of membership.

Deputy Grand Regent Colby in his speech complimented Greenbrook Council upon its splendid showing and in fact was optimistic about all the other councils in the State. Nowhere, he said, has there been the enthusiasm shown as here. The interest of the individual members is shown by their work for the good of the order and the greater the influence brought to bear on the advantages of protection the larger will become the enrollment among the people who desire to see that their families are properly provided for in event of the catastrophe of death over-taking the breadwinner of the family. Mr. Colby's speech was received with cheers.

Grand Regent Class also spoke on the pre-eminent position among fraternal organizations which the Royal Arcanum has taken in recent years and brought to the attention of the members what their friends present the splendid record in which they personally took so much pride. There is no greater opportunity for a man to show his devotion to his offspring than to provide for their maintenance in event of his demise, and it not only shows good sense but a desire to do the right things.

A fine program of musical entertainment followed the speeches in which Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shearer, William Force and others entertained the company. Refreshments rounded out one of the most enjoyable evenings in the history of the council.

KEEPING CHAMOIS SOFT.

The secret of keeping chamois skin soft and supple is to hang it up to dry while still soapy. Remember this when washing chamois gloves.

Not everyone knows that if the edges of graniteware are brushed inside and out with shellac, and melted solder immediately applied, it will mend a broken pan or tinware.

An excellent cleaner for common woodwork, mirrors, windows, finger-marks and grease spots is made by dissolving four tablespoonfuls of soft soap in a bucket of hot water. Add a tablespoonful of paraffin while the mixture is boiling. Two added later there will be a disagreeable odor.

Hot salt water poured around the casings of frozen windows will thaw them quickly.

ACT ON A JOINT SEWER

Mayor Sends Special Message on Subject to the Common Council.

A COMMITTEE IS APPOINTED.

Messrs. Tolles, Mygatt, Taylor and C. C. Randolph to Represent City in Negotiations With the Borough.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council Monday called the attention of the members to the importance of the city joining with the borough in the establishment of a sewage disposal plant. In his communication Mr. Fisk stated that the matter of removal of the present sewage disposal plant has been under discussion and investigation for the past two years and called attention to the fact that the plant is located in its present place not from choice but for the reason that at that time the city was forced to locate the plant within its limits.

"It has up to the present time served the necessities of the city," said the Mayor, "but the time has come when the city must make extensive repairs and additions at a cost of a large amount of money in order to provide for the growing requirements. The time is coming when we will have to remove the plant to a new place, owing to the growth of the city.

"We now have the opportunity to unite with North Plainfield and other communities to accomplish this removal and secure a more up-to-date and efficient plant at a saving in cost to the taxpayers."

Mr. Fisk called attention to the fact that Sherrard Dupue, representing North Plainfield; C. A. Marsh, representing the city, together with W. J. Buttfield, president of the North Plainfield Sewage Commission and F. E. Mygatt, chairman of the public affairs committee, and the Mayor, drafted a bill, entitled an act to authorize two or more municipalities to jointly provide, maintain and operate a trunk or outlet sewer.

In the opinion of Mr. Fisk it is to the interest of the city and taxpayers to take up this matter and decide it as soon as possible. He stated that the city has surveys and estimates and that North Plainfield is ready to go ahead and the matter must be brought to the attention of the taxpayers if Plainfield is to reap the benefits of joint action. He urged that a special meeting be held within a week or two for in his opinion Plainfield should join with North Plainfield and take advantage of the plan to remove the local plant.

In this connection a communication was received from W. J. Buttfield urging similar action on the part of Plainfield before May 6, when the borough will hold a special election on the question. Later in the evening President Tolles appointed a special committee comprising F. E. Mygatt, C. C. Randolph and D. W. Taylor, with himself as a member ex-officio, to take up the sewer matter, and the communications from Mayor Fisk and Mr. Buttfield were referred to that committee.

$1,925,000,000 WILL EVANGELIZE THE WORLD

Henry W. Herrmann made an earnest appeal for support in the Layman's Missionary Movement at the First Baptist church Monday, where the Men's Club of that congregation entertained the members of the Men's Bible Class. Mr. Herrmann in the course of his remarks referred to the rapid growth of the movement and presented some interesting figures.

He declared that $55,000,000 annually is necessary to evangelize the world in one generation. He said that it would require thirty-five years, which he said would bring the total cost of evangelizing the entire world up to $1,925,000,000.

Referring to foreign missionary work Mr. Herrmann declared that all of this country's churches should lend their financial support, as the United States owes its present standing among the countries of the world, as due to the results of foreign missions established here when the country was in its infancy.

John O'Hara, of Bound Brook, rendered several pleasing vocal selections, and Professor Phelps presided at the meeting.

What He Got.

A good many years ago in the State of Iowa there was a small boy hoeing potatoes in a farm lot by the roadside. A man came along in a fine buggy and driving a fine horse. He looked over the fence, stopped and said; "Bub, what do you get for hoeing those potatoes?"

"Nothin' of I do," said the boy, "and hell of I don't." — Saturday Evening Post.

ROUTINE TRANSACTIONS OF THE COMMON COUNCIL

It was exactly 8.30 o'clock Monday night when the adjourned meeting of the Common Council convened and after remaining in session a half-hour, the members took a recess which lasted nearly an hour, to discuss matters pertaining to the tax budget. Later in the evening another recess was taken to allow Mr. Buxton to prepare a resolution.

Among the unimportant business considered was a petition for sidewalks on Berkeley avenue, between Denmark and Ravine roads, which was referred to the proper committee. Adam Fritz in a petition, asked the Council to either lease or sell him the city garbage disposal plant on DeKalb avenue. He wants to use the place to raise chickens. The matter was referred to the proper committee.

The Board of Directors of the Public Library and Reading Room certified that it would require $7,500 for the coming year and that amount was granted by a resolution offered by Mr. Buxton and building committee with power.

A communication received by the Board of Health from H. C. White, of the Plainfield Protective Association, relative to unnecessary noises made by the trolley cars, was referred to the Council and was referred to the committee on laws and ordinances.

Mr. Buxton presented the papers of agreement between the city and Muhlenberg Hospital in which the Board of Governors of the hospital agreed to care for the city's indigent poor for the coming year for $1,500 and Mr. Buxton then offered a resolution which das adopted, accepting the offer.

During the recess taken to discuss the tax budget, considerable time was taken up considering the salary of Jacob Dunham, the janitor of the building. He was receiving $35 a month, but had informed the finance committee that he could not live on that wage. He asked for an extra $10 a month, and it was granted after the Council had a talk with Mr. Dunham. The increase dates from January 1 last. Later Mr. Dunham publicly thanked the Council for granting his request.

The bond of Tax Collector W. R. Townsend was presented by Mr. Buxton, having been approved by Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh and was ordered recorded. On motion of Mr. Clay the hack ordinance was passed on the third reading, and is now in effect.

AGREED ON TAX BUDGET

Appropriations for the Various Departments Fixed for Year.

DETAILED FIGURES ARE GIVEN.

Exclusive of Fire, Poor, Library, School, State and County Taxes, the Combined Taxes Is $78,000.

The annual tax budget for 1910, which was presented at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council and passed on two readings Monday night, was the principal business considered. Although increased amounts were granted in some instances, the general amount to be raised the coming year by general taxation, exclusive of all State, county, school, fire, poor and library, is $78,000, which is $1,000 less than last year.

The amount given the street department is $40,000, an increase of $5,000. The fire department is given $37,000, an increase of $3,000. The sum of $2,500 is appropriated for the Shade Tree Commission, an increase of $250. The police department will receive $28,000 the same at last year. The sum of $8,500 is appropriated to the poor department, but in this is included $1,500 for Muhlenberg Hospital for the care of the indigent poor, a contract having been made with the Board of Governors for that amount, and an extra $500 for the poor department. An extra $500 is given the street lighting department, the appropriation being $16,000.

The Board of Health is given $7,500, the same at last year, while an extra appropriation of $1,000 for the use of the Playground Commission is granted.

The detailed figures for this year and last year follow:

METHOD OF INDUCING SLEEP

Self-Suggestion Plays a Great Part—Worry Is the Main Thing to Be Avoided.

The next point to bear in mind is that self-suggestion plays a great part in the production of sleep, writes Dr. S. McComb in Harper's Bazar. Ordinarily we do not sleep by accident or haphazard. We resolve to sleep. We go through a variety of actions all suggestive of a change from our normal waking condition. We undress, we place ourselves in a comfortable position, we close our eyes. We believe and expect that we are going to sleep, and the result is—sleep. One of the great preventatives of sleep is the fear of not sleeping. Once this fear is broken down, we sleep. The insomniac worries about his insomnia, and this very worry deepens the mischief. Hence the sufferer should suggest to himself again and again: "If I sleep, well; if I don't sleep I will at least gain rest by keeping my mind calm and my body relaxed." In a word, our chances of getting sleep increase if we assume the external physical attitude which corresponds to sleep, if we relax every muscle and let it stay relaxed, if we breathe lightly and regularly, if we call up the imaginations of a sleeping person, and talk and think sleep to ourselves, repeating silently and in a quiet dreamy fashion such a formula as this: "There is no reason why I should not sleep. My mind is at peace. Sleep is coming. I am getting sleepy. I am about to sleep. I am asleep."

EASY TO DETECT BAD MONEY

Hold Bill Up to the Light and Examine the Silk Threads in the Paper.

Despite the utmost vigilance of our efficient secret service men, the making counterfeit money in this country has not been wholly suppressed. Spurious coins and paper tokens occasionally get into circulation and some of these are so well done as almost to defy detection by experts.

Among the latest samples of the counterfeiters' art is a $10 bill, one of the cleverest imitations on record. A specimen of this issue was received and paid out by several banks, being regarded by all who handled it as genuine. In time it reached the subtreasury at New York and there its spuriousness at once became known.

On first inspection the bill appears to be a true product of the treasury department, but when held up to the light the little particles of silk, which in a genuine bill are curved and twisted in the paper, are seen to be straight and hard. A magnifying glass shows some very slight discrepancies between the face of the bill and that of a genuine one.

Subtreasury officials state that the bogus note was engraved by a master in the art who may once have been employed by the government engraving at Washington. Every person who receives a $10 bill, says Leslie's Weekly, should apply to it at least the simple test above given of holding it up to the light and noting the condition of the silk threads.

True to Memory of Beau Nash.

The famous Beau Nash was at one time extremely fond of a beautiful girl called Juliana Papjoy, sometimes known as the Bishopstrow belle. She used to ride about the streets of Bath on a fine gray horse carrying a whip with many thongs, a fad which gained for her the title of Lady Betty Besom. Juliana was very kind-hearted and during the last five years of the beau's life she nursed him devotedly. After his death it is avowed that she would never again sleep in a bed and took up her abode in a large hollow tree, where she lived for many years, earning a scanty livelihood by selling herb medicines and fetching and carrying. At last Juliana became very ill and, knowing she could not possibly recover, she felt an intense longing to die in her old cottage home at Bishopstrow. More dead than alive, she set out on this last journey, and starting in the old coach in which she was born in time to die there.

Eugene Field's Joke on Dr. Hale.

Edward Everett Hale greatly enjoyed a joke which was perpetrated on him by Eugene Field, says the Wouaan's Home Companion. Field celebrated one of Hale's visits to Chicago by giving a luncheon in his honor, inviting a number of prominent persons to meet him. "Field was aware," said Hale, "that I was a temperance man, and therefore I was somewhat surprised to see that the table on which the luncheon was served was very abundantly supplied with bottles labeled 'whisky,' 'brandy' and 'champagne.' But when these bottles came to be uncorked they were all found to contain nothing but water."

Different.

"I wrote him that I was ready to come home."

"Was he glad?"

"He wrote me that he would have to borrow money to pay my fare."

"What did you do?"

"I asked him what I should do, and he said he would borrow money enough for me to stay there a while longer."

Wallman—Yes.

Fetzer—Do you know why he doesn't give up his seat to that little thin woman standing in front of him?

Wallman—That's easy; he's too selfish.

Fetzer—No, you're mistaken. That's Millionaire Grippes. He made all his money by practicing economy, and the habit of wasting nothing is so strong in him that he would feel guilty if he gave his seat to a woman who was not large enough to fill it.

BUCKWHEATS VERSUS PIE

By BELLE MANIATES

Bertha awaited the coming of her caller without much animation.

"He won't come many times," she said to her mother. The other girls will get to inviting him and they will feed him with layer cakes and pies and ice cream. The boys say it's just like a poorhouse here. We never give them a thing to eat."

"Well, if that's all they come for, I'd be mighty glad to have them stay away. Pie and cake and ice cream is unhealthy stuff and I ain't going to have any in my house. This is no eating house."

Mrs. Willets snapped out this declaration and went upstairs to bed at her usual early hour. She relented enough to caution the two young boys, Richard and Bert, not to go into the sitting room.

"Bertha's going to have a beau," she informed, "and you can sit in the kitchen and study your lessons."

They obediently went to the kitchen, but did not study.

"Who's coming to see Bertha?" asked Bert.

"Red Raymond. He's been out west for four years, you know. Been a cowboy and shot Indians."

"Oh, I hope Bertha keeps him for a steady."

"She won't," replied Richard, who had been eavesdropping, "because ma won't let her make any pies and cake and stuff for him to eat."

"Huh!" commented Bert. "Tain't likely he's anything like these farmers around here. He won't care for pie and cake."

"Bertha don't seem to keep a fellow long," lamented Richard. "Ned Price only kept company a month. He says he likes fat girls with red cheeks. Bertha's pale and thin, you know."

"That's not a cowboy's style," remarked Bert, who had taken to drawing books from a circulating library, "They like the delicate kind."

The boys immediately set to work and when things were ready they marched into the sitting room, where Bertha, distrait from her mortification at not being able to offer Red cake and pie, was ill at ease and inattentive. She welcomed the diversion of the entrance of the boys.

"Say," said Bert, "Richard and I got hungry and we are going to have a spread in the kitchen. Don't you folks want to come out?"

"Sure we do," responded Red, promptly, rising from his chair with alacrity and following the boys.

Bertha obeyed with some trepidation.

"Oh, Lord!" ejaculated Red when he came into the big, warm kitchen and smelled the coffee. I do believe that's a stack of buckwheats. I used to dream about them when I was down in New Mexico."

Bertha's confidence rose. The boys had set the table nicely. The coffee smelled promising. There were a pitcher of cream and a jug of syrup on the table.

"Sit down," urged Bert. "I'll bake the cakes and Rich will serve you. Pour the coffee, Bertha."

"Say," inquired Richard, as he laid a golden-brown cake on Red's plate, "what did you call these? A what of buckwheats?"

"Stack," said Red, pouring about a pint of syrup over the cakes. "That's what they call them out west. Wheat cakes is a stack of whites. Poached eggs on toast is Adam and Eve on a raft—"

"Go on, tell more!" applauded Bert, waving a pancake turner excitedly in the air.

Red laughed and between cakes he related western tales to the boys' content.

"Is he coming again to-morrow night, Bertha?" whispered Richard from his room as his sister came upstairs at a late hour.

"Yes," she answered, happily, "it was just lovely of you, boys, to think of the cakes. He's going to bring you each a present to-morrow."

"It'll be all right for him," prophesied Bert. "You leave the feeding part to us."

The next night the little brothers again ushered themselves into the sitting room.

"We've got some Adams and Eves on rafts," grinned Richard.

"Well, you are the best chefs I know," said Red, approvingly, "and you bet you'll get a tip." He handed them each an Indian bow and arrows.

The next night, as sister's beau came up the lane, he was met by Bert. "Say," said the boy, doggedly, "before you come in there's something I want to tell you."

"All right, my boy. Fire away."

"You see there ain't anything to eat to-night and we've run out of coffee and I thought it only fair to tell you before you came in, so you could turn back if you wanted to. But it ain't Bertha's fault. It's mas that's stingy."

Red started a mountain and then burst into a hearty laugh.

"See here, Bert! You didn't think I came to your house to eat, did you? I came because I love your sister."

"Oh, Gee!" said the boy.

"The first time I set eyes on her I said, 'There's the girl for me.' When I called that first night she was so quiet I thought she didn't like me. I was clean discouraged till you boys broke the ice with your stack of buckwheats."

"Does Bertha know?"

"Well, I reckon she does unless she's a mighty poor guesser, but I am going to ask her plumb out to-night and I hope I'll be too happy to eat."

EXTRAORDINARY FEAT OF A NORTH PLAINFIELD HEN.

Will wonders never cease? Will hens ever stop putting forth freaks and undermining the credulity of man? No. Not so long as Jersey Specials run the rigs and Charlie Ellis cultivates hen fruit. Mr. Ellis lives at 151 Duer street, "over the brook," and the product of one of his hens which Mr. Ellis found in the nest Monday afternoon bids fair to beat the record for even Jersey hens.

An egg is an egg usually, but when an egg is not an egg has been demonstrated by this hen and from last accounts she is proud of it. An unusual cackling attracted Mr. Ellis to his henhouse last evening and upon investigating the cause discovered a rather matronly bird which, has never hitherto given evidences of being freakish, creating a tremendous rumpus near a nest over which she is supposed to reign supreme. Here, pitching with all her might, seemingly alive, Mr. Ellis found the most extraordinary specimen of an egg, or was it, or them, eggs, or both, egg or eggs? (Gee, but this is awful). Let us call it a pair, no not a pair, a dumbbell, that's it. An egg resembling a dumbbell. Neither end was hard shell, just a jelly-like combination joined together by what appeared to be ligament which was not hollow, and in one of the knobs of the "dumbbell" laid the yolk and in the other the white, or albumen of the egg, or was it, or were they eggs?

FIRST PRINTING BY STEAM

In these days, when the influence of the press is, one might almost say, paramount, it is interesting to recall the fact that on November 29, 1814, a newspaper appeared for the first time printed by steam instead of by manual labor, says the London Globe. The credit for having adopted the invention rests with the Times, which was the first paper to inaugurate the new system. In a leading article of the day the great event is referred to in the following terms:

"Our journal of this day presents to the public the practical result of the greatest improvement connected with printing since the discovery of the art itself. The reader of this paragraph now holds in his hands one of the many thousand impressions of the Times newspaper which were taken off last night by a mechanical apparatus. A system of machinery, almost organic, has been devised and arranged which while it relieves the human frame of its laborious efforts in printing, far exceeds human power in rapidity and despatch."

The article goes on to explain in more or less detail the process of the new machine, the work of the compositors, the supply of paper, the distribution of ink, the 1,100 sheets impressed in an hour, "which several operations leave little for man to do but watch the unconscious agent in its operations." With becoming modesty the writer of the article goes on to say that the Times only takes credit for the application of the discovery. The patentees of the new machine approached them and they adopted the invention.

As to the inventor, his work is compared to the noblest monument of Sir Christopher Wren—St. Paul's Cathedral. We are told that he was a Saxon by birth, by name Konig, who developed this wonderful invention, assisted by his "friend and countryman Bauer." Very soon the new machine gave place to another with vast improvements, invented by Applegarth and Cowper, and later still to another, even more ingenious the work of one Hoe, which has given place to the modern printing press. Everything changes; the most marvelous invention of one generation is superseded in the next, and what our grandfathers regarded as mechanical marvels we look upon today as clumsy tools. How long will it be before the present system of printing is discarded for a still more wonderful process.

The art of printing, as also that of engraving, existed long before the fifteenth century. Indeed there is good evidence to show that in the seventeenth century it was practiced by kings and princes. Thus William the Conqueror had his monogram cut in metal, the impression of which may be seen on certain old charters. In the East printing was known long before Norman days. In China, for instance, as far back as the second century many of the most important classical works were ingraved on tablets, some of which have been preserved to this day.

Again, in Japan, the art of block printing was well known in the year 770; while as for copper types, the invention is attributed to the Coreans. Yet dispite all evidence that the East discovered and practised the art long before the West trustworthy authority refuse to admit that Europe learned anything from China or Japan. But however, that may be, printing much as we see it today, was perfected at Maint in the year 1454. As to when, where, and by whom the art was discovered the controversy raged for many years. An Italian, Costaldi by name, who lived in the middle of the fifteenth century, was for many years accepted as the inventor of the art. By others John Gutenberg, a native of Bohemia, was regarded as the true author. In other cities Johann Faust, Mentel of Strasburg and Nicholas Jansen all had their supporters.

When all the evidence, however, of the various claimants has been inquired into the result leads us to the conclusion that printing with movable metal types was the invention of Janszoon Coster, who displayed his skill at Haarlem in the year 1445. From this time onward improvements followed quickly. Thus the hand press is now superseded by the most wonderful of mechanical machines. In the olden days, and indeed until comparatively recent years, the old printers were entirely independent of every other craft, they carried on their work unassisted one man being able to do all that was required for the production of a document. He mixed his own ink and cast the type. In short, he was his own master and could produce everything necessary to carry on his trade. How different are things nowadays, when the staff of an important London paper numbers some hundreds of individuals.

In the fifteenth century, moreover, there were many itinerant printers who wandered through Europe and set up a press wherever they went. It follows form this that the plan required must have been very limited. In this respect it is curious to notice that as regards the shape of the actual types there is no great difference between the old and the modern. Thus the pureRoman type, such as is used today, is in reality nothing more than an improved edition of a particular writing well known in the eighth century.

In conclusion nothing has given a greater impetus to the art of printing or has tended more ot develop the printing machine than education. As people become more educated so they demanded more books, whereas in olden days a book was a luxury, owing to the expense of printing. So inexpensive has the process now become that whereas formerly the Bible—and not always that—constituted the entire library of a cottage, today the latest productions may be bought by those possessed of the smallest means. And for this change of affairs no journal is more responsible than the London Times, the first paper to introduce steam printing.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 17, 1910.

Topic—Good cheer in dark days—Acts xxvii, 20-36. Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

In the story of part of Paul's journey from Caesarea to Rome Luke has given us a most vivid account of a shipwreck. Starting out from Fair Havens against the advice of the apostle on account of the stormy character of the sea at that time of the year, they advanced safely for a time and were then struck by a terrible tempest or typhoon, in which they were tossed about for more than two weeks. For many days they saw neither sun nor stars, the only guides of seamen in the days before the compass had been invented. For fourteen days they ate nothing. The provisions were probably soaked with water and all fires extinguished, and, furthermore, they were occupied all the time with trying to keep the large vessel afloat. All hope was abandoned. Paul absented himself. He spent the time undoubtedly in prayer for himself and all on shipboard. Then he appeared, addressed the men, telling them that he had had a revelation from God and that he believed God, and exhorted them to be "of good cheer," because there would not be a life lost except the ship. Later on they ate at Paul's advice, with thanksgiving to God, blessed the bread and ate of it. "Then they were all of good cheer, and they also took some meat." Shortly after the ship was wrecked upon the island of Malta, and not one of the 276 souls on board was lost. God's promise was fulfilled, and in answer to Paul's prayer He had saved all on board. Darker days could scarcely be imagined, and the "good cheer" of Paul must have been an inspiration to them all.

In the voyage of life there are also dark days, sometimes darker days than those upon a starless sea, when only the physical life is in danger. There are dark days of sickness, sometimes testing for young; dark days as the result of bereavement or financial disaster; dark days brought about by poverty, want and need. In addition, there are dark spiritual days. The soul cannot see God. Doubt and distrust in the way creep into the heart, and it seems as if God has deserted us or as if there were no God. Each one may think that his days are the darkest of all, but let him not so mistrust God. Every life has its own trials and dark days, and we frequently do not know what others endure and suffer. But "every heart knoweth its own sorrow," and thousands have aching, breaking hearts of which the world knows nothing.

The causes of dark days are not always known. Here it was disobedience to God, who spoke through the apostle. Had they taken Paul's advice and remained at Fair Havens over the winter this shipwreck would probably never have happened. But Paul's advice was disobeyed, and the dark days came. Many dark days are caused by disobedience to God. Saul as king of Israel was most prosperous and successful. In three wars against the enemies of his kingdom by the presence and help of God he won glorious victories. But in the last war he disobeyed God in not destroying the enemy and all their flocks and herds. God called him to an account, and he tried first to deny, then to extenuate his offense, but it was useless, and darkness, indeed, came upon him politically, mentally and spiritually. But in many cases the causes of dark days of affliction, trial, bereavement and temptation are unknown to us. All we can do is to trust God and "be of good cheer," making His will our will.

The source of good cheer in dark days is God. To the disciples Christ, who is God, said, "Be of good cheer." And in the midst of these dark days Paul went to God. He believed in God and prayed for himself and all on board, and, getting the answer from God, he called upon all to "be of good cheer," and offer up unto His own people to carry good cheer to others. Do you know any one in distress, any one in sickness, any one bereaved, any one passing through hard times? Pray to God for him, believe in God and carry them His message of good cheer.

The Christian Endeavor Vine.
[Copyrighted. Used by permission.]

The marvel of the world of thought, of matter and of deed,
All promise and all potencies lie hidden in a seed.
And those of ours, in wintry soil laid prayerfully away,
How has it grown and spread abroad by common day!
How deep its roots have pierced the ground! How far its tendrils run!
How broad the shadow cast by its leaves beneath the circling sun!
To north and south, to east and west, the glorious vine extends,
Around the sweep of all the earth its gracious fruitage bends
Till Christ in all its hopefulness and India owns the spell,
And all the islands of the sea its gladness shall foretell,
And Europe's lordliest of lands, and Africa's distant plains,
And where the tropic splendors glow or arctic stillness reigns,
By all of heaven's sunshine cheered, by all its nurture fed,
Wherever men have built their homes this mystic vine has spread.
The clusters of its growing fruit are full and fair and free,
And hanging low where all the world may haply taste and see.
And some are prayers, some are words of helpful kindliness,
And some are deeds of loving hearts that quicken, heal and bless.
For He who is the living Vine, whose life in all its veins
Was beating in the earlier days and yet its strength remains,
He planted it. He nourished it, and He will tend it still.
The flower of His perfect love, the fruit-age of His will.

GREET REV. MR. MAGUIRE

Rev. Dr. Eaton and Others Speak at Park Avenue Church Service.

DR. VASSAR MAKES ADDRESS.

New Local Pastor Given Cordial Welcome—C. W. McCutchen Presides—Reception Follows Service.

Ministers and members of nearly all the churches in the city and borough joined Thursday in recognition service and reception for Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, the new pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and his family. It was an auspicious occasion for the Park Avenue church. The auditorium was filled with worshippers and the services were of an interesting character. All of the city and borough evangelical pastors were present, with the exception of Rev. Dr. J. A. Chamblis, of the First Baptist church. Charles W. McCutchen, who presided, conveyed the doctor's regrets in being called away.

Seated on the platform were Rev. Dr. Charles E. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York city, through whose good offices, Mr. Maguire came to Plainfield; Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church; Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church; Rev. J. W. Musson, of the Temple Baptist church; Rev. Dr. T. E. Vassar, of Elizabeth, representing the ministers of the State, and the East New Jersey Baptist Association, and Civ Judge William N. Runyon, who extended the welcome to the city.

The services opened with an organ voluntary by Robert Humpstone, and an anthem by the chorus choir. Following the singing of a hymn, the Scripture lesson was read by Rev. Dr. Anderson, after which Mr. Musson offered prayer.

"This is a joyous occasion for this and other Baptist churches, as well as all other churches of the city," said Mr. Cutchen, for it reminisces an ecclesiastical wedding of this pastor and this people and we are here to ratify and approve the union. It is appropriate that we should do this. I now take pleasure in presenting Bishop T. E. Vassar, who will extend a welcome to Pastor Maguire to the State."

Dr. Vassar, who is one of the leading Baptist ministers in the State, began by saying that one hundred years ago there were four Baptist churches in Philadelphia, and recently he picked up a book which told how the members of these churches got together and prayed for the safety of a minister and his wife, who were about to go into missionary work in Ohio.

"I don't believe that Dr. Eaton found many wigwams on Euclid avenue, Cleveland, while he was in that city. And we are reminded that that State has furnished four of our Presidents. I imagine that Mr. Maguire will be a little cramped in this State, which is only about seventy miles wide. Although Ohio has about 47,000 square miles, there are more Baptists to the square mile in New Jersey than in the Buckeye State, and there are proportionately more in Plainfield than in Cleveland. I know the streets of Plainfield well, I guess, as many of you who have been here more years than I have; and as I walk about, I notice wonderful development. I believe the hour has struck for the Park Avenue Baptist church. You've got a magnificent church. I believe this church is entering upon the greatest era in its history. You have a good newspaper press; they'll treat you as a white man ought to be treated. The other night I talked before a lot of men in my own church. The next day I saw in the paper what was supposed to be an account of my talk. Every two and a half lines contained a misstatement, and I soon discovered the reason for this. The reporter who had taken down my talk, told me that he was an anarchist in religion; he was a Mormon, born in Utah, his father being high up in office in the Mormon church.

"That wasn't the kind of a man to report a religious meeting. You wouldn't send a blind man to view a painting. All this occurred in New York. They haven't a lot of lunatics here in Plainfield to send out to report affairs.

"I have been impressed tonight with the note of largeness apparent in the remarks of every speaker. You do not come to the Park Avenue Baptist church, my brother, for this church alone. The work in this community is not work for one denomination, but you all swim together. If the Park Avenue church fails, it will make it harder for all the other churches. If Mr. Maguire succeeds, it will make it easier for the other churches in Plainfield.

"You cannot find a place with people more intellectual and Christ-like than they are in Plainfield. We have a right to expect that powerful men will make themselves felt throughout the land. I welcome you, my dear brother. I rejoice friends of the Park Avenue church in the leader whom God has sent you. I predict in the days to come the happiest and most useful era in your history."

Mr. Maguire made a brief and happy response. He spoke on the topic of "Liberty, Equality and Fraternity," which adorns the entrance to the legislative hall in Paris, and had something pertinent to say of each one. He said that it was with the knowledge of liberty and the desire to make others free that he came to Plainfield.

"I come here with a spirit of fraternity and love," said Mr. Maguire, "and I thank you kind friends for calling me to follow my illustrious predecessor, Dr. Lowry. I thank you all for the kind words spoken. Now the time of Maguire, the time to reap, and my prayer is that God will bless us in His work. Again I thank you for kind words of hope, encouragement and cheer."

After the service a reception was held in the parlors, when all greeted Mr. and Mrs. Maguire, and their daughter. The committees in charge follow:

Pulpit, David M. Runyon, chairman; Mrs. Charles VanWinkle, George W. V. Moy, Mrs. C. K. Compton, Nelson Runyon and Theodore I. Runyon; decoration, Mrs. Charles VanWinkle; refreshment, Mrs. W. S. Lowry; waitresses, the Misses Hannah and Sara Boyd, Alice Brown, Eleanor Stutsman, Lillian Cuming and Emily Templin. A feature was selections by G. W. V. Moy's orchestra.

TEN MILE MOTOR RACE FOR SATURDAY'S MEET

Plainfield's motorcycle race meet, which will be held on the Driving Association's track next Saturday afternoon, April 16, promises to be the real thing in motor racing. Entries are coming in rapidly and as it is Plainfield's initial try at motorcycle racing interest in the affair is keen. Crack riders from throughout the Metropolitan district will be on hand, coming from Newark, New York, Brooklyn and other sections.

Six events will claim the attention of the riders and there is much variety to the program. Plainfield and nearby riders will be taken care of in two events in which they will be about the only contestants. The first is a two-mile novice and the second a five-mile handicap in which Plainfield riders only are eligible. They will also be free to compete in all other races. Particularly handsome prizes are to be offered, in each case a gold watch will be given to the winners.

The other events and the ones in which the stars will appear along with others are a five-mile handicap for twin cylinder machines, three-mile scratch race for single cylinder motors, one-mile novelty event and a ten-mile handicap for double cylinder motorcycles. This latter will be the big race of the day and track records are likely in the race. Most of the machines will be entered by the manufacturers throughout the East and they will be equipped with special racing machines.

Entries are being received at Plainfield by A. D. Honeyman, 112 Madison avenue, or by any of the Plainfield agents. Claude E. Holgate, of 122 Union street, Newark, is taking the entries of the riders in his city as well as from the Metropolitan district.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

God bless T. R., our nation's noblest drummer!
God bless the Pope! and give him peace all summer.
The junior, Theocrat by self design,
The senior, Theocrat, by "right divine."
Each lord inperious in his boundless sphere,
Our Dominie, to scold and domineer.
The one does all our thinking here below,
The other warns where all such thinkers go.
Young Theo fires 12,000 to their doom,
Although not sinners, but it makes a boom;
Good Pius send not beasts, being humaney,
Where Father sent Spain's warriors at El Caney.
Both condescend to pity our sad state,
Both are our heaven-sent guides to happier fate;
Each claims the homage of this wicked world
On bended knee whene'er His flag's unfurled,
And to their superhuman power we bow
In humble supplicance, with a pious vow
Forevermore to think, speak, act, and see
According to their will—when they agree
To show wherein the sacred secret lies
Which makes them always more than mortal wise,
And answer this—we ask in all humility—
Can both Popes, rivals, claim infallibility?

We are a real Republic and scorn the pomp and etiquette and ceremonialism of the Courts of effete monarchies. True, our last President inaugurated a rigid etiquette, formulated new ceremonial observances, installed a new order of what we used to poke fun at as the Court Flunkey squad, gorgeous in gold lace, white silk stockings and short plush pants, so alien to our Puritan traditions. It was also proclaimed in the press that at receptions and before dinner in the White House—now glorified into The Executive Mansion (or is it Palace) the approach of the awe-inspiring Presence will heaceforth be heralded by a fanfaronade of trumpets, or by Heiland Bagpipes when his grace the Juke of Skibereen deigns to dine with Majesty. The more singular it is that a private American gentleman, well-knowing and enforcing the etiquette proper to all receptions in the White House, should kick at the very simple and easy rule of conforming to other people's rules. A tempest in a teapot is important or ridiculous as it happens to be filled with cold etiquette water or boiling hot t-emper.

We know the brotherhood of professional "humorists" less by their output of the real article than by their fraternal habit of dining together and swearing that each is a greater one than all the rest. Humor, nevertheless, is not and can never be a manufactured thing, it is spontaneous and ever-flowing, and the best made-up imitation only shows up the lack of the genuine. Why can't the ungifted be content to cultivate simple good-humor, a quality far too scarce and more precious than golden dollars or brazen pretence. What "funny man" ever equalled our schoolboy and girl in drollery most exquisite because perfectly unconscious? I am not saying they are "humorists," any more than professionals naturally are, but they are drolls, so droll, all unconsciously, that their output gives us unalloyed delight, greater than mere funny stories usually give to our sober minds.

Here are few bona fide examples from the exam. papers of schoolboys:

Lord Raleigh was the first man to see the Invisible Armada.

In India a man out of cask may not marry a woman out of another cask.

Tennyson wrote "In Memoriandum."

The Swedish runner Ljungstrom, to whose great performance we referred a few weeks ago, won the Marathon at the New York Polo grounds the other day in seven minutes under the world record. As no reader wrote to The Plainfield Press in comment on our paragraph telling that these victories have been won on what is called the vegetarian diet, one is in doubt whether our readers believe it or don't, like it or don't or whether they read it dozing. The point of more or less importance is the bearing of this fact on the groan over the dearness of meats. If there is a sincere desire to cut down expenses and still keep up the feeding quality of our daily foods, it would seem that some readers would stir up a correspondence by courtesy of the editor. The love of discussion appears to be dormant. Perhaps all our readers are in the beef business. Even so, some of us would welcome them into the ring. I would pit them with sundry questions, for the enlightenment of self and the public. Such as—how is it that deep red beef is preferred to yellow-mottled beef? The first is priceless as a bullet blanket, the yellow is rich in gravy and flavour, richer in nutrition and fifty times nicer to eat. This will suffice for the present.

Actually, New York is making-believe to get ready to begin trying to stop the habit of running foul smoking gasoline pipes by autos. Last summer the Aldermen who gave Cook the "freedom of the city," which is just a drink out of an empty glass, drew up a lot of equally powerful ordinances to kill the public nuisance. Not one of the drivers were to be punished by everything but hanging. Particularly the autos were not to indulge in smoking Central Park. We sat there one crowded summer afternoon. Twenty-three went by in ten minutes, each leaving a trail of stench, while two uniformed Park police stood idly by, and one Park constable helped them.

TALKED ON EDUCATION

School Principals Made Addresses at Board of Trade Meeting.

THEIR WORK IS EXPLAINED.

Maxson, Krebs, Grossmann, Lovell and Herr were Heard—Board Is by Resolution Endorses Public School Methods.

Members of the Board of Trade heard several instructive talks on education at the regular monthly meeting of the board Thursday evening. Speech was made by Supervising Principal H. C. Krebs, of the borough school, Superintendent Henry M. Maxson, of the city schools; A. S. Herr, of the Plainfield Business College; Dr. M. Grossmann, of the Grossmann School;; and Leander N. Lovell, of the Plainfield Board of Education.

Mr. Lovell reviewed the history of the public school system from the little red schoolhouse to the present time of modern fire-proof structures. He also explained the State laws which regulate the work of school boards. In the construction of new buildings he stated that school boards are compelled to observe the different laws closely. The speaker defended the present system of curriculum and added that he agreed that is plenty of room for discussion, as to what studies should be taken up, particularly after the pupil has entered the High School.

"The problem is a growing one," said Mr. Lovell, "and as long as men think differently the drivers long will there be dissatisfaction with conditions, as they really exist." He also paid a high tribute to the teachers in the city and borough schools and congratulated the Board of Trade for interesting itself in the schools.

Dr. Maxson spoke on educational matters from a general standpoint. "The work of the Plainfield schools is well and favorably known," he said, "and we are trying to meet each phase of the situation, as it comes before us." The employment of competent teachers he held was responsible for the high standard of education.

Superintendent H. C. Krebs gave an interesting talk on the relations of teacher and pupil. He told how "the boys in school" developed into useful members of society and had accomplished great things in the commercial and scientific world. He also dwelt on the phase of education as dealing with the individual pupil.

"A great deal of work is being done," said Mr. Krebs, "in the direction of aiding those who find it a little difficult to keep up with others in the classroom, and in the borough school at the present time, we have our class for backward pupils." Good results are being secured by this system he declared.

Dr. Grossmann, principal of the School of Exceptional Children, told of the progress being made in the education in his institution. Mr. Herr gave a short talk on educating young people for the commercial world.

THE MORALITY OF HEALTH

Topic of Intense Interest to All Humans Presented at All Souls' Church.

MRS. ANNA G. SPENCER SPEAKS.

Methods of Caring for the Body as Well as the Soul Needed—Other Lectures to Follow.

The first of a series of "social welfare services was held in All Souls' church Sunday. Mrs. Anna Garlin Spencer being the speaker. A fairly large audience made up from the membership of various denominations listened with deep interest to the address which had for its topic, "The New Morality of Health."

Mrs. Spencer gave evidence of a close knowledge of social conditions and gave in detail some of the remedies which under the auspices of various societies here and elsewhere are being applied to relieve, uphuild and energize those who are ignorant of the relation which good health bears to correct living.

The fight being waged by modern students of social and ethical economics for the enlightenment of the people, the necessity for the propaganda against asceticism and uncleanness all were touched upon vigorously and with a clearsightedness which held the attention of all until the last sentence was spoken.

Mrs. Spencer pointed out the conditions under which children are ushered into the world; the mortality of babies up to five years old; how the little ones are now being cared for among the poorer classes; how Dr. Josephine Baker, of New York, feels the pulses of all the tenement babies through her corps of physicians, and lastly how these little ones are catalogued so that their progress from week to week may be carefully noted and helped.

When criminals are being looked after in these days of advanced thought. That is, their surroundings from a sanitary standpoint. The old prison walls of Sing Sing contain unlimited millions of germs of tuberculosis and fevers, according to the speaker, and these men and women should not be tortured although they must take their punishment. They have the inalienable right of protection against disease. Plagues and epidemics are all attributable to the sins of ommission and commission of men, but that should not condemn the whole social fabric; it should be remedied and that is what is being done. In this connection Mrs. Spencer said that the annual epidemic of typhoid fever in the city of Philadelphia is the direct result of graft. Pittsburgh, too, came in for a similar hailing over.

The investigations which are being made in every city are disclosing strange and appalling facts regarding infant mortality. New Zealand shows the best death rate among children between the ages of one and five years, the figures showing that only one in thirteen male children dies while one in sixteen of female children dies between those years, but in New York and other localities it is vastly worse; one in six in New York.

Working girls whose average time behind the counter or at the machine is seven and a half years, generally bring into the home, if they marry, a broken down body unequal to the task of properly bringing up a family of children, or being mothers of healthy children. These conditions are being remedied as fast and as much as possible. Premiature old age is another of the troubles which have been investigated by the societies and remedies pointed out. Certain hours of rest, good healthy food and a certain amount of exercise are demanded for those whose sedentary habits and occupations make them grow old faster than nature intended them to do. A man instead of being old and laid on the shelf at forty-five should at that age be in the prime of life and even remain vigorous until he is eighty or ninety.

Then the matter of personal cleanliness has much to do with physical betterment. The speaker told of a case discovered by a school teacher in one of the new schools where shower baths have been installed. It was decided to let the children know that once a week all must have their bodies washed. One little girl refused three weeks successively to submit to the treatment. The teacher wrote to her mother telling of the girl's conduct which brought the reply that "my little girl is sewed up for the winter and I am not going to unsew her to get her skin wet as that will make her sick." Mrs. Spencer told what effect this would have on the child's after life if she learned then how wrong her mother was. Many other interesting things were told which enlightened the audience on questions relating to the reasons for the unclean habits, and it was declared that bigotry was one of the strongest enemies of the system in vogue to increase the desire to live a right life. The real new religion will be the one which will make the caring for the body equally as necessary as the care of the soul in fact it has already been demonstrated that both are entitled to the same careful consideration in order to perfect the race.

Next Sunday evening Rev. Thomas R. Sliver, of New York, pastor of All Souls' church, and prominent in civic reform in both Buffalo and Manhattan, will be the speaker. His topic will be "The Vain Hope of Socialism." Rev. Bernard J. Newman, pastor of the Willow Place chapel of Brooklyn, will speak on the following Sunday evening on "The Housing Problem." The meetings are free to all and a large audience is expected to attend the next two lectures. The last lecture will be illustrated by stereopticon.

MISSIONARY MEETING ON NEXT FRIDAY NIGHT

Plans are completed for the Young People's Union Missionary and conference to be held at the First M. E. church, Friday night. On that occasion all the Christian Endevor Societies, Epworth Leagues and independent societies, as well as the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A., have been invited to be present. The church congregations have also been included.

The meeting will be addressed by W. E. Doughty, a worker of the Young People's Interdenominational Movement, under whose auspices he comes to this city.

At 7:15 the executive officers of the various young people's societies, Sunday school officers, pastors and missionary committees will hold a conference in Vincent chapel to hear Mr. Doughty on "The World Responsibility of the Young People and Missionary Education in the Sunday schools."

After the conference those attending are invited to remain for the mass meeting in the main auditorium, where the same speaker, assisted by B. C. Bosnarjee, a native convert of India, will lecture and show moving pictures of "India and the Silver Bay Conferences." An offering to defray the necessary expenses of the enterprise will be received, but otherwise admission is free to all.

FIRE HYDRANT WORSTED IN SCRAP WITH AUTO

Notwithstanding the agitation which is prominent now in all the civic and other circles in the city there happened an incident, or it might better be called an accident, Monday morning which will cost the motor company something and perhaps eventually somebody else a trifling sum and in which water will be the paramount issue.

When Michael Waldron lost control of an automobile he was driving Monday morning around the corner of Fourth street in Watchung avenue one of the fire hydrants stood in the way of his onward progress with the result that the hydrant, as well as the machine, was rendered hors de combat and in a jiffy a geyser was spouting five feet high and "the gift of nature" went swirling down both streets in an irresistible stream. It spouted for at least a half hour before an employe of the water company could turn it off and in the meantime some attention was given to the automobile.

The machine was "Mfrs., 12," the property of the Laing Automobile Company. The hydrant before giving way to the onslaught of the machine managed to put it out of business puncturing the front of the radiator enough to show its indignation at being summarily knocked from its place of silent vigil in front of Marshall's laundry. Fortunately for the machine none of their household linen at the cleansing establishment the slight deviation from the path of rectitude on the part of the automobile will not affect the water supply in that place of cleanliness and business is going on as usual.

JURORS PRESENT "OUR MUTUAL FRIEND."

"Our Mutual Friend" was presented by the junior class of the Plainfield High School, Saturday night, to much merited praise. Miss Pyrra Stiles played the leading part of "Bella" with much ability. Everitt Smith, as "Rokesmith," fitted the part well and was an ardent lover. Miss Bertha Nelson and Nelson Ramsdell, and Mrs. Bolm, "the gift of nature" went swirling down both streets in an irresistible stream. It spouted for at least a half hour before an employe of the water company could turn it off and in the meantime some attention was given to the automobile.

TROLLEY RAMS AUTOCAR

Leonard W. Lott, of Fanwood, and F. O. Ball, of Mountainside, Injured.

LACERATED HEADS AND FACES.

Responsibility for Accident Not Yet Determined—Muhlenberg Hospital Gets One Patient, the Other at Home.

An accident which might have resulted more seriously occurred in Fanwood Sunday a little after noon and as a result F. O. Ball, a nurseryman, of Mountainside, is in Muhlenberg Hospital severely injured, and Leonard W. Lott, of Fanwood, is confined to the house with several stitches in his forehead. Mr. Lott and Mr. Ball were in the former's automobile and were driving slowly with the clutch in the intermediate speed, when trolley car No. 1973, in charge of Motorman James Donohue and Conductor John R. Low, both of Bound Brook, side swiped teh auto, throwing its two occupants out onto the road, and the automobile up against a telegraph pole, damaging the machine badly.

Mr. Lott, who was driving the car, escaped with a badly lacerated face and forehead and was taken to his home in a carriage, but Mr. Ball was less fortunate. He received a gash in the back of his head and had his arm severely injured though not broken. It was at first thought that he was injured internally, but after a thorough examination at the hospital it was found to be not so. Dr. F. W. Westcott attended both men.

As to the responsibility for the accident it will probably have to be decided by the courts. It is claimed, however, that the trolley car was going at such terrific speed that it was impossible for the motorman to bring it to a stop before traversing more than 300 feet beyond the scene of the accident. Mr. Lott states that he was going slowly and that if the motorman had used ordinary caution the accident could have been avoided. The spot where the accident happened, Forest and Westfield avenues, gives clear views in both directions, yet the motorman claims that the blame lies with Mr. Lott because of carelessness. On the other hand people living in the neighborhood claim that it is the rule that the trolley crews use this stretch of road to make up time and invariably hit up the pace at this point.

This is Mr. Lott's second accident since owning the machine. The car skidded several weeks ago landing against a tree, but on this occasion Mr. Lott was not injured, but the machine was damaged.

George C. M. Smith was chairman of the committee of arrangements and the dinner was served under the direction of Mrs. Johnson.

LAND SYNDICATE WANTS ALBERT STREET EXTENDED

Notwithstanding the Plainfield Park associates have failed to come to an agreement with either the municipal authorities of the city or borough regarding the establishment of a public park in the West End of the city and borough, the Common Council, at its adjourned meeting Monday, received a petition from the syndicate, asking that Albert street be opened up across Green brook. It was stated that the freeholders are willing to erect a new bridge over the brook at this point, where the old one stood a few years ago.

The councilmen are not likely to favor the improvement, however, for there is a movement on foot to open up Dunellen avenue, and erect a bridge over Green brook at that point to connect Myrtle avenue in the borough.

Albert street has been closed and used for farming and pasturing purposes since 1881, the year that the old bridge was washed away and it has been fenced in on both Dunellen avenue and Greenbrook road. It seemed to be the opinion last night that the asked for improvement would be solely for the benefit of the park Syndicate. The petition was referred to the street committee.

ST. JOSEPH'S FUND HELPED BY CONCERT

A splendid audience attended the concert given in Y. M. C. A. hall on Friday night for the benefit of the building fund of St. Joseph's church and those who were present will remember the great musical treat for many days to come. The artists whose names appeared on the program more than lived up to their reputations and the magnificent playing by Joseph A. Denny, a violinist, whose marvelous technique brought him the approbation of Ysaye the virtuoso, gave a remarkable interpretation of difficult music.

Miss Mathilde Bruguiere, soprano, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera house, New York, was another whose splendid accomplishments were applauded. Mr. Denny is undoubtedly a master of the violin. He played with a finesse and poise astonishing in one so young. Chopin's Valse, Opus 64 No. 2, by special request. Both artists responded generously with encores and delighted the audience by their selections.

Mrs. Winser, who has pleased many audiences in Brooklyn, sang several numbers with marked ability. Mrs. F. M. Ward, whose splendid contralto voice has been heard by Plainfield audiences before with refinement and taste. Miss Ida Randolph Smalley, was heard to advantage in a Liszt Rhapsody as a piano solo and Herbert Smith's work on the 'cello received approbation. The entire program was splendid.

The event was celebrated at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. A. Tilney, 966 Central avenue who with Mrs. Townsend Claiborne and Mrs. J. W. Sandford, two other daughters, helped to make the event one to be remembered by the whole family.

Twenty-five of the children and grandchildren enjoyed the afternoon and evening at a dinner and a quiet celebration during which the younger members enjoyed a little dance and some music.

Mrs. Murray was the recipient of many beautiful floral remembrances from friends. The carnations and roses received during the day would easily have filled an ordinary room. At the dinner the dining room was resplendant in yellow and white and the whole scene was one to claim admiration. Mrs. Murray also received a handsome traveling bag from her family besides the many congratulations.

Winding Sticks.

A practical way of preserving the ribbon of the sticks that is threaded through lingerie embroideries is provided by a stick furnished with a series of springs that hold one of the ribbons securely while the length is neatly wound round the stick. The stick is gilded to make it look pretty and has ornamental ends. It is large enough to take several coils of various widths, and yet not too large to be inconvenient in the work basket.

N.P.H.S. STARTS OFF WITH A VICTORY

North Plainfield High's baseball warriors opened the season on Saturday afternoon at Bound Brook with a 9 to 3 victory over the high school combination of that place. Despite the bad condition of the field the borough athletes put up a fast article of ball. C. Smith baffled the Bound Brook nine with a fine assortment of curves and Percy Bailey distinguished himself by rapping out a brace of doubles. Stine also caught a steady game behind the bat. WOMAN'S BURNS FATAL

Mrs. Fanny Van Cleef Meets Horrible Death at East Millstone.

BLAZING LAMP THE CAUSE.

Her Night Dress Caught Fire and After Suffering Terrible Agonies for a Day She Passes Away.

Mrs. Fanny VanCleef, widow of Freeholder Cornelius G. VanCleef, aged about sixty-five years, died at her home in East Millstone, Sunday night, as the result of burns received on Saturday night while trying to throw a blazing hanging lamp out of the window. The lamp was suspended in a frame in the dining-room and in trying to release it from the frame, she upset some of the burning oil which set fire to her night clothes.

Before the flames could be extinguished, Mrs. VanCleef's feet and practically her whole body, arms and hands were burned terribly. As soon as the local physician was summoned he saw that Mrs. VanCleef's burns were fatal. She was only conscious at times and passed away about twenty-four hours after the accident.

Mrs. VanCleef had retired for the night, when her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Arthur VanCleef, in attempting to extinguish the lamp, turned the wick too low in the oil. In an instant the lamp was in a blaze.

Mrs. Arthur VanCleef's screams attracted her mother-in-law, who hastened to assist her inthrowing the lamp out of the window. The lamp was caught in some way and the burning oil set fire to her night clothes. The neighbors responded quickly, but Mrs. VanCleef was beyond help. All they could do was to put out the fire in the house.

Mrs. VanCleef's maiden name was Miss Fanny Rohrback VanPelt and she was a native of New York State. She removed to New Jersey when a child. When a young woman she was first married to Jehial VanCleef, of East Millstone, a brother of Tenadore VanCleef, of West End avenue, and Mrs. Garret Eick, of Third avenue, this street. He died in 1893. A few years ago she married Freeholder Cornelius G. VanCleef, also of East Millstone, who died three or four years ago. She is survived by one son, Arthur VanCleef, who is well known here.

FORT'S ACTION ON BILLS

When Governor Cleared His Desk He Had Disposed of 206 Measures.

FIFTY VETOES ALTOGETHER.

Child Labor Act and Contributory Negligence Bill Are Approved by Him—Some Other New Statutes.

At exactly 9:30 o'clock last night Governor Fort walked out of his office at the State House at Trenton with his desk cleaned of all the 206 bills left for his disposal by the Legislature when it adjourned last Thursday morning. His final official act was to file without his approval thirteen bills originating in the Senate and twenty-six originating in the Assembly, these thirty-nine measures thereby failing to become laws. As he had previously advised the Legislature when in session of about a dozen vetoes, this brings the total of bills that were disapproved of by the Governor up a half hundred. The Governor yesterday issued public the reasons for seventeen of his vetoes since the Legislature adjourned, and on Thursday will give out for publication the reasons for disapproving of the other tabooed bills.

One bill in which there is great interest and the fate of which is in his hands the Governor did not last night make public, is the Ramsey bill aiming to regulate the practice of osteopathy. "I have disposed of this bill," said the Governor as he left the State House last night, "but I shall not announce my action until tomorrow."

The last bill disposed of by the Governor was the annual appropriation bill. The only cuts he made in the appropriations were eliminations of five items, totalling $25,300, from the money which the Legislature authorized for the State Fish and Game Commission. The Governor believes that as the commission is now receiving about $60,000 annually from the gunners' license law, it does not need all the appropriations fixed by the Legislature.

The Governor also vetoed Senate bill 242 which authorized the Game and Fish Commission to increase the number of wardens from twenty-five to twenty-eight, and also increasing their pay from $500 to $800 annually. His chief objection to this bill was that it proposed to take out of civil service the game wardens. The Governor said that he would not stand for any attack on the civil service system.

One of the last measures approved was the Edge bill authorizing the continuance of the work of revaluing railroad property in the name of the State Board of Assessors, for which $100,000 is appropriated. The actual work is to be performed under the direction of one of the special commissioners appointed by Governor Fort, who is to be chosen by the State Board with the approval of the Governor.

Two bills about which there was some apprehension as to their proper delivery to the Governor—the Olwell child labor measure and the Moore bill allowing juries to determine the question of whether there is contributory negligence on the part of plaintiffs in demands for damages from accidents at unprotected railroad crossings—reached the executive chamber at 2 p. m. and Mr. Fort promptly signed both of them.

Another bill of general State interest signed by the Governor late in the afternoon was the one introduced by Assemblyman Thompson, of Union, which requires slaughter houses and abbatoirs to secure a license from the State Board of Health.

By signing House bill No. 507, by B. H. White, of Camden, the Governor gives the State Water Supply Commission jurisdiction over all well, sub-surface or percolating water supplies furnished to municipalities. Senator Prince's bill enabling a municipality by its governing body to acquire lands for park purposes, was approved. The McCran bill authorizing municipalities to join together in acquiring property and establishing systems of water supply, designed to help Paterson, Passaic and several neighboring places, also was approved.

Besides the vetoes mentioned, the Governor also disapproved of these bills: Senate 123, by Mr. Prince, increasing the salaries of judges of the courts of common pleas in fourth class counties; House 415, by Mr. McCran, permits shade tree commissions to pass ordinances; House 400, by Mr. Radcliffe, prohibits increase or decrease of salaries of municipal officials during term of office; House 420, by Mr. Coldbaugh, authorizes use of Military Park in Newark for a sub-surface station for the Pennsylvania Railroad.

APPLAUD MARY DESMOND

Prima Donna Contralto of Manhattan Company is Heard Here.

OTHER ARTISTS ON PROGRAM.

Dr. Carl Duft, Hans Kronold and Edward Strong Take Part in the Ballad Concert Benefit.

The ballad concert given at the Plainfield High School last night for the benefit of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield was a great success from a musical point of view and the audience, a thoroughly appreciative one, enjoyed every number of the fine program which was arranged by Joseph McIntyre, of this city.

The artists included Miss Mary Desmond, prima donna contralto of the Manhattan Opera Company, who made her first appearance here; Dr. Carl E. Duft, basso cantabile, who is always a favorite; Hans Kronold, 'cellist, whose artistic work has won for him many friends here, and Joseph McIntyre, pianist, who long ago endeared himself to the hearts of the music-loving public.

Edward Strong, tenor, of New York, who was to have taken part, sent word at the last moment that he had been drawn on a jury in New York, and it would be impossible for him to appear here. Mr. McIntyre very kindly consented to fill in his two numbers with piano selections, and while Mr. Strong's absence was regretted, the audience seemed more than pleased over the change judging by the hearty applause which greeted the announcement of the substitution of Mr. McIntyre.

The appearance here for the first time of Miss Desmond was of more than usual interest. Her gracious manner and desire to please made for her a lasting impression and her singing will not be forgotten in the years to come. Many expressed the hope that another opportunity to hear Miss Desmond would be offered in the near future.

Miss Desmond has a perfectly endowed contralto voice of exquisite quality and training; most pleasing in timbre, sensitive and appealing. She has the musical temperament of the great artist coupled with a judgment in its control most rare and satisfying.

The great singer was generous in responding to encores. Her two first numbers were "Beloved, It Is Morn," Aylward, and "Love the Pedlar," German, and were followed later by a group of three songs, "All Souls' Day," Strauss; "Summer Noon," Lang, and "Slumber Song," from 'Jocelyn," Godard, the last named being with obligato for 'cello. The audience was loth to let her go and to these numbers she gave an encore. Her concluding number was "Summer Night," Thomas, with obligato for 'cello, which called forth long and hearty applause.

Dr. Carl E. Duft fully sustained his reputation as a great singer. Always a favorite with Plainfield audiences, he was greeted with much applause. He opened the program with "Robin Goodfellow," Puck's Song, Morgan, and "After," Elias. His other numbers were "The Land of the Leal," Foote; "A Border Ballad," Cowen, while for an encore he sang that old favorite Scotch song, "Turn Ye to Me."

Hans Kronold tully measured up to the reputation he made in his appearance here with Campanari early in the winter. He is a master of the 'cello and his work last night left nothing to be desired. He fairly captivated his audience with his exquisite rendition and in the obligato for 'cello, he shared with Miss Desmond and Mr. McIntyre in the honors. He played "Larghetto," Mozart; "Rondo," Baccherini; "Albumblatt," Wagner; "Vito," Popper, and for an encore he favored with Tanhausser's "Evening Star."

In substituting for Mr. Strong, Mr. McIntyre first played "The Trout," Schubert; then "The Nightingale," by Alabieff, for which he encore he rendered "Mazurka Caprice," which was written for and dedicated to Mr. McIntyre by Krouse. His rendition was exquisite and round after round of applause was given.

Too much praise cannot be given Mr. McIntyre for his efforts in bringing Miss Desmond to Plainfield, and in the arrangement of the superb program which was perfect.

BIRD GETS FOURTH TERM

President Taft Re appoints Plainfield's Efficient Postmaster.

HAS SERVED TWELVE YEARS.

Business of Office Has Doubled Since Present Competent Official Took Charge of the Local Business.

Announcement was made today that Elias H. Bird had been re-appointed by President Taft as postmaster of Plainfield for another four-year term to begin on May 1. The appointment is considered a deserved one. Mr. Bird was first appointed postmaster by President McKinley in 1898 and was re-appointed twice by President Roosevelt. Upon the completion of his present term he will have served as postmaster sixteen years. During that time the business of the local postoffice has increased rapidly.

When Mr. Bird assumed the office the yearly receipts were $30,000. The staff comprised eleven letter-carriers and four clerks. Today the receipts are $70,000 and the staff, including three rural carriers, numbers twenty-five and in addition, there are ten clerks. Not alone in the clerical force has there been advancement, but there have been great improvements in the office. Much additional room was secured, giving greater floor space, and the latest equipment has been added to the office making it possible to hand outgoing and incoming mail in the quickest possible manner. Whenever Mr. Bird has desired additional help in the carrier force or in the clerks, the government has always been quick to grant his request. The postoffice in every respect compares favorably with those of the same class in any part of the country and with the prospects of a new postoffice building Plainfield will undoubtedly have one of the best equipped post offices in the country.

ORCHESTRAL DIRECTOR FOR TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

The final concert of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra which has been carded for Tuesday night, May 10, will mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of Mr. Korff as an orchestral director. Mr. Korff has rendered service in this capacity at the local association for the past eight years. A marked feature of the anniversary concert will be the presentation of Haydn's Symphony Militaire. It will also be the final concert of the season.

A large audience was present at the concert given last night and critics expressed it as the best of the season.

PARENT-TEACHER ASS'N. WANTS A CHILDREN'S COURT.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Irving School met yesterday afternoon, there being nearly one hundred members present. The most important item of business was the adoption of a resolution in which the association heartily endorsed the plan to establish a special session of the court where only children's cases will be allowed and it was urged that newspapers omit in their reports the names of juvenile offenders.

The association decided to meet in the future on the second Tuesday in every other month. The annual meeting will be held Tuesday, April 26, for the election of officers and presentation of reports.

Mrs. E. T. Darrow was elected as the representative of the Mothers' meeting to the Parent-Teacher Association, in place of Mrs. I. W. Trevell, who has removed from the city. After the business refreshments were served.

Vetoes Osteopathy.

Governor Fort left the State House this afternoon to go to Rahway to attend a meeting of the Board of Managers of the Rahway Reformatory without announcing officially what action he had taken in reference to the Ramsey bill passed by the Legislature to regulate the practice of osteopathy. Unofficially, however, it is known that the Governor has vetoed the bill. As the bill had not been approved before midnight last night, when the time limit expired for the Governor to act on bills left in his hands by the Legislature, it is a foregone conclusion that it has failed to become a law.

ONE DAY'S RECORD IN THE POLICE COURT

Vicente Calamino, an Italian fifty years old, caught stealing bags from a house in the Netherwood section yesterday afternoon, was discharged with a warning this morning by City Judge Runyon in the police court, after the complainant, B. F. Tallamy told the judge that he did not want to prosecute the charge. Calamino told the judge through an interpreter that he saw the bags lying around in the yard and as he was in need of a bed he thought the gunny sacks would make an ideal couch. He hid the bags in a nearby wood and intended to take them home after his day's work was done. He was arrested by Detective Sergeant Fyfe.

Mrs Margaret Bimford, seventy years old, of College place, was remanded until tomorrow by Judge Runyon this morning to allow her family to make some arrangements for her care in an institution. She was drunk yesterday and created a disturbance among her neighbors.

NEW YORK "SPORTS" TRY TO SHOOT UP VILLAGES

Residents of Stony Hill, Watchung and other communities in the Watchung mountains reported to have been terrorized for the last few days by a gang of New Yorkers, who have been having "a good time" and incidentally displaying their exuberance by the indiscriminate shooting of residents. Somerset county game wardens and law officers are on the trail of the men and arrests are expected.

According to residents at the above mentioned places hundreds of robins have been slain, women and children frightened by pistol shots, dogs and cats shot at. From all accounts the visitors from Gotham, if corraled by the law officers will have an opportunity to recreate behind steel bars and incidentally pay some fines for the indiscriminate slaying of birds and dogs.

HOSPITAL IMPROVEMENTS

Refrigerating and an Electric Light and Power Plant for Institution.

ORDERED BY THE GOVERNORS.

Reports Are Received at Monthly Meeting of Muhlenberg's Trustees—Two Governors Resign.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital at its meeting Monday night, authorized the expenditure of a sum not exceeding $3,000 for the immediate installation of a refrigerating plant, and the expenditure of a sum not exceeding $4,000 for the immediate installation of a complete electric light and power plant at the hospital. It is believed that these improvements will mean a great saving in operating expenses over and above depreciation, interest charges and a substantial sinking fund to pay off the cost of these improvements.

The receipt of a bequest of $5,000 from the Arthur W. Talmadge estate, as mentioned yesterday, is for the purpose of endowing a bed in perpetuity. The treasurer also reported the receipt of $560.58 from the Patrolmen's Association and $334 raised by the children of the Hartridge School at a fair on March 19. The latter sum was donated to the hospital for the purpose of starting a fund for the erection of a children's ward. The donation from the Patrolmen's Association was given without restrictions and can be used for general purposes. A vote of thanks by resolution was extended for these gifts.

The governors learned with regret, as told in this paper yesterday, that Samuel Huntington will retire on June 1. He has served as a member of the board continuously for twenty-nine years and has been a valuable official. Efforts were made to persuade Mr. Huntington to remain on the board but without success. The removal of George A. Fenton from Plainfield compelled him to resign, as told in yesterday's paper.

BANQUET OF MEN'S CLUB

Crescent Avenue Church Men Elect New Officers and Enjoy Dinner.

JUDGE F. E. CRANE SPEAKS.

Eminent Brooklyn Jurist Decries Hero Worship—S. S. Swackhamer and Others Heard.

The first dinner of the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church was held last night at Truell Hall, and so great was its success that in all probability an affair of a similar kind will become an annual fixture with the club. The occasion also marked the annual meeting and election of officers which resulted as follows: President, Henry J. Cochran; vice-president, Henry F. De-Forest; secretary-treasurer, George H. Davey. The executive committee will be made up of the three officers and Lindsley Best, O. E. Hovey, De-Witt Hubbell and C. L. Wilson. It required but one ballot deposited by the secretary to make the nominations by the nominating committee effective. President Cochran immediately took the chair and a vote of thanks was extended to Lindsley Best, the retiring president. This formal meeting preceded the banquet and was held in the ball room.

Just prior to the adjournment of the business meeting D. M. Van Vliet made a short speech in which he urged the members of the club to vote at the special election on the water question to be held on April 19 giving some very cogent reasons why every voter should do his duty on that day. His speech was received with applause.

Some forty members and guests adjourned to the prettily decorated tables in the private dining room of the hotel where a splendid menu was appreciatively discussed, after which the doors of oratory were opened and from 10 until nearly 12 o'clock the diners were highly entertained by some good speakers. The speeches of Supreme Court Justice Frederick E. Crane, of Brooklyn, and Samuel S. Swackhamer were gems pieces of eloquence and the results of deep thought.

Dr. Ellis W. Hedges made an ideal toastmaster and his preliminary remarks to each speech provoked great laughter and induced the orators to prefer their addresses with some humorous stories well calculated to incite the bluest of the blue to mirth. Dr. Hedges was presented by former President Best and immediately got to the business of making everybody welcome and at ease. Judge Crane in speaking on the great number of Brooklynites he had found in Plainfield said that he believed if his judicial duties did not interfere he would be inclined to remain here and become a citizen. His speech had to do with the "General Law of Average." He believed that the great guide and power of the nations lies in their people and that here worship is a mistake. None of the great men of history have shown that they represented the feelings of the people of their times. They tell us nothing of the measure of the people of their day. Neither do the great men of later days tell us anything of the common people of their day. Judge Crane said that it was not so very long ago that ministers of the Gospel had their printed bottles on their shelves, but a good man then would be a bad man now.

Hero worship, said the speaker, has always existed, but no great deed has ever been created by any man. The opportunity has always been thrust upon him and he seized the psychological moment and the deed went down into history and the man became a hero. The people create the opportunity and the opportunity finds the man. Lincoln did not create the condition which confronted him and which he successfully faced and for which he sacrificed his life, but he rose to the situation and while nothing is to be detracted from the glory of it the fact remains that he was not responsible for his own opportunity.

The law never made a man good, the speaker said, nor will any statute ever accomplish that. Only when you can get a man to change his thoughts will you get him to change at all. Because a law is made and written on the books it does not signify that the law is going to be obeyed. None of those present could possibly evade jail if they obeyed all the laws impilicitly.

Reference was made to Morley's life of Oliver Cromwell in Judge Crane and upheld by him as one of the greatest of books of history and in commenting upon the character of the great reformer said it was the influence of his life which actuated thinking men to say and believe that it is by the great momentum of the

Otto Arens Loses Buildings, 5,000 Chicks and 6,500 Eggs But is Insured.

LOSS IS PLACED AT $9,000.

Although Handicapped in Their Work Firemen Did Splendid Service and Saved $5,000 Worth of Machinery.

Fire, of an unknown origin, almost completely destroyed the big poultry farm plant of Otto Arens, on Rahway road, early this morning. Two large henneries, an ice house, numerous small coops, a portion of the incubator house, about 6,500 eggs and about 5,000 chicks were wiped out by the flames. The loss, it is expected, will foot up to about $9,000. In the incubator house, which was partially destroyed, 1,000 chicks had made their advent into the world yesterday.

While a portion of the incubator structure was destroyed, the firemen managed to save the chicken hatching machinery in the building which was rated as worth $5,000. Flames were discovered in one of the hen houses by Mr. Arens about 2 o'clock. He telephoned Fire Chief Doane, at the latter's home, and the chief notified headquarters. An alarm was afterward turned in from Box 29.

Mr. Aren's place is situated on a hill and the firemen experienced considerable difficulty in reaching the scene of the fire. On their arrival two of the largest buildings and the ice house were wrapped in flames, while a number of the smaller buildings were threatened.

In trying to locate the steamer near the pond to get water the apparatus became stuck in the mire and the firemen were obliged to pull it out by hand. When a stream was finally secured from the pond the efforts of the firemen were directed towards saving the incubator house and other buildings, on which the flames were encroaching and in this the fighters were successful. The firemen battled for three hours and it was not until 5 o'clock that the flames were extinguished and the return to headquarters made.

Before departing to New York this morning Mr. Ahrens told a Daily Press reporter that 2,000 chicks were burned to death in Brooder House No. 2 while 2,000 perished in Brooder House No. 3. Both of these houses were totally destroyed. A total of 6,500 eggs were also destroyed. Mr. Arens estimates that his loss will be about $5,000 and $9,000 which is covered by insurance in the Herbert Buxton agency.

Mr. Arens also paid a fine compliment to the fire department for its efficient work in checking the spread of the flames to other buildings

WOMEN'S GUILD PLAN A SERIES OF DIME SOCIALS.

The Women's Guild of the Church of the Heavenly Rest has adopted a novel method of raising funds for church work. The plan includes a chain of dime socials in charge of three leaders, Mrs. E. B. Bennett, Mrs. Charles E. Borden and Mrs. W. B. Grannatt. Each one has a group of ten women, as a committee, who must give a social. In this way the women hope to raise $100.

Mrs. E. B. Bennett gave the first social at her home on West Sixth street, yesterday afternoon. During the afternoon Miss Jane Bennett rendered a number of pleasing piano selections and refreshments were served. The next social will be held at the home of Mrs. N. H. Saxton, 1122 West Eighth street.

RECIPE FOR A POPULAR NOVEL

Make the hero tall and slim,
Make him brave and make him strong;
Put a "godlike head" on hom,
Make him suffer some great wrong;
Make the heroine so fair
That no matter where she passes
Everyone will turn to stare—
Make her parents stubborn asses.

Place her in some foreign land,
There a princess she must be;
Have the country Switzerland
Through ten chapters, he and she;
Let her scorn him at the start,
Add a lot of complications;
Gradually cause her heart
To take on wild palpitations.

Make him do things which no man
Who was sane would dare to try;
Choke restraint, and, if you can,
Make the lady reader cry;
Overturn a throne or two,
Never mind about the reason;
Don't neglect to scatter through
Plot and counterplot and treason.
He must be a Yankee Doodlerand
That's important, don't forget;
They must for awhile be sad,
Let her eyes be often wet;
Let her guess, but don't permit
Him, before the end, to tell 'er;
Having thus concocted it
You'll have written a best seller.

CROSSED BANDS.

There is at present in Paris a vogue for spiral effects and crossed bands, and especially does this idea seem exemplified in afternoon and evening gowns.

Broad bands of gulphur are used like ribbon or in the nature of a sash, while embroidery of breathtaking magnificence (and consequent expense) is used on nearly all costumes that make any pretense to dressiness.

There is no denying the fact that the sashes used by some misguided dressmakers to tie in the fulness of the skirts above the ankles, curselling any graceful easy movement and producing a precariously small base for the standing figure, have had their day. But sashes and wide, ornamental bands can be made to give graceful lines to the figure and in no way impede a natural locomotion. That the good news that the great minds of the Parisian world of fashion have been sufficiently impressed with the idea to incorporate it in the scheme of many of their latest creations.

NOT ALL MAGNATES ARE MONEY GRAZED

Major league magnates are not so grasping nor so money mad as many fans and players would have you think. Some show the human instinct of their character in one way and some in another. All, however, have a deep interest in the welfare of their players, and especially in those who have been in their service for years.

In the past few days two American league owners have shown their deep appreciation of past services on the diamond by releasing unconditionally men who have helped to make baseball what it is today.

Charles Comiskey, of the White Sox, has released George Davis and Frank Isbell, both of whom will remain in history as exceptionally brilliant players. Frank Farrell, of New York, has released "Wee Willie" Keeler, noted for a decade and more as a scientific hitter and a consistent one. This unconditional release may seem to some as a "knock" on a player. Nothing is further from the truth. The magnates could have sold or traded any one of the trio to a good minor league as a manager.

It was an unselfish interest that made Comiskey and Farrell let go of Isbell, Davis and Keeler, thereby giving them to them, as the saying goes. It is an actual reward and appreciation. As the matter stands now, they are able to go where they please on the most advantageous terms.

Anything but an unconditional release would not have let Isbell play first base on the Wichita team, of the Western league of which he is sole owner. Anything else would not have let Davis ponder over several excellent offers to become part owner and manager of crack class A clubs. It is a fine thing for the team in the Northwest league wanted him badly. Comiskey could have reaped a neat sum on him. But he waved the money away.

Farrell kept Willie Keeler a year or so after the former star was valuable to him. He let him decorate the bench and drew down a big salary as he ever did just to show that he held a warm spot for the man who had worked faithfully for him. Such things as these are bound to stimulate the work of the players and keep them on good terms with their bosses.

Good advice for a manager is contained in the "never let a pitcher do anything but pitch on your team." This was handed out in Chicago during the recent American league meeting by no less an authority than Fred Lake, of Providence fame. Many a splendid twirler has lost his cunning in the box by doing odd jobs in the infield or the outfield. Throws from these positions tend to make his lose his idea of distance and moreover hurt him as a fielding pitcher.

"Doc" White, always a winning southpaw of the White Sox, was used in centre field by Comiskey last season in a number of games, and he could not do anywhere near as good work on the mound as formerly. It is a question whether he will ever be as effective as he was years ago of old. He may make a fine fielder, for he is fast, throws fairly well to the plate and certainly is a grand fielder. But his value as a pitcher has been decreased. It is harder to get a winning southpaw pitcher than a centre fielder.

Another pitcher who went back after he started to get an idea that he could play first base, was Nick Altrock, formerly of Washington and Minneapolis, and now signed up with Jiggs Donahue's Red Sox of the Chicago City League. Once he perfected on the initial sack, he started right in deteriorating as a twirler, and he was relegated to the minors. Even there he was not a shining success as a pitcher and now he is with the semipros, a fast drop for a once fine twisler.

An example who will be watched with great interest this season is Fred Liese, of the St. Pauls, who now belongs to the Boston Nationals. Liese was once a star twirler of the University of Wisconsin, and many big league clubs went after him. Eventually he was secured by the Cubs, who kept him for a while and then let him go to the Saints. For a few games he worked in the box he was regarded as a wonder. Then he slowed up a trifle, and, needing an outfielder, he was used in the garden. Eventually he was second man there, but seemed to have lost his knack as a twirler. It is a great question whether he will be able to switch back again, or whether his ability as a pitcher is at a discount.

Some pitchers have left the position and have become even greater in other positions. Such a man as Cy Seymour. He developed into such a fancy hitter and fielder that he startled the baseball world with Cincinnati, and it cost the New York Giants a big sum to secure him. Seymour, however, is now getting past his way of usefulness as a big leaguer. Age and big league ball seldom mix.

Joe Tinker once was a pitcher. Few fans today know that Joe once was sold for about $25. Just think of the leagues that would scramble over themselves to get Tinker for that sum today, or, hundreds of times as great an amount. Ty Cobb, of the Tigers, prides himself on his ability to pitch, and he doubtless would make a fine one. For Ty is a natural player and could fit in anywhere. The same is true of Lajoie, of the Naps. It would not surprise the world if Lajoie today could win a good percentage of games in the box.

Although a pitcher may lose his knack in the box by changing positions, there is another side to the question. A pitcher's life in a league is not as long as a player in another position. When he sees that he is beginning to slow up a trifle, is it not a wise move for him to see if he can't perpetuate his years of big salaries by becoming a valuable player in another position? This side is a fair one, and upon it rests the future of the pitcher.

Every pitcher can't develop into a great umpire like Hank O'Day. So a great question has its two angles—one from the manager's side and the other from the player's.

MISSION BAND HOLDS ITS ANNUAL ELECTION

Reports for the year and the election of officers, together with the appointment of the money in the treasury for missionary purposes comprised the chief business at the annual meeting of the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church Friday afternoon. There was a good attendance and much interest was shown in the business.

These officers were elected: President, Mrs. Leonard Smith; vice-president, Mrs. Charles M. Dolliver; treasurer, Mrs. A. B. Cole; secretary, Miss Winifred Rapalje.

The yearly report presented by Miss Gertrude Schlief shows that nine meetings were held. After definite interest in Arabia was assured, the band studied the religion and conditions of women in that neglected country for three consecutive meetings. The interest in Kentucky increased through Mr. VanZanten's talk of his summer's work among the mountaineers and by study of this field.

A practical application of the band's sympathy and help was shown in a sewing meeting when the domestic committee planned the little gingham dresses to be sent to McKee, Ky. The Mescalero and Winnebago Indians were the subject of one program and enthusiasm in home mission work was the result of a report from the stirring missionary meeting of the Young Women's Branch of Domestic Missions at Dr. Vance's church in Newark.

Many of the members and the sick of the congregation, as well as the shut-ins have been cheered and helped by the kindly visits and beautiful blossoms that have been carried to them by the flower and visiting committee. They have also worked with the C. E. Society in furnishing flowers to the church.

The birthday committee has done excellent work and added considerable money to the treasury. Under the direction of the foreign and domestic committee thirty little gay garments were made for Miss Sara Curry's work at Netherwood; fifteen children's dresses for the mountaineers; a barrel of clothing valued at $17 was sent to McKee; a box of Christmas gifts and candy valued at $13 was sent to Spring Valley Sunday school; two dresses and accessories, valued at $10 were sent to the daughters of a western missionary; by the gift of a friend the band sent $5 to Gray Hawk, Ky., for medical supplies.

Three-fourths of the extra pledge of $20 for Dr. P. W. Harrison was met by the penny-a-week system. The Forward Movement means that the entertainment committee has worked hard, figures will show. The Dutch Market added $91 to the treasury in 1909 and the one recently held netted $98, and the old-fashioned singing school in November realized $102. Of this amount $190 was divided equally between the foreign and home missions, making an increase of $40 over last year's appropriation.

Following the business meeting there was a social time and refreshments were served.

Scallop Scramble.

Simmer two cupfuls of scallops in salted water for ten minutes. Then drain in a colander, dashing cold water over them. Break each scallop in half. Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a hot frying pan and then stor in the scallops. Toss with a fork until they begin to brown. Add half a dozen eggs, not beaten, and stir until they thicken. Turn the mixture on buttered triangles of toast, sprinkling minced parsley on top.

Ture Sympathy.

"You are charged with stealing three pairs of trousers," said the judge. "What have you to say for yourself?"

"I'm guilty your honor," replied the prisoner, "but I stole them for my wife."

"You are discharged," said the judge, in a tone redolent with sympathy. His honor was in the henpecked class himself.

IN AID OF ST. STEPHEN'S

Splendid Concert in Hartridge School Auditorium Last Night.

A REPRESENTATIVE AUDIENCE.

Famous Composers' Works Admirably Interpreted by Competent Artists.

The attendance at the concert in the Hartridge School auditorium Thursday was limited by the seating capacity of the hall and it was the concensus of opinion that the affair, which was in aid of St. Stephen's church, was a most delightful and charming one. All the artists were in excellent voice and their contributions were received with unlimited applause.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McIntyre's magnificent piano interpretations of works by Chaminade and Rubenstein earned for them unstinted praise. The work of Mr. McIntyre and Mr. Loder, who accompanied the singers, was beyond criticism.

To do justice to the program at length would require a page of this paper, but in passing it must be said that for variety and excellence no better selection could have been made.

The quartet by Liza Lehman from "In a Persian Garden," evoked prolonged applause. Mrs. More, Miss Potter and Messrs. Young and Wheeler sang this charming music with a truly artistic touch, delightfully reminiscent of balmy days in a land of sunshine.

Mr. Young, who followed in songs by Jensen and Mary Turner Salter, was compelled to respond with an encore. Mr. Young's beautifully trained lyric voice is always charming and compelling. He has won by his sympathetic singing a warm place in the hearts of Plainfield's lovers of music.

Mr. Wheeler made a fine impression with his rendition of the Prologue from "I Pagliacci" and sang an encore number with distinction. Of Mrs. Goold what can be said? The best can be said. As she has charmed her audiences before so she did last night, only more so. In a group of airy sentimental songs by Daniels, d'Hardelot and Foote, Mrs. Goold won a deserved appreciation. Mr. Mansfield's overture opened part II of the program with Rubenstein's Caprice Russe and were given an ovation at its conclusion. Their technique was well nigh perfect. One need not say more.

The next two pretentious numbers on the program were the quartette from Rigoletto and the Sextette from Lucia di Lamermoor, the latter including Lewis J. Geary. Both selections were admirably rendered and evoked words of praise and high commendation from the entire audience.

Miss Mildred Potter, a contralto with magnificent range of voice and perfect control responded with generosity in an encore to "Angus MacDonald" by Roeckel. Miss Sarah More, soprano, was equally pleasing in a trio of songs as was Mr. Loder in baritone solos of a serious kind.

The concert was given under the patronage of seventy-six women and netted a handsome sum for St. Stephen's. What the amount is will not be determined until all the returns are in from those to whom tickets were mailed.

The following were the artists engaged: Edith Chapman Goold, soprano; Sarah More, soprano; Mildred Potter, contralto; John Young, tenor; Raymond Loder, baritone; Frederick Wheeler, basso; Lewis J. Geary, basso; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McIntyre, piano.

HOPE'S ANNUAL MEETING

Reports Read and Committees Chosen at Chapel's Yearly Session.

REV. L. R. HOWARD PRESIDES.

Various Societies and Classes Give Account of Work—Minstrel Show and Excursion Planned.

The annual congregational meeting of Hope chapel was held Thursday with Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor, in the chair. Emlin Brunsden was secretary of the meeting. A resolution was adopted permitting the selection of a ways and means committee of seven members. Willard H. Cook was elected treasurer and his assistants are Alexander Doig, Walter Fleetbrook, William Baker and Harry Keen.

This is the ways and means committee: Charles Hughes, George Leighs, for three years; James Penny and Donald McInnes for two years; Harry Keen and William Baker for one year. A vote of thanks was given Walter Bradford, the retiring treasurer, and Mrs. Willard H. Cook for her services at the piano.

The yearly reports show every department of the chapel to be in the best of condition. Additions have been made to the chapel, Sunday-school and various societies. Rev. L. R. Howard presented this report:

Members received on confession of faith, 14; by letter, 7; three restored from "separate list;" dismissed, 8; died, 3; put on "separate list," one; making a net gain of 12 members. The total membership is 424. There were twenty-two baptisms, fifteen being children and seven adults.

Treasurer Walter Bradford reported receipts for the year to be $1,298.85. Mrs. John Johnson, treasurer of flower fund of the G. Stuart Simons' Bible class, reported receipts of $28.10 and disbursements of $14.35, leaving a balance of $13.75. Mrs. Walter Bradford for the "Penny-a-Week Missionary Society," reported receipts of $77.76 and disbursements for a scholarship, $50, the balance being $27.76.

William Baker reported for the W. N. Runyon Bible Class Association, which has a membership of forty-five young men. They raised from all sources $412.91 and expended all but $5.41 for the benefit of the chapel. It was reported that a minstrel show will be held April 26, 27 and 29.

Mrs. L. R. Howard reported that the final payment due on the organ of $224.09 had been paid. The Ladies' Aid Society raised $254.05 and with all but $16.87 in the chapel work. Mrs. Joseph Brown, treasurer of the missionary society, reported receipts of $83.51, disbursements of $81.95, leaving a balance of $1.56. G. Herbert Condict, leader of the Boys' Club, stated that $28.98 had been raised during the year. Miss Lona Baker, secretary, and Miss Elizabeth Becker, treasurer, reported for the Christian Endeavor Society. The members raised $26.65 and expended $20.81. C. G. August reported that the Junior Boys' Club has a membership of 35 and seventeen applications to be acted upon.

Frank Rimmer, secretary, and James Cullinan, treasurer, reported for the Men's Club. The receipts were $29.70 and the disbursements $26.65, leaving a balance of $3.08.

Thomas Hendry reported that the excursion committee has a balance of $249.01. G. Herbert Condict for the Sunday-school gave an interesting report. He stated that at present forty-five members of the chapel are working in the chapel as teachers, etc., seventeen being from Crescent Avenue church and four of the teachers staff from other denominations. The total enrollment, which Mrs. Donald McInnes is superintendent, has an enrollment of 137 and raised $136 during the year. Frank Rimmer, treasurer, reported total receipts of $834.26, disbursements of $716.46, leaving a balance of $117.80 in the treasury.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by Mrs. Donald McInnes, Mrs. F. A. Weber and Mrs. James Heron.

FOR A YOUNG GIRL.

There is undoubtedly an age in colors. The clear blues, red, pinks and yellows belong to youth, and youth alone should wear them.

The time will soon come when the pastel shades, the lavenders, the shaded purples and the shadows generally will be in lot. Therefore, "gather ye rosebuds while ye may" and glory in all the fresh, beautiful colors of youth.

It is not one color that is too bright, too loud for a young girl, it is the combination of two or more colors. If this be remembered when replenishing the wardrobe, and only those colors be chosen which will combine with those already got, fewer mistakes will be made and the number of "perfectly hideous" hats or frocks hung in forgotten clothes presses would soon diminish.

It is a mistake for a young girl to eliminate all the stronger colors from her belongings, for she, and she alone, can do them justice.

ALLEGED TRUANT'S MOTHER WINS SYMPATHY OF COURT

Several cases of truancy were brought before Judge Runyon Saturday by Miss Adelaide Ball, the truant officer, and all were disposed of summarily, excepting that of a colored woman, who is the mother of a family of six. This case so much enlisted the sympathy of Judge Runyon that he was compelled to announce his entire sympathy with the mother and the fourteen-year-old boy, who was accused of being delinquent in his attendance at school.

Mrs. Granby, the mother of the boy, told the court that her son had been attending school at Morristown, where he is living with an uncle and that she never had had any trouble with the boy. She declared that it was a pretty serious proposition for a woman to face who had as big a family as she acknowledgeds being the mother of, and it really hurt to have to spend time in court when she could be earning money at the wash-tub. (She told the judge that she had left the tub to come and defend her son).

Judge Runyon showed that he fully sympathized with the woman and told her that if her son was attending school in Morristown he might stay there and earn what he could to help his mother after or before school hours. Nevertheless, at the present time, he declared that the woman had been compelled to pay her son's and her own carfare from Morristown to Plainfield in order to get the boy here and now she must hustle to get the money to pay his fare back again.

It was a case in which the sympathies of all the court room attendants and spectators were with the woman and it was said by one man after the proceedings were over that had it not been for the feeling of being an interloper he would have gladly paid for the boy's transportation back to Morristown as well as the expense to which the mother had been put. The boy is fourteen years old.

MRS. VOSSELLER DIES AT A RIPE OLD AGE

Mrs. Margaret Vosseller, wife of the late Augustine Reger, aged eighty-seven years, died Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman, 806 Third place. Some time ago she suffered a fracture of the hip and for the past two years has been an invalid, during which time she has lived here with her daughter.

Mrs. Vosseller was a native of South Branch. Her husband, prior to his death about seven years ago, was engaged in business at Whitehouse and Long Branch. She was a member of the Second Reformed church, Somerville. Despite her infirmities, her mind was clear and active to the last and through her many excellent traits of character endeared herself to the hearts of a large circle of friends.

She is survived by two brothers, Elias Vosseller, a prosperous merchant of Flemington, and William Vosseller, of Raritan; also six children: J. V. Reger, editor of the Boston Journal; L. O. Reger, of Paterson; Mrs. H. D. Zant, of Jamesburg; Mrs. William F. Mets, of New Market; Mrs. John Gaston, of Somerville, and Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman, of this city.

SOCIETY FOLK ATTEND CHARMING AFTERNOON TEA.

One of the charming social functions of the season was the tea given Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. James R. Blake, of Franklin place, and Mrs. William M. Wherry, Jr., at the home of the latter, 124 Madison avenue. The affair was largely attended, more than 200 society folk of Plainfield and North Plainfield being present from 4 to 6 o'clock. The home was attractively decorated for the occasion, the prevailing colors being green and white.

Those who assisted Mrs. Blake and Mrs. Wherry were Mrs. R. S. Rowland, Miss Ursula Rowland, Miss Grace Kaufman, Mrs. Leighton Calkins, Mrs. C. B. Tyler, Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna, Mrs. George S. Ring, of this city; Mrs. Wesley Abbott, of Paterson, and Mrs. Arthur B. Jones, formerly of Pittsburg, but now of this city.

MISS MARY ROGERS THE BRIDE OF DAVID ASPINWALL.

Miss Mary Rogers, of this city, and David Aspinwall, of New York, were married at St. Mary's church, Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Rev. B. M. Bogan, the pastor, officiating in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends.

The bride wore a handsome gown of white silk in princess style and carried a shower bind of bride roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Annie Rogers, her sister, wore a gown of gray. The best man was John Tobin, of New York. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shirley, of Wesley Sixth street. Mr. and Mrs. Aspinwall will reside in New York, where the groom is engaged in business.

YALE CLUB CELEBRATES

Annual Banquet of the Local Sons of Old Eli Held at Truell Hall.

E. A. STEVENSON TOASTMASTER.

Dean Frederic S. Jones Talks on "Yale University" and F. P. Garven, of New York, on "Any Old Thing."

Old college songs with a chorus which could not but raise the enthusiasm of those who heard them, resounded through the corridors of Truell Hall Friday after the banquet of the Plainfield Yale Club had reached the stage of entertainment. More than seventy of the alumni of the famous college had enjoyed a substantial menu before the real festivities of the evening began and to say that the old timers enjoyed the feast would be putting it mild.

Boola, Boola wasn't one—two—six with some of the other songs beautifully sung by the quartet; nor was the yodle of Switzerland any better than some of the sentiments expressed by the men while Yalensians who had determined to enjoy the union, which always brings out the best, of either sentiment or practicability, that there is in the members. What did obtain, however, was a feeling of brotherhood and plain faith in the old institution which has sent so many mighty and influential men out into the world to become successful.

The speech of the evening, delivered by Dean Frederic S. Jones, '84, brought to the surface many of the institution's new rules which, first condemned, are now being understood and practiced to the college's advantage. Much of the financial work of the college has been transferred to the office of the dean and it is the co-operation of the alumni and their help which is so much needed to put Yale on the basis of equality with Princeton and Harvard in certain lines.

Edward A. Stevenson was the toastmaster, and other speeches were delivered by William D. Murray and Francis P. Garvan, of New York. The music furnished by the quartet from the college was enjoyed by the company to the extent that all joined in the choruses.

H. K. DOANE ENGAGED TO MISS ELIZABETH CADY.

Chief and Mrs. T. O. Doane, of West Fifth street, have received word concerning the engagement of their son, Hervey K. Doane, to Miss Elizabeth Cady, daughter of Will H. Later he went to Augusta, Kansas, where he took the position of superintending the construction of a water works and sewage plant. It was while at Augusta that he met Miss Cady. The wedding will take place in June.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Sane Fourth.

The Women's Club of Camden has appealed to Mayor Ellis for a safe and sane Fourth of July in that city, and an ordinance has been introduced in the Camden Council to provide it. In Elizabeth the City Council has asked the city attorney to draw up an ordinance regulating the storage and sale of firecrackers, gunpowder and other combustibles and explosives. The City Council of Morristown has prepared an ordinance for that city prohibiting the storage and sale of powder and ammunition except by such dealers as are licensed by the fire chief and forbidding the use of blank cartridges, dynamite crackers, paper balloons, etc., on the Fourth. The Mayor of Philadelphia is planning to be unusually active in the enforcement of the laws against the use of the customary Fourth of July explosives and fire toys there, and Mayor Gaynor, of New York, has struck consternation into the hearts of fireworks and firecracker manufacturers and vendors by giving notice that the ordinance on that subject is going to be strictly enforced. Hitherto it has been a dead letter, but hitherto Gaynor was not Mayor. On every side action is being taken to secure a bloodless, harmless Fourth of July, but Newark doesn't seem to be doing anything worth mentioning.—Newark News.

A gold watch, suitably engraved, with a jewelled Elks charm fob, costing several hundred dollars, were presented to him. The presentation speech was made by Exalted Ruler Noonan and Mr. Cose was taken greatly by surprise. He expressed his thanks to the lodge in a few suitable words.

O'Keefe. The retiring exalted ruler, Mr. Cose, will be the representative to the grand lodge to be convened at Detroit, Michigan, on July 11. He will be accompanied by probably a score or more of his fellow members.

During the meeting, handsome steins filled with cut roses were presented by the members to the new exalted ruler and the esteemed leading knight. The annual reports were read. The lodge now has about 300 members. After the ceremonies, refreshments were served in the club rooms.

Mr. Noonan, the new exalted ruler, is one of the most popular men in the city. He was born at Albany, N. Y., and comes from old Dutch stock that settled in Albany 150 years ago. Y.M.C.A. MAKES PLANS FOR CHILDREN'S PLAYGROUNDS

Desirous of doing everything in their power to further the establishment of public playgrounds in Plainfield, the directors of the Y. M. C. A. voted Thursday to equip the vacant lot in the rear of the Y. M. C. A. building as a children's playground and to open it as soon as possible under the direction of the physical department committee.

The action taken by the Y. M. C. A. has the approval of the city playground commission and will in no way interfere with the plans of the commission for playgrounds at the Stillman and Bryant schools. It means that another playground will be added to those already projected.

Because of the limited area of the lot, it will probably be necessary to equip it for the use of small children, six to twelve years of age. Competent supervision will be provided for them and such games and sports as have been found desirable for such children will be arranged.

The proposed play ground is easily accessible not only to the children of the city but to those residing in the borough as well. Steps are being taken to fit the grounds up immediately and it is hoped to have it ready by May 1.

DR. CALLAN INTERPRETS A SHAKESPEAR TRAGEDY

Dr. Callan interpreted the characters in "Hamlet" in a most realistic style before an interested audience at Mt. St. Mary's College Thursday. Women were present from this city, Westfield and Elizabeth.

With prefect ease Dr. Callan acted the subtle Claudius, now the fickle Laertes, and again the meddlesome Polonius or the noble Horatio. But, as one should expect, it was in the part of Hamlet he did his finest interpretation.

With delicate skill he delineated the virtues of Hamlet, his tenderheartedness, his honor, his self-restraint and self-sacrifice, and above all the deep pathos of his situation. The sorrow and gloom cast over his life by the treachery of his uncle, the disloyalty of his mother, the cruelty of his classmates and the unfaithfulness of his best beloved were ever forcibly evident in the act of the actor.

His remarks on the soliloquies of Hamlet and his advice to the players bore weight and authority. Gifted with a striking personality, a strong and musical voice and grace in gesture, he made a deep impression on all who heard him. The rapt attention and favorable reception accorded him by the students give testimony of their appreciation of his work.

NIGHT OVER A GREAT CITY.

Across the miles I watch the city lights,
Burn with a myraid twinkling eyes,
Like fireflies in a midnight revel mad,
No sounds I hear, no endless cries,
No grinding harsh of ceaseless traffic
By distance stilled. The wind that sighs
Up from the dusk whispers of deeper themes.

I think of that great scene that lies
Beneath those lights—of Death, whose dreaded touch
Falls on the foolish and the wise;
Of venegeful Hate that greets the dark with joy;
Of where black Envy softly tries
To work another ill; of all the greed,
The lust for gold, base enterprise
Of sin to blacken lives of things in brass
That mean head low to idolize;
Of broken hearts and lives, warm things for use,
Some Midas feast to solemnize.

I wait to hear a curse with blasting flame
Leap from the calm untroubled skies
Where He still keeps His long eternal watch;
And then—the wild thought dies
I think of love that shines in those dark streets
As long ago in angel guise
In Bethlehem—the deep, true human love,
Glad of its alto sacrifice,
Entwining heart to heart; and then as one
Who hears a sweet musical rise
And drown the harsher voices of the night,
So in my slight Love sanctifies
The night-wrapped city, and all the darker things
Its shining presence glorifies.

The Borrower

Now doth the thrifty citizen
Arise before the dawn
And heap the snow from off his walk
Upon his neighbor's lawn.
And when the job is nearly done
And polished is the track,
Why then he'll seek his neighbor's door
And hand the shovel back!

HEALTH BOARD'S WORK

Dairies, Bakeries, Barber and Butcher Shops and Stables are Inspected.

MANY PERMITS ARE GRANTED.

Plumbers' Bonds Filed—Milk and Cream Analyzed—City Water Found to Be Up to Its Usual Standard.

Reports, the granting of permits and a general discussion of the sanitary conditions of the city were features of the April meeting of the Board of Health Wednesday. The sanitary conditions were reported to be good, in fact the number of communicable diseases reported in March was less than during the previous month, as shown by the following figures:

Scarlet fever, 8 cases, no deaths; diphtheria, 4 cases, one death; typhoid fever, one case, no deaths; tuberculosis, one case, one death; measles, three cases, no deaths; chicken-pox, one case, no deaths.

There were fifty-three dairies and nine bottling places, also one creamery, inspected. A marked improvement in conditions was found. There was also an inspection of twenty-two stores from which milk is sold and these were found in first-class condition. Thirty-two samples of milk and two samples of cream were analyzed, with satisfactory results. In two cases dealers were notified to change their supply at once and they have complied.

A number of bakeries were inspected and in most cases conditions were satisfactory. One Italian bakery, found in a filthy condition, fifteen days ago, was re-inspected and it was found that the owner had complied with the law. A sample of city water was taken and sent to Trenton for analysis and was found to be of the usual good quality.

An inspection of the barber shops showed them to be in good condition, but in the case of some butcher shops an unsanitary condition was found and a good house cleaning was ordered. An inspection of the livery stables showed that there was plenty of chance for improvement, especially in the disposition of waste water and manure, and it is hoped that the unsanitary conditions will be abated.

There was a total of 962 inspections in connection with plumbing, milk supply and general work. During the month thirteen houses and fifty-two rooms were disinfected and there were six miscellaneous disinfections.

The proposed new milk ordinance was submitted to the board for its first and second readings. The following plumbers' bonds were received and ordered filed: B. C. Carpenter, W. R. Conover, Hugh Reilly, Herman F. Schoettger, Michael Armstrong and William L. Clark.

Joseph F. Burke was granted a renewal of his permit to carry on the work of scavenger; a permit was granted to Mrs. Margaret Jensen, of West Fourth street, to sell milk from the store; George E. Masenho was granted a permit to collect garbage and the application of George R. Carter, of Westfield, to collect garbage in Plainfield was refused. These returns were made to the office during March:

Marriages, 12; births, 48; stillbirths, 1; deaths, 27. Over fifty per cent. of the deaths were among persons over sixty years of age.

Stuffed Tripe.

Cut the tripe in long strips and boil in salted water until tender. Make a stuffing as for roast turkey or chicken; spread it thin on the strips of tripe, roll each up and hold in place with a wooden toothpick. Arrange the rolls in a buttered pan and bake till done. This dish is delicious either hot or cold.

Hill—Utley.

Invitations have been issued by James Seward Utley to the marriage of his sister, Miss Catharine Mared Utley, to George Edwin Hill Wednesday afternoon, April 20, at 4 o'clock, Grace church, New York. Miss Utley is a frequent visitor in this city and has many friends here. Mr. Hill is a prominent lawyer in Bridgeport, Conn., where the newly wedding pair will reside.

McGuirk—Dorgan.

Miss Kathryn McGuirk and John J. Dorgan were married at St. Bernard's church at Raritan on Wednesday afternoon in the presence of a large gathering of friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Dorgan are now on their honeymoon and at its completion they will reside in this city.

Rev. Dr. Morris A. Turk, of Natick, Mass., who with his wife, spent his summer vacation traveling from East to West on the bridle paths of Albania, gave an illustrated lecture in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church and the Congregational church. Dr. and Mrs. Turk came to Plainfield at the earnest request of Rev. and Mrs. Kennedy, who are well-known here, and who are now missionaries in Turkey, for the purpose of telling of the work being done in that far off land. Mrs. Turk is the daughter of Rev. Lewis Bond, of this city.

With the aid of one hundred colored slides, made from pictures taken by Dr. Turk, he blazed his recent perilous and exciting journey through Albania. The pictures in themselves were most interesting. Many of them were taken under the greatest possible difficulty as the party traveled over the mountains on their long and perilous trip to Albania, the objective point being Elbason. That country is filled with brigands and the lecturer told of many narrow escapes. He related numerous incidents where the party passed through sections of the country that were in a perpetual state of revolution, but as they were accompanied by a guard the members were protected.

Dr. Turk spoke words of great praise of the work being accomplished by Dr. and Mrs. Kennedy, of their sacrifice and devotion to the cause of Christ, and said that under their ministrations many natives are being won. The speaker in referring to the Albanians said that they are an unconquered people. On numerous occasions parties of Turks have gone to pieces in trying to subdue and conquer them. They are, he said, a clean-blooded, noble people and are hungry for education and the Gospel of Christ.

Dr. Turk's description of the party's experience in various so-called hotels on the journey was amusing, especially that part describing the live-stock encountered in bed rooms. He said that there was scarcely a comfortable hotel on the whole trail and lodging was one of the unpleasant features of the trip.

During the course of his lecture, Dr. Turk displayed pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy, as well as the whole party, and the audience was quick to appreciate them. A silver offering was taken at the close of the lecture.

Dr. Turk is pastor of a Congregational church at Natick, Mass. He was accompanied by his wife, and while in Plainfield the couple were guests of Mrs. Grove P. Hinman, who is a sister of Mrs. Kennedy.

The Plate Showed It.

"Prisoner," said the judge, "you say your wife hit you on the head with a plate. Is that so?"

"Yis, sorr," answered the prisoner who rejoiced in the name of Mulligan.

"But," said the judge, "your head doesn't show marks of any kind."

"No, sorr," answered Mr. Mulligan, with a touch of pride, "but ye should have seen that plate!"

Mr. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, and grandfather of the bride, performed the ceremony.

One thousand invitations were issued for the affair and nearly five hundred guests were present, including many from Louisville, Ky., Chattanooga and Brownsville, Texas, as well as other cities of the South. NELSON MILLER HEAD OF SCHOOL BOARD

The North Plainfield Board of Education has elected Nelson A. Miller president to succeed James H. Joy, and the Rev. George A. Warner vice-president. The committees appointed are as follows:

PRIMER PUBLISHED FOR INSTRUCTION OF MINERS.

One government bureau at Washington—the technologic branch of the geological survey—works so quietly that the owners of the Cherry mine, in which 300 lives were unware that the branch had a force of men in Pittsburg equipped for rescue work until many hours after the disaster occurred. The branch officials were equally ignorant. Had the mine-owners and the government employees been working together many lives might have been saved, says the VanNorden Magazine for February.

Now that neglect to inform has brought about, or at least made possible, the greatest mine disaster in the history of this country, a primer has been sent out to all miners. It tells all about the use of explosives in the simplest language possible. This humanitarian work was started in July, 1908, by authorization of Congress, which appropriated $150,000 for the purpose, after there had been four explosions in coal mines in December, 1907, costing 700 lives.

Statistics showed that 2,061 miners were killed and 4,800 were injured in the coal mines in 1906, and 3,215 killed and 5,800 injured in 1907. The death rate for 1907 was 4.86 for every 1,000 men employed. In 1908, 2,450 men were killed, or 3.60 in every 1,000 employed, a reduction of 675 in the number of deaths from 1907. European countries show death rates in coal mining as low as one in every 1,000 men employed and none more than two. This excellent showing abroad is due to the establishment years ago of government stations for the investigation of problems relating to safety in mining, including the proper use of explosives.

Governor Approves Measure for City-Borough Disposal Plant.

FOR A JOINT COMMISSION.

Beds May Be Built at Greenbrook and Land for Purpose May Be Condemned—Full Power for Commission.

Senate bill No. 266, as amended, introduced by Senator Ernest A. Ackerman for Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, permitting Plainfield and North Plainfield and other municipalities to jointly construct a sanitary sewage system, was signed by Governor Fort Friday morning and is now a law.

The measure was prepared and introduced for the express purpose of allowing the city and borough to build a new sewage plant in the western end of North Plainfield township, but other adjoining municipalities may also join in the improvement. The act provides for the selection of a commission representing city and borough, and for a permanent chairman, secretary and treasurer, and allows them a suitable place for holding meetings.

The commission representing the municipalities is given authority to purchase lands, rights of way and contract for the improvement and the cost of the same is to be paid for in the usual way, that is, the Circuit Court is to be asked to appoint a commission to assess benefits and damages, and each municipality is empowered to borrow money and issue notes and bonds for the cost of the work.

Where the commission cannot come to an agreement in the purchase of lands or rights of way condemnation proceedings may be used. The act further provides for the usual legal notices to be published in the newspapers advertising meetings to be held. The commission to assess benefits and damages is to be appointed after the completion of the work.

The measure was drawn by Craig A. Marsh and Sharred Depew, representing the city and borough respectively.

U. OF P. ALUMNI HEAR PRAISE OF ROOSEVELT.

Roosevelt and the Vatican incident were touched on at the annual reunion and banquet of the New Jersey Alumni of the University of Pennsylvania at Achtel-Stetter's, Newark, Thursday night. Dr. Addison B. Poland, superintendent of schools, called attention to the incident, when he declared that Colonel Roosevelt and Benjamin Franklin represent the true type of American citizenship.

"When the University of Pennsylvania was established in 1740," Dr. Poland declared, "Whitfield, the great Methodist evangelist, came to this country from England and visited all the cities and towns from Georgia to New England. The churches of Philadelphia refused to allow him to use their pulpits. Benjamin Franklin, the wise diplomatist, with absolute non-sectarian impulses, went to work and built him a church so that he might speak. After he left and Franklin died out, this church became the perpetual legacy of the university until it was compelled to remove it."

Other speakers at the dinner were Assistant District Attorney E. Crosby Kindleberger, of New York; Joshiah Penniman, professor of English literature at the university; Harry Bowers Mingle, of East Orange; Professor Edwin T. Darby, of the university, and Rabbi Charles I. Hoffman.

Professor Penniman spoke on the great advancement made in the number of matriculates, the beautiful buildings and the increase of faculty. He drew comparisons between the U. of P. and other institutions, and declared that it was the most cosmopolitan of all. Professor Darby enumerated the States and the countries represented at the university which he also lauded as one of the leading institutions of the world over. He dwelt for some time on the great number of Chinese attending there.

Before the dinner began the annual election of officers was held, as follows: President, Edward S. Hawke, '95 medicine; first vice-president, Mr. Mingle, '99 college; second vice-president, E. S. Sherman, '97, medicine; secretary and treasurer, Archibald E. Boice, '00, dentistry. There were about sixty of the graduates at the dinner. Dr. Richard S. Hopkins was toastmaster. The banquet hall was decorated with University of Pennsylvania flags and bunting.

Auto Fees for Roads.

The last bill introduced at the session of the Legislature came from Senator Ackerman, and provided that the money received in fees and fines from the motor vehicle department by the State Road Commissioner for road improvements be available at once for the commissioner's use instead of waiting until July 4. The bill was immediately passed.

BOYS IN ATHLETIC MEET

Franklin B. Newell Stars in the Running High Jump for Schoolboys.

CHAMPION FRITTS IN FORM.

Competition Provides Some Exciting Sport to a Large and Enthusiastic Crowd.

"Future Greats," of the track and field, to the number of fifty young athletes, participated in the Boys' Booster Athletic meet in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Friday night. The performances of the junior athletes were watched from the gallery by a large and enthusiastic crowd and the boys came in for a big share of applause in their efforts.

Perhaps the most noticeable performance in the meet was executed by Franklin B. Newell, who was the winner in the running high jump. This speedy athlete covered a distance of 5 feet 4 inches, or one inch higher than the record he made in winning the event in the Harlem Y. M. C. A. games three weeks ago. When Newell's record was announced the youngster was giving three rousing cheers.

John Fritts, the all around Y. M. C. A. champion, distinguished himself by carrying off first honors in the standing broad jump and in the shot put. In the broad jump, Fritts covered a distance of 9 feet 4¾ inches, and in the shot put he hurled the weight a distance of 24 feet 1 inch.

D. R. Miller had two wins to his credit. He finished first in the potato race and standing broad jump in the 120 pound class.

Y. M. C. A. led in the total number of points scored, 38; Brownie A. C., 5 points; Pastime A. C. and Leal's school 4 points; Stillman school 3 points. The summary:

Improved the Occasion.

"My father," said Senator Chauncey M. Depew the other day, "was a frugal and saving man. He never approved of the waste of anything, including time. One night he went to a prayer meeting. The brethren were backward. After a wait of a quarter of an hour my father arose and said: 'It is a shame to waste all this valuable time. Will not some brother tell his experience?'"

"No one rose, and my father continued: 'Will some one lead us in prayer?'"

"There was no response to this appeal, and my father said: 'In that case I will improve the time by making a few observations on the tariff.'"—Pathfinder.

For Closing Windows.

A piece of bamboo, an old blind roller, or any strong, smoothly rounded stick about the same length, with a small flat piece of wood about the same thickness, twelve inches long and covered with flannel, nailed across the ends, makes an admirable and useful article for closing top sash of windows from the outside or standing on a stool or a chair to reach, or straining one's self with the weight to be raised upward.

Visited Borough School.

Randall Spaulding, superintendent of the Montclair public schools, was a visitor at the borough school on Wednesday. Professor Spaulding came here for the specific purpose of inspecting the methods and system used in the grammar grades by Superintendent H. C. Krebs. Professor Spaulding was a classmate of S. St. John McCutchen at Yale.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

William H. Crane in "Father and the Boys," will open for a run at the Garrick Theatre on Monday, following the conclusion of Hattie Williams' engagement there, and will complete in that theatre his New York engagement, which was prematurely brought to a close last year by his illness.

Miss Julia Sanderson, the charming Eileen of "The Arcadians," has come to the defence of American men. She and some women friends were discussing the characteristics of the men of various nations and their fashions in clothes, and Miss Sanderson closed the debate by saying: "Well, the American coat may be a bit lacking in style, but the man inside of it can't be beaten anywhere. I do adore our American men!"

Musical comedy stars are generally supposed to be jealous of one another, but the two leading ladies of "The Arcadians," Miss Julia Sanderson and Miss Ethel Cadman, are very friendly and have formed a mutual admiration society. Said Miss Sanderson to Miss Cadman the other day "I love that Arcady song of yours and you sing it charmingly. Every time I hear it I completely lose myself, and just stand there and cry all through it." "That's very,very kind of you, my dear," replied Miss Cadman. "Believe me, I enjoy your 'Bird of A Brogue' song just as much, only it makes me feel like dancing, not crying."

Several changes have been made in the circus at the New York Hippodrome. A number of new acts have been added, amongst them may be mentioned Strongfort, who is billed as the perfect man and who justifies his claim to the title, at least to the extent of an extremely fine physique. In his "Poses Plastique" he shows to good advantage a splendidly developed body and the culmination of his act is a feat of strength of somewhat unusual order, i. e., Strongfort holds up by means of his body, a bridge over which a 40-horse power automobile containing six passengers and a chauffeur passes at full speed. There are ten acts in the complete circus program, besides the three big spectacles "A Trip to Japan," "The Ballet of Jewels" and "Inside the Earth." The tribe of Marois are still on the bill in their thrilling dances and on the whole the Hippodrome show has never been bigger nor better than this year, which is attested by continued capacity business twice a day.

AUTO SPEED TRIALS AT SATURDAY'S MEET

There will be an added feature to the motorcycle race meet which will be held at the Driving Association Park next Saturday afternoon in the form of automobile speed trials. This will be the first time that track auto races have ever been billed for this city and interest among the autoists and others who like the sport is keen. Carlton C. Brown, president of the Plainfield Automobile Trade Association, is one of the entries to date, while Terry Manning is the other. Manning will drive the Herreshoff car which Monte Robertson drove in the hill climb last summer. Entries of other autoists are expected. The distances are to be from one to five miles.

Another feature will be record trials by Arthur Chapple on a seven and half horse power Merkle motorcycle. Chapple is at present holder of several world's records and he will try to establish new records here. According to the rules of the American Federation of Amateur Motorcyclists, under whose sanction the meet is to be held, a machine as high powered as Chapple's is not permitted to take part in the races owing to the track being only a half-mile. A special permit, however, has been secured for the exhibition and something thrilling is promised. Recent entries for the races are Percy Drummond, Karl Segelbach and Howard Hill, the New Jersey Motorcycle Club cracks, of Newark.

Work of preparing the track began Monday. The top is to be harrowed and scraped and put in the best of condition. It is to be finished by Friday. Workouts will be held there Saturday morning.

THE DUTCH PAINTER

By KATE LUBY

In the center of a quiet village stood an inn, the proprietor of which was named Fritz; nearly opposite was the cottage of the village painter, rejoicing in the odd name of Tunder, at whose door might be seen boards representing grotesque caricature paintings, as signs of his profession.

Of a truth, poor Tunder had a great love for his art; but, sorrowful to relate, his art had no love for him!

He was vain and conceited, as nearly all pretenders to excellence are, yet he found a liberal patron and an ardent admirer in old Fritz, who carried his patronage so far as to promise him his lovely little daughter Lula in marriage.

Now Lula and her good mother had another young gentleman in their minds' eye; it was Rudolph, the handsome young gardener and huntsman, who loved Lula most fondly and truly, but who failed to make an impression on the flinty bosom of old Fritz.

To give more eclat to the wedding, Fritz ordered a new sign, and Tunder's talents were called in requisition.

Just then, a young artist, who had that day arrived from the city, offered to paint a sign, representing the archduke, on very reasonable terms. Lula and her mother voted for the artist's sign, and stubborn old Fritz swore that Tunder alone should share the glory with himself. At length a consultation was held, and both paintings should be done, and a place over the inn door awarded to that one which displayed most ability.

The wedding day had arrived, and Tunder was first in the field with his sign, but no one could make anything out of it.

"Behold!" cried the villagers, "a miserable abortion, which represents neither fish, nor fowl?"

"What is it?" asked one.

"It is mutilated Indian from the wilds of the west!" replied his neighbor.

"Ignorant wretches!" shouted Tunder, choking with indignation. "Ye have eyes and see not!" so saying, he seized his brush and painted underneath the portrait, "To the great Leopold."

Shouts and groans followed this announcement, not for "Leopold," but for Tunder, who had so shamefully misrepresented him.

The city artist's painting was next displayed, and produced a spontaneous burst of enthusiastic applause.

Never before had the people beheld so lifelike and well executed a likeness of their very popular archduke; and the artist, in order to escape being embraced by the crowd, beat a speedy retreat into the garden in the rear, and sat musingly on a bench.

In the midst of triumph his heart was bowed down beneath the load of some secret sorrow that was devouring him.

Unhappy Rollo! A few days since had seen him the favorite artist of a brilliant court, enjoying the reputation of a Raphael, and on the high-road to fame and fortune.

A noble lady of the court, and who was a ward of the archduke, had made a deep and lasting impression on his heart, and he soon perceived that his passion was returned.

He had not been long sitting in the garden, before he learned that there were no equals to Lula's cottage. Lula and her lover were sitting in an arbor, taking a last, loving farewell of each other.

"Why not fly with me, dearest Lula?" murmured Rudolph. "If you will not do so, a few short hours will see you wedded to that hateful Tunder, and lost to me forever!"

Lula sobbed audibly; yet, drying her tears, she replied:

"I cannot fly with you, though you know how much I love you, Rudolph; for my mother would grieve my father and break my mother's heart. I am full of hope that Heaven will yet smile on our love."

Archduke Leopold, with the beautiful archduchess, accompanied by her ladies and officers of the court, were on a hunting excursion and dashed through the village. The archduchess placed a chain of gold round Fritz's neck, demanding that the village artist who had painted the sign. After a long search Rollo was found peaceably sleeping in the garden.

Great was their delight and surprise at finding the "glory of their court," as they termed him.

The archduke folded him in his arms, and told him he had never doubted his honor. He must instantly return to court, no longer in the capacity of a poor artist, but as Baron de T——, which title, with its estates, the archduke was ready to bestow on him. Then he said he was greatly in need of Rollo's services as chief physician to his lovely ward.

"And now is there aught you wish me to do for your friends here?" asked the archduke.

Rollo related, in a few words, the story of Lula and Rudolph, on hearing which the duke beckoned to Fritz, and in a few moments the old man called the young couple, Lula and Rudolph, and gave his consent to their marriage.

His First Case

By BELLE MANIATES

A reminiscent look came into Garret's eyes as he read the letter bearing the postmark of an up-state town. It carried him back to his early life of toil on a farm where he had earned the money for college. From college by a stroke of fortune in attracting the favorable notice of Judge Larned he had been taken into a law office, where he had assisted in the preparation of many a case, but his first case, one in which he would have entire and undivided sway, was yet to be, and to the gaining and winning of this case he had a great incentive.

The incentive now darkened the doorway and a charming laugh rippled in, calling him back from the land of meadows.

"Were you dreaming," she asked with a fleeting glance, "of your first case?"

"No," he replied, reluctantly forced to the truth. "The letter I just received carried me back to my early life—on a farm."

"You never told me about those days," she said, reproachfully.

"There is little to tell. Such homely details—I was a ragged, hapless little chap, and I worked hard and grew up to be a gawky lad with a longing for the law. I saved enough to eke my way through college. Then your father took me in here. I met you, and now, oh, Denise!"

"What is it, Garret? It isn't. Oh, dear, I see! it is—your first case!"

"Yes."

There was only time for a rapturous glance before her father, the judge, entered. Garret read him the letter, which was from the son of a man who owned the farm on which Garret was raised, and who had advanced him the money to go to college. There were some complications in the will by which the young farmer had inherited his land, and a law suit was impending. He had written to Garret to employ his services. Garret explained at length the details of the case, Denise listening with concentrated attention.

"Some way, it seems like a call to me, and fitting that my first effort in a legal way should be for the good of my friend and the son of my benefactor. He was my chum."

There was an assumption of vexation in her fair brow and pouting lips that enlightened the judge. He knew that Garret was "conditioned," and he concluded that the condition was the winning of his first case.

"He can win it, if it is to be won," predicted the judge. "He cannot refuse, of course."

The next day Garret went to the scenes of his early struggles in life to look over the ground. Two days later he returned, going directly to the home of the judge, where he found Denise alone. Her attitude was still reproachful—almost resentful.

"Well, Garret," she asked. "Did you find any evidence in the deeds, I mean evidence?"

"I fear not. I ran up for the day to let your father's focusing eye magnify a little speck that I see."

"Why, of course," she said a little coldly, "if so much hinges on your success, I, of course, you would naturally want to win."

"Denise," he replied earnestly, "as deeply as I love you, our marriage is not the only incentive. My friend has a wife and babies. The loss of all his property would wreck a happy little household."

Her eyes were turned persistently from him.

"I must go to the office now," he said after a slight pause. "I go back to-night."

Her farewell was in a frigid tone, and he went away, depressed by her lack of sympathy and understanding. It took the entire day for the judge to go over the legal evidence with him, and he barely made his train.

"I will be out when the case comes to court if you wish, Garret," volunteered the judge. "I see a point here and there to suggest."

"Oh, judge, it is more than I dared ask," exclaimed Garret gratefully. "It is awfully kind—"

"Well," said the judge, "it seems to be a matter of importance to my family that you win."

Then noting the wince in the young man's eyes, he added kindly: "You mustn't put too much importance on a young woman's pique. Her heart is all right."

Two weeks later the judge informed Denise of his intention.

"I shall go with you, papa," she announced.

"That's a good idea, Denise. Your presence will sustain Garret even more than will mine."

At the tap on his shoulder Garret turned and saw her.

"Garret," she whispered, her heart aglow, her lovelight in his eyes as he slipped into the seat beside her. "I hope you will win this case."

"And if I don't don't, Denise?"

"Why, then, dear, we won't count this case as your first. And, Garret, I want you to win—for his—for your friend's sake."

He pressed her hand and then went on the case with the best reinforcement a man can have.

"How did you happen to come, Denise?" he asked as they were leaving the courtroom.

"Papa thought you would lose, and I thought if you did, you would need my consolation. And you won against such odds, he said. I am so glad that—"

"That—what, sweetheart?"

"That I said 'yes' before you won."

GETTING READY

"When I decided to go south for a few weeks," said pretty Miss Carew, decidedly, "I thought I was going so very inexpensively that I deserved a medal for my cleverness."

"You haven't given it up, I hope!" asked her friend. "Your cousin has planned such a gay time for you that it would be too bad not to go."

"Oh, no; I'm going," said Miss Carew. "I couldn't back out now that my cousin has laid so many plans. She has a dance arranged for the very evening of the day I arrive, so I hope my trunk won't be late. But, you see, I've come to the conclusion that the economical way to go always turns out to be the most expensive. When my cousin wrote me not to fail to come I accepted her invitation at once, because I had so very little to buy in order to go."

"You always have nice things," said her friend. "You wouldn't need a single new garment."

"That's what I thought," said Miss Carew. "I decided that a little piecing out would fix me up and that's where I made my mistake. If I had started by getting a complete new outfit it would have been cheaper.

"The first things I looked at were my hats," explained Miss Carew. "Of course I couldn't travel in my plumed hat and my white one was out of the question. I took my old one to the milliner and had it retrimmed, but when it came home I wasn't satisfied and I gave it away. Then, though I told the milliner it was for traveling, she showed me all sorts of deformed and distorted things with miles of ribbon and feathers on them and calmly announced that the lowest price was $25. She said she wouldn't take less. I gave away for that ridiculous sum if it wasn't late in the season. Of course, I had to have a nice hat."

"People expect a stranger to be particularly well dressed," agreed Miss Carew's friend, politely. "Isn't it funny? If we saw the same girl at home every day we wouldn't care half so much what she wore."

"Well, I had to pay a terrible price for that hat," sighed Miss Carew. "Really, though, it is beautiful."

"Things have gone up so," said her friend. "You can't get hats for the old-time prices."

"Then I thought my old suit would do if I had it pressed and got a new waist. That's where I went on Miss Carew. "I ran all about looking for something about the same shade as my suit and finally found one for $15 that would do. I discovered that my supply of belts and belt pins was getting low and money that I begrudged went into new ones. My old belt was good enough for home, but not for visiting, so there was another expense."

"Belts make the finishing touch," said the friend. "I've seen lots of suits spoiled by poor ones."

"My crepe de chine had to be cleaned and the sleeves had to be made over," related Miss Carew. "Then when it came back from the dressmaker's I thought it looked horrid and I bought a new meteor silk. Two suits had to be pressed. I had to get *three pairs of gloves. Then my slip*pers cost me a lot more than I expected."

"You can use everything when you come home," said her friend, consolingly. "You'll be glad to have them when you get back."

"That's just it!" sighed Miss Carew. "Did you ever have anything to fail back on when you came home from a visit? I've worn a thing left of my old clothes and the things I have bought new will be sights to see."

"Personally I am always rejoiced when my things go to pieces," said her friend. "For then I am absolutely forced to invest in new ones. It's when they're only half worn that I am in despair. Then my conscience forces me to make them do for any and all occasions. There's one consolation in going away—you can wear a lot of things everybody at home has seen, and the strangers will consider them new."

"Maybe that will be a comfort," said Miss Carew, more cheerfully. "You see, the railroad rates are so nice and low and I want to go so much. My cousin has planned the loveliest times! But when it came to getting three entirely new dresses—"

"You didn't!" exclaimed her friend.

"Why, yes," said Miss Carew. "Even when fixed over, all my things looked so shabby, somehow. My cousin is going to so much trouble to give me a gay time, arranging to have something every evening I'm there. I had to have two dinner gowns and absolutely needed something for house wear. I think I did pretty well not to get a new suit."

"Yes, but if you had stayed home you wouldn't—— Oh!" her friend interrupted herself. "Isn't that where that handsome young Mr. Randolph lives who was here last summer at your aunt's—"

"I believe there are a number of men of that name there," acknowledged Miss Carew, with rising color. "But that has absolutely nothing to do with it. I am going for a rest, you know."

Increase in Rice Production.

Rice production in the United States grew from an average of less than 100,000,000 pounds per annum a few years ago to an average of 500,000,000 pounds per annum in recent years, and reached over 600,000,000 pounds in 1908.

SCRIBE HAS A DREAM

The scribe had grown weary of everlastingly tearing off "copy."

His eyes were heavy, and his pencil had lost its customary rapidity with which it scrawled across sheet after sheet of paper, grinding out imaginary incidents that revolve around the every-day actions of Stamford's heroes.

The drowsy glow of the electric bulb above him seemed to grow drowsier. The 'phone at his elbow rang harshly, but 'twas only as in the far-distance.

Again the 'phone rang, but—what was the use?— the son-of-a-gun was asleep!

A lake, shimmering like a great opal, lay just to the westward. It was cool and clear, in the shadows and glowing with fiery hues where the sunbeams struck the surface. The trees on the island rose majestically into the crystalline air, and their reflection sank deep and smooth down below the blue and glass-like surface of the water.

Little boats glided here and there, shooting across the sun-lit spaces, and then vanishing into the infinite cool depths of the shadow at the side.

But one boat did not vanish.

Instead, it drew near to the spot where the Scribe, on the shore, rested, plucking absently at the tiny delicate flowers that grow in the turf.

Presently it grazed on the pebbles, and from it there arose—a woman.

She was a vision of beauty, this dream girl. The bloom of her cheeks was exquisite

ACT ON A JOINT SEWER

Mayor Sends Special Message on Subject to the Common Council.

A COMMITTEE IS APPOINTED.

Messrs. Tolles, Mygatt, Taylor and C. C. Randolph to Represent City in Negotiations With the Borough.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council Monday called the attention of the members to the importance of the city joining with the borough in the establishment of a sewage disposal plant. In his communication Mr. Fisk stated that the matter of removal of the present sewage disposal plant has been under discussion and investigation for the past two years and called attention to the fact that the plant is located in its present place not from choice but for the reason that at that time the city was forced to locate the plant within its limits.

"It has up to the present time served the necessities of the city," said the Mayor, "but the time has come when the city must make extensive repairs and additions at a cost of a large amount of money in order to provide for the growing requirements. The time is coming when we will have to remove the plant to a distant place, owing to the growth of the city.

"We now have the opportunity to unite with North Plainfield and other committee to accomplish this removal and secure a more up-to-date and efficient plant at a saving in cost to the taxpayers."

Mr. Fisk called attention to the fact that Sherrard Dupue, representing North Plainfield; C. A. Marsh, representing the city, together with W. J. Buttfield, president of the North Plainfield Sewage Commission and F. E. Mygatt, chairman of the public affairs committee, and the Mayor, drafted a bill, entitled an act to authorize two or more municipalities to jointly provide, maintain and operate a trunk or outlet sewer.

In the opinion of Mr. Fisk it is to the interest of the city and taxpayers to take up this matter and decide it as soon as possible. He stated that the city has surveys and estimates and that North Plainfield is ready to go ahead and the matter must be brought to the attention of the taxpayers if Plainfield is to reap the benefits of joint action. He urged that a special meeting be held within a week or two for in his opinion Plainfield should join with North Plainfield and take advantage of the plan to remove the local plant.

In this connection a communication was received from W. J. Buttfield urging similar action on the part of Plainfield before May 6, when the borough will hold a special election on the question. Later in the evening President Tolles appointed a special committee comprising F. E. Mygatt, C. C. Randolph and D. W. Taylor, with himself as a member ex-officio, to take up the sewer matter, and the communications from Mayor Fisk and Mr. Buttfield were referred to that committee.

$1,925,000,000 WILL EVANGELIZE THE WORLD

Henry W. Herrmann made an earnest appeal for support in the Layman's Missionary Movement at the First Baptist church Monday, where the kick-off will be held at the congregation entertained the members of the Men's Bible Class. Mr. Herrmann in the course of his remarks referred to the rapid growth of the movement and presented some interesting figures.

He declared that $55,000,000 annually is necessary to evangelize the world in one generation. He said that this would require thirty-five years, which he said would bring the total cost of evangelizing the entire world up to $1,925,000,000.

Referring to foreign missionary work Mr. Herrmann declared that all of this country's churches should lend their financial support, as the United States owes its present standing among the countries of the world, is due to the results of foreign missions established here when the country was in its infancy.

John O'Hara, of Bound Brook, rendered several pleasing vocal selections, and Professor Phelps presided at the meeting.

What He Got.

A good many years ago in the State of Iowa there was a small boy hoeing potatoes in a farm lot by the roadside. A man came along in a fine buggy and driving a fine horse. He looked over the fence, stopped and said: "Hub, what do you get for hoeing those potatoes?"

'Nothin' ef I do," said the boy, "and hell ef I don't."—Saturday Evening Post.

ROUTINE TRANSACTIONS OF THE COMMON COUNCIL

It was exactly 8.30 o'clock Monday night when the adjourned meeting of the Common Council convened and after remaining in session a half-hour, the members took a recess which lasted nearly an hour, to discuss matters pertaining to the tax budget. Later in the evening another recess was taken to allow Mr. Buxton to prepare a resolution.

Among the unimportant business considered was a petition for sidewalks on Berkeley avenue, between Denmark and Ravine roads, which was referred to the proper committee. Adam Fritz in a petition asked the Council to either lease or sell him the city garbage disposal plant on DeKalb avenue. He wants to use the place to raise chickens. The matter was referred to the proper committee.

The Board of Directors of the Public Library and Reading Room certified that it would require $7,500 for the coming year and that amount was granted by a resolution offered by Mr. Buxton.

Rev. B. M. Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's church, asked for permission to remove some old buildings at West Sixth and Liberty streets in connection with new construction work at that place, and the petition was referred to the fire and building committee with power.

A communication received by the Board of Health from H. C. White, of the Plainfield Protective Association, relative to unnecessary noises made by the trolley cars, was referred to the Council and was referred to the committee on laws and ordinances.

Mr. Buxton presented the papers of agreement between the city and Muhlenberg Hospital in which the Board of Governors of the hospital offered to care for the city's indigent poor for the coming year for $1,500 and Mr. Buxton then offered a resolution which das adopted, accepting the offer.

During the recess taken to discuss the tax budget, considerable time was taken up considering the salary of Jacob Dunham, the janitor of the building. He was receiving $35 a month, but had informed the finance committee that he could not live on that wage. He asked for an extra $10 a month, and it was granted after the Council had a talk with Mr. Dunham. The increase dates from January last. Later Mr. Dunham publicly thanked the Council for granting his request.

The bond of Tax Collector W. R. Townsend was presented by Mr. Buxton, having been approved by Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh and was ordered recorded. On motion of Mr. Clay the back ordinance was passed on the third reading, and is now in effect.

METHOD OF INDUCING SLEEP

Self-Suggestion Plays a Great Part—Worry Is the Main Thing to Be Avoided.

The next point to bear in mind is that self-suggestion plays a great part in the production of sleep, writes Dr. R. McComb in Harper's Bazar. Ordinarily we do not sleep by accident or haphazard. We resolve to sleep. We go through a variety of actions all suggestive of a change from our normal waking condition. We undress, we put on night attire, in a comfortable position, we close our eyes. We believe and expect that we are going to sleep, and the result is—sleep. One of the great preventatives of sleep is the fear of not sleeping. Once this fear is broken down, we sleep. The insomniac worries about his insomnia, and this very worry deepens the mischief. Hence the sufferer should suggest to himself again and again: "If I sleep, well; if I don't sleep I will at least gain rest by keeping my mind calm and my body relaxed." In a word, our chances of getting sleep increase if we assume the external physical attitude which corresponds to sleep, if we relax every muscle and if we stay relaxed. If we do this lightly and regularly, if we call up the imaginations of a sleeping person, and talk and think sleep to ourselves, repeating silently and in a quiet dreamy fashion such a formula as this: "There is no reason why I should not sleep. My mind is at peace. Sleep is coming. I am getting sleepy. I am about to sleep. I am asleep."

EASY TO DETECT BAD MONEY

Hold Bill Up to the Light and Examine the Silk Threads in the Paper.

Despite the utmost vigilance of our efficient secret service men, the making counterfeit money in this country has not been wholly suppressed. Spurious coins and paper notes occasionally get into circulation and some of these are so well done as almost to defy detection by experts.

Among the latest samples of the counterfeiters' art is a $10 bill, one of the cleverest imitations on record. A specimen of this issue was received and paid out by several banks, being regarded by all who handled it as genuine. In time it reached the subtreasury in New York and there its spuriousness at once became known.

On first inspection the bill appears to be a real product of the treasury department, but when held up to the light the little particles of silk, which in a genuine bill are curved and twisted in the paper, are seen to be straight and hard. A magnifying glass shows some very slight discrepancies between the face of the bill and that of a genuine one.

Subtreasury officials state that the bogus note was engraved by a master in the art who may once have been employed in the bureau of engraving at Washington. Every person who receives a $10 bill, says Leslie's Weekly, should apply to it at least the simple test above given of holding it up to the light and noting the condition of the silk threads.

True to Memory of Beau Nash.

The famous Beau Nash was at one time extremely fond of a beautiful girl called Juliana Papjoy, sometimes known as the Bispotrow belle. She used to ride about the streets of Bath on a fine gray horse carrying a whip with many thongs, a fad which gained for her the title of Lady Betty Besom. Juliana was very kind-hearted and during the last five years of the beau's life she nursed him devotedly. After his death she vowed that she would never again sleep in a bed and took up her abode in a large hollow tree, where she lived for many years, earning a scanty livelihood by selling herb medicines and fetching and carrying. At last Juliana became very ill and, knowing she could not possibly recover, she felt an intense longing to die in her old cottage home at Bishopstrow. More dead than alive, she set out on this last journey, and managed to reach the house where she was born in time to die there.

Eugene Field's Joke on Dr. Hale.

Edward Everett Hale greatly enjoyed a joke which was perpetrated on him by Eugene Field, says the Woman's Home Companion. Field celebrated one of Hale's visits to Chicago by giving a luncheon in his honor, inviting a number of prominent persons to meet him. "Field was a great Hale, Hale," was a temperance man, and therefore I was somewhat surprised to see that the table on which the luncheon was served was very abundantly supplied with bottles labeled 'whisky,' 'brandy' and 'champagne.' But when these bottles came to be uncorked they were all found to contain nothing but water."

Different.

"I wrote him that I was ready to come home."

"What he glad?"

"He wrote me that he would have to borrow money to pay my fare."

"What did you do?"

"I asked him what I should do, and he said he would borrow money enough for me to stay there a while longer."

Fetzer (in street car)—See that man sitting at the other end—the big fat fellow who takes up so much room?

Wallman—Yes.

Fetzer—Do you know why he doesn't give up his seat to that little thin woman standing in front of him?

Wallman—That's easy; he's too selfish.

Fetzer—No, you're mistaken. That's Millionaire Gripper. He made all his money by practicing economy, and the habit of wasting nothing is so strong in him that he would feel guilty if he gave his seat to a woman who was not large enough to fill it.

Such Is Fame.

When the news that Tom Johnson was defeated for mayor was received in the office of the Denver Times there was not time to do more than run a scare head, "Johnson Defeated!"

The papers were on the street in a few minutes, and a freckled Irish "newsie" started off yelling, joyously: "Jeff wins!"

Mrs. Candor.

Country Woman—I've been expecting a packet of medicine by post for a week, and haven't received it yet. Postoffice Clerk—Yes, madam. Kindly fill in this form and state the nature of your complaint.

BUCKWHEATS VERSUS PIE

By BELLE MANIATES

Bertha awaited the coming of her caller without much animation.

"He won't come many times," she said to her mother. "The other girls will get to inviting him and they will feed him with layer cakes and pies and ice cream. The boys say it's just like a poorhouse here. We never give them a thing to eat."

"Well, if that's all they come for, I'd be mighty glad to have them stay away." Pie and cake and ice cream is unhealthy stuff and I ain't going to have any in my house. This is no eating house."

Mrs. Willets snapped out this declaration and went upstairs to bed at her usual early hour. She relented enough to caution the two young boys, Richard and Bert, not to go into the sitting room.

"Bertha's going to have a beau," she informed, "and you can sit in the kitchen and study your lessons."

They obediently went to the kitchen, but did not study.

"Who's coming to see Bertha?" asked Bert.

"Red Raymond. He's been out west for four years, you know. Been a cowboy and shot Indians."

"I hope Bertha keeps him for a steady."

"She won't," replied Richard, who had been eavesdropping, "because ma won't let her make any pies and cake and stuff for him to eat."

"He!" commented Bert. "Tain't likely he's anything like these farmers around here. He won't care for pie and cake."

"Bertha don't seem to keep a fellow long," lamented Richard. "Ned Price came a year ago, only a month. He says he likes fat girls with red cheeks. Bertha's pale and thin, you know."

"That's not a cowboy's style," remarked Bert, who had taken to drawing books from a circulating library. "They like the delicate kind."

The boys immediately set to work and when things were ready they marched into the sitting room, where Bertha, distrait from her mortification at not being able to offer Red cake and pie, was ill at ease and inattentive. She welcomed the diversion of the entrance of the boys.

"Say," said Bert, "Richard and I got hungry and we are going to have a spread in the kitchen. Don't you folks want to come out?"

"Sure we do," responded Red, promptly, rising from his chair with alacrity and following the boys.

Bertha obeyed with some trepidation.

"Oh, Lord!" ejaculated Red when he came into the big, warm kitchen and smelled the coffee. I do believe that's what I smell—buckwheats. I used to dream about them when I was down in New Mexico."

Bertha's spirits rose. The boys had set the table nicely. The coffee smelled promising. There were a pitcher of cream and a jug of syrup on the table.

"Sit down," urged Bert. "I'll bake the cakes and Rich will serve you. Pour the coffee, Bertha."

"Say," inquired Richard, as he laid a golden-brown cake on Red's plate, "what did you call these? A what of buckwheats?"

"Stack," said Red, pouring about a pint of syrup over the cakes. "That's what they call them out west. Wheat cakes is a stack of whites. Poached eggs on toast is Adam and Eve on a raft—"

"Go on, tell more!" applauded Bert, waving a pancake turner excitedly in the air.

Red laughed and between cakes he related western tales to the boys' content.

"Is be coming again to-morrow night, Bertha?" whispered Richard when his guest as his sister came upstairs at a late hour.

"Yes," she answered; happily. "It was just lovely of you, boys, to think of the cakes. He's going to bring you each a dandelion to-morrow."

"It'll be all right for him," prophesied Bert. "You leave the feeding part to us."

The next night the little brothers again ushered themselves into the sitting room.

"We've got some Adams and Eves on rafts," grinned Richard.

"Well, you are the best chefs I know," said Red, approvingly, "and you bet you'll get a tip." He handed to each an Indian bow and arrows.

The next night, as sister's beau came up the lane, he was met by Bert. "Say," said the boy, doggedly, "before you come in there's something I want to tell you."

"All right, my boy. Fire away."

"You see there ain't anything to eat to-night and we've run out of coffee and I thought it only fair to tell you before you came in, so you could turn right around and go back. But it ain't Bertha's fault. It's ma that's stingy."

Red stared a moment and then burst into a hearty laugh.

"See here, Bert! You didn't think I came to your house to eat, did you? I came because I love your sister."

"Oh, Gee!" said the boy.

"The first time I set eyes on her I said, 'There's the girl for me.' When I called that first night she was so quiet I thought she didn't like me. I was clean discouraged till you boys broke the ice with your stack of buckwheats."

"Does Bertha know?"

"Well, I reckon she does unless she's a mighty poor guesser, but I am going to ask her plumb out to-night and I hope I'll be too happy to eat."

EXTRAORDINARY FEAT OF A NORTH PLAINFIELD HEN.

Will wonders never cease? Will hens ever stop putting forth freaks and undermining the credulity of man? No. Not so long as Jersey remains on the map and Charlie Ellis cultivates hen fruit. Mr. Ellis lives at 151 Duer street, "over the brook," and the product of one of his hens which Mr. Ellis found in the nest Monday afternoon bids fair to beat the record for even Jersey hens.

An egg is an egg usually, but when an egg is not an egg has been demonstrated by this hen and from last accounts she is proud of it. An unusual cackling attracted Mr. Ellis to his henhouse last evening and upon investigating the cause discovered a rather matronly bird which, has never hitherto given evidences of being a fowl, crowding and clucking rumpus near a nest over which she is supposed to reign supreme. Here, palpitating with emotion, and seemingly alive, Mr. Ellis found the most extraordinary specimen of an egg, or was it, or them, eggs, or both, egg or eggs? Either, this is correct. Let us call it a pair, no not a pair, a dumbbell, that's it. An egg resembling a dumbbell. Neither end was hard shell, just a jelly-like combination joined together by what appeared to be ligament which was not boiled and of which he knows of the "dumbbell" laid the yolk and in the other the white, or albumen of the egg, or was it, or were they eggs?

FIRST PRINTING BY STEAM

In these days, when the influence of the press is, one might almost say, paramount, it is interesting to recall the fact that on November 29, 1814, a newspaper appeared for the first time printed by steam instead of by manual labor, says the London Globe. The credit for having adopted the invention rests with the Times, which was the first paper to inaugurate the new system. In a leading article of the day the great event is referred to in the following terms:

"Our journal of this day presents to the public the practical result of the greatest improvement connected with printing since the discovery of the art itself. The reader of this paragraph now holds in his hands one of the many thousand impressions of the Times newspaper which were taken off last night by a mechanical apparatus. A system of machinery, almost organic, has been devised and arranged which while it relieves the human frame of its laborious efforts in printing, far exceeds human power in rapidity and despatch."

The article goes on to explain in more or less detail the process of the new machine, the work of the compositors, the supply of paper, the distribution of ink, the 1,100 sheets impressed in an hour, "which several operations leave little for man to do but watch the unconscious agent in its operations." With becoming modesty the writer of the article goes on to say that the Times only takes credit for the application of the discovery. The patentees of the new machine approached them and they adopted the invention.

As to the inventor, his work is compared to the noblest monument of Sir Christopher Wren—St. Paul's Cathedral. We are told that he was a Saxon by birth, by name Konig, who developed this wonderful invention, assisted by his "friend and countryman Bauer." Very soon the new machine gave place to another with vast improvements, invented by Applegarth and Cowper, and later still to another, even more ingenious the work of one Hoe, which has given place to the modern printing press. Everything changes; the most marvelous invention of one generation is superseded in the next, and what our grandfathers regarded as mechanical marvels we look upon today as clumsy tools. How long will it be before the present system of printing is discarded for a still more wonderful process.

The art of printing, as also that of engraving, existed long before the fifteenth century. Indeed there is good evidence to show that in the eleventh century it was practiced by kings and princes. Thus William the Conqueror had his monogram cut in metal, the impression of which may be seen on certain old charters. In the East printing was known long before Norman days. In China, for instance, as far back as the second century many of the most important classical works were ingraved on tablets, some of which have been preserved to this day.

Again, in Japan, the art of block printing was well known in the year 770; while as for copper types, the invention is attributed to the Corseans. Yet dispite all evidence that the East discovered and practised the art long before the West trustworthy authority refuse to admit that Europe learned anything from China or Japan. But however, that may be, printing much as we see it today, was perfected at Mainz in the year 1454. As to when, where, and by whom the art was discovered the controversy raged for many years. An Italian, Costadi by name, who lived in the middle of the fifteenth century, was for many years accepted as the inventor of the art. By others John Gutenberg, a native of Bohemia, was regarded as the true author. In other cities Johann Faust, Mentel of Strasburg and Nicholas Jansen all had their supporters.

When all the evidence, however, of the various claimants has been inquired into the result leads us to the conclusion that printing with movable metal types was the invention of Janszoon Coster, who displayed his skill at Haarlem in the year 1445. From this time onward improvements followed quickly. Thus the hand press is now superseded by the most wonderful of mechanical machines. In the olden days, and indeed until comparatively recent years, the old printers were entirely independent of every other craft, they carried on their work unassisted one man being able to do all that was required for the production of a document. He mixed his own ink and cast the type. In short, he was his own master and could produce everything necessary to carry on his trade. How different are things nowadays, when the staff of an important London paper numbers some hundreds of individuals.

In the fifteenth century, moreover, there were many itinerant printers who wandered through Europe and set up a press wherever they went. It follows form this that the plan required must have been very limited. In this respect it is curious to notice that as regards the shape of the actual types there is no great difference between the old and the modern. Thus the pureRoman type, such as is used today, is in reality nothing more than an improved edition of a particular writing well known in the eighth century.

In conclusion nothing has given a greater impetus to the art of printing or has tended more ot develop the printing machine than education. As people become more educated so they demanded more books, whereas in olden days a book was a luxury, owing to the expense of printing. So inexpensive has the process now become that whereas formerly the bible—and not always that—constituted the entire library of a cottage, today the latest productions may be bought by those possessed of the smallest means. And for this change of affairs no journal is more responsible than the London Times, the first paper to introduce steam printing.

Cocoa Sponge Cake.

This is a small recipe, to be baked in a single-loaf bread pan lined with oiled paper. Beat two eggs separately. Sift together three times one cupful of flour, one-fourth cupful of cocoa and two scant teaspoonfuls of baking powder. To the beaten yolks add a cupful of sugar, then alternately the flour and stiff whites. Add a teaspoonful of vanilla and one-third cupful of boiling water. Bake slowly. Ice with plain boiled icing.

Two-Toned Mohaire.

In keeping with all the irridescence of other fabrics, everyday, reliable mohair has come out in quite a new and gay aspect. It is two-toned in a changeable effect. It gives quite a novel look to one of the most substantial spring and summer fabrics. It is admirable for young girls' coat suits or school frocks.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 17, 1910.

Topic—Good cheer in dark days.—Acts xxvii, 20-36. Comment by Rev. Sherman E. Doyle, D. D.

In this story of part of Paul's journey from Caesarea to Rome Luke has given us a most vivid account of a shipwreck. Starting out from Fair Havens against the advice of the apostle on account of the stormy character of the sea at that time of the year, they advanced safely for a time and were then struck by a terrible tempest or typhoon, in which they were tossed about for more than two weeks. For many days they saw neither sun nor stars, the only guides of seamen in the days before the compass had been invented. For fourteen days they ate nothing. The provisions were probably soaked with water and all fires extinguished, and, furthermore, they were occupied all the time with trying to keep the large vessel afloat. All hope was abandoned. Paul absented himself. He spent the time undoubtedly in prayer for himself and all on shipboard. Then he appeared, addressed the company, telling them that he had had a revelation from God and that he believed God, and exhorted them to be "of good cheer," because there would not be a life lost except the ship. Later on they ate at Paul's advice. Paul thanked God, blessed the bread and ate of it. "Then they were all of good cheer, and they also took some meat." Shortly after the ship was wrecked upon the island of Malta, and not one of the 276 souls on board was lost. God's promise was fulfilled, and in answer to Paul's prayer He had saved all on board. Darker days could scarcely be imagined, and the "good cheer" of Paul must have been an inspiration to them all.

In the voyage of life there are also dark days, sometimes darker days than those upon a starless sea, when only the physical life is in danger. There are dark days of sickness, sometimes lasting for years; dark days as the result of bereavement or financial disaster; dark days brought about by poverty, want and need. In addition, there are dark spiritual days. The world cannot see God. Doubt and distrust in God sometimes creep into the heart, and it seems as if God has deserted us or as if there were no God. Each one may think that his days are the darkest of all, but let him not so mistrust God. Every life has its own trials and difficulties, only we frequently do not know what others endure and suffer. But "every heart knoweth its own sorrow," and thousands have aching, breaking hearts of which the world knows nothing.

Yes, these dark days are not always known. Here it was disobedience to God, who spoke through the apostle. Had they taken Paul's advice and remained at Fair Havens over the winter, this terrible storm would probably never have happened. But Paul's advice was disobeyed, and the dark days came. Many dark days are caused by disobedience to God. Saul as king of Israel was most prosperous and successful. In three wars against the enemies of his kingdom by the presence and help of God he won glorious victories. But in the last war he disobeyed God in not destroying the enemy and all their flocks and herds. God called him to account for it, and he tried first to deny, then to extenuate his offense, but it was useless, and darkness, indeed, came upon him politically, mentally and spiritually. But in many cases the causes of dark days of affliction, trial, bereavement and temptation are unknown to us. All we can do is to trust God and "be of good cheer," making His will our will.

The source of good cheer in dark days is God. To the disciples of Christ, who is God, said, "Be of good cheer." And in the midst of these dark days Paul went to God. He believed in God and prayed for himself and all on board, and, getting the answer from God, he called upon all to "be of good cheer." God often uses His own people to carry good cheer to others. Do you know any one in distress, any one in sickness, any one bereaved, any one passing through hard times? Pray to God for them, believe in God and carry them His message of good cheer.

The Christian Endeavor Vine.

[Copyrighted. Used by permission.]

The marvel of the world of thought, of the end of the ages
All promises and potencies lie hidden in a seed,
And this of ours, in wintry soil laid prayerfully away,
How has it grown and spread abroad
The love that blessed the world!
How deep its roots have pierced the ground!
How far its tendrils run!
How broad the arching vine with its wide sweep beneath the circling sun!
To north and south, to east and west, the glorious vine extends,
Around the sweep of all the earth its grateful shadow bends.
All China feels its hopefulness and India owns the spell,
And all the realm of the sea its gladsome praises tell,
And Europe's loftiest of lands, and Africa's deserts, and where the tropic splendors glow or arctic stillness reigns,
In all of heaven's sunshine cheered, by all its nurture fed,
Wherever men have built their homes this mighty vine has spread.
The clusters of its glowing fruit are full and fair and free
And hanging from each of all the world may happy taste and see.
And some are prayers, some are words of helpful kindliness,
And some are deeds of loving hearts that sacrifice, heal and bless,
Or life who is the living Vine, whose life is in all its veins
And breathing in the earlier days and yet in strength remains.
He planted it. He nourished it, and He will tend it still,
The flower of His perfect love, the fruitage of His will.

GREET REV. MR. MAGUIRE

Rev. Dr. Eaton and Others Speak at Park Avenue Church Service.

DR. VASSAR MAKES ADDRESS.

New Local Pastor Given Cordial Welcome—C. W. McCutchen Presides—Reception Following Service.

Ministers and members of nearly all the churches in the city and borough joined Thursday in recognition service and reception for Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, the new pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and his family. It was an auspicious occasion for the Park Avenue church. The auditorium was filled with worshippers and the services were of an interesting character. All of the city and borough evangelical pastors were present, with the exception of Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church. Charles W. McCutchen, who presided, conveyed the doctor's regrets in being called away.

Seated on the platform were Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York city, through whose good offices, Mr. Maguire came to Plainfield; Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church; Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church; Rev. C. W. Musson, of the Temple Baptist church; Rev. Dr. T. E. Vassar, of Elizabeth, representing the ministers of the State, and the East New Jersey Baptist Association, and Clerk Judge William N. Runyon, who extended the welcome to the city.

The services opened with an organ voluntary by Robert Humpstone, and an anthem by the chorus choir. Following the singing of a hymn, the Scripture lesson was read by Rev. Dr. Anderson, after which Mr. Musson offered prayer.

"This is a joyous occasion for this and other Baptist churches, as well as all other churches in the city," said Mr. Cutchen, "for it solemnizes an ecclesiastical wedding of this pastor and this people and we are here to ratify and approve the union. It is appropriate that we should do this. It takes pleasure in presenting "Bishop" T. E. Vasar, who will extend a welcome to Pastor Maguire to the State."

Dr. Vassar, who is one of the leading Baptist ministers in the State, began by saying that one hundred years ago there were four Baptist churches in Philadelphia, and recently he picked up a book which told how the members of these churches got together and prayed for the safety of a minister and his wife, who were about to go into missionary work in Ohio.

"I don't believe that Dr. Eaton found many wigwams on Euclid avenue, Cleveland, while he was in that city. And we are reminded that that State has furnished four of our Presidents. I imagine that Mr. Maguire will be a little cramped in this State, which is only about seventy miles wide. Although Ohio has about 47,000 square miles, there are more Baptists to the square mile in New Jersey than in the Buckeye State, and there are proportionately more in Plainfield than in Cleveland. The Baptists have a proud record of 230 years of work in this State. It is in this State that people stay over night, the lunch room is in New York. Crowds are constantly coming over here. We have 354 Baptist churches with 64,552 members in this State, but I doubt if Dr. DeWolf would vouch for them all. Some are good, some are fairly good and some are nothing to boast of.

"Mr. Maguire comes here as a leader and co-helper in God's vineyard and in the name of the Baptist churches of the State I give him welcome."

In introducing the next speaker, Judge Runyon, Mr. McCutches said that when Mr. Maguire came here he was referred to the only man of authority concerning the city, and he had reserved his decision which would now be heard.

Judge Runyon extended a welcome to Mr. Maguire on behalf of the city and he did so in his characteristic earnest manner. He said that his strength is an attribute, a quality that inspires a wholesome regard, whether it be on the athletic field or at the forge.

"The church was never so much in need of strong men as today," said Judge Runyon, "when evil is abroad in the land and social ills like a dark cloud. There is one agency to combat this and that is the Church of God."

Rev. Dr. Herring, who gave the inter-denominational welcome, referred to the beauty of inter-denominational fellowship. "Let us be broad," said the doctor, "but let us stand on the whole Bible. The essence of true Christianity is the Kingdom of God in society, the Fatherhood of God and a higher righteousness. It makes no difference what name we are so known as we live in the great truths of Jesus Christ.

"I am here to represent the ministers of the city. The grace of God is in their hearts and there is true fellowship. I recall Dean Rodman of sweet disposition; Dr. Richards, the dignified; and Dr. Lowry, who was my instructor. I also recall that not one of the ministers on the platform tonight was here when I came to Plainfield. Mr. Maguire, I extend to you the right-hand-of-fellowship and may the blessings of God rest on you in your work here.

A reception next was then given by Mrs. Robert Humpstone and Bertram Tallamy.

In introducing Dr. Eaton, the next speaker, whose topic was "The Church and Its Pastor," Mr. McCutchen said: "When I hear any one laughing, I like it, and I have a warm feeling about my heart; when I meet some of the sons of Cleveland, I feel sunshiny. Dr. Eaton has made so many friends since coming to Plainfield, it seems as though he had been here twenty-five or thirty years. He has endeared himself." Dr. Eaton responded:

"It seems like home to have Gabriel with us. I expect any moment to hear that trumpet. We are both delicate to look at, but I think you will find Mr. Maguire equal to any amount of hard work. It is a peculiar joy that I stand in this pulpit to welcome my old friend and brother and neighbor, Mr. Maguire, here in this place. I love Plainfield. I have a reason to. A year ago last October there landed in this city as sick a specimen of a Baptist preacher as you ever saw. We have to work in Cleveland, it isn't like little places such as New York and Plainfield where everyone is good.

"I was taken sick in Cleveland and I came to Plainfield. I truly believe the Lord called me here, for I knew no one in this place. The next morning I drove out and took a general survey of things. I felt that I had been here before—possibly the reincarnation of some Runyon, for I found nobody in Plainfield much but Runyons. I made up my mind to stay here.

"Plainfield is a good, wholesome place to live in, and to bring up children. Here may be found an elevation of character, a general intellectual atmosphere. Sounds like taffy. I couldn't afford to live in Plainfield, so moved out on a farm. One of the Runyons sent the judge—asked me to charge the church. I haven't a regiment large enough to do that.

"The relationship between pastor and church is intimate and personal; therefore so mutually helpful as not to be lightly thought of. You, my brother, trust your happiness and your good name to this church; and they trust theirs to you, their pastor. I always think of a minister as distinct from other men. You go to a lawyer and you trust him to handle your affairs. You trust your physician with your life. But to a minister you entrust the diviner parts of your nature; this is a sacred trust on the part of the church.

"I rejoice that you have begun together in this holy relationship. I know Mr. Maguire—he's a man, every inch of him, and that's a good many inches. And in this case where a minister knows who wrote the Penateuch; but is he a man? If a man, then men will listen to him; if not, his voice will be received as an echo and men will not listen to him.

"The church makes him, while he is making the church. He will get his crowd, but he wants the church's crowd; if he doesn't get this his place in the community will soon disappear. I rejoice, my brother, that you have come to this church. I know the streets of Plainfield well, I guess, as many of you who have been here more years than I have; and as I walk about, I notice wonderful development. I believe the hour has struck for the Park Avenue Baptist church. You've got a magnificent church. I believe this church is entering upon the greatest era in its history. You have a good newspaper press; they'll treat you as a white man ought to be treated. The other night I talked before a lot of men in my own church. The next day I saw in the paper what was supposed to be an account of my talk. Every two and a half lines contained a misstatement, and I soon discovered the reason for this. The reporter who had taken down my talk, told me that he was an anarchist in religion; he was a Mormon, born in Utah, his father being high up in office in the Mormon church.

"I have been impressed tonight with the note of largeness apparent in the remarks of every speaker. You do not come to the Park Avenue Baptist church, my brother, for this church alone. The work in this community is not work for one denomination, but you all help together. If the Park Avenue church fails, it will make it harder for all the other churches. If Mr. Maguire succeeds, it will make it easier for the other churches in Plainfield.

"You cannot find a place with people more intelligent and Christlike than they are in Plainfield. We have a right to expect that powerful men will make themselves felt throughout the land. I welcome you, my dear brother. I rejoice friends of the Park Avenue church, in the leader whom you have found. I predict in the days to come the happiest and most useful era in your history."

Mr. Maguire made a brief and happy response. He spoke on the topic of "Liberty, Equality and Fraternity," which adorn the entrance to the legislative hall in Paris, and had something pertinent to say of each one. He said that it was with the knowledge of liberty and the desire to make others free that he came to Plainfield.

"I come here with a spirit of fraternity and love," said Mr. Maguire, "and I thank you kind friends for calling me to follow my illustrious predecessor, Dr. Lowry. I thank you all for the kind words spoken. Now is the time of harvest, the time to reap, and my prayer is that God will bless us in His work. Again I thank you for kind words of hope, encouragement and cheer."

After the service a reception was held in the parlors, when all greeted Mr. and Mrs. Maguire and their daughter. The committees in charge follow:

Pulpit, David M. Runyon, chairman; Mrs. Charles VanWinkle, George W. V. Moy, Mrs. C. K. Compton, Nelson Runyon and Theodore I. Runyon; decorations, Mrs. Charles VanWinkle; refreshment, Mrs. W. S. Lowry; waitresses, the Misses Hannah and Sara Boyd, Allee Brown, Eleanor Stutsman, Lillian Cuming and Emily Templin. A feature was selections by G. W. V. Moy's orchestra.

TEN MILE MOTOR RACE FOR SATURDAY'S MEET

Plainfield's motorcycle race meet, which will be held on the Driving Association's track next Saturday afternoon, promises to be the real thing in motor racing. Entries are coming in rapidly and as it is Plainfield's initial try at motorcycle racing interest in the affair is keen. Crack riders from throughout the Metropolitan district will be on hand, they coming from Newark, New York, Brooklyn and other sections.

Six events will claim the attention of the riders and there is much variety to the program. Plainfield and suburb riders will be taken care of in two events in which they will be about the only contestants. The first is a two-mile novice and the second a five-mile handicap in which Plainfield riders only are eligible. They will also be free to compete in the ten-mile race. Particularly good some prizes are to be offered, in each case a gold watch will be given to the winners.

The other events and the ones in which the stars will appear along with others are a five-mile handicap for twin cylinder machines, three-mile scratch race for single cylinder motors, one-mile novelty event and a ten-mile handicap for double cylinder motorcycles. This latter will be the big race of the day and track records are likely in the race. Most of the speed riders will be entered by the manufacturers throughout the East and they will be equipped with special racing machines.

Entries are being received at Plainfield by A. D. Honeyman, 112 Madison avenue, or by any of the Plainfield dealers. Claude E. Holgate, of 123 Union street, Newark, is taking the entries of the riders in his city as well as from the Metropolitan district.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

God bless T. R., our nation's noblest citizen!
God bless the Pope! and give him peace all summer.
The junior, Theocrat by self design,
The senior, Theocrat by "right divine,"
Each lord inperious in his boundless sphere,
Our Dominie, to scold and domineer.
The one does all our thinking here below,
The other warns where all such thinkers go,
Young Theo fires 12,000 to their doom,
Although not sinners, but it makes a boom;
Good Pius send not beasts, being humaney,
Where Father sent Spain's warriors at El Caney.
Both condescend to pity our sad state,
Both are our heaven-sent guides to happier fate;
Each claims the homage of this wicked world
On bended knee where'er His flag's unfurled,
And to their superhuman power we bow
In humble suppliance, with a pious vow
Forevermore to think, speak, act, and see
According to their will—when they agree
To show wherein the sacred secret lies
Which makes them always more than mortal wise,
And answer this—we ask in all humility—
Can both Popes, rivals, claim infallibility?

We are a real Republic and scorn the pomp and etiquette and ceremonialism of the Courts of effete monarchies. True, our last President inaugurated a gold etiquette, formulated new ceremonial observances, installed a new order of what we used to poke fun at as the Court Flunkey squad, gorgeous in gold lace, white silk stockings and short plush knee pants, alien to our Puritan traditions. It was also proclaimed in the press that at receptions and before dinner in the White House—now glorified into The Executive Mansion (or is it Palace) the approach of the awe-inspiring Presence will henceforth be heralded by a fanfaronade of trumpets, or by Heeland Bagpipes when his grace the Juke of Skibereen deigns to dine with Majesty. The more singular it is that a private American gentleman, well-knowing and enforcing the etiquette proper to all receptions in the White House, should kick at the very simple and easy rule of conforming to other people's rules. A fem pet in a teapot is important or ridiculous as it happens to be filled with cold etiquette water or boiling hot t-emper.

We know the brotherhood of professional "humorists" less by their output of the real article than by their fraternal habit of dining together and swearing that each is a greater one than all the rest. Humor, nevertheless, is not and can never be a manufactured thing. It is spontaneous and ever-flowing, and the best made-up imitation only shows up the lack of the genuine. Why can't the ungifted be content to cultivate simple good-humor, a quality far too scarce and more precious than golden dollars or brazen pretence. What "funny man" ever equalled our schoolboy and girl in drollery most exquisite because perfectly unconscious? I am not saying that they are "humorists," any more than professionals naturally are, but they are drolls, so droll, all unconsciously, that their output gives us unalloyed delight, greater than mere funny stories usually give to our sober minds.

Here are few bona fide examples from the exam. papers of schoolboys:

The Swedish runner Ljungstrom, to whose great performance we referred a few weeks ago, won the Marathon at the New York Polo grounds the other day, seven minutes under the world record. As no reader wrote to The Plainfield Press in comment on our paragraph telling that these victories have been won on what is called the vegetarian diet, one is in doubt whether our readers believe it or don't, like it or don't like it, whether they record it, doing. The point of more or less importance is the bearing of this fact on the groans over the dearness of meats. If there is a sincere desire to cut down expenses and still keep up the feeding quality of our daily foods, it would seem that some readers would stir up a correspondence by courtesy of the editor. The love of discussion appears to be dormant. Perhaps all our readers are in the beef business. Even so, some of us would welcome them into the ring. I would ply them with sundry questions, for the enlightenment of self and the public. Such as—how is it that deep red beef is preferred to yellow-mottled beef? The first is priceless as a boiled blanket, the yellow is rich in gravy and fine flavor, richer in nutrition and fifty times cheaper to eat. This will suffice for the present.

Actually, New York is making-believe to get ready to begin trying to stop the habit of smoking foul smelling gasoline pipes by autos. Last summer the Aldermen who gave Cook the "freedom of the city," which is just a drink out of an empty glass, drew up a lot of equally powerful ordinances to kill the public nuisance (not the Cook). The drivers were to be punished by everything but hanging. Particularly the autos were not to indulge in smoking Central Park. We sat there one crowded summer afternoon. Twenty-three went by in ten minutes, each leaving a trail of stench, while two uniformed Park police stood idly by, and one Park constable helped them.

TALKED ON EDUCATION

School Principals Made Addresses at Board of Trade Meeting.

THEIR WORK IS EXPLAINED.

Maxson, Krebs, Grossmann, Lovell and Herr were Heard—Board by Resolution Endorses Public School Methods.

Members of the Board of Trade heard several instructive talks on education at the regular monthly meeting of the board Thursday. Speeches were made by Supervising Principal H. C. Krebs, of the borough school, Superintendent Henry M. Maxson, of the city schools; A. S. Herr, of the Plainfield Business College; Dr. M. Grozmann, of the Grozmann School; and Leander N. Lovell, of the Plainfield Board of Education.

Mr. Lovell reviewed the history of the public school system from the little red schoolhouse to the present time of modern fire-proof structures. He also explained the State laws which regulate the work of school boards. In the construction of new buildings he stated that school boards are compelled to observe the different laws closely. The speaker defended the present system of curriculum and added that he agreed that a plenty of room for discussion, as to what studies should be taken up, particularly after the pupil has entered the High School.

"The problem is a growing one," said Mr. Lovell, "and as long as two men think differently, just so long will there be differences with conditions, as they really exist." He also paid a high tribute to the teachers in the city and borough schools and congratulated the Board of Trade for interesting itself in the schools.

Mr. Maxson spoke on educational matters from a general standpoint. "The work of the Plainfield schools is well and favorably known," he said, "and we are trying to meet each phase of the situation, as it comes before us." The employment of competent teachers he held was responsible for the high standard of education.

Superintendent H. C. Krebs gave an interesting talk on the relations of teacher and pupil. He told how "bad boys in school" developed into good men and women and he said had accomplished great things in the commercial and scientific world. He also dwelt on the phase of education as dealing with the individual pupil.

"A great deal of work is being done," said Mr. Krebs, "in the direction of aiding those who find it a little difficult to keep up with others in the classroom, and in the borough school at the present time, we have our class for backward pupils." Good results are being secured by this system he declared.

Dr. Grossmann, principal of the School of Exceptional Children, told of the progress being made in the education in his institution. Mr. Herr gave a short talk on educating young people for the commercial world.

THE MORALITY OF HEALTH

Topic of Intense Interest to All Humans Presented at All Souls' Church.

MRS. ANNA G. SPENCER SPEAKS.

Methods of Caring for the Body as Well as the Soul Needed—Other Lectures to Follow.

The first of a series of "social welfare services was held in All Souls' church Sunday. Mrs. Anna Garlin Spencer being the speaker. A fairly large audience made up from the membership of various denominations listened with deep interest to the address which had for its topic, "The New Morality of Health."

Mrs. Spencer gave evidence of a close knowledge of social conditions and gave in detail some of the remedies which under the auspices of various societies here and elsewhere are being applied to relieve, upbuild and energize those who are ignorant of the relation which good health bears to correct living.

The fight being waged by modern students of social and ethical economics for the enlightenment of the people, the necessity for the propaganda against asceticism and uncleanness all were touched upon vigorously and with a clearsightedness which held the attention of all until the last sentence was spoken.

Mrs. Spencer related the conditions under which children are ushered into the world; the mortality of babies up to five years old; how the little ones are now being cared for among the poorer classes; how Dr. Josephine Baker, of New York, feels the pulses of all the tenement babies through her corps of physicians, and lastly how these little ones are catalogued so that their progress from week to week may be carefully noted and helped.

Even criminals are being looked after in these days of advanced thought. That is, their surroundings from a sanitary standpoint. The old prison walls of Sing Sing contain unlimited millions of germs of tuberculosis and fevers, according to the speaker, and these men and women should not be tortured although they must take their punishment. They have the inalienable right of protection against disease. Plagues and epidemics are all attributable to the sins of ommission and comission of men, but that should not condemn the whole social fabric; it should be remedied and that is what is being done. In this connection Mrs. Spencer said that the annual epidemic of typhoid fever in the city of Philadelphia is the direct result of graft. Pittsburg, too, came in for a similar raking over.

The investigations which are being made in every city are disclosing strange and appalling facts regarding infant mortality. New Zealand shows the best death rate among children between the ages of one and five years, the figures showing that only one in thirteen male children dies while one in sixteen of female children dies between those years, but in New York and other localities it is vastly worse; one in six in New York.

Working girls whose average time behind the counter or at the machine is seven and a half years, generally bring into the home, if they marry, a broken down body unequal to the task of properly bringing up a family of children, or keeping them in healthy ones. These conditions are being remedied as fast and as much as possible. Premature old age is another of the troubles which have been investigated by the societies and remedies pointed out. Certain hours of rest, good healthy food and a certain amount of exercise are demanded for those whose sedentary habits and occupations make them grow old faster than nature intended them to do. A man instead of being old and laid on the shelf at forty-five should at that age be in the prime of life and even remain vigorous until he is eighty or ninety.

Then the matter of personal cleanliness has much to do with physical betterment. The speaker told of a case discovered in the school teacher in one of the new schools where shower baths have been installed. It was decided to let the children know that once a week all must have their bodies washed. One little girl refused three weeks successively to submit to the treatment. The teacher wrote to her mother telling of the girl's conduct which brought the reply that "my little girl is sewed up for the winter and I am not going to unsew her to get her skin wet as that will make her sick." Mrs. Spencer told what effect this would have on the child's after life if she learned then how wrong her mother was. Many other interesting things were told which enlightened the audience on questions relative to the lessons for the culture of cleanly habits, and it was declared that bigotry was one *of the strongest enemies of the sys*tem in vogue to increase the desire to live a right life. The real new religion will be the one which will make the caring for the body equally as necessary as the care of the soul in fact it has already been demonstrated that both are entitled to the same careful consideration in order to perfect the race.

Next Sunday evening Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, of New York, pastor of All Souls' church, and prominent in civic reform in both Buffalo and Manhattan, will be the speaker. His topic will be "The Vain Hope of Socialism." Rev. Bernard J. Newman, pastor of the Willow Place chapel, of Brooklyn, will speak on the following Sunday evening on "The Housing Problem." The meetings are free to all and a large audience is expected to attend the next two lectures. The last lecture will be illustrated by stereopticon.

MISSIONARY MEETING ON NEXT FRIDAY NIGHT

Plans are completed for the Young People's Union missionary meeting and conference to be held at the First M. E. church, Friday night. On that occasion all the Christian Endevor Societies, Epworth Leagues and independent societies, as well as the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. have been invited to be present. The church congregations have also been included.

The meeting will be addressed by W. E. Doughty, a worker of the Young People's Interdenominational Movement, under whose auspices he comes to this city.

At 7:15 the executive officers of the various young people's societies, Sunday school officers, pastors and missionary committees will hold a conference in Vincent chapel to hear Mr. Doughty on "The World Responsibility of the Young People and Missionary Education in the Sunday schools."

After the conference those attending are invited to remain for the mass meeting in the main auditorium, where the same speaker, assisted by B. W. Bonarjee, a native convert of India, will lecture and show moving pictures on "India and the Silver Bay Conferences." An offering to defray the necessary expenses of the enterprise will be received, but otherwise admission is free to all.

FIRE HYDRANT WORSTED IN SCRAP WITH AUTO

Notwithstanding the agitation which is prominent now in all the civic and other circles in the city there happened an incident, or it might better be called an accident, Monday morning which will cost the water company something and perhaps eventually somebody else a trifling sum and in which water will be the paramount issue.

When Richard Waldron lost control of an automobile he was driving Monday morning around the corner Fourth street at Watchung avenue one of the fire hydrants stood in the way of his onward progress with the result that the hydrant, as well as the machine, was rendered hors de combat and in a jiffy a geyser was spouting five feet high and "the gift of nature" went swirling down both streets in an irresistible stream. It spouted for at least a half hour before an employe of the water company could turn it off and in the meantime some attention was given to the automobile.

The machine was "Mrs., 72," the property of the Laing Automobile Company. The hydrant before giving up the onslaught of the machine managed to put it out of business, puncturing the front of the radiator enough to show its indignation at being summarily knocked from its place of silent vigil in front of Marshall's laundry. Fortunately for the people who have their household linen at the cleansing establishment the slight deviation from the path of rectitude on the part of the automobile will not affect the water supply but that piece of cleanliness and business is going on as usual.

JUNIORS PRESENT "OUR MUTUAL FRIEND."

"Our Mutual Friend" was presented by the junior class of the Plainfield High School, Saturday night, and won merited praise. Miss Thyra Stiles played the leading part of "Bella" with much ability. Everitt Smith, as "Rokesmith," fitted the part well and was an ardent lover. Miss Bertha Nelson and Nelson Ramsey, as "Mr. and Mrs. Boffin," furnished a whole evening of laughter. Miss Louise Bird as "Mrs. Wilfer," and Edward Van Houten, as "Mr. Wilfer," were capital. Sewall Ulrich and Miss Margaret Hutchinson made two excellent youthful lovers. S. B. Howe, Jr., received a gift between the acts in appreciation of his coaching work.

Entertained at P. C. C.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Righter gave a dinner-dance at the Plainfield Country Club, Saturday, in connection with the formal opening of the club. They entertained sixteen at dinner, which was served by Superintendent John Hilton, after which there was a dance. During the afternoon a number visited the clubhouse.

TROLLEY RAMS AUTOCAR

Leonard W. Lott, of Fanwood, and F. O. Ball, of Mountainside, Injured.

LACERATED HEADS AND FACES.

Responsibility for Accident Not Yet Determined—Muhlenberg Hospital Gets One Patient, the Other at Home.

An accident which might have resulted more seriously occurred in Fanwood Sunday a little after noon and as a result F. O. Ball, a nurseryman, of Mountainside, is in Muhlenberg Hospital severely injured, and Leonard W. Lott, of Fanwood, is confined to the house with several stitches in his forehead. Mr. Lott and Mr. Ball were in the former's automobile and were driving slowly with the clutch in the intermediate speed, when trolley car No. 1923, in charge of Motorman James Donohue and Conductor John R. Low, both of Bound Brook, side swiped the auto, throwing its two occupants out onto the road, and the automobile up against a telegraph pole, damaging the machine badly.

Mr. Lott, who was driving the car, escaped with a badly lacerated face and forehead and was taken to his home in a carriage, but Mr. Ball was less fortunate. He received a gash in the back of his head and had his arm severely injured though not broken. It was at first thought that he was injured internally, but after a thorough examination at the hospital it was found to be not so. Dr. F. W. Westcott attended both men.

As to the responsibility for the accident it will probably have to be decided by the courts. It is claimed, however, that the trolley car was going at such terrific speed that it was impossible for the motorman to bring it to a stop before traversing more than 300 feet beyond the scene of the accident. Mr. Lott states that he was going slowly and that if the motorman had used ordinary caution the accident could have been avoided. The road at the point where the accident happened, Forest and Westfield avenues, gives clear views in all directions, but the motorman claims the fault blame lies with Mr. Lott because of carelessness. On the other hand people living in the neighborhood claim that it is the rule that the trolley crews use this stretch of road to make up time and invariably hit up the pace at this point.

This is Mr. Lott's second accident since owning the machine. The car skidded several weeks ago landing against a tree, but on this occasion Mr. Lott was not injured, but the machine was damaged.

BUSINESS MEN ENJOY DINNER AT Y. M. C. A.

The semi-annual dinner of the business men's department of the Y M. C. A., which was conducted in association hall Monday was one of the most enjoyable "feasts" and social sessions held by the members of that department. Twenty-five members enjoyed the repast. George C. M. Smith was chairman of the committee of arrangements and the dinner was served under the direction of Mrs. Johnson.

Harry J. Runyon, president of the department, acted as toastmaster. Mr. Runyon was in a "knocking" mood, the members of the basketball teams coming in for a big share of his attention. Addresses were made by Secretary Herbert E. Parker, Physical Director George L. Listman, Rev. Edwin Shaw and Lindsley Best.

AUTOMOBILES FOR CHIEF DOANE AND COMM'R GAVETT.

The Common Council at its adjourned meeting Monday night, purchased an automobile for Chief T. O. Doane, of the fire department, and one for Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett, in accordance with plans decided upon recently.

Mr. Gloak offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the street committee to purchase an automobile for Mr. Gavett at a cost not to exceed $575, and Mr. Taylor, chairman of the fire committee, offered a similar resolution which was adopted, authorizing that committee to purchase an automobile for Chief Doane at a cost not to exceed $600. The names of the machines were not announced, the committees desiring to keep that information until after they are purchased.

HUGE PRICE IS PAID FOR THREE PROPERTIES.

The Home Real Estate Company has purchased three properties belonging to Daniel Summers, the veteran expressman, on Watching avenue, between Front and Second street. The deal was put through last week by Frank H. Smith and Charles H. Hand representing the real estate company.

The price paid for the properties was $40,000. Before the postoffice site was selected on the former Force property the value of the Summers property was rated at only about $11,000.

LAND SYNDICATE WANTS ALBERT STREET EXTENDED

Notwithstanding the Plainfield Park associates have failed to come to an agreement with either the municipal authorities of the city or borough regarding the establishment of a public park in the West End of the city and borough, the Common Council, at its adjourned meeting, Monday, received a petition from the syndicate, asking that Albert street be opened up across Green brook. It was stated that the freeholders are willing to erect a new bridge over the brook at this point, where the old one stood a few years ago.

The councilmen are not likely to favor the improvement, however, for there is a movement on foot to open up Dunellen avenue, and erect a bridge over Green brook at that point to connect Myrtle avenue in the borough.

Albert street has been closed and used for farming and pasturing purposes since 1881, the year that the old bridge was washed away and it has been fenced in on both Dunellen avenue and Greenbrook road. It seemed to be the opinion last night that the need for improvement would be solely for the benefit of the park Syndicate. The petition was referred to the street committee.

A Surprise Party.

A birthday surprise was tendered Mrs. Eugene P. Edwards at the home of Miss S. Etta Raybert, on East Second street, on Saturday night at which about fifteen guests enjoyed an evening of pleasure with vocal and instrumental music and refreshments. ST. JOSEPH'S FUND HELPED BY CONCERT

A splendid audience attended the concert given in Y. M. C. A. hall on Friday night for the benefit of the building fund of St. Joseph's church and those who were present will remember the great musical treat for many days to come. The artists whose names appeared on the program more than lived up their reputations and the magnificent playing by Joseph A. Denny, a violinist, whose marvelous technique brought him the approbation of Ysaye the virtuoso, gave a remarkable interpretation of difficult music.

Miss Mathilde Bruguiere, soprano, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera house, New York, and another whose splendid accomplishments were applauded. Mr. Denny is unJoubtedly a master of the violin. He played with a finesse and poise astonishing in one so young, Chopin's Valse, Opus 64 No. 2, by special request. Both these artists responded generously to encore and delighted the audience by their selections.

Mrs. Winser, who has pleased many audiences in Brooklyn, sang several numbers with marked ability. Mrs. F. M. Ward, whose splendid contralto voice has been heard by Plainfield audiences before sang with refinement a group of Irish songs. Adolph Smalley, was heard to advantage in a Liszt Rhapsody as a piano solo and Herbert Smith's work on the 'cello *received approbation. The entire pro*gram was splendid.

FORMER DUNELLEN GIRL WEDS PLAINFIELDER.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Beulah Stuckley, of Jamestown, N. Y., formerly of Dunellen, to A. D. Galway, of this city. SEVENTY-FIFTH BIRTHDAY OF MRS. J. W. MURRAY, SR.

Mrs. J. W. Murray, Sr., was happier than ever Monday when she passed the seventy-fifth anniversary of her birth in the company of her children and grandchildren. The event was celebrated at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. A. Tilney, 966 Central avenue who with Mrs. Townsend Rushmore and Mrs. J. W. Sandford, two other daughters, helped to make the event one to be remembered by the whole family.

Twenty-five of the children and grandchildren enjoyed the afternoon and evening at a dinner and a quiet celebration afterwards in which the younger members enjoyed a little dance and some music.

Mrs. Murray was the recipient of many beautiful floral remembrances from friends. The carnations and roses received during the day would easily have filled an ordinary room. At the dinner the dining room was resplendent in yellow and white and the whole scene was one to claim admiration. Mrs. Murray also received a handsome traveling bag from her family besides the many congratulations.

Winding Sticks.

A practical way of preserving the ribbon of various widths that is threaded through lingerie embroidery is to wind it by a stick. Handed with a series of springs that hold one of the ribbons securely while the length is neatly wound round the stick. The stick is gilded to make it look pretty and has ornamental ends. It is large enough to take several of the various widths, and yet not too large to be inconvenient in the work basket.

N.P.H.S. STARTS OFF WITH A VICTORY

North Plainfield High's baseball warriors opened the season on Saturday afternoon at Bound Brook with a 9 to 2 victory over the high school combination of that place. Despite the bad condition of the field the borough athletes put up a fast article of ball. C. Smith baffled the Bound Brook nine with a fine assortment of curves and Percy Bailey distinguished himself by rapping out a brace of doubles. Stine also caught a steady game behind the bat. WOMAN'S BURNS FATAL

Mrs. Fanny Van Cleef Meets Horrible Death at East Millstone.

BLAZING LAMP THE CAUSE.

Her Night Dress Caught Fire and After Suffering Terrible Agonies for a Day She Passes Away.

Mrs. Fanny VanCleef, widow of Frecholder Cornelius G. VanCleef, aged about sixty-five years, died at her home in East Millstone, Sunday night, as the result of burns received on Saturday night while trying to throw a blazing hanging lamp out of the window. The lamp was suspended in a frame in the dining-room and in trying to release it from the frame, she upset some of the burning oil which set fire to her night clothes.

Before the flames could be extinguished, Mrs. VanCleef's feet and practically her whole body, arms and hands were burned terribly. As soon as the local physician was summoned he knew that Mrs. VanCleef's burns were fatal. She was only conscious at times and passed away about twenty-four hours after the accident.

Mrs. VanCleef had retired for the night, when her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Arthur VanCleef, in attempting to extinguish the lamp, turned the wick too low in the oil. In an instant the lamp was in a blaze.

Mrs. Arthur VanCleef's screams attracted her mother-in-law, who hastened to assist her inthrowing the lamp out of the window. The lamp was caught in some way and the burning oil set fire to her night clothes. The neighbors responded quickly, but Mrs. VanCleef was beyond help. All they could do was to put out the fire in the house.

Mrs. VanCleef's maiden name was Miss Fanny Rohrback VanPelt and she was a native of New York State. She removed to New Jersey when a child. When a young woman she was first married to Jehial VanCleef, of East Millstone, a brother of Tenadore VanCleef, of West End avenue, and Mrs. Garret Elck, of East Third street. He died in 1893, a few years ago she married Freeholder Cornelius G. VanCleef, also of East Millstone, who died three or four years ago. She is survived by one son, Arthur VanCleef, who is well known here.

ASSEMBLY ORGY DENIED

Speaker Ward Tells Governor Fort So in Letter Yesterday.

SENSATIONAL PAPERS BLAMED.

"No Act of Disorder Occurred Within the Jurisdiction of the House Which Would Cast Dishonor on It."

The following are extracts from a letter sent yesterday to Governor Fort by Speaker Harry P. Ward, of the Assembly, in which the alleged orgy of which the assemblymen are accused is shown to have been made out of whole cloth and is denounced in unmeasured terms. Speaker Ward claims that the whole thing was a fabrication concocted by the sensational New York newspapers and suggests the remedies which may be applied to remove the stigma of unbecoming conduct from the accused members.

Honorable John Franklin Fort,
Governor of New Jersey.

My dear Sir:

I herewith acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 14, with an opinion from the Attorney General annexed thereto and made a part thereof.

The Attorney General's opinion is based upon the opening sentence which reads: "You have asked for my opinion as to what power you, as Governor, have to investigate the alleged acts of disorder which are said to have occurred on the floor of the House of Assembly and in the Committe rooms adjacent, during the closing hours of the recent session."

My understanding of this opinion is to the effect that "the organic law of this State prescribes definite limitations not only upon the powers of the lawmaking body and the Judiciary but upon the executive as well," and that "any search of these limitations "such an investigation, if prosecuted by you as Governor, would be not only without precedent but without legal warrant or authority" as such "authority cannot be found in the constitution or in the statute law;" that "a research upon your part with a view of ascertaining the facts, if attempted, must be voluntarily assumed;" that "any such voluntary assumption of such a duty might be properly characterized as both fruitless and meddlesome;" and that "whatever you might do then in the premises could, in the nature of things, be no more than any private citizen might accomplish upon his own initiative and responsibility."

The Attorney General also quotes Section 4, Art. 4 of the constitution which declares "each House shall choose its own officers, determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and with the concurrence of two-thirds, may expel a member" and then says, "it is true, of course, that the House of Assembly has adjourned, and it would, therefore, follow that as an official body it could not deal with the question here presented." He suggests, however, that "its individual members and officers might conduct a voluntary investigation," "they too," he says, "would be without power to summon witnesses, administer oaths, and to do such other things as are essential to a wholly efficient investigation."

Before any investigation should be undertaken the matter to be investigated should be clearly stated.

Who is it that charges that acts of disorder occurred on the floor of the House of Assembly and in the committee rooms adjacent, and what are the acts of disorder charged?

From the columns of a New York newspaper under date of April eighth among other things, the following appears: "In a little room back of the Assembly Speaker's chair and under the historic relics, champagne was flowing fastest." As you well know and as I recently stated in the public press, the room on the ground floor immediately back of the Speaker's rostrum is the private office of the Speaker with the Clerk's office to the left and the Speaker's secretaries' room to the right." These rooms, together with the room of the Committee on Municipal Corporations, are the only rooms which fall within the bar of the House. Not a single woman and no liquor of any kind were in these rooms at any time.

These statements in this newspaper are absolutely falsehoods and can be so easily proven to be such that it does not seem probable that is representative who wrote the story would voluntarily appear and submit to an examination which, if he told the truth, would result in the legal liability of himself and his employers.

Subsequent newspaper stories, I believe, shift the scene of the "alleged orgy" to the office of the Sup-

LAWRENCE WHITALL WEDS AT ELIZABETH

Miss Alice Hoffman, of Somerville, and Lawrence Whithall, son of Mrs. Charles Whitall, of 1127 Thornton avenue, of this city, were united in marriage at Elizabeth last night. The ceremony was solemnized at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Frank Thomas Seibert, and was witnessed by about by fifty friends and relatives. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Clarence M. Dunham, of New York.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Seibert, as maid of honer, and Charles Whitall, a brother of the bridegroom, of Westerly, R. I., was best man. The guests from this city included the family of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. William Whitall, of Trenton Hall, Miss Louise Jenkins and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Whitall, of North Adams, Mass. After their honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Whitall will reside in this city.

One of the marked features of the weding was the rendition of several selections by the choir from St. Bartholomew's church, New York, which also sang at the Gould-Drexel nuptials yesterday. The quartet rendered the Processional, "Perfect Love" and other selections.

MR. HINMAN'S BIBLE CLASS ENJOYS ANNUAL DINNER

The annual dinner and reception under the auspices of the adult Bible classes of the First Presbyterian church, taught by Grove P. Hinman and Charles M. Hummer, held in the chapel, last night and was a great success. There were about fifty-five members and friends present. The dinner was served in the Sunday school room about 7 o'clock by Timbo, under the direction of Mrs. L. C. Kelly, who was chairman of the entertainment committee. The rooms were attractively decorated with American flags and flowers.

At the speakers' table were Mr. Hinman and Mr. Hummer and several other prominent workers. Following the repast short addresses were made by Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor; Charles M. Hummer, L. B. Hill, LeRoy H. Gates, W. D. Williams, while Allen E. Beals entertained the gathering with several humorous stories which kept everyone in good humor.

An excellent program then followed which included vocal solos by Charles P. Titsworth, the new baritone member of the church choir; soprano solos by Mrs. E. W. Poinier and Mrs. Freeman Shotwell, the latter singing "Annie Laurie," and other Scotch ballads; piano duet, Mrs. Charles E. Hering and Clifford A. Braider; reading, Miss Ida Englehardt.

After the program the company had lots of fun guessing all sorts of advertisements. During the evening there was an election of officers and these were chosen for the coming year:

President, L. A. Hummer; vice-president, Mrs. Frederick Ayers; secretary, F. O. Dunning; assistant secretary, T. H. Clark; treasurer, I. B. Hill. After the election, the president-elect made a happy speech in which he urged every member to do his and her best during the coming year and try if possible to double the membership. Then followed a social time and the happy affair terminated about 10:30, all agreeing that the affair had been one of the best given by the classes.

BEGINS SLAUGHTER OF STRAY CANINES.

Cranford, April 20.—The entire Cranford police force started out yesterday to rid the town of worthless dogs. Sergeant William Jennings and his men, with shotguns and plenty of shells, visited the Aeolian Park section, where they slew at least twenty-five dogs. They killed three worthless curs.

The first report of the policemen's guns aroused the neighborhood, and the result was that dog owners ran out of their houses and took them inside.

One citizen worried the cops by discharging a rifle. The officers heard the report, but were unable to locate the man. The police believe it was an attempt to frighten them.

Sergeant Jennings and his men will make another trip today and will keep up the work until the citizens observe the proclamation of Mayor Helms and muzzle their dogs.

2.10 Inches of Rainfall.

YOUNG PEOPLE GIVE AN ENJOYABLE ENTERTAINMENT

The second dramatic entertainment under the auspices of the Young People's Society of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, was held in the parish house last night, and was a great success. Despite the wet weather the attendance was large.

The opening number, "Life Is a See-Saw," was especially well rendered and the stage arrangements for it carefully and artistically carried out. The see-saw itself illuminated with some electric bulbs, the pretty pink costume of Willie Patterson, as cupid, with flowered bow and arrow, was well received. Miss Susie Bennet and Claude Borden took the other parts.

The "living pictures" which illustrated Mr. and Mrs. William Ochiltree in the rendition of "Her Sweethearts," was a feature. The bride and groom charmed the audience with their presentation of the pictures. Mr. and Mrs. Ochiltree had no trouble in interpreting its various phases as would naturally be expected.

The sketch "Obstinacy" was a clever piece of dramatic work, the performers, the Messrs. VanAlstyne, Vail and Mosher and the Misses Susie Bennet, Jennie Bennet and Cozzens taking their parts perfectly. The different amusing episodes of the piece kept the audience in roars of laughter. The other sketches, also the songs, drills and recitations were up to the rest of the program. There was a tableaux and serenade by Miss Agnes VanOrden and Claud Borden; a sketch, "Getting Ready for a Visit," by Miss Lillian Nicholson, Miss Annie Hull and David Sutton; also a recitation, by Richard Borden. "A School Boys' Composition on Animals," by John Hall and a song by David Sutton.

After the entertainment dancing was enjoyed until near midnight. A large number of young people were present to encourage their friends of Heavenly Rest, who were assisted in the entertainment by some of the young people of Holy Cross church. Mrs. Charles Borden, under whose direction and supervision the entertainment was given, deserves great credit for bringing to a successful conclusion such an enjoyable affair.

Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church, conducted the services, and in the course of his remarks he spoke of the patient suffering of the young woman. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the pall-bearers were young friends of Miss Coons.

Misuse of Commutation Tickets.

The practice of loaning and hiring Central Railroad commutation and fifty-trip tickets, when discovered last summer, resulted in the issuance by the Court of Chancery, of an injunction restraining this practice. That injunction applies not only to the defendants in the suit instituted by the railroad company, but to all persons in the State of New Jersey engaging in such practice. The Central Railroad has given notice that all persons violating this injunction will be proceeded against according to law.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC RAPPED

Elizabeth Presbytery Commended Senators Who Voted for Local Option Bill.

REV. F. D. TILDON HONORED.

Bethel Chapel's Pastor Elected Delegate to General Assembly—

Large List of Committees Appointed.

Rev. J. G. Mason, of Metuchen, furnished fuel for a strong arraignment of the liquor traffic at the closing session of the Elizabeth Presbytery at Hope chapel yesterday afternoon. Dr. Mason who is chairman of the temperance committee attacked the liquor interests in the State and endorsed the work being carried on by the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League in its fight for a local option law.

Dr. Mason supplemented his report by the introduction of four resolutions touching on the liquor question, three of which were adopted by the Presbytery. The resolutions that passed were one approving the work of the Anti-Saloon League; another commending the six Senators who voted for the local option bill, and one petitioning the Senate and Assembly to exclude all intoxicating liquors from the State House in the future.

The resolution which failed of passage was the one calling on the Governor and Legislature to investigate the alleged orgy that marked the closing of the Legislature. This resolution was laid on the table as some of the clergymen entertained the opinion that there was insufficient evidence in hand as to the alleged orgy. It was on a resolution introduced by the Rev. John T. Reeve, of Basking Ridge, that the last named resolution was tabled.

In urging the adoption of his resolutions Dr. Mason said in part:

"Two large party machines in our State are dominated by the liquor interests by fear of the saloon. No party should expect the support of Christian men when it is subservient to the interests of the saloon in the way of advancing the kingdom and it must be destroyed, it is the biggest obstacle which the Church is forced to combat."

Dr. Mason also referred to the fight in both the local option law and complimented Senator Gebhard, of Hutnerdon county, on his stand he made for the measure. He referred to the speech of Senator Gebhard as "victory itself."

"If a local option bill is enacted," predicted Dr. Mason, "sixteen out of the 21 counties in the State will surely vote 'dry.'" The churches, he declared, must continue in its work to cultivate a sentiment for such a bill.

Considerable routine business was transacted at the session. Rev. F. D. Tildon, of this city, was elected as delegate to the General Assembly, at Atlantic City next month, along with the Rev. L. R. Howard, who was chosen as the morning session.

Rev. Lewis Bond, of this city, was received into the Presbytery from the Philadelphia Presbytery.

The Presbytery also voted favorably on the dissolution of pastoral relations between the Rev. Mr. Kline and the First German church of Rahway. These are the committees appointed:

"IKEY" THE FIRE CAT NEARING LIFE'S END

"Ikey," the pet maltese cat of fire headquarters (also champion mouse and rat exterminator of the First ward), according to Assistant Chief Andy Jennings) is flirting with the Death Angel as a result of an attack of the mumps, and great is the sorrow thereof in that vicinity.

"Ikey's" illness dates back to only Saturday afternoon last when he contracted a cold while on a run to the two fires.

"Ikey" has refrained from going to fires for four years, or since the time "Abey," his old pal, went to a blaze and never came back. But on Saturday "Ikey" couldn't help going. He was taking a snooze in the hose wagon when the alarm came in. Well "Ikey" was deep in slumber that he made no attempt to jump from the apparatus as it dashed on its journey to the West End.

When the blaze was reached "Ikey" stretched himself and bolted to the street, where he shivered and shivered until the firemen completed their work. Returning to the house "Ikey" went to bed and he has never since risen.

Yesterday the cat's face and neck started to swell and it is swelling yet according to bulletins issued by "Dr." Bill Jaeger who is in charge of the case. This morning "Doc" Jaeger posted a bulletin:

"'Ikey' is critically ill with the mumps."

It is needless to do any joshing on the illness of "Ikey" as all of the fire-fighters stationed at headquarters are taking it very much to heart. This is the situation as found by a Daily Press reporter when he appeared at headquarters for "news" this morning. From a dozen or more saddened firemen he was informed:

"'Ikey' is sick and cannot live."

"Ikey" has seen about a dozen of summers and the department cat expert declared to the reporter that "Ikey" can hardly hope to live much longer if he does recover from the mumps.

COURT WATCHUNG HOLD CLASS INITIATION AND ENJOY SMOKER

Court Watchung, No. 3871, Independent Order Forsters, met in Jr. O. U. A. M. hall last night and had class initiation, followed by an old-fashioned smoker. There were twelve candidates to be initiated and the secret work was in charge of Deputy Supreme Chief Ranger Bingaman, of Elizabeth. After the initiatory work, which was performed in a creditable manner, an entertainment was provided. There were musical selections by the court quartet, violin solos by George H. Speer; also interesting remarks by Deputy Supreme Chief Ranger Bingaman, the chief ranger and vice-chief ranger of Cranford.

Then an old-fashioned smoker was enjoyed, there being plenty of corn-cob pipes, cigarettes and tobacco for everyone. Refreshments were also served and games of all kind were played until a late hour. Court Watchung is making rapid progress these days, the membership being increased at nearly every meeting. The recent mass meeting held at the Plainfield theatre had a tendency to stir the interest in Forestry in this city.

THE WEATHER.

Fair tonight and Thursday; moderate south to southwest winds.
Maximum, 53; minimum, 35.

Three Budding Journalists.

Three bright lads in the eighth grade of the public school at Nutley, Essex county, have started a little weekly paper called the "Nutley Weekly," and as it now looks they "future may amount to something" to be proud of in the future. The little paper is about 6x9 inches in size and to save expense is typewritten instead of being printed. It is sold at two cents a copy and has grown in four weeks from a single page to four pages in size. The editor is Russell M. Elliott and his brother, Edward D. Elliott is secretary. They are sons of the late Clive N. Elliott, a rising young architect, who was drowned in the Connecticut River in September, 1908. Master M. M. Michael is treasurer. The first issue states that "the purpose of the paper is to keep the people of Nutley in touch with the various athletic and other events of interest."

Woman's Home Mission Meeting.

In the absence of Mrs. Reuben Knox, president of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the First Baptist church, Mrs. Marie A. Zook, one of the vice-presidents, presided. The devotional service was led by Mrs. Hannah Flanders. Church Events were given by Miss Ida Yerkes. The reading of the paper on "The West and East," prepared by Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, was postponed until next month.

SUIT FOR $10,000 AGAINST JOHN MAIR FOR FALSE ARREST

Papers were served yesterday by Constable Walpole in the $10,000 suit in tort brought by James Guttridge against John Mair, of Fanwood township, for false arrest, and they are returnable in the Supreme Court next October. Judge William Newcorn represents Mr. Guttridge.

This action is another chapter in the bitter fight that has been waged for a long time between the residents of Fanwood township and the Glaser Fertilizing Company, of Alton. About four weeks ago Mr. Mair caused the arrest of Mr. Guttridge, who is a stockholder in the fertilizing company, in an effort to put a stop to an alleged nuisance at the fat rending place. That case was dismissed against Mr. Guttridge and he immediately started a suit for $10,000 against Mr. Mair.

There is still another action of Mr. Mair against Theodore Glaser, Jr., which will be heard before Justice Clark at Scotch Plains on Friday. Instead of bringing action against the company, Mr. Mair decided to sue members of the company individually, and because of Mr. Mair's prowess in the case against Mr. Guttridge, the latter now seeks redress for false arrest.

RECEPTION TENDERED TO REV. AND MRS. C. S. KEMBLE

The members of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church joined in a reception to Rev. and Mrs. Charles S. Kemble last night, and despite the bad weather the church was well filled with people to extend a hearty welcome to the pastor and his wife upon their return from conference. The edifice was prettily decorated with flowers, palms and foliage. Walter M. McGee, superintendent of the Sunday-school, was chairman of the affair and in charge of the program, which opened with a soprano solo by Mrs. C. K. Shreve, and a violin solo by Ernest Higham.

Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, district superintendent, then made a short address of welcome, bespeaking a prosperous year for both pastor and people. A bass solo by Charles L. Lewis, "She Stoops to Conquer," with an encore, preceded an address of welcome by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, in which he complimented the splendid unity and co-operation now existing among the Methodists of city and borough.

After another violin solo by Ernest Higham, Rev. Ora J. Shoop, of Grace M. E. church, spoke a few words of welcome to Pastor Kemble and his wife, expressing his pleasure over their return. Mrs. Shreve then sang "Slumber Boat," which was followed with words of welcome by Mr. McGee, with a happy response by Pastor Kemble in which he thanked one and all for the very cordial reception.

During the social hour which followed, refreshments were served. Mansfield Smith had charge of the program while Mrs. J. Van Arsdale, as president of the Ladies' Aid Society, was in charge of the decorations and refreshments.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE SHOWS AN INCREASE.

The attendance in the city schools has increased greatly this year. It is now running about 350 more than last year at this time. The growth is quite generally distributed over the city but slightly greater in the Fourth ward.

The High School now has 26 pupils more than last year; the Stillman, 42; the Franklin, 69; the Bryant, 37; the Lincoln, 51; the Washington and Irving combined, 142.

Rat's Dash for Liberty.

A big rat which has been searching for food in the ash barrel in the cellar of The Daily Press building took an inopportune moment for its quest this morning with the result that it was buried under a load of ashes. When the ashman came along to empty the stuff in his cart the rat had burrowed its way to the surface and when the can reached the sidewalk made a dash for liberty. The last seen of the rodent it was disappearing through the door of a building on Park avenue and it is not certain that the monster has yet been captured.

Next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock a lecture will be given by a local speaker in the auditorium whose subject will be "The Passover," it being the beginning of the great Jewish feast.

CITY OWNERSHIP WANTED

Voters Declare Their Faith in Common Council by Vote of Four to One.

COMPARATIVELY SMALL VOTE.

Every District in Favor of Municipal Control of Water—Activity of Plainfield Protective Association.

The power to investigate the water question and to buy by condemnation proceedings, erect a new plant or renew the contract with the water company was given to the Common Council by the voters of this city by an overwhelming majority yesterday. The final vote showed 1236 for and 318 against, making a total of 1554. Thirty-nine votes were found defective and were not counted.

Hustling was the order of the day with the members of the Protective Association and their work was manifested in the very first returns when the voting machine of the first district of the first ward showed a vote of 167 with 122 for and 45 against. This proportion did not obtain in all the other districts as in some cases, notably the first district of the third ward where the proportion was about six to one. The grand average of the total vote in favor of the proposition was slightly less than four to one as predicted in this paper yesterday.

The vote by wards was as follows: First ward, first district, for, 122; against, 45; second district, for, 74; against, 42; rejected, 11. Second ward, first district, for, 121; against, 26; second district, for 132, against, 18; rejected, 4; third district, for, 52; against, 14; rejected 1. Third ward, first district, for, 211; against, 32; second district, for, 129, against, 26. Fourth ward, first district, for, 90; against, 34; second district, for, 124; against, 54; rejected, 13; third district, for, 141; against, 23; rejected, 10.

Considerable jubilation was shown by the members of the Protective Association last night as the returns were in, only one district showing that a large vote considering the weather, was being polled. Interest was high in various parts of the city especially after 4 o'clock when the commuters began to arrive from the city and visited the polling places before going to their home. Many votes were lost owing to the continual downpour, but enough were cast to show that the people have the utmost confidence in the probity and intergrity of the councilmen to whom the power to investigate the proposition of municipal ownership of the water plant is given.

While the Civic Society and the Board of Trade were thoroughly in sympathy with the movement to empower the Common Council to take the necessary steps in the matter of municipal ownership as outlined in the canvass devolved upon the protective association, and nothing was left undone by the members of this organization which would bring out an expression of public option. Therefore the credit for the result of the election can safely be given to the association.

The Protective Association was organized in February, 1906, and three months later had interested itself in the electric lighting and gas subject so far as to have obtained a reduction in the price of electricity from 18 cents, to 12 cents per kilowatt, which was again reduced to 11 cents and finally to 10. An agreement was reached with the Public Service Corporation in January, 1909, by which the price of gas was reduced from $1.25 to $1 per thousand cubic feet. This reduction was granted practically throughout northern New Jersey. In addition to the reduction in rates the plant was put in better shape. The examination of the plant in this city showed a deplorable condition.

Another matter in which the association became much interested and which they finally managed to correct was the five-years' lighting contract which the city proposed to make with the P. S. C. The terms of this contract were considered unfavorable to the city by the association and the subject was fought out in the press and the circulation of literature in the city. This resulted in the defeat of the contract and subsequent action by the Common Council. Following this the proposal of the P. S. C. to run their high tension wires connecting the Cranford plant down through North avenue to Richmon street on poles. This plan was frustrated through the medium of diplomacy and after several conferences, so that the wire was brought to the city line while the conduit was extended to the water company's park. This was done after the opinion of the Corporation counsel had

Speaker Ward Tells Governor Fort So in Letter Yesterday.

SENSATIONAL PAPERS BLAMED.

"No Act of Disorder Occurred Within the Jurisdiction of the House Which Would Cast Dishonor on It."

The following are extracts from a letter sent yesterday to Governor Fort by Speaker Harry P. Ward, of the Assembly, in which the alleged orgy of which the assemblymen are accused is shown to have been made out of whole cloth and is denounced in unmeasured terms. Speaker Ward claims that the whole thing was a fabrication concocted by the sensational New York newspapers and suggests the remedies which may be applied to remove the stigma of unbecoming conduct from the accused members:

Honorable John Franklin Fort,
Governor of New Jersey.

My dear Sir:

I herewith acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 14, with an opinion from the Attorney General annexed thereto and made a part thereof.

The Attorney General's opinion is based upon the opening sentence which reads: "You have asked for my opinion as to what power you, as Governor, have to investigate the alleged acts of disorder which are said to have occurred on the floor of the House of Assembly and in the Committe rooms adjacent, during the closing hours of the recent session."

My understanding of this opinion is to the effect that "the organic law of this State prescribes definite limitations not only upon the powers of the lawmaking body and the Judiciary but upon the executive as well," and by reason of these limitations "such an investigation, if prosecuted by you as Governor, would be not only without precedent but without legal warrant or authority" as such "authority cannot be found in the constitution or in the statute law;" that "a research upon your part with a view of ascertaining the facts, if attempted, must be voluntarily assumed;" that "any such voluntary assumption of such a duty might be properly characterized as both fruitless and meddlesome;" and that "whatever you might do then in the premises could, in the nature of things, be no more than any private citizen might accomplish upon his own initiative and responsibility."

The Attorney General also quotes Section 4, Art. 4 of the constitution which declares "each House shall choose its own officers, determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and with the concurrence of two-thirds, may expel a member" and then says, "it is true, of course, that the House of Assembly has adjourned, and it would, therefore, follow that as an official body it could not deal with the questions here presented." He suggests, however, that "its individual members and officers might conduct a voluntary investigation." "They too," he says, "would be without power to summon witnesses, administer oaths, and to do such other things as are essential to a wholly efficient investigation."

* * * * * *

Before any investigation should be undertaken the matter to be investigated should be clearly stated.

Who is it that charges that acts of disorder occurred on the floor of the House of Assembly and in the committee rooms adjacent, and what are the acts of disorder charged?

From the columns of a New York newspaper under date of April eighth among other things the following appears: "In a little room back of the Assembly Speaker's chair and under the historic relics, champagne was flowing fastest." As you well know and as I recently stated in the public press, "the room on the ground floor immediately back of the Speaker's rostrum is the private office of the Speaker with the Clerk's office to the left and the Speaker's secretaries' room to the right." These rooms together with the room of the Committee on Municipal Corporations, are the only rooms which lie within the bar of the House. Not a single woman and no liquor of any kind were in these rooms at any time.

These statements in this newspaper are absolutely falsehoods and can be so easily proven to be such that it does not seem probable that its representative who wrote the story would voluntarily appear and submit to an examination which, if he told the truth, would result in the legal liability of himself and his employers.

Subsequent newspaper stories, I believe, shift the scene of the "alleged orgy" to the office of the Sup-

LAWRENCE WHITALL WEDS AT ELIZABETH

Miss Alice Hoffman, of Somerville, and Lawrence Whitall, son of Mrs. Charles Whitall, of 1127 Thornton avenue, of this city, were united in marriage at Elizabeth last night. The ceremony was solemnized at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Frank Thomas Bolger, and was witnessed by about by fifty friends and relatives. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Clarence M. Dunham, of New York.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Seibert, as maid of honor, and Charles Whitall, a brother of the bridegroom, of Westerly, R. I., was best man. The guests from this city included the family of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. William Whitall, of Truell Hall. Miss Louise Jenkins and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Whitall, of North Adams, Mass. After their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Whitall will reside in this city.

One of the marked features of the weding was the rendition of several selections by a quartet from St. Bartholomew's church, New York, which also sang at the Gould-Drexel nuptials yesterday. The quartet rendered the Processional, "Perfect Love" and other selections.

MR. HINMAN'S BIBLE CLASS ENJOYS ANNUAL DINNER

The annual dinner and reception under the auspices of the adult Bible class of the First Presbyterian church, taught by Grove P. Hinman and Charles M. Hummer, held in the chapel, last night and was a great success. There were about fifty-five members and friends present. The dinner was served in the Sunday school rooms at 6:30 o'clock by Timbo, under the direction of Mrs. L. C. Kelly, who was chairman of the entertainment committee. The rooms were attractively decorated with American flags and flowers.

At the speakers' table were Mr. Hinman and Mr. Hummer and several other prominent workers. Following the repast short addresses were made by Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor; Charles M. Hummer, I. B. Hill, LeRoy H. Gates, W. D. Williams, while Allen E. Beale entertained the gathering with several humorous stories which kept everyone in good humor.

An excellent program then followed which included vocal solos by Charles P. Titsworth, the new baritone member of the church choir; instrumental solos by Mrs. E. W. Pointer and Mrs. Freeman Shotwell, the latter, singing "Annie Laurie," and other Scotch ballads; piano duet, Mrs. Charles E. Hering and Clifford A. Braider; reading, Miss Ida Englehardt.

After the program the company had lots of fun guessing all sorts of advertisements. During the evening there was an election of officers and these were chosen for the coming year:

President, L. A. Hummer; vice-president, Mrs. Frederick Ayers; secretary, F. O. Dunning; assistant secretary, T. H. Clark; treasurer, I. B. Hill. Following the election, the president-elect made a happy speech in which he urged every member to do his and her best during the coming year and try if possible to double the membership. Then followed a social time and the happy affair terminated about 10:30, all agreeing that the affair had been one of the best given by the classes.

REGINS SLAUGHTER OF STRAY CANINES.

Cranford, April 20.—The entire Cranford police force started out yesterday to rid the town of worthless dogs. Sergeant William Jennings and his men, with shotguns and plenty of shells, visited the Aeolian Park section, where they slew at least twenty-five dogs. They killed three worthless curs.

The first report of the policemen's guns aroused the neighborhood, and the result was that dog owners ran out of their houses and took their pets inside.

One citizen worried the cops by discharging a rifle. The officers heard the report, but were unable to locate the man. The police believe it was an attempt to frighten them.

Sergeant Jennings and his men will make another trip today and will keep up the work until the citizens observe the proclamation of Mayor Helms and muzzle their dogs.

2.10 Inches of Rainfall.

Weather Prophet John Neagle reports the total rainfall for the past three days to be 2.10 inches.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Douglass, of Grove street, are receiving congratulations on the arrival of their little son.

YOUNG PEOPLE GIVE AN ENJOYABLE ENTERTAINMENT

The second dramatic entertainment under the auspices of the Young People's Society of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, was held in the parish house last night, and was a great success. Despite the wet weather the attendance was large.

The opening number, "Life in a See-Saw," was especially well rendered and the stage arrangements for it carefully and artistically carried out. The see-saw itself illuminated with colored electric bulbs, the pretty pink costume of Willie Patterson, as cupid, with flowered bow and arrow, was well received. Miss Susie Bennet and Claude Borden took the other parts.

The "living pictures" which illustrated Mr. and Mrs. William Ochiltree in the rendition of "Her Sweethearts," was a great success. The bride and groom charmed the audience with their presentation of the pictures. Mr. and Mrs. Ochiltree had no trouble in interpreting its various phases as would naturally be expected.

The sketch "Obstinacy" was a clever piece of dramatic work, the performers, the Messrs. VanAlstyne, Vail and Mosher and the Misses Susie Bennet, Jennie Bennet and Cozzens taking their parts perfectly. The different amusing episodes of the piece kept the audience in roars of laughter. The other sketches, also the songs, drills and recitations were up to the rest of the program. There was a tableaux and serenade by Miss Agnes VanOrden and Claud Borden; a sketch, "Getting Ready for a Visit," by Miss Lillian Nicholson, Miss Annie Hull and David Sutton; also a recitation, by Richard Borden, "A School Boys' Composition on Animals," by John Hall and a song by David Sutton.

After the entertainment dancing was enjoyed until near midnight. A large number of young people were present to encourage their friends of Heavenly Rest, who were asisted in the entertainment by some of the young people of Holy Cross church. Mrs. Charles Borden, under whose direction and supervision the entertainment was given, deserves great credit for bringing to a successful conclusion such an enjoyable affair.

The funeral services of Miss Elmae G. G. Coons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Coons, of 248 Somerset street, were held from the home of the parents at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and were largely attended, especially by the young friends of Miss Coons. Rev. Ora J. Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church, conducted the services, and in the course of his remarks he spoke of the painful suffering of the young woman. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the pall-bearers were young friends of Miss Coons.

Misuse of Commutation Tickets.

The practice of loaning and hiring Central Railroad commutation and fifty-trip tickets, when discovered last summer, resulted in the issuance by the Court of Chancery, of an injunction restraining this practice. That injunction applies not only to the defendants in the suit instituted by the railroad company, but to all persons in the State of New Jersey engaging in such practice. The Central Railroad has given notice that all persons violating this injunction will be proceeded against according to law.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC RAPPED

Elizabeth Presbytery Commended Senators Who Voted for Local Option Bill.

REV. F. D. TILDON HONORED.

Bethel Chapel's Pastor Elected Delegate to General Assembly—Large List of Committees Appointed.

Rev. J. G. Mason, of Metuchen, furnished fuel for a strong arraignment of the liquor traffic at the closing session of the Elizabeth Presbytery at Hope chapel yesterday afternoon. Dr. Mason who is chairman of the temperance committee attacked the liquor interests in the State and endorsed the work being carried on by the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League in its fight for a local option law.

Dr. Mason supplemented his report by the introduction of four resolutions touching on the liquor question, three of which were adopted by the Presbytery. The resolutions that passed were one approving the work of the Anti-Saloon League; another commending the six Senators who voted for the local option bill, and one petitioning the Senate and Assembly to exclude all intoxicating liquors from the State House in the future.

The resolution which failed of passage was the one calling on the Governor and Legislature to investigate the alleged orgy that marked the closing of the Legislature. This resolution was introduced on the stand as some of the clergymen entertained the opinion that there was insufficient evidence in hand as to the alleged orgy. It was on a resolution introduced by the Rev. John T. Reeve, of Basking Ridge, that the last named resolution was tabled.

In urging the adoption of his resolutions Dr. Mason said in part:

"Two large party machines in our State are dominated by the liquor interests by fear of the saloon. No party should expect the support of Christian men when it is subservient to the rum interests. The saloon is in the way of advancing the kingdom and it must be destroyed, it is the biggest obstacle which the Church is forced to combat."

Dr. Mason also referred to the fight in behalf of the local option law and complimented Senator Gebhard, of Hutuerdon county, on his stand which he took in charge of Deputy Supreme Chief Ranger Bingaman, of Elizabeth. After the initiatory work, which was performed in a creditable manner, an entertainment was provided. There were musical selections by the quartet, violin solos by George H. Speer; also interesting remarks by Deputy Supreme Chief Ranger Bingaman, the chief ranger and vice-chief ranger of Cranford.

Then an old-fashioned smoker was enjoyed, there being plenty of corncob pipes, cigarettes and tobacco for everyone. Refreshments were also served and games of all kind were played until a late hour. Court Watchung is making rapid progress these days, the membership being increased nearly every meeting. The recent mass meeting held at the Plainfield theatre had a tendency to stir the interest in Forestry in this city.

THE WEATHER.

Fair tonight and Thursday; moderate south to southwest winds.
Maximum, 53; minimum, 35.

Three Budding Journalists.

Three bright lads in the eighth grade of the public school at Nutley, Essex county, have started a little weekly paper called the "Nutley Weekly," and as it now looks their venture may amount to something to be proud of in the future. The little paper is about 6x9 inches in size and to save expense is typewritten instead of being printed. It is sold at two cents a copy and has grown in four weeks from a single page to four pages in size. The editor is Russell M. Elliott and his brother, Edward D. Elliott is secretary. They are sons of the late Clive N. Elliott, a rising young architect, who was drowned in the Connecticut River in September, 1909. Master M. M. Michael is treasurer. The first issue states that "the purpose of the paper is to keep the people of Nutley in touch with the various athletic and other events of interest."

Woman's Home Mission Meeting.

In the absence of Mrs. Reuben Knox, president of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the First Baptist church, Mrs. Marie A. Zook, one of the vice-presidents, presided. The devotional service was led by Mrs. Hannah Flanders. Church Events were given by Miss Ida Yerkes. The reading of the paper on "The West and East," prepared by Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, was postponed until next month.

"IKEY" THE FIRE CAT NEARING LIFE'S END

"Ikey," the pet maltese cat of fire headquarters (also champion mouse and rat exterminator of the First ward), according to Assistant Chief Andy Jennings) is flirting with the Death Angel as a result of an attack of the mumps, and great is the sorrow thereof in that vicinity.

"Ikey's" illness dates back to only Saturday afternoon last when he contracted a cold while on a run to the two fires.

"Ikey" has refrained from going to fires for four years, or since the time "Abey," his old pal, went to a blaze and never came back. But on Saturday "Ikey" couldn't help going. He was taking a snooze in the hose wagon when the alarm came in. Well "Ikey" was so deep in slumber that he made no attempt to jump from the apparatus as it dashed on its journey to the West End.

When the blaze was reached "Ikey" stretched himself and bolted to the street, where he shivered and shivered until the firemen completed their work. Returning to the house "Ikey" went to bed and he has never since risen.

Yesterday the cat's face and neck started to swell and it is swelling yet according to bulletins issued by "Dr." Bill Jaeger who is in charge of the case. This morning "Doc" Jaeger posted a bulletin as follows:

"Ikey" is critically ill with the mumps."

It is needless to do any joshing on the illness of "Ikey" as all of the fire-fighters stationed at headquarters are taking it very much to heart. This is the attitude as found by a Daily Press reporter when he appeared at headquarters for "news" this morning. From a dozen or more saddened firemen he was informed:

"Ikey' is sick and cannot live."

"Ikey" has seen about a dozen of summers and the departure cat expert declared to the reporter that "Ikey" can hardly hope to live much longer if he does recover from the mumps.

COURT WATCHUNG HOLD CLASS INITIATION AND ENJOY SMOKER

Court Watchung, No. 3871, Independent Order Foresters, met in Jr. O. U. A. M. hall last night and had class initiation, followed by an old-fashioned smoker. There were twelve candidates to be initiated and the degree work was in charge of Deputy Supreme Chief Ranger Bingaman, of Elizabeth. After the initiatory work, which was performed in a creditable manner, an entertainment was provided. There were musical selections by the quartet, violin solos by George H. Speer; also interesting remarks by Deputy Supreme Chief Ranger Bingaman, the chief ranger and vice-chief ranger of Cranford.

Then an old-fashioned smoker was enjoyed, there being plenty of corncob pipes, cigarettes and tobacco for everyone. Refreshments were also served and games of all kind were played until a late hour. SUIT FOR $10,000 AGAINST JOHN MAIR FOR FALSE ARREST

Papers were served yesterday by Constable Walpole in the $10,000 suit in tort brought by James Guttridge against John Mair, of Fanwood township, for false arrest, and they are returnable in the Supreme Court next October. Judge William Newcorn represents Mr. Guttridge.

This action is another chapter in the bitter fight that has been waged for a long time between the residents of Fanwood township and the Glaser Fertilizing Company, of Elizabeth. About four weeks ago Mr. Mair and Mr. Guttridge, who is a stockholder in the fertilizing company, in an effort to put a stop to an alleged nuisance at the fat rending place. That case was dismissed against Mr. Guttridge and he immediately started a suit for $10,000 against Mr. Mair.

There is still another action of Mr. Mair against Theodore Glaser, Jr., which will be heard before Justice Clark at Scotch Plains on Friday. Instead of bringing action against the company, Mr. Mair decided to sue members of the company individually, and because of Mr. Mair to prove his case against Mr. Guttridge, the latter now seeks redress for false arrest.

RECEPTION TENDERED TO REV. AND MRS. C. S. KEMBLE

The members of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church joined in a reception to Rev. and Mrs. Charles S. Kemble last night, and despite the bad weather the church was well filled with people to extend a hearty welcome to the pastor and his wife upon their return from conference. The edifice was prettily decorated with ferns, palms and ivy vines. Walter M. McGee, superintendent of the Sunday-school, was chairman of the affair and had charge of the program, which opened with a soprano solo by Mrs. C. K. Shreve, and a violin solo by Ernest Higham.

Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, district superintendent, then made a short address of welcome, bespeaking a prosperous year for both pastor and people. A bass solo by Charles E. Lewis, "She Stoops to Conquer," with an encore, preceded an address of welcome by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, in which he emphasized the delightful unity and co-operation now existing among the Methodists of city and borough.

After another violin solo by Ernest Higham, Rev. Ora J. Shoop, of Grace M. E. church, spoke a few words of welcome to Pastor Kemble and his wife, expressing his pleasure over their return. Mrs. Shreve then sang "Slumber Boat," which was followed with words of welcome by Mr. McGee, with a happy response by Pastor Kemble in which he thanked one and all for the very cordial reception.

During the social hour which followed, refreshments were served. Mansfield Smith had charge of the program, while Mrs. Ira Van Arsdale, as president of the Ladies' Aid Society, was in charge of the decorations and refreshments.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE SHOWS AN INCREASE.

The attendance in the city schools has increased greatly this year. It is now running about 350 more than last year at this time. The growth is quite generally distributed over the city but slightly greater in the Fourth ward.

The High School now has 36 pupils more than last year; the Stillman, 42; the Franklin, 68; the Bryant, 37; the Lincoln, 51; the Washington and Irving combined, 142.

Rat's Dash for Liberty.

A huge rat which had been searching for food in the ash barrel in the cellar of the Daily Press building took an inopportune moment for its quest this morning with the result that it was buried under a load of ashes. When the ashman came along to empty the stuff in the cart the rat had burrowed its way to the surface and when the can reached the sidewalk made a dash for liberty. The last seen of the rodent was his tail disappearing through the door of a building on Park avenue and it is not certain that the monster has yet been captured.

Lecture on "The Passover."

The Hebrew School committee met last night in the rooms of the Y. M. H. A. and engaged Rev. Lynn Kates to take charge of the school. He will begin the sessions on May 2. Next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock a lecture will be given by a local speaker in the auditorium whose subject will be "The Passover," it being the beginning of the great Jewish feast.

MISS MURPHY INJURED

Thrown from Carriage After Collision with Milk Wagon on Front Street.

AN EARLY MORNING ACCIDENT.

Prompt Aid Rendered by Witnesses —Was Returning from Netherwood Station—Damage to Carriage Slight.

Miss Gertrude Murphy, of 842 East Front street, met with a mishap this morning which fortunately will not result seriously, but may confine her to the house for a few days. After driving to the Nethergood station where she left her brother, G. Francis Murphy, to take his train for New York, Miss Murphy turned her horse away from the station to drive to her home, when the animal, a spirited one, took the bit between his teeth and made his own pace down East Front street. Rushing through this thoroughfare at breakneck speed the horse passed the residence on East Front street and continued to the center of the city.

Miss Murphy had gained control and was guiding the horse carefully through the middle of the street when a milk wagon which was occupying a large share of the way suddenly loomed up before the onrushing animal at Somerset street. There was no time in which to guide the horse out of danger and with a crash the carriage was hurled into the milk wagon and Miss Murphy thrown violently to the ground.

Patrolman Charles Flynn, who was nearby, stopped the animal and Miss Murphy was hurried into Randolph's drug store after J. J. Varley, manager for A. E. Force, had rendered temporary aid. Dr. P. J. Zeglio, who happened by and Miss Elizabeth B. Stowe, attended the wounded young woman after which she was removed in the ambulance to her home and Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan summoned. Dr. Buchanan found that Miss Murphy was suffering from contusions and a cut on the forehead and that no bones were broken. Miss Murphy was resting easily this afternoon. The paint was scraped from the carriage and the milk wagon had a shaft cracked. The horse was not injured.

INGENUITY FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER.

It may be that the ordinary girl's education does not make for the application of ingenuity and common sense to everyday problems. Otherwise, we would have solved the domestic servant problem before now by the simplification of domestic labor. I do not wonder that servants grow disheartened and sullen, restless and even aggressive under a daily course of monotonous duties, half of which are unnecessary; that good servants are not to be procured because they are drifting into other trades, where there hours' leisure can be depended upon out of twenty-four.

Domestic service as it exists at present is doomed. In future the hours for housework, as with other trades, may be restricted by legislation, and mistresses compelled to regulate their requirements so as to provide their servants with a decent opportunity for rest and recreation.

If ever the economic improvement of servants is assured, then necessity will be found to have forced woman to apply her ingenuity to the reorganization and recreation of the home. She will abolish curtains and carpets, superfluous ornaments and all unnecessary articles of furniture which at present offer harborage to the dust.

She will have parquet flooring and cork carpets in every part of the house, with the fewest possible rugs, which can be lifted daily. She will burn her dusters and brooms and buy a patent cleaner to collect the dust, which will be destroyed.

A Quickly Made Scarf.

Just exactly three hours of hemstitching will turn the pretty piece of printed marquisette into an evening scarf. The threads of marquisette are more readily drawn than those of other evening materials, and it is also less difficult to handle than, for instance, chiffon. In picking up the perpendicular threads for hemstitching they will be found separate and altogether countable. The selvedges of this delightful material will supply a satisfactory side finish, and three hours should suffice to hemstitch the two hems with some of the drawn-out silk strands.

The "Bilk" Woman.

The woman bilk is becoming entirely too prominent in this country. If a few women of this class were sent to the penitentiary for perjury the effect would be good. As soon as a prominent man dies some disreputable woman claims that he once promised to marry her or did marry her, and the courts are kept busy with such cases.

And a ladder in front of her winda.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

Once dwelt upon a spacious field
The people of the Plain.
The fertile earth their food did yield,
Heaven quenched their thirst with rain.

Like serpent in old Paradise
A charmer said, "Let me
Collect the showers, make water ice
And serve you (almost) free!"

Those simple people of the Plain
They turned a willing ear
Unto the tempter's "so clean" strain;
The lesson cost them dear.

Their children's children, strong in grit,
Grappled this water leech—
"Now you disgorge, dry up, or git!"
They told him in Plainspeech.

Against their bondage well they fought,
And won, like Plainfield Men,
Flung off the fetters he had wrought,
And took their own again!

"The rule of Right well hold by Might;
Earth gives us food and flowers,
The Air gives life, the Sun gives light,
So Water, too, is Ours!"

Who'd have thought it? A right royal rousing meeting, on a summery night, in a theatre too, and of all tame subjects—a watery one. It was a whiff of the great days of old, when sturdy patriots lifted the people's meeting to the heights of Senate Statesmanship by power of stern words inspired by manly standing up for rights withheld. A pity so fine a city has not a City Hall, with a chamber worthy of civic family gatherings like this, and adaptable for concerts, lectures, banquets, school celebrations, not forgetting the sacred functions beloved by devotees of things politic and impolitic. Stage scenes and a theatre atmosphere sadly dim the glory of H's Majesty the People when he speaks from his throne—the town meeting, this by the way.

A more satisfactory public meeting for the common weal could hardly be desired. Mr. McCutchen presided with the natural grace of one who speaks with the authority of experience mellowed by the wisdom which is so superior to mere knowledge, calm, pithy, and good humored. Mr. Bemis, who besides being a Water Commissioner for New York city is a distinguished expert in the engineering and legal problems incident to every municipal water supply or public utilities, was present to expound the main features of the undertaking on which our citizens will embark next Tuesday. His address was literally a perfect model of exposition, the like of which is seldom heard, even in high courts of Chancery, where subjects as dry and technical as this of municipal water-works are chiefly to be heard. There, advocates speak from briefs prepared by others from special information. Mr. Bemis, whose appearance, voice, and manner strikingly recalled President McKinley, spoke from fullness of firsthand knowledge. His clearness of thought, and rare simplicity of utterance, kindled and kept our genuine interest from first to last to a degree that made it an actual pleasure to listen with both ears and the brain. So much for the magic of eloquence in the hands of a master like this a common pair of kitchen bellows would discourse sweet music.

Mr. Creswell McLaughlin is Water Commissioner for Cornwall-on-the-Hudson, so need not have apologized for the preliminary sip he took to oil his joints after getting cramps while wriggling in "the undertaker's chair." Whatever may have been concealed in that tumbler he certainly delighted us with a spirited compound of stingo sense and champagne nonsense, a half and half tonic invaluable after a hour of scientific sermonizing. Then up rose Mr. Martine, whose name we had to ask from our neighbor. Speaking from the floor, as one of us commoners sitting below the platform lords, his musical tones, his straight from the shoulder plainspeech, with much of the old time methodist gesticulation, and a general hilarious cocksureness of fact, argument, and winning in a canter, gave precisely the ideal finishing touch to a meeting that meant business, was eager for the fight, and just like the old battle cry fired by this gallant champion. Questions were invited but few were put, and the absence of capable opponents bespoke success for the cause. Never before have we known so modest a city exhibit two mayors speaking in one voice. Mayor Fisk and Mayor Smalley made a pretty prose duet, matter of fact and crisply put, crowning the occasion with laurel wreath of civic dignity.

The most profoundly interesting district in New York city is its East side, from Fourteenth street to Brooklyn Bridge, along the riverside, and from the river to Second avenue and the Bowery. Within these bounds you can explore a dozen Palestines and Meccas and Salems, Syrian, Russian, Arabian, Turkish, and of many lands beside. Years of familiarity with place and people only deepen the fascination, and the mystery of it all. Quieter folk than the Jews of this quarter are not to be found in Christendom, yet see how even their women, ancient and in their prime, are temporarily possessed with the demon of revenge, because their mystic Kosher meat is put up a cent or two per pound. To suggest a temporary diet of non-flesh foods would be to goad them into tenfold pious fury against us as Egyptian oppressors of their latter ages. Rather than pay this extra tribute the good mothers and wives have been marching on their foes the butchers, armed with bottles, and all sorts of weapons, destroying the meats with kerosene and the dogs with fire and smashing up. Here and there a butcher has chased them away with horsewhips, only to have his skull cracked and his house ruined. If peace-loving women can come to this over a trade grievance, what may not the lawless hordes be and do in a great panic of poverty?

ABOUT DELFT CHINA.

Were you to wander through Holland today (or next summer), it would be the quest of the windmill china alone that would tempt you in the direction of Delft. And when once you had halted on your journey from Rotterdam to The Hague, you would realize that Delft was not the one huge windmill you'd always thought it.

There is a royal mausoleum there, a placid canal and a quaint market place; but the history of the town reads like a fairy tale.

Once upon a time a king lived there, and the quiet village grew in elegance until it was a fit abode for royalty. There were magnificent carriages rolling through its streets and rich tapestries upon the walls of Dutch interiors, and finally gold and silver plate replaced pewter and delicately moulded porcelain was substituted for rough earthenware.

Delftshaven was the nearby port to which came the vessels of the East India Trading Company. Rare porcelains from the Orient were brought, to the dismay of the old Holland potters; but the Dutchmen went quietly to work to copy with their national love for detail, and this is how that brought forth perfection of the Delft ware that we know today.

Of that some wise persons know, for most of us have made the acquaintance of only the very ordinary bits of decorative Delft that find their way to America.

The highways and byways of Holland are filled with potteries, but Delft overshadows them all—a giant, as it were, beside the pygmies.

The color of this china is not invariably dull blue upon a greenish white surface, as there are pieces in red and gold touched with yellow and blue, and there are parti-colored Chinese effects after the vases copied in that early attempt to imitate the oriental.

More characteristic than the windmill (though maybe not so well known) is the persistent border of Chinese design that appears on so many of the curiously shaped edges of Delft dishes.

The border is rarely a plain round or oblong, but takes on a scroll idea, with frequently a seashell pattern. Many of these patterned borders are embossed and heavily ridged. The designs are never flowing, but their edges are so clearly marked as to often appear positively sharp in a way that would be criticised were it not so thoroughly characteristic of a particular china.

PARK AVENUE BAPTISTS ELECT AND HEAR REPORTS.

At the annual meeting of the church and society of the Park Avenue Baptist church, Wednesday night, Harry F. Johnson, George K. Hall, G. W. V. Moy, A. D. Thompson, Jr., and S. J. Sims were elected trustees for the coming years.

The treasurer's report showed the receipts for the past year to be $4,-413.08 and the disbursements $4,-551.02, leaving a balance of $62.64.

THE LOUIS SEIZE HAT.

Among the early spring models is a comfortable hat, becoming and well made, and one with high gathered crown held out with an inner one of book muslin, and a fluted brim of soft moire. This does not hang around the face, but is made double and has enough thickness to hold it in position.

About the high crown is tied a wide scarf of soft ribbon. When black is used for the hat then one of the new light blues is used for the scarf. Silver or gold gauze are also tied around instead of ribbon, and end in a fine, careless bow in front.

The expensive models show this hat with a crown of lace moire shot with blue, pink and green and lined with chiffon or gauze to match the color of the scarf

FISK ON CITY PROBLEMS

Municipal Topics Furnish Theme for Mayor's Address.

PRAISE FOR THE MEN'S CLUBS.

He Says They Are Becoming a Big Power in Studying and Solving Civic Questions.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, in an address before the Men's Club of the Heavenly Rest church last night on civic and State questions declared that men's clubs throughout the State are accomplishing a great amount of good in aiding in the solution of vital questions. It is a recognized fact, said the Mayor that these organizations are becoming a big power in the matter of studying and solving all civic problems.

The sewer and water questions also came in for attention in the Mayor's remarks. He reviewed local sewer history and declared that Plainfield should take advantage of the opportunity to unite with North Plainfield in the proposed system. It will require a big lump sum of money, said the Mayor, but if the chance is not taken, the city will be obliged to expend $60,000 to $70,-000 in making repairs to the present inadequate system.

Acquisition of a water plant by the city is a business proposition, declared the Mayor. If the voters decide to give the Common Council power to act one of the chief things that will be considered is the permanancy of supply. If such is the case the Council will have the right to investigate geological conditions, consider the sinking fund and bonds necessary, to ascertain the number of people the company would supply, all of which information is necessary to ascertain if the income will be sufficient to pay the operating expenses.

"I have been called extravagant," said the Mayor, "but I am willing to stand for any extravagance I have negotiated." He referred to the fact that the city had required a police station which cost a trifle more than renting a place, but in the long run, the municipality would eventually own the building, which would represent a saving.

Mayor Fisk also stated that the establishment of a fire house in the east end was necessary and that new schools are absolutely necessary.

Brief mention of various municipal topics the speaker referred to the great growth of the State. This he declared is the result of the advantages it offers. He referred in detail to the construction and operation of the McAdoo tunnels which he said is resulting in many New Yorkers coming to New Jersey to live.

The Mayor advocated the proposed deepening of waterways which would mean the building of more factories. He also referred to the huge advantages that would accrue from the proposed ship canal connecting the Passaic and Hudson rivers.

SPORTING STYLES.

The golf coat known to sporting women for the last six years or more has its birth pursuse as distinctly poular in England, the land from which we get our sporting fashions and fads, that the modish outfit of today is considered incomplete without one hand-made wrap of wool.

These coats are either long or short, single or double breasted, and although they are warm and comfortable in machine-knitted qualities, the woman who crochets or knits as a recreation will find no more attractive work and no more satisfying result than in these hand-made woolen coats.

The last touch to this excellent style has been found in a Norfolk jacket shape knitted of worsteds to match the park tweed skirt.

Then separate pieces of a Norfolk jacket or a coat should be made in whatever stitch desired, and then joined together with crochet stitch, so that an elastic seam is obtained.

Stained leathers are used for belt, collar, cuffs and buttons for these golf coats, and the colors of both leather and yarn vary from olive or bottle green to russet and even old rose.

MINISTERS ASSOCIATION HAS TWO NEW MEMBERS

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, the new pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and Rev. Charles H. Fountain, also of this city, were elected to membership at the meeting of the Plainfield Ministers' Association, at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, yesterday afternoon.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, presided and after a short business session, he gave a delightful travel talk on "Palestine," recounting many incidents of his last trip through the Holy Land. After the meeting refreshments were served.

It was announced that the next meeting will be held Thursday, June 9, at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and that Rev. Mr. Maguire will give a talk on "The Congo." He spent six years in that country.

Those present at yesterday's meeting were Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, Rev. C. S. Kemble, Rev. Edwin Shaw, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, Rev. John Y. Brock and Rev. Charles H. Fountain.

DR. A. L. FISK ADDRESSES SOMERSET PHYSICIANS

The election of officers together with an interesting paper on "The Surgical Significance of Indigestion," by Dr. Arthur L. Fisk, of New York city, made the annual meeting and dinner of the Somerset County Medical Association, held at Hotel Ten-Eyck, Somerville yesterday, one of special interest. It was decided that the society would hold an "open" meeting on Thursday, October 13, to which the public will be invited.

The subject to be considered at the coming meeting will be "Fresh Air," and the speaker will be Dr. Frank S. Meara, of New York, professor of Therapeutics at the Cornell Medical School.

These officers were elected yesterday:

President, Dr. C. R. P. Fisher; vice-president, Dr. Joseph Meigh; treasurer, Dr. Thomas H. Flynn; *secretary, Dr. F. E. DuBois; report*er, Dr. W. H. Long, Jr.; censor, Dr. H. L. Kaucher; annual delegate to the State Medical Society, Dr. A. H. Dundon.

SPRING COMPLEXION HELPS.

Our grandmothers, with their dosing of sulphur and molasses each spring, were not so cruel as we thought. They knew the need of purifying the blood and getting it and the whole system in trim to sustain the intense heat of our summers.

Modern mothers have returned to the spring blood purifiers; their dosing, if less nauseous than old-time custom, is more to the purpose.

There are several forms of sulphur that are more easily taken than the old sulphur and molasses mixture and are less likely to disarrange the digestion. Any good druggist will tell you of a reliable preparation.

Another is said that may keep from red clover blossom tea. This is excellent to take for three or four weeks each spring. The dried blossom can be bought at the drug store, full directions as to making being given.

Or an easy way to manage is to purchase a small earthenware teapot, put in it two tablespoons of the herbs and cover with boiling water, a pint and a half. Let mixture steep on back of stove for half a day—not boil—and cool in the pot. Strain and take a wineglass three times a day or a teacupful in the morning.

This tea is not only a good blood improver, but has been known to relieve tumorous conditions. It will quickly clear the complexion and give color.

Other herb teas, as dandelions and sage, are excellent for the blood, though childre prefer sarsaparilla.

In addition to these special decoctions, have a liberal diet of greens for at least a month in the spring. Cut down on meat and eat plenty of fresh vegetables, salads, with French dressing, three times a day, and cress whenever you get a chance.

Embroidery Scarfs.

Wide sash ribbon is the base, a yard and a half in length. This will tie an ample bow after going around the crown of a little girl's spring hat. The ends may be embroidered in huge coin spots after the circle has been marked, or you may even baste over the ribbon a tissue paper facing to be torn away when the work is done. An end of handsome ribbon will accommodate six to eight embroidered spots as big as a dollar mark. Put the spaces well and do the solid work evenly. Make a choice of some rich peacock coloring like green upon blue, or, again, white upon black, according to the child's clothes.

THEY WANT MORE WAGES

Speakers Urge Machinists to Join Union and Demand More Pay.

THEIR METHODS EXPLAINED.

Hugh V. Reilly and J. J. Keppler Address 100 Men at the Eagles' Hall on Objects of the Union.

More than one hundred machinists of the city, chiefly employed in the printing press industry here, gathered at Eagle Hall on East Second street, last night and listened to stirring speeches by Hugh V. Reilly, of Newark, business agent of District 47, International Association of Machinists, and J. J. Keppler, of Chicago, fifth vice-president of the association.

The keynote of the meeting was $3 a day as the minimum wage for inside work and $4 a day for outside work, and it was stated that plans have been made to submit a request to all manufacturers in the district for a readjustment of the wage scale. The meeting here was held for the purpose of more fully organizing the men in the printing press industry. Later, it was stated by Mr. Reilly, the other branches here, including the Pond Machine Tool Company will be taken up. After the wages are readjusted satisfactorily, efforts will be made to secure the adoption of the eight-hour day for the inside men to correspond with those working outside.

At the present time the inside men receive between 26 and 28 cents an hour for inside work and between 33 and 35 cents an hour for outside work. According to the statement of Mr. Reilly and Mr. Keppler Plainfield is one of the few places where this low rate is paid.

Mr. Reilly first addressed the machinists telling them what has been accomplished in District 47 during the past year, and of the progress made in Paterson, where the American Locomotive Works had acceded to the demands of the men. He said the Paterson local had doubled its membership within a few months.

He said that the slogan adopted by the association is "Don't you think you are entitled to more money?" and he asked the men to think it over. He said that it was but a few years ago that the bootcarriers and bricklayers were receiving what the machinists are drawing today, but now they are getting a big advance in wages, and theirs is not skilled labor in the sense that the work of the machinists is. He urged the men to organize and execute for this in this way only would it be possible to get the increase.

Mr. Reilly stated that the association had adopted a new policy in securing their demands. Instead of calling a strike, which was quite apt to be a long and tedious affair, members of the association throughout this country as well as the entire world are now refusing to work with non-union men or handle machinery that is made by non-union men. In this way the employer is rapidly being brought to see the folly of his position and the men are made of machinists in all parts of the country are on Plainfield, hoping that they will join them in the fight for their rights.

After Mr. Reilly had given a preliminary outline of the present status of the industry, he introduced Mr. Keppler who, for more than an hour *held the close attention of the ma*chinists as he told them of trade conditions elsewhere.

Mr. Keppler told of the success attained in the plant of R. H. Hoe & Co., where conditions were worse than they are in Plainfield. He also told of the progress being made at Battle Creek, Michigan, which place he said was owned by the Post industry, but he said that the printing press men are making substantial progress there at the Cox Duplex Company plant. He said that the Dexter Folder Company had been put on the "unfair" list, and not a union machinist would handle a folder made by that company.

Mr. Keppler has just come from Bethlehem, Pa., where he has been trying to more fully organize the machinists. He said that conditions there are deplorable, but better things are expected. He said what *the machinists could get in other lo*calities, the men here coud get, provided they are organized, and this he urged strongly.

After Mr. Keppler's talk a recess was held to give the non-union men present, and there were a number of them, a chance to identify themselves with the association. Between fifteen and twenty took the obligation. Another meeting will be held here Thursday night, April 21, when further steps toward strengthening the association will be taken by Mr. Reilly.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 24, 1910.

Topic.—Christ winning the world.—John xii, 20-32. Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Dwight, D. D.

The mission of Jesus Christ was to win the world! "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son." He came first to the Jews and for the salvation of the Jews, and yet before He had begun His worldwide mission the fact that this was to be its character was clearly set forth in the Old Testament prophecies and suggested by words and actions of His own in His life upon earth. In response to the faith of the Syrophenician woman He healed her daughter At Jacob's well He spoke of Himself as the messiah to the Samaritan woman and called forth the faith of the inhabitants of Sychar. In the lesson for our study He received certain Greeks who desired to see Him and declared upon their coming, "The hour is come that the Son of Man should be glorified." No doubt the request of the Greeks, who represented the gentiles, to see Him inspired this utterance, for in the Jew and the gentile the people of the world were represented. Then at the close of the discourse, beginning with the words just quoted, He makes the deliberate declaration that His mission was worldwide. "I, if I be lifted up from the earth (crucified), will draw all (or all men) unto Me." And why "all" if His mission had been limited to any one nation, or even to the Jewish people? It was just so limited. This is the only explanation of Christ's reception of the Greeks and His use of the word "all" in referring to the result that should follow His crucifixion upon the cross. Our "hearts should burn within us" as we read these words of the Saviour, for we, being a part of the world's "all," are thus assured of His willingness and power to save us.

The method by which Christ wins the world is indicated in the words before us. To do so He was compelled to take man's sins upon Him and die in his stead, thus atoning for him and making his salvation possible. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me." This He did, signifying by His words what death He should die." By His death on the cross, therefore, He would pay the penalty of man's sin and at the same time "draw all" unto Him. The attractive power of the cross is wonderful. He wins men. He draws them by His love, manifested by His death, and thus they put their trust in Him, accept Him as their substitute and are saved.

The cross is able to draw "all men," but unfortunately all men will not be drawn. Some have given up the atoning character of Christ's death and look upon it simply as an example to men to reach moral transformation through the effect of Christ's death. Others prefer to give their lives up to sin, and the cross has no power to attract them. It often repels, for it speaks of the death of one who was sinless, and they love sin. A third class are indifferent to the cross. They are so occupied with the things of time and sense that they have also given the cross is lost sight of by them. But there is no fault in the cross. If one is attracted and another is repelled the difference is in the persons themselves. The cross is ever and always the same. If it does not draw you it is your heart and your life that are wrong, and they need to be changed, for you as well as all, being a sinner, need to be saved and can be saved through Christ alone.

Christ's part is done. He has been lifted up, and He is winning the world. How large the world once seemed, but how small it is today! Moreover, the advances of mankind are only making it smaller. The opportunity of Christ's winning the world is thus daily growing greater and brighter. But men to be won must see the cross. They must know the story of Jesus and His love. "How shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent?" Sent of God, so far as their selection is concerned, but sent of man, so far as the opening up of their opportunity is concerned. Go or send. One of these two duties rests upon every one of us. Not having gone, are we sending? Are we giving and praying that soul witnesses may be sent out the world over and win all men for Christ? If not we are failing in our mission as Christians and in the duty of the saved toward the unsaved. Can we afford to reject or to disregard such plain duties divinely placed upon us?

A Candle Meeting.

One of the brightest plans for a Christian Endeavor prayer meeting is that of a candle meeting. All the lights will be put out except that on the plate, which will be only a candle. After the leader has taken part he will light a candle that is on the table. Each Endeavorer will have a candle and a match, and after he has taken part he will light his candle (sometimes from a neighboring candle or, if there is none near, then with the match). Gradually, as one after another speaks, the whole room will be flooded with light. Try it. It makes a beautiful and true illustration of the subject, and the little ceremony will in itself give rise to many thoughts that will be expressed.—Amos R. Wells.

SULLIVAN-KILRAIN BATTLE RECALLED

The impending battle between Jack Johnson and Jim Jefferies, which is slated for July 4, is causing much reminiscent talk among old time prize ring followers. Professor Mike Donovan, who is now engaged in writing a book, on noted ring battles has included the following interesting incidents of the famous battle between John L. Sullivan and Jake Kilrain. In part he says:

Charlie Mitchell caused the Sullivan-Kilrain fight. The ambitious Englishman tried to get John L. out of his way, for Sullivan, so he thought, stood between himself and the world's championship.

Mitchell had done his best to conquer Sullivan. In Madison Square Garden in 1883, he and Sullivan fought three rounds when the police interfered. I have always believed the honors were even in that fight, though Billy Madden, master of ceremonies, and a friend of Sulivan's jumped into the ring ten minutes after the fighters reached their dressing room and declared Sullivan winner.

Again, in France, the two fought thirty-four rounds to a draw, London prize ring rules, the fight lasting three hours and fifteen minutes.

Mitchell hoping Kilrain could beat Sullivan and believing the latter a sick man because of his manner of living, urged Kilrain on. I was in Mitchell's training camp day, and the minute I laid eyes on Sullivan I knew Jake was a beaten man. Sullivan was in splendid trim.

Mitchell promised to take Kilrain to England if he won, and they had their baggage packed for the trip. They intended to go direct from the ring to the steamer.

Mitchell was Kilrain's other second, and he was heartless and cruel. In the last few rounds he paid no attention to Jake's physical condition. On the other hand, I looked him over between rounds helping him to his seat and to his feet. I saw his condition was pitiful, and that he was in danger of being killed.

I begged Mitchell to throw up the sponge, but he refused. I begged Kilrain to quit, saying: "This fellow will kill you, Jake. Think of your wife and children."

"I'd rather die than quit," Kilrain replied.

"But I didn't intend to have a killing in the ring, so after the seventy-fifth round I picked up the sponge and threw it in. Then I turned toward Sullivan's corner and saw Mitchell talking to John L.

Mitchell was saying, "John, if you'll make a present of $2,000 to Jake, he'll throw up the sponge."

"What don't go," said the Sullivan backers. "Donovan has thrown it up already."

Mitchell then came over to me and said, "You've made me lose $2,000."

"Well, I wasn't going to have anybody killed in the ring," I answered.

"The difference between Mitchell's act and mine, was that Mitchell was greedy and would have sacrificed Kilrain, while I was trying to save him for his family.

"On the train afterward, I cared for Jake. He suffered greatly. Mitchell came into the car and asked how he felt.

"Pretty well," said Kilrain.

"If Jake had whipped the big fellow you'd be sitting beside him where I am," I told Mitchell. He only smiled scornfully and went out.

Tiaras for the Hair.

The new coiffures launched and ordained by the fashion authorities have, as was to be expected, brought novelties in ornaments of much originality. One of the strictly new ideas already in high favor is the tiara, or semi-diadem of antique designs—just the thing to add a finishing touch to the Louis XVI coiffure —"a large tape." This coiffure tends to show the original contours of the head, doing away with all artificial puffs and wavy roll and showing the hair piled flatly over the crown and back of the head, renders the features rounder and softer. The ornament is then loosely pressed into the waves of the front and side hair, apparently separating them from the flat chignon and holding this latter in place.

A Corset Hint.

A demonstrator of a French corset is responsible for the following suggestion as to disposal of strings: Instead of letting them dangle at the waist line to make a hump in the middle of the back, the lacers are crossed, not tied, brought around to the front and fastened just within the top hook, and the surplus ends tucked into corset.

This removes any strain around the waist line or hips, and is a smoother and better tying than to draw lacers through the extra front hook with which corsets are supplied.

Fastened in this way it is easy to draw in the hips and keep them so securely girded that the corset does not slip or slide on the figure.

Etymology of "Pumpernickel."

The story is that in the Napoleonic invasions of a century ago a mounted French officer put up at a wayside inn, and the proprietor wishing to give him of the best placed before him some of this black bread. The French officer, however, thrust it from him, exclaiming: "Ce n'est pas bon pour moi, mais c'est bon pour Nicol," that being the name of his horse. Hence in course of time arose the appellation "pumpernickel" applied to this bread.—From a letter in the Saturday Review.

HERE AND THERE.

"The Thinget," whatever that means, is the title of a newspaper published at Skinda, Alaska, and for its size is some stuff. It don't pretend to be a thirty-four page illustrated daily nor even "a weekly magazine of culture and help for the friendless," but it exists and its most recent issue contains no little of interest to the outside world, for as it tells in simple language the elevation of one of this city's former citizens to a judgeship and later to the responsible position of postmaster.

A legend on the editorial page says "devoted to the interests of the native people of Alaska," and judging from the contents of the paper recently received by General William H. Stirling and which was read by several friends of the General in this city, the little sheet is fulfilling its destiny admirably.

One of the items of interest in the little sheet is this: "Our postmaster, Judge Sidney E. Flower, has resigned and R. W. Dayward has been appointed to succeed him."

The bright little newspaper is about eleven inches long and eight inches wide and contains many items of interest to the metropolitan reader. A photograph shows schools for boys and girls and the Sheldon Jackson museum in the background appears Sugarloaf Mountain and Mount Vestovia which is 3,500 feet high.

The Right Rev. Thomas Gallor, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Tennessee, delivered the principal address at the convention of the Christian Social Union, a National organization of the Protestant Episcopal church at Trenton, Wednesday in Trinity church, in which he deplored the political activities of ministers. He urged a wise, conservative, but unflinching policy regarding the eradication of crying wrongs. Referring to the temperance agitation in Tennessee, he said that it had resulted in unwise legislation. "Many people thought State-wide prohibition to be the ideal remedy," said the Bishop. "Instead of calling to their aid some experts on the subject and having laws framed that could be enforced, they forced through the Legislature a measure that has led to civic degeneracy. It is impracticable. The reformers should leave lawmaking to wise experts, and be content with educating public sentiment. So with corporate injustice of every kind. We must educate the people to overcome these wrongs with the aid of expert socialists in economics. When a question gets into politics, it is a good thing for the pulpit to leave it alone. The pulpit must not allow itself to be dragged down into participation in premature or ill-advised reforms."

RACE SUICIDE GOSPEL FROM A SUFFRAGETTE.

Washington, April 15.—"Ten years hence to be the father of ten or twelve children will be as much of a disgrace as to be confirmed drunkard is at present," Wednesday night declared Mrs. Lareine Helen Baker, of Spokane, Wash., a suffragist, who will be heard along original lines of thought at the convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, which opened in this city yesterday. Her studies of children all over the world, she said, had convinced her that "not more than ten per cent. of them are children of love and that the other ninety per cent. are not wanted."

"Roosevelt, poor, ignorant man," she continued, "urges large families, but I tell you, it is quality we want in children, not quantity. Woman suffrage will better children, for it will produce better thinking. It is the mental, not the physical, that rules progressive action today and teaches us that the greatest crime of the ages is too many children."

Parents, thinks Mrs. Baker, should be taught the responsibility of bringing children into the world. When they have learned that fully nine-tenths of all the babies born every year are nothing more or less than human culls, I believe the birth rate will decrease and we shall have a better and stronger race.

"Before I leave Washington," said Mrs. Baker, "I intend to find out how many millions of dollars are being appropriated to stamp out diseases in animals and to improve the breed of horses, pigs and live stock of all sorts, in fact, everything but the human species. What humanity needs is a Luther Burbank. I would have been imprisoned a few years ago for advocating the views which, happily, all progressive thinkers are now coming to adopt."

Anticipation Safer Than Realization.

"It is not always necessary to make a direct accusation," said the lawyer who was asking damages because insinuations had been made against his client's good name. "You may have heard of the woman who called to the hired girl, 'Mary, Mary, come here and take the parrot downstairs—the master has dropped his collar button.'"—Everybody's Magazine.

She Will Wait.

"Jane is so practical. She has postponed her wedding.

"Indeed!"

"Yes. She said she knew she would have to wait until eggs were cheaper or go without a wedding cake."

TREATING THE OILY SKIN.

The one time an oily skin is of any advantage is when March winds blow. The enlarged pores which exude oil also prevents the dryness and chapping which follows when sensitive, dry skins are exposed to cold air.

The oil-skinned girl will not need to bother with a cold cream box in her hand; she can apply it but once or twice a week, where her dry-skinned sister should rub it in each time she comes in from outdoors.

If her skin will not dry with March dust it will clog with it, and care must be taken first to clean the pores, then to close them.

Scrub with a small, stiff complexion brush, and a pure soap. Soap will be needed, as the oily skin should avoid hot water.

Cold water should be dashed freely on the face many times a day, and rinse water should always have a drop or two of tincture of benzine to act as an astringent.

Another good astringent is lemon juice, applied at night, or bathing the face with diluted alcohol. Too much powder to counteract oiliness. It will clog the pores and do little good. Rubbing with a flannel cloth dipped lightly in talcum powder or almond meal will not hurt.

A good astringent lotion for an oily skin is made from four tablespoons of green soap and two tablespoons of borax mixed in three pints of camphor water.

Remember that camphor water and liquid camphor are not the same; the former is made by soaking a large lump of camphor in water for several days; in the latter alcohol is used in the solution. The girl with an oily skin should avoid steaming the face with hot cloths unless she uses applications of ice and an astringent lotion later.

As she is more liable to blackheads than is she had less open pores, their appearance must be guarded against. If they form they should judiciously be pressed out with a watch key. In bad cases wash with a lather of green soap. Rinse well with cool water, then apply cold cream or a soothing lotion.

In extreme cases of blackheads professional treatment is necessary, as there is danger of permanent injury to the skin by wrong use of metal.

A SUMMER BLOUSE CASE.

Have you seen the new blouse case that are being made up for use next summer? They are built with wedge-shaped ends to give more room, and are useful like for packing in a trunk or to put on a table when cramped for room.

The cases when finished are 24 inches long by 18 inches deep, with an envelope flap eight inches deep. Wedge-shaped pieces the depth of envelope and four inches wide at bottom by two inches at top are sewed into each end to give extra fulness.

Heavy white or natural-colored linen, crash or pique may be used for the cases. It is cut into a straight piece 24 inches long, folded into an 18-inch pocket. The ends are overcast to the sides of the case, and bound or buttonholed on the wrong side.

The lower edge of the flap is cut in a straight line with sloping sides. Bind the entire flap or just lower edge with inch-wide wash ribbon or linen tape the color of embroidery.

Above binding of flap have a conventional design in two tones of old blue cotton. A fleur-de-lis design is good, or a border of Egyptian lotus. This should be arranged to leave a medallion in centre in which is embroidered the words "Waists" in the lightest shades of floss.

Where initials or monogram is used put it in the centre of pocket beneath flap. The lettering can be alike or the monogram can be heavier than "Waists," if alike corded outline filled in with seeding is not too heavy. Use darkest tone for cording.

When monogram is heavily padded and worked in satin stitch, the other lettering can be outlined or worked in close French dots along stamped lines.

Fasten with a loop on centre of flap and a button on pocket, or patent fasteners can be used in corners of flaps.

When cases are intended for utility, brown, dull green or mahogany-colored linens can be used for binding and embroidery in deep tone. A serviceable and stylish one may be made from khaki bound and worked in dark green, brown or dull tones of red.

One that will prevent white waists from yellowing is made from deep blue muslin. Bind with white linen tape and work simple design of interlaced scrolls, done in chain stitch or briar stitching. For such a case, which will be hidden in a drawer, lettering may be omitted, or, if used, should be worked in outline or chain stitch.

Larger blue muslin cases, big enough to fit in tray of trunk, are serviceable to hold lingerie or frocks when one is visiting. If, after weaving, they are folded neatly and placed in such cases they need much less pressing.

Linen Whipcord.

Linens so closely resembling the time-tested whipcords that they are deceptive at first glance, are admirably suited to tailor-made suits.

BEVAN, HEDGES & CO., FORM RABBIT TRUST

New Jersey, the home of Trusts, has had another added to the long list and the end is not yet in sight. The new infant prodigy which has for its object the exploitation of the rabbit industry has just been formed in this city and from the prospectus of the new corporation bids fair to outstrip anything of its kind heretofore attempted.

Bunny has the front seat in the grand stand from now on and Reginald M. Bevan and E. Walton Hedges, Jr., propose to make others in the business hustle to keep their business going and no favorites will be played. The buying and selling of rabbits is not the only feature of the new enterprise. There is to be a select boarding house for the pets of others where special attendants will be provided to care for the little animals while their owners are out of town enjoying their summer vacations. Something else, too, which shows that the promoters of the new concern are lovers of dumb animals as well as dealers in them is the fact that they will not sell rabbits to anyone who will not give a guarantee that they will be tenderly cared for and properly fed.

The new company, which is known under the title of the Bevan, Hedges Rabbit Company, limited, will sell their product at reasonable prices and most of the transactions will be for cash. Only in cases where first class references can be produced will credit be given. However, in every case where a single animal is bought the customer will be required to pay spot cash. A note, properly endorsed, will be accepted in cases of large purchases. The company will assume all responsibility for rabbits left to be boarded and will guarantee the best of care. A special rate of five cents per week will be given for the care of a rabbit. The price list will be sent on application but reference must be given. While it is not proposed at first to absorb all the other rabbit concerns in the country in all probability anyone else in the business is likely to receive a visit from a representative of the new company with offers for their holdings of live stock. The shares of the new company will not be listed on 'change, but it is fair to assume that in event of the business warranting the move, blocks of stock may be traded in on the curb. At present there is none for sale. The office of the new concern is at 703 Watchung avenue.

WOMEN HELD SUPPER FOR MISSIONARY CAUSE

Under the auspices of the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the First M. E. church, a successful supper was given in Vincent chapel, last night. There was a large attendance and liberal patronage was accorded. Between the hours of 6:30 and 8 o'clock all the tables were filled with patrons of the affair, and the supply, while sufficient for all, was exhausted when the last persons were served. The proceeds from this affair will be used for mission purposes.

The general committee in charge of the supper comprised Mrs. Charles E. Prior, chairman; Mrs. Maurice E. McGrath, Mrs. Nelson Y. Hill, Mrs. John M. Lewis, Mrs. William Camp and Miss Susie E. Jackson.

The above committee was assisted by Mrs. Charles M. Anderson, the pastor's wife; Mrs. W. R. Benham, Mrs. W. A. W. Burnett, Mrs. George R. Cornwell, Mrs. Samuel Bingaman, Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. M. L. Winton, Mrs. G. W. Hall and Mrs. Stitenhouse, Mrs. Daniel R. Sherwood, Mrs Thomas MacDonald, Mrs. George H. Whitney, Mrs. Ephraim Vail, the Misses Hulling and Sharp.

Miss Edna French was chairman of the waitresses, and those who served were the Misses Martha Camp, Helen Edgar, Frances Rittenhouse, Hannah Bingaman, May Doane, Edith Randolph, Helen Whitney, Ethel Prior, Florence Prior.

During and after the supper sociability was a feature enjoyed by everyone. The net proceeds are not known as yet, but doubtless will be large.

Shell Hairpins.

AN INDEPENDENT WEEKLY.

A. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

Plainfield, N. J., April 21, 1910.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

If crowded houses and pleased audiences are any criterion, "The Lady from Lobster Square" has proven one of the greatest successes of the present season. This laughable farce from the pen of George Ferdeau, the author of "The Girl from Maxim's" bids fair to rival the success of that former play. Filled with bright snappy dialogue and funny situations, it possesses just enough spice to make it particularly appealing. It is the class of entertainment that is broad without being offensive and there is not a dry moment in the entire three acts. A splendid cast of brilliant stage favorites appear in the principal roles. This includes such well-known favorites as Georgia Caine, Lucy Weston, William Pruette, Fritz Williams, Lillian Lee, Wilfred Clarke, Ray Beveridge, Orlando Daly and Frank Goldsmith. The production is magnificently staged under the personal direction of George Kelly and nothing has been neglected by its producers to make it the best. There are three song numbers in the play, each one having scored an individual hit. Two are sung by Miss Weston and the third by William Pruette.

At the New York Hippodrome Gerson's Midgets continue as a feature of special interest. These "Little People" give a complete circus performance in three rings. They have made a decided hit, appealing as they do, both to old and young patrons. The three big spectacles "A Trip to Japan," "The Ballet of Jewels" and "Inside the Earth" are as popular as ever. Nowhere else in the world are the scenic productions as brilliant as at the big playhouse. The Tribe of Fighting Maoris continues to give their native dances and the Army of Diving Boys and Girls march joyfully into the water of the big tank at the conclusion of every performance. Not many more weeks remain in which to see the great show, in consequence of which an extra demand for seats is noticeable at the box office.

Charles Frohman announces that Maude Adams will play "Chantecler."

Marie Tempest will shortly begin rehearsals for the revival of "Caste" at the Empire theatre, announced for April 25th.

Billie Burke in "Mrs. Dot" closes her Boston engagement April 9. She will then play some of the smaller New England cities.

People who have gone to Francis Wilson's play, "The Bachelor's Baby," to find out "What Horse's Bones are made of" have found out.

"The Dollar Princess" has been seen by more than 250,000 different people. And still they flock. All of which proves that "The Dollar Princess" is in the language of slang "the goods."

ABOUT WRITING HOME.

"I wish you would write more often, dear," says mother, when her boy pays her one of her rare visits.

And the tall son bends down, and kissing her, says that he really will write every week.

But sometimes he goes back to town and forgets all about it.

In the press of business he cannot somehow find time to write the few lines that would give so much pleasure to the woman who loves him so.

It is a curious fact that many a young man is quite devoted to his mother and perhaps helps considerably to support her, yet never seems to realize that she values more than any money the letters which tell all about his doings, little everyday things that he doesn't think worth mentioning.

She loves to read little scraps of his letters to her friends, and to talk in her tender mother way of the wonderful son who is making such strides in his profession, and every little praise and advancement that he achieves makes her heart beat faster with pride for his sake.

It is only forgetfulness, of course, that makes the letters so few and far between, but it is worth while to snatch time from a busy day to save her that little stab at the hear when the postman passes without knocking at the door.

Sunday-School Teachers' Institute.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Reckless Legislation.

Senate 79, the "mystery" bill introduced by Senator Wakelee, of Bergen, and passed by the Legislature, is as much of a mystery as ever, though there have been all sorts of explanations as to the meaning and effect of the measure. The text of the bill, which is described in its little title as an act "amending the act of March 27, 1874, relative to statutes," and which provides that "the repeal of any statute shall not impair the validity of any proceedings, suit or prosecution in any civil cause started before said act was repealed," has been printed in full. Lawyers of standing in their profession have studied its provisions, and here are some of the things they claim the legislation was intended to accomplish: to put the Governor in the promoters' liability law, which was repealed in 1907; to revive lapsed charters with extensive power; to restore perpetual franchises that had been permitted to die; to kill the effect of the Hudson County diversion act just passed by the Legislature, and permit the Hudson County Water Company to carry out its contract with Staten Island; to modify the power of the State Railroad Commission, which on July 1 will become the public Utilities Commission; to help out the Pennsylvania Railroad in track elevation litigation in Rahway; to reenact the charter of the Easton and Amboy Railroad Company limiting the taxation of the road that corporation. It may be that all the lawyers are right about it and that the bill, if made a law, would accomplish all of these things, and a lot more besides. Anyway, the mystery is so deep that there is no question of the dangerousness of the measure. Though the suspicious nature of the bill was known, Senator Wakelee pushed it through the Senate without deigning to explain to his fellow-members the objects he sought to obtain. Only the very last hours of the session the Assembly passed the bill with the simple explanation by Assemblyman Scharff that it was "another of Wakelee's good bills and ought to be passed." In spite of all Governor Fort has signed the bill and made it a law. In doing so he has given out a statement that adds little light to the darkness surrounding the mystery, from a layman's point of view. Time alone will tell what perils lurk therein. We are much concerned in the placing of this law on the statute books and what they will accomplish as a result of its enactment. —Newark News.

The Co-respondent.

The order of Vice-Chancellor Howell in a recent Plainfield divorce case has caused much and highly favorable comment. In recommending the granting of a divorce to a husband who had clearly proved his legal right thereto, the vice-chancellor ordered that all the costs of the court and the counsel fees be paid by the co-respondent named in the case. This is an unusual order, and undoubtedly will be met only judiciously made in every divorce case; but it is in full accord with intelligent moral sentiment that the party guilty of breaking up a home and bringing deep and lasting disgrace upon the members thereof, should be punished with such a fine as many minds the failure to administer such punishment is the weakness of the divorce laws. Under the unwritten law such parties have been killed and the slayer has been acquitted; but under the statutory law it is quite possible for such a one to escape without penalty of any kind. Even the bringing of civil suits for damages is not always successful. If any one is deserving of severe punishment at the hands of the law it is the villian who wilfully invades and destroys a home.—Newark News.

HERE AND THERE.

London is mildly interested just now in an attempt to revive in corporate form the ancient British-Hebrew church, first formed, tradition says, at Glastonbury among Hebrew exiles by Joseph of Arimathea in A. D. 35, the year of the first persecution. The legends of the sect affirm that the ancient British people were descended from a band of Hebrew exiles who reached Ireland under the leadership of the prophet Jeremiah and Tephi, the daughter of Zedekiah, the last King of Judah. Through her marriage with Heremon the pedigree of King Edward III. is traced back to David, King of Israel and Judah.

A settlement of these Hebrews practicing Hebrew rites was in being at Glastonbury when, according to tradition, quoted by Baronius, a Roman historian, and Maelgwyn of Llandaff, a writer of the fifth century, Joseph of Arimathea, Lazarus, the Virgin Mary, Martha, Mary the Magdalen and others found refuge in this colony and made their first converts to the Christian faith ten years before the founding of the church at Rome. From the title "Hebrew" or "Hebrews" means "those who have crossed the flood" they infer that the epistle bearing that name was addressed to the Hebrew Christian church in England.

The service at present consists entirely of Biblical readings followed by a sermon. There is no singing. Baptism is administered by means of immersion on profession of belief and the Passover supper is observed annually on the fourteenth day of the Jewish month of Nisan, the elements being pure grape juice and unpierced unleavened cakes. For officers a plurality of leaders are elected, one of the present holders of the office being a cousin of the late Cardinal Wiseman. He also holds the office of angel, or messenger, a post corresponding to that of preacher.

Professedly in common with the Protestant churches, that the Bible only is their sole rule of faith and practice, the British Israel Essiesis, as they designate themselves, are anti-Trinitarian in theology. They hold, nevertheless, the doctrine of the Godhead of Christ and the sanctity of the Holy Spirit. They also hold strong views on the necessity for observing Saturday as the Sabbath, and look for the establishment of a Messianic kingdom on earth in which the Jewish race will be preeminent.

For further confirmation of their tenets they point to the fact that the word British is from he Hebrew "brit," a covenant, and they conclude therefrom that the British race are the covenant people. The stone of the British coronation chair in Westminster Abbey, they assert, is not Jacob's pillow, but part of the rock which Moses smote and out of which water flowed.

M. Carpentier of the French Academy of Science has invented an apparatus which promises to be a great step toward the practical use of aeroplanes. It is a gyroscope actuated by a small dynamo, and the experiments carried out so far show that the effect of this kind of flying machines is rendered as steady and secure as the flight of a bird.

The scientists of the Academy are much impressed by the appliance and have baptized it the brain of the aeroplane. In fact it seems that an aeroplane fitted with it may even dispense with an aviator, as the machine can be made to travel from one point to another alone. Once the motor has stopped the aeroplane will descend smoothly, supported by the action of the gyroscope.

During the hearing of a case in one of the London children's courts an official said that the reformatories were full to the present time. He explained that this was due not to an increase in the volume of juvenile crime but to a growing tendency on the part of parents to free themselves from their responsibilities in respect to the care of their children.

A well known police court missionary took a similar view, and said there is no doubt that many parents use the reformatories to shirk responsibility. They bring their children to court on the slightest pretext and seek to have them sent to a reformatory. When a boy is sent to a reformatory his parents are made to contribute so much a week toward his maintenance, but the amount is often considerably less than the cost of keeping him at home.

That fact, he concluded, induces as unscrupulous parent to make a charge of petty theft against a child, in declaring that the little one is beyond control, and to ask that the offender be detained in a reformatory.

GEORGE JUNIOR REPUBLIC LOCATED AT FLEMINGTON.

Backed in their venture by such men as George J. Gould, former Governor Stokes, Governor Fort and Hamilton W. Mabie, six George Junior Republic boys and two girls have arrived at Flemington to establish a juvenile republic, patterned after the Freeville institution.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company has furnished a farm of seventy-five acres upon which they will build. The republic will be the seventh in a chain of like institutions, which the founder, William R. George, proposes to establish in every State in the Union.

DIRECTORS OF BOROUGH NATIONAL BANK FEAST

Thirteen of the directors of the Borough National Bank sat around the festive board in the private dining room of the Waldorf Monday at 7 o'clock to celebrate, at the invitation of M. C. Van Arsdale, Hyman Adelberg and Judge William Newcorn, the first anniversary of the bank's existence. The only absentee at the feast were President W. A. Clark and George F. Brown. President Clark was unable to be present owing to sudden illness and Mr. Brown has been ill for some time.

Matters of interest were discussed over the coffee and cigars and the banqueters adjourned to their homes at about midnight. The menu discussed was one of Mr. Windham's best efforts and was hugely enjoyed. Those present were M. C. Van Arsdale, Mayor Newton B. Smalley, Justus H. Cooley, Jacob Voehl, Nelson A. Miller, Hyman Adelberg, Frank A. Weeks, Dr. A. H. Dundon, Charles A. Lee, Frederick Coriell, J. V. E. Vanderbeet, John H. Kitchen and Judge William Newcorn.

HOUSE PARTIES ABROAD.

The house party is an essentially British institution. True, we Americans imitate it, but there is something formal and stiff about the gorgeous gatherings which take place in the houses of the New York Four Hundred.

All over the Continent, at the shooting and hunting time of year, parties of friends assemble beneath the hospitable roofs of the magnificent castles and chateaux, but, although these entertainments are often very interesting and delightful, they lack the comfort of the quiet, restful charm of a typical British house party, where most of the guests probably know one an other already, and where the formal ostentation of dress, or in the choice of amusement, which is such a feature of Continental gatherings, would be of bad form.

The ideal house party is composed of a number of interesting men and women who, although of varying ages, ranks or professions, are yet all bound together by a friendly and cordial feeling. It must have no jarring elements, in the shape of spiteful busybodies or people with grievances to destroy a great deal of the pleasure and sense of comfort which should be the ideal house party.

In this connection it may be whispered that a house party at which royalty is present is never quite so pleasurable as one of the ordinary kind. The reason for this is obvious. Royalty is surrounded, even more than it was fifty years ago, with a very stiff cordon of etiquette, and spirit of freedom which forms the most delightful part of country house life.

Country house parties may be divided into two kinds—that in which the guests are invited for two —or at the most three—nights, and that which lasts between five and ten days, or even longer.

In the political world the week-end party has become almost a necessity, and, fortunately for jaded members, it can now be enjoyed in the heart of the country—thanks to the motorcar. During this last summer, when Parliament is so late as to accustom M. P.'s to extraordinary hours, many energetic week-enders thought nothing of motoring into the country during the early morning hours in order to begin their week-end breakfast time.

The "long stay" visit has also a great many good points. Very often even the most genial people have scarcely time to get together in the short space of forty-eight hours, and are very glad to have more time together.

More genuine regret is often felt at the end of a "long stay" party than after the most brilliant and amusing week-end, at which many notable people have gathered.

25 BUTCHERS CLOSE SHOPS IN NEWARK.

Twenty-five butchers in the Hill section of Newark, in the neighborhood of Prince and Broome streets, where there has been a boycott disturbances last week, have decided that they will keep their shops closed for an indefinite period, merely saying that they will open again when wholesale prices become lower. No other conditions can they lower to open their shops.

This has caused consternation among those who last week declared for a boycott against buying meat, and yesterday those who had been loudest in demanding the closing of the butcher shops were making efforts to have the butchers change their plan of closing. The butchers declined to listen and remarked that since the people had inaugurated the strike method of dealing with the situation, the butchers would now do the closing.

Only one butcher has decided to remain open and a police guard is constantly kept at his place.

William Carey to Speak.

William Carey, of Newark, the converted railroad engineer, will conduct the meeting at the Plainfield Rescue Mission, Sunday night and there will be special music by a vocal trio.

CRYSTAL ICE COMPANY HOLDS ANNUAL ELECTION.

The Crystal Ice Company, manufacturers of hygeia ice, at its annual meeting elected these directors for the coming year: C. Frank French, William R. Codington, Christian Gloekner, Fred Endress, L. A. Hummer, B. Frank Coriell, John D. Lolzeaux and John E. Dunn. Afterward the board met and elected: President, B. Frank Coriell; vice-president, Fred Endress; treasurer, C. Frank French; secretary, John E. Dunn.

The company has now been in business about one year and has been successful. It has one of the finest ice plants in the country, thoroughly equipped with every modern appliance for the manufacture of pure and wholesome ice. Water is pumped from a well 250 feet deep, distilled and boiled before the freezing process. It is made as pure as pure as possible and safe for all household purposes. The company use what is known as the can system, the capacity being about fifty tons a day.

The company pumps about 12,000 gallons of water a day, but if anything should happen to the pump arrangements have been made whereby the city water can be used at short notice. The ice is turned out in 300 pounud cakes and is as clear as crystal, it being possible to read a newspaper through the ice. In making ice water or iced tea this kind of ice is ideal for the purpose there being absolutely no danger of contagion.

DECISION IS RESERVED FOR ARMOUR EXTRADITION

Governor Fort yesterday reserved decision on the application of Pierre Garven, Prosecutor of Hudson county, for requisition papers for the extradition of J. Ogden Armour, Louis T. Swift and Edward Morris, of the meat packing companies which were indicted for conspiracy by the Hudson County Grand Jury. Governor Fort did not say when he would announce his decision in the matter, but from the fact that he told counsel to be sure to submit briefs before the end of the week it is not expected that any decision will be announced until the first part of next week.

The interests of each of the individuals who were indicted were looked after by Samuel Untermyer and Richard V. Lindabury, while the State was represented by Prosecutor Garven and Attorney General Wilson, although the latter took no part in the discussion. Counsel agreed that the case on the extradition application should be confined to the case of J. Ogden Armour, and whatever disposition was made of that case, the same should apply to the other two men.

Mr. Untermyer, who opened the hearing, said in that it must be shown by the State that Mr. Armour was a fugitive from justice before he could be extradited. He also based his argument on the fact that even if it were shown that the conspiracy was committed outside of the State of New Jersey, Mr. Armour could not be extradited unless it were shown that he was a fugitive from justice. He finished his argument by saying that the State had failed absolutely to show that Armour was in any sense a fugitive from justice, and for that reason the Governor could not order his extradition.

Mr. Garven, in his argument, said it was only necessary to show that a crime had been committed and that the indicted persons were fugitives. This, according to Mr. Garven, was apparent, inasmuch as they were outside the State. Mr. Garven said the alleged crime was committed in New Jersey, and he therefore asked the Governor to sign the papers so that he might bring on the indicted men and have them stand trial on the charge of conspiracy.

MRS. SHEPPARD DEAD AFTER SHORT ILLNESS

Mrs. Mary C. Sheppard, wife of Joseph F. Sheppard, aged about 60 years, died at 1 Tuesday morning at her home, 210 West Fifth street, from acute Bright's disease with which she had been ill but last week.

Mrs. Sheppard was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Bowman, who lived with her, and she was a native of Pennsylvania. She had been a resident of Plainfield about thirty years. She was a member of the First M. E. church for many years and when health permitted a regular attendant at the services.

Besides her parents she is survived by a husband, a daughter, Mrs. Maurice E. McGrath, of the borough, a son, Frank Sheppard, and two brothers, John and Frank Bowman. The funeral will be held from the late home Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, will officiate.

TWO HATS OR ONE?

When we go away on the long-looked-forward-to visit to some far-away friend, we want all the trunk room we can squeeze for the clothes we may or may not need, and the question of hats for proper occasions is a serious one, indeed, for the softly draped turban of maline of cloth-of-gold is too rich in possibilities to be left at home, but the large-brimmer garden hat is to be a necessity, with summer in the distance. Why not combine the two?

Make, or have your milliner make for you, the draped maline turban, wreathing it in tiny flowers of your favorite color. See that it fits the head comfortably and at a becoming angle. Then have her make for you a wide curving or enveloping brim of white chantilly lace lined with a shade to match the flowers and with just skeleton crown enough to hold the turban in place.

There, you have it! Two in one. One in two. And room in the trunk besides.

The unique idea can be carried out in darker colorings and in straw and flowered turban for crown, if desired. In fact, its possibilities are innumerable.

The annual offering at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church for the chapel fund amounted to $3,000.

The Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will meet Friday night for Bible study.

During May the women of the First M. E. church will hold a series of lawn fetes, the proceeds of which will be used for the chapel refurnishing fund. The first one will be held at the home of Mrs Charles M. Anderson, wife of the pastor.

MAN'S LIFE CRUSHED OUT

Ernest Langfield Receives Fatal Injuries at Hall Printing Press Shop.

DIED IN MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL.

Lancaster, Pa., Man Caught Between Huge Crane and Iron Post— Was Conscious When Taken to Hospital.

Ernest Langfield, aged twenty-four years, of Lancaster, Pa., received fatal injuries while at work at the Hall Printing Press Company plant, Dunellen, Monday afternoon, and died at Muhlenberg Hospital early this morning.

Langfield was employed by the General Fire Extinguisher Company, of Philadelphia, whose men were at work installing a system of sprinklers throughout the Hall plant. The gang had been in the main shop all the morning and after dinner conducted its work in the foundry.

An electric crane is operated through the main shop and half of the foundry and Langfield it appears was standing on a portion of this crane track when a moulder instructed the operator to move the crane to where men were at the time no knowledge of Langfield's presence on the track. The crane was rushed back and Langfield's life was almost crushed out as he was caught between the machinery and an iron post. The victim's cries brought the workmen to his aid and assistance. He had not lost consciousness.

The ambulance was summoned as quickly as possible and the injured man removed to the hospital. The physicians found at once that Langfield did not have a chance to recover, but everything possible was done to make him comfortable.

EXCITING HEARING IN BOROUGH COURT

The case of Mrs. Kate Wicht against John Bremmer, Harrison avenue residents, before Recorder Dolliver in the borough police court Tuesday produced some genuine excitement.

Mrs. Wicht and Bremmer engaged in an altercation Sunday morning. The former charged Bremmer with calling her names in a complaint issued by Chief Weiss. It was the same old story of neighbor vs. neighbor. Mrs. Wicht furnished the first ripple of excitement by fainting after giving her testimony. As the hearing progressed Mrs. Wicht gave away several times under the strain and had to be removed to the sidewalk to secure air.

George Hanson made matters hum in the court room for a while. He was one of Mrs. Wicht's witnesses. He imbibed freely, it is alleged, before reaching court with the result that he was unable to find his way to the witness chair. Hanson refused to leave the stand when ordered to by Chief Weiss. This resulted in his arrest. It took the united efforts of the Chief and Marshal Keller to get him into a cell.

The hearing came to an abrupt ending when Mrs. Bremmer collapsed while giving testimony. Mrs. Bremmer was attacked with heart trouble while being cross-examined by William G. DeMeza, attorney for Mrs. Wicht. Recorder Dolliver announced that he would render a decision in the case next Tuesday. Bremmer was represented by Francis J. Blatz.

ITEMS OF INTEREST CONCERNING COMPANY K

After the regular drill of Co. K Monday a business session was held when H. J. Manning was elected sergeant to fill a vacancy and Private James Conkling was elected corporal. The latter has been a member of the company since organization, but owing to other duties was unable to discharge his duties. He is now starting all over again and is a junior corporal.

Sergeant J. S. Parker, U. S. A., conducted a school for the non-commissioned officers, instructing them in patrol work and first aid to the injured. He has been deputized to take up the military tactics in detail preparing the men for their summer work, and especially the members of Co. K for their trip this summer to Gettysburg. As soon as the weather permits the men will take up outdoor drilling.

On Sunday, May 1, the non-commissioned officers will meet at the armory and then go out on a tramp for patrol work and for the purpose of learning the points of the compass and the important detail work which will fit them for the summer campaign.

IF IT KILLS A CANARY WILL IT KILL A CRANE?

If "rough on rats" will kill a canary will it have a similar effect on a crane? That is the question which is agitating the members of a certain household in this city just now and perhaps the people interested in the matter are glad that the experiment was not made with one of them.

It appears that a certain woman wanted a canary in the house and her husband bought a fine songster for her. After a day or two it was noticed that the bird had stopped singing and was getting worse every hour from some unknown malady. The services of bird fancier were obtained who immediately discovered that the poor little thing had been poisoned and pointed to the bottom of the cage as the source of the trouble. There scattered around lay the rough on rats which the bird had undoubtedly breathed.

Both the woman and her husband were puzzled to know how any poison could have gotten into the cage and a thorough search of the home revealed a forgotten package of the poison. The next question and a very pertinent one was how did it get into the cage. A domestic in the house was the only one having access to the cage where the package was stored was closely questioned and after a few minutes of the third degree confessed to having placed the stuff in the cage to see what effect it would have on the bird. She was discharged forthwith and the couple are wondering whether they escaped a trial on themselves. The bird's life was saved and the poison has been thrown out, and more care will be exercised in selecting the successor of the discharged servant.

HOLY CROSS WOMEN TO SERVE A DINNER

The women of Holy Cross church will serve a table d' hote dinner in the large assembly room of the parish house on Thursday night. According to the rector these annual affairs conducted by the women have a well earned reputation; the bill of fare is sure to be bounteous, delectable and satisfying. All the first class appointments of an up-to-date dining place will be observed. Accommodations for 125 people at a time will be made. A coat room will be arranged where wraps may be checked. The main dining room with an auxiliary room of smaller proportions will be bright with special electrical lighting and the softer subdued lights of multitudinous candelabra wax tapers. The abundance of spring flowers assures beautiful effects in decoration. The committee in charge has had some surprises which will be eye openers to local florists.

It is understood that parties of four, six, or eight people and possibly ten may have tables reserved at a slight extra cost. The high cost of living has had nothing to do with this dinner. The excellence of it at a moderate cost will certainly be a welcome surprise and comfort to many people. It will be a convenience to those whose servants are off duty on Thursday.

The dinner will be served from 5 to 8:30 o'clock to suit the convenience of commuters and householders in general. Mrs. J. O. Stevens is at the head of the culinary arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Gertrude Conklin, Mrs. Frank Allen and other well known women of the church. Mrs. Fred'k Creary and Mrs. Hiram A. Woodruff have been busy with the soliciting work, ably seconded by Mrs. Coddington and Mrs. Jacob Long. Mrs. Herbert Langford has charge of the waiters, Mrs. Frank Moore has assisted Mrs. Woodruff in the menu and ticket work, Mrs. Warner, the Misses Davis, Mrs. F. O. Ball, Mrs. Alston Abbott and Mrs. Frances DuBois will take charge of the decorations.

The dinner is not only a popular church and neighborhood affair, but is open to the general public as well. Tickets are on sale at Armstrongs' Randolph and Nagles' drug stores The date is Thursday, April 21.

ORDINANCE IS DRAFTED FOR SEMI-MONTHLY PAY

Mayor Charles J. Fisk has received from Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh a drafted ordinance, which if passed by the Common Council, will permit the paying of the city employes semi-monthly instead of monthly as at present. The ordinance is drafted in accordance with a new State law which authorizes cities of Plainfield's class to pay its employes twice a month.

Several weeks ago, Mayor Fisk called the attention of the Council to the matter and urged that favorable action be taken. He explained that a month is a long time for some of the men to wait for their money, especially where they have to pay their bills weekly, and in his opinion the change would work no hardship on any official and at the same time would be appreciated by the employes.

The matter was referred to the finance committee. Mr. Fisk requested the corporation counsel to draft a suitable ordinance, which he has done.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE FREEHOLDER JOHN ROBISON

The funeral service of the late Freeholder John Robison which was conducted at his late home at Scotch Plains Monday afternoon, was largely attended. The service was conducted by the Rev. Franklin Mathiews pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church.

There was a large representation present from the Union County Courthouse which included Sheriff Kirkland, all of the freeholders and other county officials. There were also delegations from Fanwood Council, Royal Arcanum, and the Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company, of which organization the deceased was a member. There were scores of beautiful floral tributes.

Interment was made at Scotch Plains the bearers being L. W. Miller, William Lake, Charles A. Smith, T. J. Nicholl and John Bornmann.

Of the floral set pieces were offerings from the Scotch Plains Library Association, Fidelity Council Royal Arcanum, Exempt Firemen's Association, Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company and the Board of Freeholders. One of the floral tributes was from the New York Public School, in which the deceased's daughter, Miss Louise Robison, is a teacher.

WAY OF OBTAINING OXYGEN.

The old method of obtaining oxygen by decomposing an oxid or a salt by heat are now disused on a commercial scale, although still common in the laboratory, says The Literary Digest. For some time oxygen was obtained from the atmosphere by utilizing the peculiarity of baryta, by which it absorbs oxygen while cooling and gives it up when heated, but this, too, is no longer used commercially. The oxygen of commerce, we learn from The Revue Scientifique, is now chiefly obtained form decomposing water electrically or by means of liquid air, from which the nitrogen being more volatile than the oxygen, evaporates, leaving the latter. Says this paper:

"It is well known that with liquid air two processes are used, that of von Linde, whose machine give 600 to 1,500 cubic feet of oxygen per horsepower hour, and that of those apparatus yield 1,500 to 3,000 cubic feet hourly. . . . The Linde company has at present in Germany four factories for the separation of the oxygen from liquefd air. . . . At Paris the factory of Claude is using powerful Linde machines, and at this moment two factories for producing 15,000 cubic feet are in process of construction at Hamburg and Gleiswitz. The quantity of oxygen turned out by the Linde processes alone is estimated at about 20,000,000 cubic feet yearly.

"It is well known that oxygen is transported compressed in steel cylinders, previously tested by water under high pressure. Explosions of these cylinders are rare. H. Le Chatlier calculates accidents in 1905 an explosion at the Institute of Physics at Winterthur, in which one man was killed; in 1907, in a factory in the north of France, a workman's head was blown off in a similar explosion. In 1902 three workmen were killed at Bitterfeld during the process of compression.

"The causes of these explosions have not always been clear. At Winterthur, the oxygen had been prepared by electrolysis and contained 20 per cent. hydrogen—enough to make an explosive mixture. In other cases it is supposed that the ignition of lubricating oils or rusting of the cylinders were responsible. The probability of such accidents, Mr. Le Chatlier says, is very slight, there is no question of giving up the industry for fear of a danger infinitely smaller than that of being crushed in the street. Notwithstanding this, however, it is, of course, necessary to regulate the new oxygen industry strictly in order that it may be extended without danger.

WHEN YOU TAKE MOTOR TRIPS.

When you motor, and everyone does who can, you will probably pay for your pleasure with bad skin unless you guard against it.

Do not think it enough to have your hat well secured with an automobile veil and your dress well protected to cutting blasts. For all automobiling it is wiser to wear the chiffon over your face if your skin is to be saved.

At this season rub cold cream into your face each time before starting on a long ride, and on your return wipe it off with equal parts of rosewater and gycerine.

To counteract the frowning wrinkle or tense lines that come from constant riding learn to relax in a car. Each time you feel the face contracting, your brow drawn loosen the facial muscles. This can be done by opening wide the mouth and eyes several times in succession.

Excellent for these tense lines is daily bathing of the face with sour milk. When a wrinkle has been marked by any small adhesive plaster carefully placed across the wrinkle to smooth it out.

In motoring notice whether your eyes have a drawn, tired feeling. If so, goggles should be used. They not only keep out dust and glare, but protect the eyes from colds which fast riding causes.

The motorist cannot keep the skin in condition by ordinary washing. A complexion brush is essential to cleanliness. A good brush of this kind should cost about $1. The bristles are soft enough to stir up circulation without irritating the skin. Some women make the mistake of using nail brushes to scrub their faces.

For a long ride carry a vanity box or a powder box and a small bottle of witch hazel and alcohol. With these and silk handkerchiefs travel stains can be quickly removed.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"Her Son," the play by Charles Bradley, that is to be presented at the Plainfield theatre on Friday evening, April 22, was suggested by a big newspaper sensation. Several years ago the cables were hot with the story of a painting, a picture of the Madonna, that had been stolen from an historic cathedral in Europe. As in the case of the famous Gainsborough portrait, it was decided that the painting must have been smuggled to this country, and half a dozen detective agencies searched for months without success. It was not alone that the picture had been cut from the frame and stolen that stirred the government of France to spend an enormous sum of money in the search, but that hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of jewels, diamonds, pearls, rubies, garnets and emeralds that had been hanging in strings from the frame, had also disappeared. These were offerings to the Virgin by wealthy Catholics, and indignation was very intense at the sacrilege. The new play, "Her Son," may suggest a clue to the way the picture and jewels were disposed of. It is used as a very strong thread of the story, leading to more than one scene of suspense.

Friends of City Judge W. N. Runyon, who have in the past sat in audiences where the clever acting of this popular jurist has given them the highest kind of entertainment, say that in his part of Tom Wrench in the play, "Trelawny of the Wells," to be given at the Plainfield theatre, Friday and Saturday evening, May 20 and 21, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary Ward of Muhlenberg Hospital, the Judge will surpass anything he has ever attempted on the amateur stage. Judge Runyon's acting in this leading part brings out as never before his many talents. Humor, pathos and tragedy are all united in the portrayal of this character and the judge "puts it over right."

GAMES SHOULD BE STOPPED.

The child who feels the charm of the unknown and the new should be encouraged, and from baby games should be led on to story books, where he will quickly notice and recognize again the goblins and fairies which adore its pages.

After a time he will want to know where the goblin lives and what the fairy is doing. Then will come the stories, the child becoming, after a time, the narrator.

There are those who allow children to have no toys in order to force them to invent their own.

The majority will be found to do so and we hear of children who amuse themselves with fanciful companions or have famous games feeding imaginary birds in imaginary farmyards. Games of this kind, however, should be watched and in a measure stopped if the inventor should have a morbid tendency. A little guidance is generally wise, and a child once put in the right direction may find plenty of opportunity for the exercise of his imagination.

As to pretend is part of child nature, there is seldom a cruel awakening when first comes the consciousness that there are real and unreal things, and that some of our best treasures exist but in the imagination. The child is a poet, and when the time of disillusionment comes the pleasure of invention does not disappear.

All games in which any cruelty is shown or is given an opportunity to grow should be firmly interdicted. Games or the authorized directed play are best when the primal constructive and destructive tendencies are allowed to be under an unseen but capable direction of wise parents.

Princeton Aero Club.

Princeton, April 20.—Acting together with the aero clubs of Cornell, Pennsylvania, Harvard, Columbit and Yale to form the Intercollegiate Aeronautic Association, Princeton University has formed an aero club with about twenty men in its membership. Julian F. Thompson, 1911, of New York, has been elected president; P. C. Smith, 1911, of Philadelphia, vice-president, and Cyrus McCormick, 1912, of Chicago, secretary. This association is attempting to unite all college aero clubs and affiliate them with the Aero Club of America in order that the efforts of the colleges may be united in the new science and a regular series of meets and model contests arranged.

Layer Fruit Cake.

One cup sugar, half cup butter, creamed; yolk of two eggs, two cups prepared flour, one and a half cups milk, flavor with orange extract and bake in three layers, make a fruit filling of the whites of two eggs, one cup of chopped and seeded raisins, two chopped figs, half a cup of walnut meats, six chopped dates and one cup confectioners' sugar, mix and spread between the plain layers.

Cap Strings.

The careful mother always makes several pairs of strings for baby's cap. These she hems at their unfinished ends after their embroidered ends are worked. They are not sewed to the cap, but are pinned to its sides with small gold safety pins, so that they are removable after each wearing. In no other way may the baby be kept immaculate.

ASSEMBLY ORGY DENIED

ervisor of Bills, and the time is now stated to be when the House was adjourned for lunch and the Supervisor of Bills was away.

The room of the Supervisor of Bills, as you know, is located on the floor connecting the main floor of the Assembly Chamber, and is not contiguous to it and does not fall within the bar of the House.

* * * * * * * *

I have investigated these stories certainly as thoroughly as any volunteer committee could and I have not discovered anything which would in any way reflect upon the House of Assembly or its Members or Officers nor anything which could by any stretch of imagination be made the basis for the outrageous libels which have been printed by the sensational press of this matter.

What would then be the result should it so happen that no charges on the question submitted by you to the Attorney General should be presented before this self-appointed, powerless investigating committee working without legal authority? Would it not merely present an opportunity for the members and officers of the House to voluntarily come forward and state that they had been accused in the public press of participating in an alleged disgraceful orgy of which they had no knowledge, and that they were guiltless of participating in any such alleged acts of disorder? This has already been done by the individual members and officers.

No Member of the House of Assembly has brought me the reports such a committee and no charges of any kind have been lodged with me. Therefore, would not any voluntary assumption, upon my part, of such a duty be properly characterized as both fruitless and ridiculous equally with the Attorney General's characterization of such an act upon our part as "fruitless and meddlesome?"

During the closing session of the 134th Legislature from the time of the rap of the Speaker's gavel calling the House to order until its fall at the closing moment of the session when sine die adjournment was declared and the Speaker was divested of his mantle of authority, no acts of disorder occurred within the jurisdiction of the House which would cast dishonor upon that Legislative body.

decided that the P. S. C. could not be stopped.

Taken altogether the election of yesterday is another victory for the association, but it was not gained without considerable hard work and attention to detail. Yesterday afternoon every residence in the city was provided with leterature sent out by the association and in which forty of the High School students were the means. It cost something to do this, but the end justified the extra labor.

The campaign as conducted by the Protective Association included this program: A meeting with the councilmanic committee by the executive committee. A meeting of the executive committee at which it was decided to take up active work Yesterday by advertising in the newspapers, holding public meetings with competent speakers engaged to explain the features of the question. Letters and ballots were distributed by mail to every voter in the city and large printed cards displayed conspicuously all over the city.

It was learned yesterday by Messrs. Moy and Depew that the polling places were in some instances in obscure places and difficult to find and they immediately took steps to correct the matter by re-locating the places making their locations known from a distance. As was noted yesterday, much complaint was heard about the voting machines but as they will not be used again there will be no further cause for this complaint.

The boys who aided the campaign to materially were marshalled under four lieutenants, one for each ward. These were Gordon Moy, Osgood Sewall, Harry Brick and Fred Loizeaux, under whom served Alfred W. Clark, Erasmo Van Zandt, Howard Runyon, John Thompson, John Kenney, Frank Putam, Thomas Rickett, Jack Riffert, Nelson Ramsey, George Murray, Sewall Ulrich, Everett Smith, Roy Titsworth, Fred Krom, Arthur Van Zandt, Alfred Hafer, Raymond Manley, Philip Schuyler, Egbert Fountain, Lester Sutton, Ned Jenkins, Frank Cullen, Luther Banks, Silas Guttridge, Eugene Lidgate, Gardner Bristol, Schuyler Line, Walter Weber, Russel Huston, Nathan Wilson, Oliver Lewis, Fred Hamilton, William Bullock, Benjamin Burst, Frank Schwed.

As a mater of comparison the vote of 1905 is given here. It shows but little difference from that of yesterday. Total votes cast, 1,548; for, 1,141; against, 407. And yet there are those who say that yesterday's vote was not a full expression of the people's wishes.

PLEA FOR ARBOR DAY OBSERVANCE ON MAY 6

Last spring a good many people failed to have knowledge of Arbor Day because no proclamation was made by the Governor of the State of Nebraska. The proclamation was not made, and will not be made this year, because the law now provides that in New Jersey the first Friday in May in each year shall be designated and observed as Arbor Day. The observance this year will therefore fall on May 6 and the State Forester urges that it be made an occasion to emphasize the special needs of this State with respect to its forests.

When Nebraska started Arbor Day back in the seventies, the school children planted trees and the older people planted trees because the State had few forests, and trees were needed to protect the homes against sun and wind, to furnish lumber and firewood, and to civilize the newly established communities. This was logical as New Jersey has never had the same need. We once had too much forest and still have quite enough—such as it is. We need more shade trees of course, and in some localities may well have more forests, yet our chief aim should be rather to improve what we have than to strive for more. The State is fortunate in having a great area of wood land on which are at once the remnants and the germs of valuable forests. The land that needs to be planted is comparatively insignificant.

New Jersey's problem is forest fires! Year after year they ravage the woods, destroy the young trees and impoverish the soil. These must be stopped or all hope of better forests be given up. That they can be stopped, at least controlled, is proved by the experience of other nations. The task is no easy one, for a whole people must be educated and the habits of generations be broken up, yet the record of the Forest Commission for the past three years shows a decided progress. Let the children be taught that every forest fire, no matter how slight, is harmful because it destroys the young trees, and because it robs the soil of the food, the decaying leaves, twigs and bits of bark, upon which the old trees and the young depend for sustenance. A fire set thoughtlessly in a dry grass field may, often does, run into the woods and do great damage. Let all the people know that in no way can forestry be so advanced as by upholding and strengthening the force of fire service which aims to stop these burnings. The State has two hundred firewardens, it needs more; it has three hundred miles of wide fire lines, it needs ten times as much; it must have above all the active support, not merely the passive good will, of every man, woman and child. If Arbor Day shall give this it will have accomplished as much for New Jersey as it has for Nebraska, or can accomplish for any State.

A NEW HAIR BAND.

As usual, the dictators are not content with the continuance of a style that is generally adopted for evening wear. They, with ruthless disregard for our purses, have decreed that a departure from the straight bandeau of metallic lace, tapestry or jeweled ribbon is now in order.

The flowered wreath is the latest form for the evening coiffure. Soft silver or gold tissue is the material to be used to make the petals of the glistening forms.

Metallic ribbon of the thickness of gauze can be used, and prevents the nerve-racking fraying of the edges of the materials with which you are working. Fold the strips and, beginning at the edge, sew in quick running stitches from the pointed lines, first up to the folded edge, then down to the double edge. Draw the thread as you proceed and the petals will be there in any required number. Twist these in a flower-like form and fasten together. The tiny yellow stamens may be purchased at the milliner's, and when added to the centre of each flower give an attractive touch.

These golden daisies should then be sewed upon a narrow ribbon or strip of gauze, the band just long enough to encircle the head. A hook and eye will insure a comfortable method of fastening.

"Giving Christ Place, Prominence or Pre-eminence," will be the topic of the prayer meeting at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church tonight.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church will meet tomorrow afternoon instead of Friday, as Pastor Goodrich will be away on Friday.

JIM POLE'S TAVERN

"I had been up against the hotel problem to such an extent in that part of North Carolina," said John Gilbert, the travelling greeryman, "that I had become shy of tackling it, and one day meeting on the road a darky who was on his way somewhere driving a bull hitched to a wabbly wagon on which were loaded a dozen or so sticks of lightwood, I thought it might be well to see if he couldn't give me some information as to the probable fate that might be in store for me at the inn lying in wait at the mountain town I was approaching. I stopped him and asked him if there was a good hotel there.

"The darky leaned forward with his elbows on his knees, looked at me, cocked one eye up toward the sky as if he was pondering on the subject I had brought forward, and then coming back to earth gave his bull a whack with the gad he carried and exclaimed:

"'Wo'se, yo' p'intedly ol' hoodoo.'

"The bull hadn't stirred since the darky stopped him in the road and he didn't stir under the whack of the gad; so I assumed that this little show of disciplining was but a diverting habit of the bull's owner. I was on the point of pressing my question when the darky rested his elbows on his knees again, and turning to me said: 'I reckon yo' nevuh did know ol' Jedge Gillam, w'at kim frum ovuh yon in de Chowan kentry?'

"I replied that I had never known Judge Gillam.

"'Hut! How yo' done heah 'bout him?' said the darky.

"'No,' said I. 'I never heard about him either.'

"That seemed to surprise the darky not a little.

"'Shoo!' he exclaimed after staring at me a while. 'Whah yo' done come f'um, anyhow?'

"I told him I was from the north, and even that didn't seem to excuse me for not having ever heard of old Judge Gillam. The darky sat in a pondering attitude half a minute or so, and then looking at me again as if I was something of a curiosity, he gathered up his lines preparatory to starting on his way and said:

"'Jim Pole, he done kip hotel up yon, suh.'

"'But, hold on!' I said. 'I don't care who keeps the hotel. Is it a good one? And what has old Judge Gillam got to do with it?'

"The darky leaned forward with his elbows on his knees again and he grinned as he said:

"'I nevuh did stop at Jim Pole's, suh, in my life, but ol' Jedge Gillam one time he kim ovuh hyuh to lay down de law du'in' de cote time, an' he stow heself away at Jim Pole's.

"'Now yo' de handiest nigguhs dat bean 'roun' hyuh den he bean fotch up befo' de ol' Jedge. Dat nigguh he bean a bad un, too, an' dey fine him guilty de wuss kyne.

"'Ol' Jedge Gillam he bean stoppin' den, two, t'ree days at Jim Pole's. He lookin' desput sot in he mind w'en dey fotch in dat po' nigguh w'at dey foun' guilty.

"'Stan' up dah, yo' nigguh!' he say.

"'He stan' up, mos' skeeuh to deff.

"'"Nigguh," de ol' Jedge say, "dis hyuh a mons'us t'ing yo' gone bean foun' guilty fo'! My haht it bean des' lack stone ag'in you' an' I mighty regretful to find cat de law an' de constitution, dey standin' in de way o' my 'fictin' on yo' to'ble punishment I des' pinin' to give yo'.

"'"Ef de law an' de cons'titution dey didn't stan' in de way o' my doin' it, I shore done sentence yo' to stop one whole week at Jim Pole's tavuhn, des' sho's yo' bo'n! Ez case it done stan', dahfo," de ol' jedge lay it down to dat po' shiv'n nigguh. "I cain't do it, an' de wus' I kin do to yo' is to sen' yo' to de penitentiahry fo' ten yeahs!" de ol' jedge say, an' dey done took dat bad nigguh away.'

"The darky on his load of lightwood rolled his eyes up at me, while his grin spread wide across his face, and continuing he said:

"'Co'se, I nevuh did stop at Jim Pole's in my life, suh, an' so I cain't say wevvuh de hotel bean a good un er no, but I heah folks declar, many times, dat ol' Jedge Gillam he suttenly do let dat niggah off mighty lucky!'

"With that the darky started up his bull and went on his way. As I gazed after him he glanced back and I heard him say:

"'Nevuh did heah of ol' Jedge Gillam! Shoo! Dat shore bean mons'ous queeuh!!'

"There was another tavern in the place, and I didn't stop at Jim Pole's, but, relying on the darky's tale of old Judge Gillam's opinion, if this one wasn't a branch of Jim Pole's, then the proprietor must have learned hotel keeping from Jim Pole, and I'd have been willing to bet on it."

Sarcasm.

The balloon pilot landed in the little backwoods village and told the loiterers the thrilling story of his escape.

"And at one time," he related, with dramatic force, "I was in a storm and sweeping over a vast desert. There was nothing to do but throw out sand and prepare for the worst. Gentlemen, at one time I felt as if I had lost my head and gone plumb crazy."

The oldest inhabitant lighted his pipe and drawled, with a sarcastic smile:

"You must have been plumb crazy, huh, to throw sand on a desert. Didn't you think there was enough sand there already?"

BEDROOM DECORATIONS.

With the love of all things colonial in our housefurnishings we seem to have evolved a simplicity in window draping that is both charming and economical, in that these curtains can be made at home and without the aid of a seamstress engaged by the day.

Plain net, in either square or round mesh, may be made with a hem about an inch in width along the two sides and across the bottom, or fine linen tape, half an inch in width, can be sewed on the under side just within a narrower hem and made into a simple design at each corner.

These curtains should hang next the pane, while, for the inside hangings, across the top of window casings and down each side of a group of windows, figured cretonne or English chintz is generally used.

The longer strips reach just about two inches below the sill, and are only a width of the material, while the valance along the top, which is pleated on rings in scant box-pleats, is about fourteen inches long when finished, and extends across the longer pieces at the sides of the window.

In tone, these draperies carry out the color scheme of the room, but need not be of the same design. It is best when intending to use hangings of this sort to have the papering or wall decoration as simple as possible, unless a paper can be found to exactly match the material.

A room recently seen and much admired had the head andfoot of the plain iron bed covered with the chintz, while the spread and roll for the pillows were of the same material.

The dressing table, bureau, chiffonier and table tops were covered with a transparent scrim lined with the cretonne and edged with a heavy cluny lace of a deep cream color.

The walls were of green satin-striped paper and the rug of soft natural coloring.

RAM'S HORN BROWN.

Nothing has more courage than love.

We rob God and ourselves when we fail to do our best.

The man who stands on the truth has God's hand under him.

The Lord made some laws to show how much He hates idleness.

There was only one window in the ark, but it opened toward heaven.

You can't measure a man's religion by the length of his face in church.

Hiding a light under a bushel is not much better than putting it clear out.

We do not have to be great in anything except faith to obtain great favor with God.

How easy it would be to forgive those who have wronged us if we could only know their wrongs.

A rich man may give the Lord too little, but a poor man cannot give Him too much.—Indianapolis News.

No man ever takes the Lord for his shepherd as long as he can find any kind of green pasture for himself.

SAYS THE OWL.

Most of the fish in small puddles imagine they are big.

The people who are paid to be good never earn their salary.

The man who is afraid of work deserves to be scared to death.

Women remind us of angels because they are always flying around.

Why is it that little girls always smile and little boys always grin?

Marriage is the process by which a woman tries to get a job as boss.

Anyway the woman who marries a man with a dimple in his chin had fair warning.

Don't waste valuable time explaining why you failed. Get busy and make good.

Wise is the husband who, instead of trying to be all things to all men, tries to be everything to one woman.

One kind of pessimist is a man who wonders if another man's wife knows her husband half as well as he does.

JUST THOUGHTS.

It's a good plan to hope for the best, but it's a better plan to hustle for it.

The truth in a nutshell is allright in theory, but it would take a squirrel to find it.

A life insurance company will sometimes reject a man as heartlessly as his best girl.

The man with a clear conscious and a good appetite is richer than many a millionaire.

The self-made man generally acts as though he thought he ought to take out a patent on himself.

A woman can generally twist a man around her little finger, unless she happens to be married to him.

PAVEMENT PHILOSOPHY.

There is always a man higher up.

It's a long face that has no smile.

The play's the thing if it's a game.

Then, too, there is the pessi-optimist.

Clothes do a lot for some people, and ruin some others.

Love makes the world go round with its arm in a sling.

Yea, even a boiler maker may hammer at the door of fame.

It's a poor rule that won't work any way you want it to.

There wouldn't be so much alimony if there were more alibi.

When some women don't figure well it is on account of the figures.

Some auto traps are not noticeable, while some others are pretty noisy.

Choose the lesser of two evils, but always dodge both of 'em if you can.

The reason some people don't make a good showing is because they show too much.

The wit of the average after-dinner speaker is usually crowded out with other good things.

Many a happy youngster will be able to tell you who has the north pole on Christmas morning.

No wonder the enemies of Dr. Cook are on nettles while he is in hiding; they fear he might bob up with another pole.

The road to success may be paved with good intentions, but most travelers find the intentions are more or less bumpy as they go along.

ANNUAL CHURCH MEETING

The First Presbyterians Hear Yearly Reports and Elect Officers.

ELDER BETTMAN RESIGNS.

Had Served for Thirty Years—Various Societies Tell What They Have Done—Dr. Herring Presides.

The election of elders, deacons and trustees, together with reports from all the departments of church work, combined to make the annual meeting of the First Presbyterian church, held last night, a long one. J. M. Bettman, who has been an elder of the church for thirty years resigned, and Charles H. Hummer was chosen to succeed him. This leaves a vacancy as clerk of the session, the position held by Mr. Bettman, and the session will fill that later.

The elders elected were E. M. Cave to succeed himself and Charles M. Hummer to succeed J. M. Bettman for two years. A vote of thanks was given to Mr. Bettman for his long and faithful services. Mr. Hummer was elected clerk and afterward resigned that office. In the election of deacons, A. V. Searing, Sr., and Joseph C. Allen were chosen to succeed themselves and Allen E. Beals was chosen to succeed Charles M. Hummer, the latter for a two year term, the first two for a three-year term.

In the trustee meeting which followed the congregational session three trustees were elected for three years, E. P. Morris and W. J. Hamilton to succeed themselves, and Thomas E. Currin, Jr., to succeed D. K. Young, resigned. A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Young for his faithful services.

The congregational meeting was held first. Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring being moderator and J. M. Bettman clerk of the session having charge of the election, assisted by F. D. Dickerson. The reports were then presented in regular order. The one on membership showed that one year ago there were 409 members. Eleven were received on confession and fifteen by letter. There were eight deaths, five were dismissed and forty-seven are on the "reserved list," making the present membership 375.

The financial report of the clerk of the session showed that $1,165.52 was raised and contributed to the various missionary objects, which included the assessments to the general assembly and synodical missions.

Mrs. William Thorn, treasurer, presented the report for the Women's Home Mission Society. The receipts were $187.77 and the disbursements, $186.25, leaving a balance of $2.52. E. M. Cave, treasurer for the Forward Movement, reported receipts of $379.55, $31 less than last year. D. E. George, treasurer for the deacons' fund reported receipts of $296.51 and disbursements of $291.52. A. W. Dunning, treasurer for the Christian Endeavor Society, reported receipts to be $36.67 and disbursements of $23, leaving a balance of $13.67.

The missionary society of the Sunday school reported receipts of $260.98 and disbursements of $263.45, leaving a balance of $96.63. Mrs. J. M. Bettman, treasurer for the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, reported receipts and disbursements to be $128. The ways and means committee in charge of the Italian Mission, of which Rev. Lewis Bond is superintendent, stated that it had received $328.50 and expenses to date were $172.23. There are now fifty-seven members contributing to the work.

Later a lengthy report was received concerning the work at the Italian Mission from Mr. Bond in which it was proposed to pay the missionary in charge, Theodore Borreti, $60 a month, it being understood that he is to devote all his time to the work. The matter was referred to the session.

Mrs. Freeman Shotwell, treasurer of the Pastors' Aid Society, reported receipts of $781.41 and disbursements of $282.85, leaving a balance of $498.56.

Dr. Herring called the attention of the meeting to an apportionment of $50 which the church is expected to contribute toward the First German church of Elizabeth, to help pay off an indebtedness. The matter will be attended to at the proper time.

The Sewing Society reported receipts of $49.80, disbursements of $34.35, leaving a balance of $15.55. The report of the Sunday school showed receipts to be $166.78, disbursements of $147.17, leaving a balance of $9.61. In the music fund the receipts were $59.83 and disbursements of $56.19.

At this stage of the proceedings the elders and deacons were elected, as stated, and Pastor Herring made an informal report of his work for the past year. He referred to the constant and increasing demands on his time, all of which is given solely to the church. He said that he has been called upon to officiate at many funerals outside the church, the average being about four to one. He also referred to his plan of systematic visiting, Mrs. Herring usually accompanying him at such times.

The question of meeting the assessment of $40.90 for the general assembly was presented and arrangements were made to pay this on Tuesday when the Presbytery meets here. It was also decided hereafter to take five collections during the year for the deacons' fund, and one extra one for the assembly collection.

The trustees meeting then followed, F. D. Dickerson being chosen chairman and William J. Hamilton, clerk. The report of the church treasurer, William H. Shotwell, was then presented. This showed the receipts for the year to be $7,354.23 and the disbursements, $6,254.80, leaving a balance of $1,100.43. Mr. Shotwell has now served the church forty-seven years as treasurer.

After the election of three trustees, the auditing committee, George B. Wean, E. D. George and F. O. Dunning were appointed for another year.

The salary of Pastor Herring was made the same at last year, and the question of music was referred to the session with power. In conclusion a vote of thanks was extended to J. L. Brower for his kindnes in furnishing flowers to the church.

PLAINFIELD DENTISTS HEAR DR. FRED T. BUSH

The Plainfield Dental Society enjoyed a banquet at the Homestead last night and afterwards were entertained by Dr. Fred T. Brush, of New York, who gave a talk on "The Business Side of Dentistry." Several interesting reports on work on the public school side of the dental question and the two propositions were thoroughly discussed.

Fifteen dentists sat down to the repast besides the guest of honor and a thoroughly enjoyable time was had. Those present were Drs. W. E. Stelle, Charles Davis, T. W. Monfort, O. B. Woodford, G. T. Woodford, Guy Hillman, Raymond Stevens, D. M. Leonard, Frank French, Frank S. Wells, of this city, and Dr. George Voorhies, of Somerville; Chauncey Egle of Westfield, and Dr. Hogan, of Dunellen. The party broke up at about 11 o'clock.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meetings of the Congregational church and the Congregational Society were held in the church last night preceded by a dinner arranged by the Women's Association to which a large number of the members did justice. The work of the church, its pastor and the Sunday school were all discussed and reports from the various activities of the church received. The treasurer's report was received with prolonged applause because, as J. A. Morse, president of the Board of Trustees said, for the first time in twenty years the balance was on the right side of the ledger and would have been larger had all the pledges been paid in full.

Rev. Mr. Goodrich read the report of the church's industries for the year just past and it was full of encouragement. The inauguration of the Men's Club and the activity of the Women's Association were a source of extreme gratification to the pastor. The women have raised over $500 for the church building fund besides attending to the needs of the various missionary and charitable constributions. The boy's Club is also doing a great deal toward paying some of the expenses of the church and its influence among the male members of the church is wide and bringing the best results.

The total membership of the church has been 302 and the total benevolence during the past year amounted to $3,729.32. Altogether it was considered by the pastor to have been the best year in the history of the church. The standard of being satisfied with only the best in their efforts has been literally kept and the results have been eminently satisfactory.

Thomas West, of Norwood avenue, a new member of the church, was elected to fill the vacancy in the church clerkship and for the society was formally accepted last night. The Sunday school brought out the most discussion of the evening, but it was all of a kind which looked to the interest of this flourishing department of the work. J. M. Whiton, the superintendent, in the report of the activities and declared that the school was never in a more flourishing condition. Its percentage of attendance as compared with other Sunday schools in the city showed that this school leads all the others by a good margin. The Wednesday evening after the second Sunday in each quarter of the church year was set apart for the transaction of business. The following elections took place: Deacons, Alonzo Weseman and James McClymont. Trustees, Dr. A. C. Hubbard, A. Rue, A. Morse and Philip Suffern. James McClymont was elected auditor.

Messrs. Weseman and McClymont were elected to serve two years. Members of the official board elected were R. M. Hooker, E. L. Suffern, Sidney Dunning. The budget for the coming year shows an anticipated expenditure of $3,500.

MISS SARAH E. CRATE NOW MRS. F. M. WHITLEY JR.

Miss Sarah E. Crate, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin A. Crate, of 239 Watchung avenue, and Francis M. Whitely, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Whitely, of 35 Steiner place, the borough, were married at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, performed the ceremony in the presence of the members of the two families and a few intimate friends.

The bride was gowned in white silk, and carried a bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by Miss Anna Whitely, a niece of the groom, and the best man was Chester A. Galloway, of this city. Following the ceremony and congratulations, luncheon was served, after which the afternoon the couple left for Belmar, where they will remain for ten days. Upon their return they will live with the bride's parents for the present. The groom is employed by Woolworth & Co., of this city. The bride received a large collection of gifts from relatives and friends.

LOCAL FIRE FIGHTERS SAVE OAK TREE BRIDGE

Joel Pennington, Howard Manning, Charles Pierson and Yens Clausen, of Hose Company No. 3, won places in Oak Tree's Hall of Heroes, yesterday by saving the Oak Tree bridge, which spans the Lehigh Valley railroad at that place, from being destroyed by fire. The structure was discovered afire by sparks from a locomotive.

The local fire fighting squad was on its way to Perth Amboy in Mr. Pierson's automobile and discovered the blaze as they reached the structure. Leaving the machine the four participants tried to beat out the flames with clubs but they were unable to make any headway. Finally Mr. Manning solved the situation by running to Pumptown and organizing a bucket brigade. Manning se*cured three recruits, each carrying* two buckets of water. The water was instrumental in outing the flames, and when that was accomplished, the Plainfielders continued on their journey.

MRS. B. F. KRAFFERT GOES TO HER REWARD

cant of the Episcopal church athe latter place. She is survived by her husband, a daughter, Mrs. George Moody Henne, who was married last January and lives at Marietta, Ohio, and a son, eleven years old, who attends school here.

The funeral service will be held from the late home tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, and will be conducted by Rev. Morgan Ashley, rector of St. Stephen's church. The burial will be at Titusville on Saturday.

Following an illness of four years, during which time she was a great sufferer, Mrs. Tannie C. Krafferf, wife of B. F. Krafferf, of 530 Woodland avenue, died this morning at 5:45 o'clock. Her illness was due to a complication of diseases and throughout she was patient, bearing her affliction with Christian fortitude. During the past four years Mrs. Krafferf was removed to several places in the hope that the change of air would be beneficial. The family removed to this city about a year ago.

Fairly Caught.

A college professor who was always ready for a joke was asked by a student one day if he would like a good receipt for catching rabbits.

"Why, yes," replied the professor, "what is it?"

"Well," said the student, "you crouch down behind a thick stone wall and make a noise like a turnip."

"That may be," said the professor, *with a twinkle in his eye, "but a bet*ter way than that would be for you to go and sit quietly in a bed of cabbage heads and look natural."—Exchange.

Organist and Singer Resign.

R. Laslett Smith has resigned as organist of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, to take effect May 1, and Alexander Russell, of New York city, well known as a concert pianist, has been engaged to succeed him. B. B. Pettigrew, baritone soloist of the quartet, has also resigned to take a similar position in Orange. His successor has not been chosen.

Meat Pie.

Slice potatoes very thin and cover the bottom of a buttered baking dish with them, adding salt and pepper. Cut into small pieces meat which has been cooked tender and place on top of the potatoes. Season with such herbs as one wishes. Make a gravy, or use any left over gravy, and pour over all. Cover with a flaky piecrust. Bake in a hot oven until the crust is delicately browned.

CHURCH RAISED $41,385

SOME SPLENDID REPORTS.

Total Membership 1,830; Sunday-School Enrollment 1,727; Elders and Deacons Are Chosen.

That the Crescent Avenue church and its chapels are a big factor in the local religious field was made apparent in the reports presented at the annual congregational meeting last night. The reports showed that *a total of $41,385.92 had been ex*pended for benevolent and congregational purposes during the year.

The meeting was largely attended by members of the home church and Hope, Warren and Bethel chapels. The session was presided over by the Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie. Dr. Ellis W. Hedges was celrk. In the selection of elders A. J. Garrett, John Leal and E. E. Parvin were re-elected.

Three trustees were also chosen, William A. Garrigues and Townsend Rushmore being re-elected and Harry W. Munger to succeed Charles F. Abbott, resigned.

LATEST DECISION AFFECTS LOCAL LIQUOR DEALERS

A recent decision of the Supreme Court especially directed at liquor dealers or others who deal in intoxicants in department stores will affect the trade in this county, in fact in any other county in the State. The opinion of the court in the case of State against Kind concerned a suit in Atlantic county. It will in a large measure put a stop to the business heretofore done between dealers and customers whether for cash or C. O. D., or in any other way in which the delivery of the goods violates the interstate law regarding the traffic in liquor.

The decision means, in plain language, that if you are doing business in Plainfield and a customer in North Plainfield wants you to deliver liquor, wine or beer, whether it is paid for in advance or to be paid for on delivery, it will be contrary to the law to do it.

A formal notice will be issued in conformity with a resolution adopted at the license committee meeting on Wednesday night in which cognizance of the action taken in Atlantic county was announced, a warning will be given to all dealers in the State who deliver liquor in the State to customers here and fractures will be prosecuted after the first notice is given.

The matter as it affects the large department stores of New York city is still in abeyance and not until the Federal Courts give an opinion on the sentence of the county court punishing New York department stores for selling liquor here C. O. D. will anything more be done to stop the New York department store practices.

BOROUGH PUPILS GIVE SONG RECITAL

Assisted by the Bound Brook Symphony orchestra pupils of the North Plainfield school gave a delightful song recital in Y. M. C. A. auditorium last which was largely attended. The choristers included the pupils who will compete in the singing competition to be held in the High School auditorium on April 28-29.

The rendition of the different numbers by the pupils reflected unstinted credit on the musical training received by the choristers in the borough school court. It is evident that N. P. H. S. will be a strong factor in the coming competition. Miss Clara Van Fleet was the accompanist.

The orchestra, under the directorship of Herbert Lloyd, performed in a creditable manner. The artists were as follows:

First violins, Miss Dorothy Flynn, Miss Evelyn Forman, Miss Grace Lloyd, Winthrop Phelps, William Schure; second violins, Mrs. Herbert Lloyd, Miss Sarah C. Davies, Miss Elisabeth Franke, Miss Mary Laughton, Floyd Castello, David Hastings; flute, Craig Harvey; clarionet, James McNabb; cornet, Whitney Frazee; drum, Harvey Smalley; cello, George W. Hart; bass, Jacob Byer; piano, Miss Helen Olendorf.

Mr. Sheldon's most recent masterpiece, "Salvation Nell," with Mrs. Fisk in the title role, was seen at the Plainfield theatre recently.

Not only a playright but an actor whose remarkable ability has attracted the favorable attention of the best critics, Effingham Pinto, has joined the cast. Mr. Pinto has just closed an unusually long run in one of Broadway's greatest successes in recent years, "The Climax." After the engagement at Weber's, the company appeared for many nights in Chicago and in other cities before being taken by Charles Frohman to London. Mr. Pinto is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Pinto, of this city.

MRS. ADELBERG INJURED; BABY ONLY SCRATCHED

Mrs. Hyman Adelberg and her eighteen months' old baby were thrown from Mr. Adelberg's automobile last night on Mountain avenue near Terrill road shortly before 10 o'clock, and Mrs. Adelberg received what is believed to be a fracture of the right arm, but the baby miraculously escaped with a few scratches on its face. The cause of the accident was the sudden setting of the emergency brakes on Mr. Adelberg's automobile when he was confronted by a buggy in which a couple were driving and carrying no lights.

Dr. A. H. Dundon attended the wounded woman and the full extent of her injuries will be known later. Mr. Adelberg denounced the habit of driving without lights which seems to obtain with people who have no respect for the laws of the road. He claims that had there been a light on the buggy he would have seen it before its sudden emergence from the gloom and his wife and baby would not have been injured. The couple drove on without ascertaining what had been the results of their carelessness.

MR. AND MRS. RANDOLPH RETURN FROM ABROAD.

Mr. and Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph and daughter, Blossom, returned yesterday from a journey of two and a half months through North Africa and France. Among the places visited were Tunis, Carthage, Marseilles, Nice, Mentone, Avignon and Paris. They motored six hundred miles through Tunisia and Provence and spent a fortnight in Paris, where they found all Good conditions dispated and everything blossoming out into spring gayety and cheerfulness.

Ancient Carthage interested them profoundly, especially the recent excavations and collections of the "White Fathers," which date to three hundred years before Christ. They visited many fine Roman remains in North Africa—temples, arches and amphitheatres—and some also in Southern France.

WATER TALK IN BOROUGH

North Plainfield Association Launches Boom for Municipal Water Plant.

WASHINGTONVILLE THE SUPPLY

Mayor Newton B. Smalley and James K. Arnold Urge Boroughites to Patronize Home Industries —Banquet April 28.

The establishment of a borough municipal water board was proposed at the meeting of the North Plainfield Association in Debele's Hall last night by Mayor Newton B. Smalley. In sounding the slogan for a borough water company Mayor Smalley declared that "water should be the cheapest thing on earth, but instead, it is one of the highest priced commodities. If there is anything that will bring profit to a municipality, I believe it is water. I am confident we can get all of the water we will need for years right here in the Borough. Should Plainfield take it up in the right manner and combine with North Plainfield, it could be made profitable. Should Plainfield vote in favor of municipal ownership, before it is established, Nor*th* Plainfield should take it up."

Dr. Cooley endorsed Mayor Smalley's views by declaring that there is plenty of water in the Washingtonville watersheds to supply the borough forever. "The water is better and it would be cheaper, I believe the water proposition is a very important one," declared Dr. Cooley. The speaker added that city water is costing him fifteen times higher than the water he pumps from springs on his mountain property.

The water agitation received a start when Councilman L. B. Woolston expressed unfavorable views on the city water problem. Following the expressions of sentiments of Mayor Smalley and Dr. Cooley, Mr. Woolston added that he had received more enlightenment on the water question after listening to Dr. Cooley's remarks than he had acquired reading newspaper arguments and in personal talks during the past three months. "It would be a good thing for the borough to own its water plant," he said, "if water could be secured by gravity. We would get water at half the price that we are now paying for it."

"Boost North Plainfield" was the keynote of the meeting before the water question bobbed up. Mayor Smalley in an address called attention to the conditions of the city that the borough has many disadvantages and that some times it is pretty hard sliding. "We are in a district in the farthest end of the county," said the Mayor, "and we receive less attention than other communities that are located centrally in that respect we are greatly handicapped."

Referring to the sewer question Mayor Smalley declared that if Plainfield joins with the borough in the proposed system, North Plainfield would be greatly benefited. He urged the objects of organization and wished it success.

"Business interest in the borough," said Mayor Smalley, "is lacking and conditions in this respect are worse than they were twenty years ago, and it is to be deplored. I regret that some citizens neglect to patronize home industries. The many vacant stores on Somerset street is evidence that borough people go to Plainfield and spend their money.

"The borough needs help from all quarters and all citizens should lend a hand and boost for all they are worth. Unless there is more boosting done in the future than there has been in the past ten years the municipality will go back faster. Everybody should be awake to the situation and make every move count."

Former Councilman J. K. Arnold also endorsed the sentiments ex*pressed by Mayor Smalley. "If the* borough business men, there will be a row of stores from bridge to Jackson avenue. That's where you get increased valuation. I don't be*lieve that Plainfield should gobble* North Plainfield. We have been playing tail to the cat long enough."

Permanent officers were elected as follows: President, Alexander Milne; secretary, B. J. Phelps; treasurer, Nelson A. Miller. The committee on organization was instructed to prepare a set of by-laws to submit at the meeting next Friday night. David Campbell and C. L. Jones were named to constitute a publicity committee. Years ago Mr. Milne's father was president of a similar oraginization in the borough.

Tickets were placed on sale for the banquet which will be held in Debele's Hall on Thursday night, April 28.

Miss Gilbert Goes to Rye.

After much consideration Miss Edith Gilbert, of Crescent avenue, has decided to associate herself with Mrs. Life at Rye Seminary, Rye, N. Y. Miss Gilbert has taught for many years both in the public and private schools in this city and is undoubtedly one of the most respected and best loved teachers in Plainfield.

SOCIALISM CONDEMNED

Rev. Dr. Slicer Lays Bare the Doctrine of the Schemers to Disrupt the Family.

"SOME MEN ARE PIRATES."

Family Relation too Sacred to be Changed—Brain and Initiative Better Than Subversion of Capital.

If Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian church of New York city, had continued his address for another hour or two last night the mixed congregation which was large, would gladly have remained to listen. Dr. Spicer's topic, "The Vain Hope of Socialism," so fully covered the question as to its non-desirability as a factor in our body politic that there were but few shreds of a sense on which to base hope of ultimate victory for the cult.

Dr. Slicer said that it is important, if not utterly germain to thinking people, to understand the question thoroughly so that the principles involved in the question be not laid aside as of no importance individually and as a nation. He declared that "vain hope" is used not in the sense that it may not come to pass in the United States, but that it might after years obtain a foothold in spots sporadically and work insidiously.

"I am opposed to socialism," he said, "because it is not convincing nor is it an economic factor in any sense. The definition of socialism by the converts to it leaves much to be desired and its explanation is never the same when coming from more than one source. The hope of socialism seems to be to capitalize the Beatitudes so that they will obtain a dividend for the other thing. Leading socialists know what they want, but it is not the Beatitudes. Society needs the individual for the initiative. The social group is bound together by tradition, custom and social form. These tend to monotony, stagnation and work against progress. They think the capitalists have all the riches of God and the disposition of the devil. I do not appear for the capitalists, but for economic knowledge and economic practice.

"I certainly do object to the groups of men who have acquired wealth at the expense of their less able competitors. I cannot distinguish the difference between this class and the old fashioned buccaneer who plied his trade on the high seas in piracy. If you want to cure an anarchist of his anarchy or a socialist of his economics, give him something to do. He will soon become something beside an enemy of the present social system against which he now rails.

"Socialists advocate the seizure by the State of all land, industrial concerns, capital and the means of production generally. Four ways are proposed by them: Confiscation, Compensation, Excess and Taxation. All are unjust. But it is distinctively unsocial and distinctive immoral and tends to frustrate the design of Brotherhood. It is merely the expression of class consciousness and is born of rancor, hatred and envy."

Dr. Slicer read a few extracts from a child's socialistic primer, fashioned after the old New England school primer in which is contained a parody of the Ten Commandments. The primer also describes a certain book written by Marks, a leading socialist, as the "Gospel of Social Democracy."

"The Wage Slave", said Dr. Slicer, "is too thin to last over night. Socialism decries the wage slave and wants him abolished from the earth, but cannot supply the means except in the annihilation of the whole race of mankind. Some of the things you would have to submit to if socialism ever became universal would be: "Your children would be taken from you to be cared for by the government. You could no longer sell your services for their actual worth. You would have no choice as to the work you should do nor have the right to select your employer; and the socialist State would control every moment of your life from the cradle to the grave. And let me say that these tenets are not always preached in public, but make their way through the insidious literature published wherever the socialistic press has followers.

"Immigration need not be restricted", continued the speaker, "but the gregarious herding of the masses in the great cities should be prevented. In one block above the fifties in Manhattan more than 6,000 people are housed. If this rate obtained throughout the city the entire population of this country could find quarters on Manhattan island alone. The mountaineers of Tennessee and Kentucky, who are the very symbols of American manhood would never leave their free lives for a change to this condition."

Speaking of individual enterprise which socialism is so strongly opposed to Dr. Slicer told what could be done with seventy-five cents' worth of iron ore, by the use of brains, initiative, control and brains. "That material can be converted into $2,500,000 worth of watch arbors, yet they do not want the brains whose brains contrives this marvellous product to get the return for his ingenuity.

On the sex problem Dr. Slicer said the narrowest from the socialistic viewpoint was too utterly base and low from the view point of a Christian to be tolerated for a moment. The sanctity of the home, the overthrow of religion and the breaking of the family relationship apart from their own professions to be the one particular aim which should be a factor in forever relegating socialism to the winds. The inherent leaders of the cult are above their own ideals in its logical outcome. They cannot believe that when mankind returns to nature prostitution will vanish, because they themselves love their wives and their offspring. These things are preached by certain classes of the socialists to their children, but they do not actually believe it. It is insidious and fallacious and none of them say ought but that they believe in human welfare and they are actually breaking or attempting to break that down.

Much more than this could be said of the matter of the social relation, but the speaker left it with his hearers to determine what was left unsaid. It was a eloquent appeal to common sense. Next Sunday night Rev. Bernard J. Newman, of Temple Pilgrim chapel, of Brooklyn, will speak on "the Dousing Problem."

MISS BRADLEY MARRIES

She Becomes the Bride of Charles F. Norton at Scotch Plains Church.

TO RESIDE IN BROOKLYN.

Miss Dorothy Taylor Maid of Honor and E. H. Ahlefeld Best Man

—Rev. Mr. Mathiews Officiates.

Miss Natalie Bradley, daughter of the late William H. Bradley, of Brooklyn, and Charles Frederick Norton, also of Brooklyn, were married at the Scotch Plains Baptist church, Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, in the presence of a large and fashionable assemblage of guests from Brooklyn, New York and Fanwood. Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony.

The bride, gowned in faille Francais, embroidered with roses, seed pearls and duchess lace and carrying white roses and lilies-of-the-valley, was attended by Miss Dorothy Taylor, of Westerly, R. I., as maid-of-honor. Her gown was pink crepe meteor with crystal over-dress and garniture of silver and roses. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

The bridesmaids were Miss Amy Bodd Chapman, of Brooklyn; Miss Nellie Wilson, Miss Jennie Gould, of Brooklyn, and Miss Mina Fennell, of New York. Their gowns were of pink crepe meteor with crystal overdress, and the garniture of pink roses. They carried bouquets of pink roses.

The best man was Edwin H. Ahlefeld, of Brooklyn, and the ushers were Reginald H. Pelt, Harry W. Barley, Howard L. Close, of Brooklyn, and Joshua Brush, of New York.

William H. Gage, of Montclair, presided at the organ, and while he was playing the Wedding March from "Lochengrin," the bridal party entered the church. The ushers led the way, followed by the maid-of-honor, the bridesmaids and the bride. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride from 7 to 10 o'clock. Music was furnished by Zetzer's orchestra of New York. The bride and groom received the congratulations of their guests, after which supper was served.

The church was lavishly decorated for the occasion with white roses, palms, smilax and lilies, and the house was also decorated with similar flowers, arranged by Stanley.

The bride received a large collection of handsome and valuable gifts. In the exchange of gifts among the members of the bridal party, the bride received from the groom a pearl and diamond ring, the groom received from the bride a pearl scarf pin surrounded with diamonds. The bridesmaids received pearl brooches and the maid-of-honor a pearl chain. The best man received a pearl scarf pin surrounded with diamonds while the ushers received crown of pearl scarfs pins.

The bride and groom formerly lived in Brooklyn, and upon their return from a wedding trip will reside at 232 Decateur street, that city. The groom is a commission merchant in New York. He is a member of the Crescent Athletic and Seminole clubs, of Brooklyn, and the Polytechnic Alumni Association. He is also a member of Sigma Chi. The bride is a graduate of Packer Institute and a member of the alumni association of that school; also of the Gamma Sig Phi.

THE MOTHER AND THE BOY.

A boy's heart is full and overflowing. He need some one who will listen to his confidences. If he is repelled and finds himself alone, he becomes fretful, indolent or morse. His affairs are not "nonsense." A good mother never says, "Run away; I am busy." She listens, encourages.

Important discoveries may be made in these outpourings. She gives sympathy, enters into his feelings, sees things from his point of view. If he tells her of something which proves that he is at fault, she does not reprimand at the time, because this will check further confidences. She gives her sympathy, tells him that she is glad he has confided in her, and that she will talk of it again with him.

If a mother has insight she can solve many problems. She is interested in her boy's sports, collections, his school and companions. The choice of his companions should not be left to chance. It is well if they are from families known to his parents.

At the Dock.

"What are your impressions of America?" asked the enterprising interviewer at the pier, of the visitor.

"It is superb—splendid—so kind, so hospitable," said the enthusiastic foreigner.

"Good! I'm glad I asked you now instead of waiting till you were through the hands of the customs inspectors." —Washington Evening Star.

PREACHES TO JR.O.U.A.M.

Trinity Reformed's Pastor Addresses the Four Local Councils.

THE BIBLE HIS SUBJECT.

Rev. John Y. Broek Gives Some Facts, Figures and Some Estimates of Great Men Concerning Holy Writ.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, preached a sermon the four councils of the Jr. O. U. A. M., of the city, last night, taking for his theme, "The Bible's Message to Men," Psalm 119:130; "The Entrance of Thy Word Giveth Life." There was a good attendance of members of the order and all enjoyed the discourse, which in part follows:

"The Bible is the great beacon light to men. It is the world's greatest and best book. More copies of the Bible are sold annually than any other book. Portions of the Bible, at least, have already been translated into 411 languages and dialects, making the knowledge of Scripture accessible to four-fifths of the human race.

"Yet on the other hand, it is estimated that ninety per cent of murders in our country in the last twenty-five years occurred in families where there were no Bibles. A large percentage of smaller crimes took place in families which had Bibles, but did not read them. The Bible does have more prominent testimony to the Bible. Sir Walter Scott said: 'There is but one book—the Bible.' Gladstone called it 'The impregnable rock of Holy Scriptures.' There was a time in Abraham Lincoln's life when he possessed but two books—the Bible and Bunyan's Pilgrim Progress, but these books also possessed Lincoln. Theodore Roosevelt says, 'Almost every man who has added by his life-work to the sum of human achievement of which the race is proud, has based his life-work upon the teachings of the Bible.' And the late Chief Justice Brewer brings this testimony, 'The man who brings this Bible home to the people of our nation is a patriot.'

"The Bible is not a man-made book. God is its author. The Bible needs no defense of any of its friends. It is its own defense. It will always stand. It will never fail. This book has been attacked, assailed and abused, but it still is the Word of God that liyeth and abideth forever.

"It is a book which is clothed with divine authority. We receive our Christianity not from the 20th Century, but direct from the Scriptures. It is our authority and teacher. All that is necessary for salvation.

"It has a message for every man. It has a wonderful influence on character. The Bible is a searcher. It reaches from a physical standpoint. It tells us to keep our bodies clean. It is the best guide book to health which the world knows. The Bible is the basis of literature, art and music. The Bible reveals to us the two greatest poets that it is possible for man to know. These facts are the story of God and the destiny of a human soul. The Bible begins 'In the beginning God,' and no mortal can penetrate behind that thought. The Bible is worth our reading, for it contains a perfect code of ethics and morality.

"The Bible tells of Christ. He is the substance and crown of all. It is the only book that we have about Christ and that maker of a priceless book. And throughout the Bible there is a stream of blood which tells of Calvary. Dear old book, old-fashioned, but not obsolete—a light to our path and a guide to our way. Throughout the journey of life, our rod and staff on which to lean and our solace in sorrow."

TEACHERS ENTERTAIN AT THE HIGH SCHOOL

Under the auspices of the teachers of the Plainfield Public Schools an entertainment and reception was held at the High School Auditorium, Saturday night, followed by a dance. The sketch "Ici on Parle Francais" was given by the teachers.

E. B. Howe, Jr., was the star of the cast, taking the part of a Frenchman. The rest of the cast deserve great credit. Lindsay Best played the part of "Mr. Spriggins" to perfection, while Miss Elmina Eason, as his wife, was excellent. Charles Lewis was the "Mayor" and made a hit. Miss Katherine Ball was the Irish maid and showed the independence of that race. Miss Fanny Beckwith and Miss Myrtle Reynolds completed the cast.

After the sketch all adjourned to the "gym" for refreshments. Benjamin Evans proved himself a capable caterer. After refreshments the teachers and their guests returned to the auditorium where all dancing was enjoyed. Miss S. Lena Bass was chairman of the committee in charge of the entertainment.

BIG CROWD AT THE RACES

Frank Hart, of New York, Carries Off Bulk of the Honors.

ACCIDENT THRILLS THE CROWD

Metropolitan Association of Motorcycle Clubs "Scares" Off Star Riders Who Were Entered for the Event.

Plainfield's first motorcycling meet at the Driving Park on Saturday afternoon attracted about 700 people despite the frigid weather. The honors of the day went to Frank Hart, of New York, and Harry Klebes, of Philadelphia. Hart was winner in three events and Klebes in one. The latter was scratch man in all of the events he appeared and his riding was on the sensational order.

A high wind which swept down the home stretch handicapped the riders and clouds of dust from the wind made it unpleasant for the spectators in the grand stand and field. Scores of the spectators went to the meet in automobiles and scores also came on bicycles.

The meet fell short of being the artistic success from a racing standpoint as intended by the management owing to the non-appearance of a number of star riders who had sent along their entries. The management placed the blame on the newly organized Metropolitan Association of motorcycle clubs.

The new association, which seeks to control motorcycling in the east, on Friday notified the management that it would have to pay over $50 as an entrance fee, or the riders taxed for the expense, would be blacklisted. The Plainfielders interested in the meet, and the management, refused to hand over the $50 graft and as a consequence the association party carried its point by scaring off several of the star riders who were expected to compete for the prizes. One of these was Arthur G. Chapple who failed to appear. While there was considerable grumbling on the part of some of the spectators owing to the small number of competitors in the different events it is readily seen that the troubles were beyond the powers of the management.

Hart, the star of the meet, finished first in the five and ten-mile handicaps and in the two-mile novelty race. Victory in the novelty contest came easy but the New Yorker was compelled to hustle in the five and ten-mile events. Hart won the ten-mile owing to an accident to Klebes' machine which resulted in the rider being thrown to the ground.

The accident brought the spectators to their feet and hundreds swarmed on the track. Klebes escaped with a few cuts and bruises about the face but his machine was badly damaged. The Quaker City rider looked like a winner in the race until his spill.

The Honeyman brothers, Bert and Edward, appeared in the five-mile Union county handicap championship, but met with defeat. Quaker City Judge William N. Runyon was the starter, Dr. D. Aldrich, the referee, and Joseph Gunn, announcer. The summaries follow:

JERSEY PRINTERS MEET

Typos from All Parts of the State in Semi-Annual Session.

SEVENTEEN UNIONS ASSEMBLE.

Many Speeches Are Made, Much Music Heard and a General Good Time Had—The Banquet a Feature.

Printers all the way from Cape May to Sussex were in town yesterday at the semi-annual meeting of the New Jersey League of Union Printers. The session was held in Company K. Hall and according to reports presented the printing industry in New Jersey is in a flourishing condition. There were no rumors of strikes or holdouts for higher wages, on the contrary all the delegates reported satisfactory conditions all along the line.

Assemblyman Cornelius J. Ford, of Hoboken, president of the association was unable to attend, and L. W. Niles, vice president, of this city, presided over the meeting. Of the twenty-one unions in the state seventeen were represented. The largest delegation was from Passaic, the typos from that district chartering a special trolley car to make the trip.

Robert Emmett Scott, of the Daily Press composing room, called the meeting to order, and placed the session in charge of the state officers. Mr. Scott in his remarks complimented the state labor bureau and also informed the delegates that the Plainfield union is in fine condition.

There were many addresses. Elmer Thrasher, of the Newark Evening News, made a rattling good speech, and so did John C. O'Connor, the "Boy Orator" of the Newark Junior Typo Union. Other speakers were Cyrus Barnhart, president of the Trenton Union; William H. Garrabrant, president of the Newark Allied Printing trades, John E. McLaughlin, of the Brooklyn, John C. Brown, of Paterson, Joseph Vreeland, of Paterson, Walter H. McKee, of New York, Joseph P. ....., of Hoboken and John Finnigan, of Camden.

One of the enjoyable features of the meeting was the selections by the Kingsley quartet of Passaic which consisted of John Kingsley, James H. Mullen and Harry Richard. Joseph Vreeland, of Paterson, gave an Indian dance and J. R. Doss and Thomas McGrath appeared in humorous sketch. Jas. Kennedy, of Somerville, also rendered solos, which were enthusiastically applauded.

The convention terminated with a banquet served by Timbo & Co., which was supervised by E. Y. Neighbour in an efficient manner. The local committee was as follows: Winferd Cram, chairman; Robert Scott, John Jeffrey, Harry Thomas and Clarence Francisco.

PICTURED AMERICAN BOY AS JOLLY GOOD FELLOW

Rev. Dr. Lester C. Randolph, of Alfred, N. Y., gave an interesting lecture to the Seventh-day Baptist church, Sabbath evening on the subject, "That Jolly Fellow—the American Boy." The affair was held under the auspices of the Men's Club of the church, and there was a large and appreciative audience present.

Dr. Randolph spoke more especially of the future of the American boy, who he said is the embryo of the American citizen to be, and in this connection dwelt at some length on the importance of the proper training of the boy for a useful citizenship.

The speaker also gave some excellent advice to parents as to how they should train their boys, all of a practical nature. Dr. Randolph interspersed his lecture with funny stories, his witticism being a marked feature of the talk. He had a fund of good stories, all of which were applied to the subject and with the conclusion everyone felt as though they had spent a profitable and pleasant evening.

Dr. Randolph occupies the pulpit of the church in the morning, preaching an excellent sermon.

Plain to Be Seen.

A Denver man who visited the museum at City Park recently tells of a farmer he saw there. The ruralist stepped in front of a portrait which showed a man sitting in a high-backed chair. There was a small white card on the picture, reading:

"Portrait of E. H. Smith, by himself."

The farmer read the card and then chuckled to himself.

"Regular fools these city fellers are," he said "Anybody that looks at that picture 'ud know Smith's by himself. They ain't no one in the paintin' with him."—Denver Post

When Using Glycerine.

Glycerine is one of the most valuable cosmetics we have, as it whitens and softens most skins, and also is a powerful emollient.

There are some skins with which it does not seem to agree, probably because it is not diluted sufficiently. If used in too concentrated a form it abstracts so much moisture from the skin that it has the effect of burning.

For dry or sensitive skins glycerine should be diluted about one-third part to two-thirds of some perfumed water, for the average skin one-half of each will be weak enough.

Elderflower, violet, rose, lavender or orange-flower water all combine well with glycerine, while a nice cleaning combination is made from a third each of rosewater, glycerine and pure alcohol.

HORACE SHERWIN DEAD

Retired Merchant, Age Fifty Years, Succumbs to Heart Disease.

A SHOE DEALER FOR 25 YEARS.

Survived by Wife, Two Sons and Daughter—Funeral Wednesday Afternoon at Late Residence.

Horace Sherwin, aged fifty years, who for twenty-five years was engaged in the retail shoe business in this city, died at his home, 109 Richmond street at 1.30 this morning from heart trouble. He had been ill for several months and during the past few weeks it was known that he could not recover his health and strength.

Mr. Sherwin was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Orren Sherwin, and was a native of Jersey City. He came here about twenty-five years ago and engaged in the retail shoe business, being one of the pioneer merchants. His first store was where E. A. Laing now conducts a stationery business. Later he removed across the street, adjoining L. L. Baker's confectionary store. A few years ago he took a position as traveling salesman for the George West Shoe Company, of Philadelphia, and later with the Endicott-Johnson Shoe Company, of New York, with which firm he remained until taken ill.

Mr. Sherwin was a member of the First Baptist church and for years a regular attendant at the services. He leaves beside a wife, two sons, Walter M. Sherwin, an actor, and Robert Sherwin, of this city, a daughter, Miss Anna Sherwin, of this city, and Mrs. Ralph Goodwin, who holds a responsible position as Wellesley College and a brother, George Sherwin, of Newark.

The funeral services will be held from the late home on Richmond street, Wednesday afternoon, and Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Edwin Shaw, of the Seventh-day Baptist church, will have charge.

TRIAL STEEPLECHASE AT LINDEN SATURDAY

The trial steeplechase meet attracted a small field to the Linden race track on Saturday. There were but a limited number of entries. Rufus C. Finch, of this city, entered Manifesto II and Lady Ann, the latter did not start.

The fifth event, a steeplechase over about two miles and a half for horses that have been regularly hunted, was the race of the day. That is, it resolved itself into a race with J. Davis' paprica, a son of The Pepper, and Essex B. Peter Hauck, Jr's roan son of Bannockburn. The latter was ridden by Hugh Gormley, of this city, who was only twenty pounds overweight. Essex B raced alongside Mr. Davis' gelding for a mile and three-quarters, when Mr. Gormley rolled off, landing over the far fence. He quickly remounted, but in the meantime Paprica sailed away and won as he pleased.

Lewis E. Waring, of this city, was one of the stewards of the meet, and E. S. Hooley was one of the judges. The majority of the horses started were big and lusty, which was to be expected, as the meeting was earlier than has been the case since the National Hunt people took control.

AUTOMOBILE FEES SHOW BIG INCREASE

Basing his estimate upon the receipts of the first three months of this year, J. B. R. Smith, State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, believes that the total receipts of the department for the year will be $225,000 as against $245,196 from this source last year.

Receipts for March this year were $52,184, which is $25,521 more than for the same month last year. The showing is even better when the first five months of the present fiscal year are considered, from November 1 to April 1. The receipts of the department for this period were $169,315, as against $116,655 for the same period last year.

Since January 1 the department has issued 15,235 automobile registrations, 16,320 drivers' licenses, 1,556 tourists' licenses and 1,043 motorcycle licenses.

More Trouble.

"I may as well tell you," said the suffragette, "that the disturbances we are creating now are nothing compared to those we are prepared to cause."

"That's right," answered the big town boss. "If you raise all this row to vote, what will you do when you get the ballot and find it isn't being counted?" —Washington Evening Star.

Shamrocks and T. A. B.'s

The Shamrock and T. A. B. bowling teams are negotiating for a series to be rolled on Campbell's alleys. It is probable that the initial clash will take place on a date to be arranged next week.

"So you think that the automobile has made life much pleasanter?"

"It has for me," answered the comfortable citizen. "I drive a fast horse and my son rides a bicycle. The automobile has taken the minds of the police off both of us."

The house was attractively decorated for the affair, the color scheme being white and green. The decorations comprised Easter lilies, palms, foliage and potted plants. The ceremony was followed by a reception, which was transformed by flowers into a floral labyrinth. A floral altar was used.

A reception was held after the ceremony, during which the couple received the congratulations of the guests, and supper was served. Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Cole left on an extended wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside at Hartford, where the groom is engaged in the practice of law. Silly Stuff.

There was a man in our town
Who grew so very fat,
His fiancee one winter's day
Broke their engagement, flat.

And then from grief and pain he lost
A lot of flesh; and when
He'd lost a score of pounds or more,
She took him back again!

DEADLOCK OVER SEWERS

City and Borough Commissions Can Not Agree on the Terms.

AT PRELIMINARY DISCUSSION.

Plainfield Representatives Say They Consider City Should Bear 70 Per Cent. of the Burden.

The first conference of the Plainfield and North Plainfield special commissions since the passage of the law permitting these municipalities to unite in establishing and maintaining a joint sewage disposal works, was held in the office of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, last night, and resulted in a deadlock. Whether this will eventually be broken, remains to be seen. The deadlock was as to the apportionment of the cost of building a plant, and both sides remained firm.

Both commissions had gone over the details prior to the conference and were prepared to submit a proposition. The borough commission, through William J. Buttfield, who acted as spokesman, proposed that Plainfield should pay seventy-five per cent of the cost of building the plant, and that North Plainfield's share should be twenty-five per cent. He based this percentage on the relative populations of the two municipalities.

The Plainfield commission proposed that the city should assume seventy per cent. of the cost and North Plainfield thirty per cent. This the borough commission was not willing to agree to, and as there was no immediate prospects of either side giving in an adjournment was taken subject to a call by the chairman of either commission.

The conference did not last very long. Some time was spent in going over the details of the proposition, reviewing the work of the old commissions, as well as the report compiled by Hering & Fuller, engineers, as to what could be done and the approximate cost of the work.

There was no question on the part of either commission as to the advisability or necessity of the two municipalities joining in the plan for one large disposal plant, in fact it was thought to be the only satisfactory solution to a difficult problem, but when it came to deciding on an apportionment of the expense, the two commissions could not arrive at a conclusion.

The Plainfield members thought that seventy per cent. would be a fair amount as the city's share, and that the borough commission should balk over an extra five per cent. was unexpected.

No doubt another conference will be held in the near future when another effort will be made to reach a conclusion. Of course, neither has any authority to act. The members are simply empowered to investigate and recommend to the governing bodies what they think would be fair and equitable, and it is then up to the Common Council and the Borough Council to decide the matter. As has already been stated, the plan is to locate a large disposal works in the west end of North Plainfield township, options having been secured on land for that purpose.

Those present at last night's conference were Mayor C. J. Fisk, and Councilmen F. E. Mygatt, Duncan W. Taylor and C. C. Randolph, all of the third ward, representing Plainfield in a special session; W. J. Buttfield, Joseph C. Osgood, Samuel St. John McCutchen, John P. Emmons, Edward Boyer and George T. Rogers, comprising the borough's special sewage commission.

HOPE BOYS' MINSTRELSY

Under William N. Runyon's Direction, Burnt Cork Artists Give Fine Show.

GREETED BY A LARGE HOUSE.

Performances Again Tonight and Friday Night—Good Songs and Jokes and a Capital Sketch Make up Program.

Replete with catchy songs and snappy jokes the Hope Chapel minstrels scored a big hit before a crowded house last night. Hope's burnt cork artists have given first class performances in past years, but the 1910 troupe is the best ever; at least that was the verdict of all who witnessed the performance last night. The show will be continued tonight and on Friday night.

Thomas M. Muir starred in the performance with his topical song "In the Sweet Bye and Bye." The audience enjoyed the local hits in the different verses and Mr. Muir was obliged to respond to encores. In the verses the singer made special reference to the Council purchasing an auto for Fire Chief Doane and suggested that Overseer of the Poor Alex Ayers should also have a machine; a children's hearse, and the city's unpaid beer bill for the Charter Day celebration were well received. New verses will be added each night.

All of the end men, T. M. Muir, Bertram C. Firstbrook, George Rittenhouse, Frank Clark, Russell Randolph and William C. Firstbrook received volleys of applause as they did their turns. One of the marked features of the entertainment was the solos rendered by Bertram Tallamy, Frederick V. Tallamy and Harry S. Kartsher. This trio of artists was also obliged to respond to encores.

In the olio, Caruso and Lapparo and Joseph Denny furnished a musical treat in the form of piano, mandolin and violin selections. The entertainment terminated with a humorous sketch entitled "The Telephone Office."

Benjamin Washington Evans made an excellent interlocutor and Judge William N. Runyon was found in his accustomed role as director and pianist. The program in detail follows: Part First—Prelude, Hard Times, the company; opening chorus, The Big Six, end men and company; end song, Alexander Jones, Russell Randolph; end song, What's the Matter with Futher? LEWIS FIGHTS EXTRADITION Alleged Embezzler's Counsel, C. A. Marsh, Makes an Able Argument.

HEARING BEFORE GOVERNOR.

The Lawyers in Case to Submit Briefs and Fort Continues the Hearing for One Week.

Craig A. Marsh, counsel for Frederick Lewis, made an earnest and exhaustive argument before Attorney-General Wilson yesterday at Trenton against Governor Fort honoring the requisition of Governor Hughes, of New York, for the extradition of Lewis to New York city to face an indictment for embezzlement in connection with the affairs of an estate for which he was trustee thirty years ago. Lewis claims to be a resident of Newark, but was apprehended in this city on the allegation that he was a fugitive from justice.

Mr. Marsh insisted that Lewis is not a fugitive from justice. He declared if any crime had ever been committed in connecten with the estate it had occurred more than twenty years ago, and that under the New York law the statute of limitations had run against it for fifteen years before the indictment was found. The indictment found against Lewis, he said, cited April 1, 1909, as the date of the commission of the offense, but Mr. Marsh said that Lewis had not been in New York State for six months previous to this date, nor had he been there since.

Replying to the comment of the Attorney-General that an indictment must be considered presumptive evidence of a crime having been committed, Mr. Marsh insisted that the circumstances in this case justified the assertion the form of the law was being put to an insiduous use to work out the ulterior motives of those who have preferred the charges against Lewis. Mr. Marsh argued that it was the duty of the Governor of the State to analyze the situation thoroughly and not accept merely the ex parte statements of residents of another State as against the rights and liberty of a citizen of New Jersey.

Assistant District Attorney Johnstone, of New York, urged that the Governor be advised to grant the requisition.

Before the hearing closed both lawyers agreed to submit briefs, and the case went over for a week.

PAPILLO IS REMANDED FOR FURTHER HEARING

Matteio Papillo, an Italian, who is accused of assaulting Maria Brascio and her brother, Nicolo, on April 18 last, was remanded for a further hearing by Judge Runyon this morning. It is alleged that Papillo stabbed a fellow countryman in the head after tearing the scalp of Maria Brascio and the face of her brother with a beer bottle on Sunday afternoon, April 18.

The case seems to be one of the ordinary drunken sprees in which the ugly temper of Papillo was given full sway. It is alleged that he carved a slice out of the head of Nicolo Brascio, and not being satisfied with that accomplishment tried to brain Brascio's sister with a bottle. There are others implicated in the assault, and one or two witnesses of the fracas are still missing. When they are all rounded up a preliminary hearing will be given the accused man by Judge Runyon.

THIEVES GET $100 AND LEAVE NO CLUE

Thomas Timbo, the North avenue restaurateur, was robbed this morning between 2 and 5 o'clock of a sum exceeding a hundred dollars.

Mr. Timbo and Erwin Neighbor left the restaurant shortly after 2 this morning and on their return an hour later discovered that some one had rifled the cash register of the change it contained and had taken ten ten-ollar bills from a secret hiding place.

The police department have been busy all the morning investigating the robbery, but up to 2:45 no clue had been obtained. One suspect has been questioned, and another is expected to be incarcerated before night. Chief Kiely is exerting himself to the utmost in an endeavor to locate the thief.

THE HETFIELD WILL IS REFUSED PROBATION

Judge E. S. Atwater in the Union Court, today, refused to admit the will of the late Cora O. M. Hetfield to probate. The decision is a signal victory for Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., who represented the contesting relatives. Charles A. Trimble, who represented Joseph Gallagher, of Rahway, the sole beneficiary under the will, has given notice of appeal. The caveators were Scott Terry and William Hetfield.

Cora O. M. Hetfield, who left an estate valued at about $14,000, was a well-known resident of the county. He was a regular patron of Joseph Gallagher, a hotel keeped at Rahway, and when he died it was learned that he had left everything to the latter.

The will was contested on the ground that Hetfield was not mentally capable of making his will and that undue influence was used in the making of the instrument. The contest has been in the courts for several months and a great many witnesses were examined.

TILDEN EXECUTORS' ACCOUNTS APPROVED

At a special term of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, judgment has, within the last few days, been entered in respect of the accounts and management of the estate of the late Hon. Samuel J. Tilden. The executors and trustees are Hon. John Bigelow and George W. Smith, of New York, and L. V. F. Randolph, of this city. The judgment finds amongst other things: "That said John Bigelow, George W. Smith and Lewis V. F. Randolph, as trustees under said will, have fully accounted to the several beneficiaries of and under the several special trusts created by said will, as above set forth, and become arising from the principle of said trust funds, and for all matters with respect to said trusts, as set forth in their said accounts;" and further: "That said executors and trustees are hereby released and discharged from all further liability and accountability in respect to the estate of the said Samuel J. Tilden, deceased, except that these plaintiffs are accountable in respect to the property remaining in their hands."

The property still in the hands of the executors and trustees consists of about seven hundred thousand dollars held, under numerous clauses of Governor Tilden's will, for the benefit of various relatives and friends; and also, about thirty thousand dollars which the executors own, by the section of the court, to use in the erection of a monument in New York. It is likely that this monument will be erected in Bryant Park.

No question has ever arisen as to the faithful and wise administration of Governor Tilden's estate, or of any part thereof. At the first "accounting," it was shown to amount to about seven millions of dollars; and most of this has been distributed to the heirs.

C. H. Leveridge a Benedict.

Charles H. Leveridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. The couple left, after a brief reception, for Bermuda, where they will spend their honeymoon. They will reside at 432 Spooner avenue, after June 1.

THIEF ENTERS CHURCHES

Makes a Small Haul at St. Stephen's But Gets Nothing at Grace.

DETECTED BY THE JANITOR.

Burglar Escaped After Being Found by Eugene Johnson Who Tried to Hold Him—Police Have Description.

A church thief, the most despicable kind of robber, operated in this city on Monday night and although he managed by a subterfuge to get away from Grace Episcopal church empty handed he contrived to steal some of the altar cloths and other small articles from St. Stephen's without being caught. A good description of the man has been obtained from Eugene Johnson, the janitor at Grace church, and it is thought likely that the man will be apprehended shortly.

On Monday evening just before 8 o'clock Johnson entered the cellar of Grace church while he was preparing the parish house for the meeting of the Men's Club and as he entered a man emerged from the toilet. Johnson asked the intruder what he was doing there and received the response that necessity drove him to shelter. It was raining hard and the story seemed plausible enough.

Johnson, however, was suspicious and endeavored to detain the stranger until some of the club members should arrive, but the fellow feigned illness and managed to escape through a window which Johnson opened to admit air. Johnson followed, chasing the suspicious man over fences and through the streets near the church. The janitor lost his man. He immediately telephoned to police headquarters and the reserves turned out to help in the search.

The thief disappeared only to turn up later at St. Stephen's where he got in by forcing a window in the rear of the church with the tool above noted. The thief is a slick article and the police would be happy if they could land him. The value of the goods stolen from St. Stephen's is estimated at $50.

From the Police Blotter.

Spencer Conway had his horse on exhibition this morning opposite police headquarters expecting that the case of the S. P. C. A. against him would be called. Owing to the absence of the veterinary who was to testify as to the animal's condition the hearing was postponed until Monday. Mrs. S. G. VanHoesen is the complainant.

PAINTERS MEET BOSSES

At Banquet in the Waldorf—Celebrate the Tenth Anniversary.

JAMES F. BUCKLE'S SPEECH.

Suggestion for "Painters' Day" Made by Howard Woolston, Organizer of Local No. 480.

Painters, paperhangers and their guests to the number of 100 gathered in the large dining room of the Waldorf last night at 9 o'clock to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the organization of Local No. 480 and the three hours which followed were possibly the pleasantest in the history of the union. The local had as its guests of honor James F. Buckle, Howard Woolston and Ernest P. De Veaux, A. F. L., and several out of town friends.

Mr. Buckle made the speech of the evening and an orchestra made up of members of the organization furnished some delightful music.

President John Donaldson was master of ceremonies and toastmaster and with him on the committee were Allen Anderson, Charles Trotter, J. B. Harsell, J. H. Cushman and John Emery. Besides Mr. Buckle and Mr. Woolston the following boss painters sat at the speaker's table: Clarence Mundy, G. Latiman, Thomas Oelrum, Clarence Waldren, James Buckley, Charles Conover, James Hanson and Mr. Martin, of Seeder and Martin.

No jollier or more happy a company of men could have been found anywhere than those who enjoyed the feast prepared by Mr. Windhan. They gave the greatest attention to Mr. Buckle's address in which he told of his experiences and impressions during his recent trip around the world. Mr. Buckle never even remotely hinted that "human nature is the same the world over," in fact he confined himself to descriptions of foreign places and people and told some funny incidents of the long voyage. He said it was a trip which most painters do not get the chance to take, but he advised them all to keep away from India if they wanted to make a living in the Far East.

Speeches were also made by James Hansen, Charles Conover, Mr. Luthman and Howard Woolston, the last named complimented the men on their successful organization and work and suggested that a day be appointed each year for an outing when all the journeyman could lay off for the day and enjoy a little recreation and strengthen the bonds of fellowship which bind them together. A committee will be shortly be appointed to further Mr. Woolston's suggestion.

During the hour preceding Mr. Buckle's speech the orchestra played some popular airs and Ed. Townley rendered a cornet solo. John Vardon also accepted with "I Had a Thousand Lives to Live." And after the orchestra had played another selection the entire company arose and sang "Auld Lang Syne." The orchestra was composed of the following: John Emery, John Mitchell, Edward Townley, Samuel Waynesborough, E. S. Squires and Charles Christianson.

JOY RIDE CHAUFFEUR HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

Counsellor J. Henry Crane appeared for William Banks, colored, this morning to defend him on the charge of joy riding brought by H. W. Stover, of West Sixth street. Citing a previous similar case Judge Runyon held Banks under $500 bail for the action of the grand jury. Bail will probably be furnished this afternoon.

Counsellor Crane moved for the dismissal of the case on technical grounds, but Judge Runyon overruled the motion and the above action was taken.

Why They Fell.

Working night and day was too great a tax on Elmer St. Clair and John McLeod, of Rock avenue and Third street, yesterday, so they both drank immoderately and were taken to the lockup for safekeeping. This morning Judge Runyon suspended sentence on both men. It was their first appearance in court on charges.

FIGHT SUNDAY BASEBALL

The Citizens of Scotch Plain Headed by Baptist Pastor Prepare for a War.

GAME CARDED FOR SUNDAY.

Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews Declares That Village Will Not be Made a Sunday Amusement Park.

A warfare against Sunday baseball games is going to be waged by the Rev. Franklin Mathiews and other citizens in Scotch Plains. Posters announcing that the Plains nine, with Willie Deegan in the box, would open the season on next Sunday in a game with the Stirling A. C., of Brooklyn, has resulted in the anti-Sunday ball advocates rallying to the standard of Sabbath observance.

Pastor Mathiews, who is looked upon as the leader of the crusade, declared to a Daily Press reporter today that he is in the fight against Sunday ball playing, not in the role of a minister of the gospel, but as a plain citizen.

"The attitude of the best citizenship of the village," said Mr. Mathiews today, "is decidedly against Sunday ball games being played. Citizens of the village realize that it is their duty to block any attempt made to desecrate the Sabbath.

"Sunday baseball is not essential to good citizenship. It is a damage to any community, both morally and financially. It depreciates the value of real estate. The good citizens of Scotch Plains don't, propose to have *Scotch Plains established as a Sun*day amusement park for Plainfield and other towns."

Mr. Mathiews informed a Daily of the township committee are opposed to Sunday ball playing. Up to date no complaint has been registered with the Township Attorney Walter L. Hetfield, Jr. If such a complaint is forthcoming the likely procedure is to secure an injunction from the Supreme Court restraining the ball players from engaging in the contest. If a fight is instituted it is the belief that the Sunday club will submit peaceably to the dictates of the authorities.

Mr. Mathews informed a Daily Press reporter that the campaign against Sunday ball playing will be carried on in the same manner as the fight was made against renewing licenses to the hotels in the village. "The matter is solely a moral issue," said Mr. Mathiews, "and I do not believe that the good citizenship of Scotch Plains will tolerate Sunday ball games."

In talking on the situation Mr. Mathiews complimented Township Attorney Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., for his zealous co-operation in the warfare against certain hotels which resulted in two places being closed. "I believe Mr. Hetfield will also do his duty when called on to prevent the contemplated Sunday ball games," added Mr. Mathiews.

An agitation was inaugurated last summer to stop Sunday playing by the church folk, but the fight was not pursued with vigor. According to Mr. Mathiews this was due to the fact that George Frentz, who was manager of the club at the time, requested the former not to push the fight, on the promise that the club would not make any effort to conduct Sunday games this season. Mr. Mathiews said he on agreed to this truce. Since last season, however, Mr. Prentz removed from the village and the team is under new management.

MISSIONARY CIRCLE ACTIVE AT 'PLAINS.

An all day sewing session was held by the Woman's Missionary Circle of the Scotch Plains Baptist church today. There was a large attendance and a number of garments were made for the inmates of the Mountainside Home of the Newark Orphanage which is situated on the mountain slope near the 'Plains.

At noon a lunch consisting of sandwiches and luscious strawberry shortcake was served by the members of the circle. The committee in charge was Mrs. Frederick I. Smith, Miss Kittie Conger, Mrs. George Harper and Mrs. Howad Broach.

N.P.A. IS UP AND DOING

Big Demand for Tickets for Borough Civic Society's First Banquet.

MR. M'CUTCHEN TOASTMASTER.

Event to Be Held in Debele's Auditorium Next Thursday Night —Array of Brilliant Oratorical Talent.

The first banquet of the newly organized North Plainfield Association which is expected to take place at Debele's auditorium on Thursday night, April 28, is going to be a hummer if the plans of the committee don't go astray. At the meeting of the association in the Borough Council chamber last night David J. Carney, chairman of the committee, reported that tickets are selling at a merry clip which make it appear that fully 150 boroughites will assemble around the festive board on that occasion.

An attractive list of speakers will also be secured to make addresses on timely topics. Professor Benjamin Phelps, chairman of the speaker's committee, reported that Samuel St. John McCutchen has been secured to act as toastmaster and that invitations have been extended to the following men to appear as orators: Robert Clark, Jr., Superintendent of Schools B. C. Krebs, Mayor N. B. Smalley, Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey and William J. Buttfield. The occasion will be enlivened by vocal and instrumental music under the direction of Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan and Horace J. Martin.

The most important business transacted at the session was the adoption of a constitution and by-laws. The constitution stipulates that regular meetings shall be held on the third Friday in every month. The annual dues was fixed at one dollar.

Meredith Dryden was unanimously elected vice-president of the association and Dr. Frank French was added to the membership of the banquet committee. An executive committee, composed of the following members was also elected: N. B. Smalley, Edward T. Wilson, M. C. Van Arsdale, Allan B. Laing and James E. Church.

TERRY'S PLAYING WON FOR P. H. S.

The P. H. S. baseball team defeated the Poly Prep School, of Brooklyn, Saturday by the score of 6 to 5. It was one of the hardest fought games this year and P. H. S. deserves great credit for the victory. Terry pitched and was the star for the High School.

The victory was largely due to his splendid pitching and batting. The game was practically won in the fourth inning when Terry knocked a fly in the center field bringing two men in. The opposing captain, Sykes, struck out four men while Terry struck out 16. Runyon was a star at running and Zeraga made a good showing at short. The shortstop for Poly Prep, Cendoya, was the big feature of their team.

MISS DORIS VANWINKLE BRIDE OF F. C. BARTLE

Miss Doris VanWinkle, daughter of Mrs. L. M. VanWinkle, of Martinsville and Frederick C. Bartle, also of Martinsville, were married at noon Thursday at the home of the bride's mother in the present of a large number of relatives and friends. Rev. Mr. Okeson, formerly pastor of the Methodist church, at Mt. Horeb, and now of Raritan, performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Miss Jessie Bartle, niece of the groom, as bridesmaid, and Dorothy Bartle, also niece of the groom, as flower girl. The best man was Newton Goltra, of Martinsville.

After the ceremony a reception was held during which the couple received congratulations and a wedding repast was served. Later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Bartle left on a short wedding trip. They will return home Sunday and occupy the newly-furnished home at Martinsville, provided by the groom. The bride is well-known in Martinsville and vicinity and have many friends. The bride received a large collection of gifts.

Evelyn Way, a niece of the bride, was to have been flower girl, but Wednesday she fell over a wagon and broke her arm in two places, necessitating a change in the plans.

MASONS ELECT GRAND OFFICERS AT TRENTON

Allen S. Sherman, of Orange, was Thursday elected grand master of the New Jersey grand lodge of Free and Accepted Masons. He succeeds J. Clarence Conover, of Freehold, who declined a re-election. There was but one contest in the election of officers, and that was for the office of grand junior warden, and for which position there are always a number of candidates. The contest was of a very friendly nature, however. Fred E. Tilden, of Jersey City, was the successful candidate for the office. He was chosen on the first ballot. He was a district deputy of the grand lodge for three years, and one of the best known Masons in the State. His father now deceased, served the Grand lodge as grand master.

Other officers elected included: Lester S. Burritt, Bayonne, deputy grand master; Richard C. Woodward, of Glen Ridge, senior grand warden; William F. Burk, of Trenton, grand treasurer; Benjamin F. Warfield, of Trenton, grand secretary; William Rutan, Newark, deputy grand secretary. The grand treasurer, grand secretary and deputy grand secretary are re-elections.

The grand chaplains include: Rev. Henry R. Rose, Newark; Rev. Wilbur W. C. Walker, Jersey City; Rev. Charles Bowden, Camden; Rev. Thomas G. Spencer, Jersey City; Rev. Eugene A. Robinson, Pitman; Rev. Robert MacKeller ,Red Bank. Other elections include: Henry S. Haines, Burlington, G. I.; R. D. Argue, Newark, S. G. D.; William M. Thompson, Orange, J. G. D.; Robert H. McAdams, Elizabeth, grand marshal; J. E. Blackmore, Newark, J. S.; H. Berg, Orange, G. S. H. B.; Le Massena, Newark, G. S. B.; W F. Marsh, Newark, G. P.; Thomas B. Hood, Newark, G O.; Luther S. PLAINFIELD A. F. C. CELEBRATE AND MAKE TWO PRESENTATIONS

The Plainfield Association Football Club held a social session last Friday in honor of John Mitchell, who was presented with a clock and Bernard Eglinton, who received a gold chain, for achievements on the football field during the past season. Thomas S. Douglas, president of the club, was in charge of the program, and made the presentations.

Vocal numbers were contributed by Bush, Rosburg, Wilson, McKay, Donaldson, Stevenson, Spalding, Sutton, Henderson, Strachan, Panton, Jamieson, Mitchell and Lessen, accompanied by Samuel Sutton on the piano. An orchestra consisting of Messrs. Lesson, Mitchell, Emery and Bushart rendered a number of instrumental selections to the delight of the company.

A report of the football season just closed was given by J. D. Brown, after which E. C. Westcott made a few remarks. Then followed the presentations. The recipients made happy responses. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

Now and then, at rare intervals, rich men who are gentlemen are kind enough to their class to let it be known that not all are snobs. Here is Mr. Anthony J. Drexel, (father of the young man whose marriage to Mr. George Gould's daughter the other day reminded the amused public that feminine snobbery as unbidden wedding guests is still rampant in New York), protesting like a poor chap at the dearness of living nowadays. He stayed at one of its smart hotels. He speaks out like a sensible man of business against sheer extortion.

"It cost me $1.75 to have two eggs, a cup of tea, and some bread only yesterday at one of the hotels. Just think of that! I understand there are other hotels where one has to pay $2 for the same things. Just think—$1.75 is very near a man's wages for a day's work!

"It doesn't matter how much money one may have, such a charge appeals to one. The average man must have a chance. He cannot go marketing for only the cost of eggs. Things cannot continue the way they are now."

If Mr. Drexel's plucky example should make a clearage between the lambs and the wolves the high cost of plain food will drop with a crash.

No sympathy need be wasted over any ambitious picture buyer whose main aim is to shine as a patron of Art. Recent law court revelations have only echoed the public verdicts in similar cases in other lands. That there tricks in all trades and professions is a truism, but we do not often learn the trickery of the back artists in discovering old masters' names on new copyists' damp canvasses. The lover of Art for its own sake buys a picture because it gives him special pleasure. Others buy because it sets off an expensive frame, and others have a way of booming a mediocre name until weak dabblers in the profit-raising art are glad to join in the pretty little game of making a gooseberry pass for a pineapple. A well known Press journalist who knows what he is talking, kindly tells us that of the 2,500 Rembrandt's in the United States, only the 500 are genuine. Of the genuine Old Masters in our public galleries only a small proportion represent the painters in their maturity. But we now have the very highest authority for doubting every old painting as we doubt the gush of those who live by selling them. Two members of a world-famed picture dealing firm have been calling each other frauds, and brought a suit for immaterial damages last week against his dear relation and partner. The jury heard each show up the other as "an unscrupulous scoundrel," etc. Their verdict awarded the aggrieved one just half a cent.

The ever benevolent Carnegie has a fine opportunity to do good by stealth, as a change that will save him blushing at fame. The Mayor of Pittsburg, in a fit of parsimony as penance for the sins of councilmen now languishing in enforced retirement, reduced the library committee's appropriation of $290,000 to $225,000, in the face of the opening of a new quarter-million branch building given by Carnegie at the request of Council. Whatever may be the meaning of this, it is said that many of the employes will have to lose their jobs. When a new library building, with name big on its shingle, is "given" to a town on condition that it shall tax its people to find the books and the maintenance, and the staff forever, it will be well to find the "donor" of the person in addition to contribute a Pension Fund for sufferers from a lop-sided benefaction.

A blusterous New York attorney defended his client against the charge of fraud the other day by representing him as the dupe of others. Not content with stating this with decency and proving it discreetly, he pointed to his paying patron in court and asked the jury's sympathy for "this pigmy, this boy, this youngster, this pleasure creature without a dollar in his name, this consummate ass whom I am defending." Whether the patient was kicked by his offender is not stated, nor that the judge interfered. We shall never read the name of McIntire without thinking of an ass.

President Taft, good easy man that he is, appears to have fallen into the line of public officials whose acts, if not their aims, are to smooth the pillows of those who mix their honey with fraud. He has just commuted the sentences of fourteen Federal convicts, one being a Pittsburg bank clerk who helped himself to $50,000 for personal speculation. The commuter uses his position to override the persons injured, the witness of truth, the learned advocates, and the judge himself, who measures the sentence more justly than even an ex-judge can, far away in time and interest. We read of the Governor of a southern State who has perpetrated some 900 pardons during his term, the trump case being as cowardly a political assassination as the records can show.

If law is ever intended to command public respect, if equal justice is to be restored to real and amateur tribunals, surely it is time to begin the reformation, and surely the great officers of State and Nation are the public servants to perform this their public duty. They accept liberal wages and lavish honors. Leaks in a cask can be caulked, but leakage at the bunghole is——?

G.A.R. VETERANS RESENT INVASION OF FREEHOLDERS

The members of the Women's Relief Corps provided an entertainment and social time for the members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., at Reform hall, Friday, there being about forty veterans and their wives present. The program consisted of vocal and instrumental music, recitations, followed by refreshments.

During the evening the comrades made short remarks in which attention was called to the recent announcement that the Union County Board of Freeholders is to decorate the graves of the soldiers of veterans in the county. Some of the veterans were inclined to resent this seeming invasion of their rights, adding that as the recent law is on the books it would be long before Memorial Day would be abolished entirely so far as the real purpose was concerned. The veterans had the idea that the work of the freeholders is intended to supercede that usually performed by the former on Memorial Day. The matter will be investigated further.

It was announced that the memorial detail will meet tonight, with a committee from the Women's Relief Corps, for the purpose of perfecting details for the observance of Memorial Day and carrying out the usual program. Mrs. Hattie Gibbons was the chairman of the committee in charge of Friday night's affair.

GOVERNOR FORT ASSAILED BY MORRIS CO. DOCTORS

In a resolution adopted by the Morris County Medical Society in Morristown Thursday afternoon, Governor Fort's attack on Dr. Luther M. Halsey in connection with the hearing on the osteopathy bill was warmly resented. The resolution condemned as "being undignified, unbecoming and unwarranted, the insult given to Dr. Halsey and the medical men of New Jersey by the Governor at a recent hearing at the State house, Trenton." The Governor had declared that Dr. Halsey told lies about him.

It was the first special meeting the society had held since its organization in 1816, and was attended by more medical men than in any meeting in the last quarter of a New Jersey, and expressing confidence in the profession. A resolution was passed praising the work of Dr. Halsey for his interest in the public health of dence in his integrity and reliability, then followed the attack on the Governor. A copy of the resolutions was ordered sent to the Governor.

Besides the regular members at the meeting there were present Dr. David C. English, of New Brunswick, one of the editors of the journal of the State Medical Society; Dr. William E. Ramsay, of Perth Amboy, introducer of Assembly bill 156, known as the osteopathy measure; Dr. Robert H. Hammill, Dr. W. H. Lawrence, Jr., and Dr. W. G. Lamson, of Summit.

Dr. Ramsay reviewed the history of the bill from the time of its introduction to its veto by Governor Fort. He declared the Governor was insincere and antagonistic to the bill from the start." He spoke of the attorney-general's reason, "which the Governor offered as a cause for veto," and said they were "flimsy and more like the productions of a king's jester than the opinion of an attorney-general." The physician further stated that the Governor had "acted in a cowardly manner and endeavored to hide behind the attorney-general."

Dr. English said the Governor had not known the physicians fairly, and Dr. Lawrence, who was present at the hearing before the Governor, declared he could verify everything Dr. Ramsay had said. Dr. Halsey's conduct, he added, was dignified. It was during this that the Governor had given the osteopaths more than an hour and a half hearing, and when it came time for the physicians to present the notice of their side of the case he broke the hearing up abruptly, using undignified language. He rushed from the room in which the hearing was given into the Executive chamber as if he feared a reply much in the order of his explosive outburst."

Regrets were expressed by some members that the Governor had used the language he did, and they insisted that if the Executive had any personal grievance against Dr. Halsey he should not have aired it at a public hearing. Reference was made to the Governor's son acting as counsel for the osteopaths.

VIOLATED ORDINANCE; GLAZIER FINED $40

The case of John Mair against Theodore Glazer, both of Alton, which has been postponed several times, was tried in Justice Clark's court Friday afternoon. The usual array of witnesses were on hand with the old familiar story regading the unbearable stench which they claim arises from Glaser's works, making life miserable for the residents. Glazer had about the same array of witnesses as has appeared in court for the last eight years, all declaring that there was no stench arising from the works and that the place was not a menace to the public health.

The stories told were as familiar to the court and spectators as Dr. Cook's trip to the North Pole. Both sides were represented by counsel, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., appearing for Mair, while Glazer was looked after by Judge William Newcorn. After the mass of testimony was all in and counsel on both sides had summed up, the court decided that Glazer had broken the health ordinance and imposed a fine of $40 and cost of court.

BENEFIT ASSOCIATION HONORS PLAINFIELDER

District Court Clerk Horace G. Adams was honored at the annual convention of the Essex Funeral Benefit Association in Newark Friday by being re-elected to membership in the board of directors for a term of five years. Other Plainfielders in attendance at the convention were Harry C. Runyon and Arthur G. Adams, representing Benevolent Council, Junior O. U. A. M. The session was held in the rooms of Loughlin Council, on West Park street, that city.

A Plan and Scope Committee was appointed in view of increasing the membership of the association. Reports showed that the membership of the association is 8,101, representing a net gain of 127. During 1909, it was reported that $15,170 was paid out in benefits.

Following the business session a banquet was held at Achelsetters. H. G. Runyon was one of the speakers. He lauded the objects of the association and predicted continued growth.

P. J. Rudersill, the delegate from Washington, D. C., extended an invitation to the local delegates to be his guests at the National Capitol at a near future date.

BIG "PAWS" ESSENTIAL FOR STAR PLAYERS.

Volumes have been written about "baseball brains," while "baseball hands" have been neglected. Fair pairs of hands are common, but the real perfect type is scarce. It is generally admitted that Lee Tannehill, of the White Sox, has the ideal hands for a player. He is the only big leaguer grade as a top-liner these days, but in his prime he could pick up a grounder better than any of his rivals in the infield.

A close study of Tannehill's hands show them large, strong and sinewy. When he places the tips of his fingers together, and also the base of his palm, a baseball fits there as snugly as a glove on the hand. On scooping up a grounder around third base the ball appears to be almost crushed before he lets it go on first base. It is this that started the expressing of "devouring the ball" or "eating it up." A man who has delicate hands can never play an infield position as easily as one of Tannehill's kind.

Another infielder who "eats up" the ball is Hans Wagner. Without stretching the point any his hands look tremendous when he swoops up a grounder. They are almost the biggest hands a man ever looked on. It takes a fearful drive to get away from his clutches. Once he gets his hands on a grounder it means certain death for the batter. His hands are more necessary to the infielder, for it is much harder to scoop up a ball when it is coming flat than to catch a fly. Many a fielder who is sure death on a fly ball or a line drive will let a grounder out in his territory get away from him.

IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION GAVE A BANQUET.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk and County Registrar F. H. Smith were among the guests at a banquet given at Union, Friday, by the Connecticut Farms' Improvement Association, the membership of which is composed chiefly of well-to-do residents of that place. There were many outside guests from all parts of Union county.

Among the speakers were John R. Dengler, John F. English, Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Frank H. Smith, Edward Nugent, Hamilton Kean and George T. Parrot. There were about one hundred guests.

Y.W.C.A. MEMBERS IN MOTHER GOOSE PARTY

One of the most successful social occasions ever held by the Young Women's Christian Association was the Mother Goose Party given last Thursday. About eighty young ladies were present and fully one-half of this number were dressed to represent the characters we loved in childhood when we were our Mother Goose books ragged poring over them.

Jack and Jill seemed very popular and were represented admirably by three pairs. In falling down hill one Jack really broke his crown and a bandage was seen here and there with his head bandaged with paper. This couple received the most votes for best representing the characters from old Mother Goose's family. Simple Simon was there, too, and every one was surprised at the simplicity of this very bright young woman. There were the three men in a tub, the butcher, the banker and the candlestick maker, all wearing big aprons and stove-pipe hats.

The witch with her broomstick and high pointed hat was one of the most representative characters and she looked as if she had just arrived from Mother Goose land. Little Jack Horner had a fine big pie and pulled out many a plum with that famous story-telling thumb. The most dignified personages present were the King and Queen of Hearts, who filled their parts admirably. Among the other characters represented were Mistress Mary, Little Tommy Tucker, Old Mother Hubbard, Little Bo Peep, Little Red Riding Hood and the ghost of Mother Goose.

Those who were not in costume had good fun guessing who the others were and all joined in the children's games and singing which followed. There were young women of many nationalities and varied occupations present, but all entered into the spirit of the evening and made it one of the jolliest occasions of the year.

Late in the evening, the eighty girls participated in a grand march and passed through the dining-room where was a most wonderful Jack Horner pie made with grass, in which sat a great white goose with a little o'd woman, broom-stick and all, on its back. Each one drew a ribbon which led to the inside of the pie and was attached to a dainty little favor. Refreshments were served and the children departed, declaring it to have been a most enjoyable evening.

The success of the affair is largely due to the untiring efforts of Mrs. E. T. Barrows and her faithful helpers—Mrs. F. G. Andrews, Miss Ray Hooley, Mrs. Williams and Miss Marion Brown. These women made the pie, and made the house look attractive with yellow jonquils, and they well deserved the "three cheers" given them at the close of the evening.

Y.M.C.A. ATHLETES ARE TENDERED A BANQUET

Y. M. C. A. athletes were tendered a banquet Thursday in honor of their many glorious performances on the gymnasium floor during the winter season. The affair was enjoyed by all present and was a fitting finale to the season.

An appetizing supper was prepared and served by the Ladies' Auxiliary which consisted of Mrs. H. C. Parker, Mrs. N. Y. Hull, Mrs. George Rittenhouse, Mrs. Steiner and Miss Swayne. Following the dinner the speechsmiths held the attention of the guests during the remainder of the evening.

G. C. Mc Smith acted as toastmaster and remarks were made by Walter Cahoone, C. Stryker Hoagland, F. O. Dunning, J. H. Doane, Charles H. Line and C. William Bingamen. The guests were:

Walter Cahoone, Arthur Ashoim, Vincent Miner, Paul Collier, Theodore Gavett, Paul Whitford, George Linke, Francis Foster, C. S. Hoagland, Alfred Manley, Edward M. Templin, Bergen Naylor and John Fritts, of the two basketball teams; Clifford B. Vail, Russell Miller, Chauncey Murphy and Franklin B. Newell, of the athletic team; G. L. Listman, Charles H. Line, F. The Cat Went Back.

Mr. Penn—They say the streets in Boston are frightfully crooked?

Mr. Van Dusen—Why, do you know, when I first went there I could hardly find my way around.

"That must be embarrassing."

"It is. The first week I was there I had to get rid of an old cat we had, and my wife asked me to take it to the river a mile away."

"And you lost the cat, all right?"

"Lost nothing! I never would have found my way home if I hadn't followed the cat!"—Exchange.

DR. W. J. CALLAN'S LECTURE

"Silas Marner" Subject of Address at Mount St. Mary's Thursday.

"SCIENCE IS TOO NARROW."

Lecturer Deplored Over-Emphasis of the Purely Physical in Literature—Psychological Exposition.

Dr. W. J. Callan gave the fourth lecture in his series of lectures at Mt. St. Mary's College, Thursday afternoon. A large and appreciative audience was present. The subject was George Eliot's "Silas Marner." The previous lectures were "The Merchant of Venice," "Educational Psychology," and "Hamlet."

The lecturer began by defining the word "novel" as a prose narrative of a more or less fictitious nature, aiming to picture human life and human character. He called it "a drama in detail." All classic literature deals with the human, especially the emotional side of the human. It mirrors humanity in all its infinite variety of thinking, of willing, of feeling. It "the prose analysis of mankind in man" in order that one may attain to self-knowledge, the most important of all knowledge, then the study of classic literature is the most important of all studies.

Dr. Callan regretted that today in many of the colleges, science, which should include every department of knowledge is narrowed down to the world of matter, which is supposed to furnish the only substantial basis of truth.

Literature itself is marked by an over-emphasis of the importance of physical science. Even Owen Elliot, the author of "Silas Marner," fails to rise into the empyrean where the pure imagination should find itself most at home, among the ideal conceptions best fitted to meet its infinite longings. If this tendency to materialism is allowed to go on without recognizing the light which comes to ones higher facilities from the higher facts of the universe, it can end only in atheism and spiritual death. The youth of our land should be imbued with the fact that all causes are not physical, that there are laws higher than those of matter and objects of more transcendent interest and of infinitely greater worth than can be dealt with from a purely materialistic view-point.

Then followed the story of "Silas Marner." The time, early nineteenth century; the place, an unknown village; hero, "Silas Marner;" heroine, "Eppie;" villian, "Godfrey Cass; the minor characters, William Daw Larele, Squire Cass, Robert Dunstan, Dolly Winthrop, Aaron Nancy Lammeter, Molly Cass, et. al. were brought in right relationship to the principal characters.

A psychological exposition was given of "Silas," "Godfrey," "Eppie" and the others. The climax of the play is reached when Nancy Lammeter asks Godfrey Cass, as she points to Eppie in the arms of Silas standing on the threshold of the ballroom, "Whose child is that?" The catastrophe is reached when Dunstan's body is found, and Eppie refuses to recognize Godfrey Cass as her father-remaining loyal to her foster-father, Silas. The story shows the great influence of child love on the human heart—"A little child shall lead them."

PLAINFIELD BABY IN DUNELLEN WILL CASE

Willie, a baby born six months ago to Mrs. Margaret Hurley, of this city, was made ward in a case before Judge Lyons at New Brunswick Friday over the will of his grandfather, Martin Brennan, of Dunellen. The will is dated May 9, 1909, and has in it a bequest for Willie of $25.

It was declared that this was the only case on record where a testator had shown in his will that he knew he was to be a grandfather, that his prospective heir was to be a boy and that he would be named Willie. Undue influence was charged by the contestants and that the will could not have been made on the day it was dated. The court thought an error had been made as to the date. Decision was reserved as to the other charge. Mrs. Brennan is making the contest.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 1, 1910.

Topic—Christ our King.—John xviii. 33-40. (Consecration meeting.) Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The kingship of Christ is here suggested in connection with the examination of Jesus by the Roman governor, Pilate, before whom the Jews had brought Him. The night before Jesus had been arrested. He had been several times before the high priests and the sanhedrin. But, while they found him guilty of blasphemy upon false testimony and therefore worthy of death by the Jewish law, they could not execute Him, because the Roman conquerors of the Jews had deprived them of the right to take human life. Only the Romans could condemn to death; therefore it was necessary to take Christ before Pilate and get his consent to put Him to death. They had probably charged Him before Pilate with claiming to be the king of the Jews in order to arouse Pilate's jealousy and fear of losing his high position; hence Pilate questioned Him upon this point. But the answers of Jesus were incomprehensible to Pilate, though He did not deny His kingship. Yet Pilate found no fault in Him and so announced to the Jews. Finally he released Barabbas unto them and delivered Jesus to be crucified, the Roman method of execution, and this was done. King? Yes, Christ was a King—yea, King of kings—yet He died for those who belonged to His kingdom.

Christ was and is today a King. His kingdom was prophesied in the Old Testament and declared in the New. On one occasion the people wanted to take Him by force and make Him their temporal king, but He left them and went out to be alone with God. On another occasion, as the shadow of the cross was falling upon Him, He did for once, at His triumphal entry into Jerusalem, allow Himself to receive the homage paid to kings alone. But this was for a short time only and was soon overshadowed by His death upon the cross. Christ's kingdom was not of this world, else His friends would have supported His claims to it. To Pilate's question He answered, "My kingdom is not of this world; if My kingdom were of this world then would My servants (officers) fight that I should not be delivered to the Jews, but now is My kingdom not from hence." Christ meant that His kingdom was a spiritual one; that He was to rule over the souls and hearts of His subjects. Neither the Jews nor the Roman governor could comprehend such a kingship or kingdom. The day had not yet dawned when the world would understand it. But it does understand it today, and in millions of hearts Christ reigns as a King, directs and defends the spiritual interests of His subjects, ruling in their hearts by love and not simply to a limited extent over their outward lives by force. So king in all the world today has so many loving and obedient subjects as King Jesus, and they will continue to increase in numbers until "Jesus shall reign where'er the sun doth his successive journeys run."

As our King, Christ is ideal in His Kingship. The true king seeks only the best interests of his subjects. He is indeed no king who seeks only his own interests in ruling the lives and destinies of his subjects. But Christ is no such King. He even died for us, and what better proof can we demand to show that He reigns for our best interests alone? As His subjects we should strive to be as ideal in our relation to Him as He is to us; therefore on this consecration evening let us dedicate our lives to a more loving and devoted service to our King.

Twenty-nine years ago, on Feb. 2, 1881, Dr. Francis E. Clark organized the first Christian Endeavor society in the Williston church of Portland, Me.

Since then, under the favoring providence of God, the society has reached a worldwide usefulness.

SAVING MONEY

"No, I don't save money because I like to," protested the girl with the soft hair, tearfully. "It's horrid of you to say so. But I should think it very wrong not to save money."

"What is your idea?" stormed the mutinous girl, brandishing her celery heart threateningly. "Here you are, with just about enough to live on happily if you spend every cent you get, and yet you sit there and tell me you are saving money!"

"Why—why, if I save something every week in time I shall have enough to—to invest. Capital, you know, they call it. Why, Connie Barton, everybody knows it's the thing to do," she finished, breathlessly.

The girl with the stormy eyes looked at her unflinchingly. "Everybody's other name is Goose," she remarked, dryly. She bit into an olive savagely. "Save your allowance by all means if your bourgeois ancestry compels you to," she began afresh, "but don't preach that doctrine to me. I know what I'm about. I'm not taking everybody's word. I'm using my eyes. And I can assure you that it is no part of my plan to acquire a competency. If there is one calamity I pray may never befall me it is to become comfortably well off."

"Gracious! Isn't that being an anarchist?" whispered the girl with the soft hair, timidly.

The mutinous girl gulped her chocolate and went on talking without a break.

"This thing of having just enough money so that you never feel free to indulge yourself in a real extravagance could never appeal to me," she continued. "I have seen far too much of it. There were the Badgers, for instance. Betty Badger was the most hopelessly limited person as to means I ever encountered. This was solely because her father had an ample income. In the winter the whole family pinched conscientiously and methodically to support the big town house and servants and to meet the harrowing expenditures for dressing Betty's mother and Betty to appear at enough functions they couldn't afford to miss. Their automobile ate up so much that they couldn't afford an electric. The opera drained Betty's allowance for the theater, so that mother had to think twice about vaudeville."

"Just like our cousins on the North shore," sighed the girl with the soft hair.

"In summer it was even worse," continued the mutinous girl, warming to her subject. "The necessity of appearing as a couple at fashionable watering places forbade the idea of an occasional jaunt across the lake or up into the pine woods with the rest of us. Lingerie dresses are so expensive that Betty never had a decent romp for an instant. Positively half the time that poor girl hadn't a gingham dress to her name. And the pity of it is that Betty was no snob; just a nice, lively girl with all the normal girlish desires for longings for fun. Poverty had done it, my dear; the grinding poverty of the economical rich!"

The girl with the soft hair was impressed, but not altogether convinced. "But, Connie," she protested, "surely you don't mean that it wouldn't be nice to have plenty of money?"

"Certainly not," agreed her friend. "But that is precisely what money that has been saved up penny by penny never gets to be. If you were saving to go to Europe next summer and spend every cent you have in the world, I shouldn't say a word. That's not saving; that's just postponed extravagance—the worst kind. For think of all the good times you might be having while you were screwing that hoard out of your poor little pittance."

The stormy girl looked triumphantly at the soft girl. She hadn't planned such a neat climax herself. "Pittance" was rather good, she believed. Reflecting upon it, she could almost shed tears over the soft girl's poverty-stricken state.

But the soft girl stiffened. "Oh, well, Connie," she murmured, "I don't think you would call it a pittance, you know. I can always afford hats." There was just the softest emphasis on the pronoun.

The stormy girl flushed and began to gather up her belongings. Her own hat, as it happened, was the visible result of subtracting a bargain in stitchings from the unlaiking fraction of her allowance. But she was not silenced.

"I'm sure you see what I mean," she maintained as she took virtuous possession of the check. "If I can be wildly, wonderfully wealthy, so that I need never count the cost, all right. But if you ask me to be comfortably well-to-do at the expense of endless thought about the matter and incessant prudent economies, I shall flatly refuse. Let us be poor, but free!"

How Could He?

"I never do anything behind a person's back that I would not do to their face."

So Different.

THE UNHAPPY MEDIUM.

There was once upon a time a man who undertook to interfere with the affairs of an erring husband who was beating his docile, but wailing, wife, and, if you remember the story, the expostulations of the medium were rewarded by a sudden cessation of the blows, followed by the combination of forces of husband and wife. His angelic and righteous indignation at the gush of art of using force was soon reduced to pulp. After he left the hospital he made a vow, which he has striven to keep to the letter.

Now, this is not an unusual occurrence. Indeed, it seems to be natural that an intruder, even if he be in the guise of a friend, is given a frosty greeting and is frequently sent on his way sorrowing at the ingratitude of humanity.

There is the medium who undertakes to inform the fond and adoring mother of her son's erring ways. "Mrs. Browning," this friend says, "I am grieved to say that as an outsider I have seen many things that you do not suspect." Whereupon a tale is unfolded that makes each particular hair of the listener stand on end, not in horror but in wrath: How dare she?

The medium through which a reform is to be instituted is shown the nearest way to the door, and it is closed upon her. The feeling that she has done her duty, and has pointed out the wrong, does not alter the fact that there is one friend less, and an irate enemy added to her list.

If you have ever played the role of a calm but determined medium through which the lines of an engagement were to be retracted, you will understand how unhappy the launching of truth can make one.

Did the young woman ever believe you? Try as hard as you might, the engaged John was lauded and petted in proportion to the evidence. If the medium was young and a woman, there were unpleasant accusations of jealousy, sour grapes and catty motives. In nine cases out of ten it did not pay.

The medium of talebearer between two women is wildly exciting, but dangerous. Backward and forward the unhappy carrier is sent, and the caustic remarks somehow gain in strength. Like a huge snowball, the great tale accumulates little white lies and altercations. Finally the recipient of the greatest accusation in fury turns upon the medium. Or there is a chance meeting of the two enemies and a "making-up." The talebearer is decried as a willful prevaricator and virtually is thrown away. Unhappy is no name for it.

Now the peculiar part of this is that most peace-making mediums mean well. Out of the kindness of their hearts they try to adjust the affairs of their little universe, but to no avail. People insist upon finding out little unpleasant facts themselves. It is hard enough to know a few thing that are true of our loved ones, but the additional knowledge that there is another wise one who secretly is cognizant of what fools we have been is too much for most human beings. The medium, therefore, comes in for his or her share, and generally exists a most unhappy person.

SONGS OF THE "ALLEY LEAGUE."

There's gloom over Hooligan's Alley today,
They're sorer than Hamid, the Turk;
There's a crimp in the Ragged Stars' rally today,
As they gather to warm up for work;
For Mickey O'Brien, the star of them all,
Who furnished the brains and intrigue,
From the line-up has passed, signed and drafted at last
By his Dad for the Grocery League.

In Hooligan's Alley they're weeping today,
For Mickey, the king of them all,
Is wielding a broom where he's sweeping today
And fanning the dust from the wall;
And the keen batting eye that was all to the Cobb,
With never a trace of fatigue,
Helps me and me to win since the draft has come in
From his Dad in the Grocery League.

Oh, Hooligan's Alley is howling today
And muttering curses galore,
For Mickey O'Brien, the "clean-'em-up Kid,"
Is cleaning 'em up in the store;
And the keen batting eye and the "salary whip,"
And the sidward
And the headwork and cunning intrigue
Are wasting away pushing barrels today
For his Dad in the Grocery League.

PRACTICAL BEADWORK.

By the intermingling of silver and gold thread embroidery in the delicate tracery of an allover design upon yoke and sleeves of finest net, the seed pearl, which is now so fashionable, may be appliqued to perfection.

By little new touches in the weaving of embroidery and bead—the thread is carried from bead to bead in ornamental designs which enriches while it fastens.

Tubular bead fringe, too, has been applied by a more sensible process—that of the fringe. In other words, after drawing needle and heavy silk through the edge of the *material, two, four, six or eight tubu*lar beads are threaded upon it, and the next stitch is taken right beside the last, which leaves a loop of fringe. The carrying on indefinitely will produce a row of uncut fringe of whatever depth you desire, but the beads should be strung in even numbers.

Blue jewelry is much in evidence, and the dog collar of sapphire-blue velvet and rich metal is being successfully made by the application of tubular beads of a gun-metal blue, with sapphire-like jewels introduced into the design.

AS TO FAMILY MANNERS.

It is only on the ground of their pure selfishness of view that any belief can be placed in those who deplore the disappearance of family manners, says the London Lady's Pictorial. By family manners is not imeaning the right thing at the right moment, but the observance of the rules of private functions and public conveyances, but, the disciplinary state of rule which was once supposed to exist in every family—if only for the sake of proving the lack of its evidence.

There can be no doubt, however, that at one time of domestic history family manners were a very real, stern, terrible and ridiculous factor in home life. The manners of a father parent embraced the manners of a despot, the manners of a mother parent those of an ambassadress, the manners of an elder sister those of administrators of the younger sister department of State, and the manners of elder sons those of lord high executioner of younger brothers.

But these only marked the more important offices, which are subdivided into subordinations with a degree of tyranny which was made endurable solely owing to the fact that those who suffered were able to retaliate upon members of the family one degree lower in rank. When the youngest child was reached, on whose head vengeance could be reeked, the domestic regions were harassed for such opportunities for inflicting suffering as they might offer.

People who belonged to the old school of family rule regarded this system of household discipline as an excellent training for sons and daughters. We know that they must have found an immense amount of personal satisfaction in occupying the posts of supreme command themselves. But the present generation has only a shadowy idea of what the true parental manners are like, and they have scarcely tasted the power which once went with the rank of elder son or daughter. Children, above all, took pride in such words as being to the fabulous past, like the story of Cinderella and the ugly sisters, which carries no moral with it today, when the ugly sister is always helped by a united family effort to marry the man with the comforting fortune.

It has taken us very many years to place every member of a family upon an equal footing and bring about a kind of republicanism of family manners. Yet it may be said at the present day that the father parent is not greater or more important than the mother parent, that both are not above accepting the wordly advice of elder sons and daughters, while younger brothers and sisters are responsible for the delightful freemasonary which goes to insure the real happy family of the twentieth century. PROFESSIONAL AND COLLEGE BASEBALL

Alan Storke, the Cincinnati player, who died recently, explained the difference between professional baseball and college ball from his own experiences.

"Should a fellow give up college baseball to enter the professional ranks?" Storke was asked.

"Well, that's a poser for me," he answered. "I didn't give up the college game for big league baseball. When I got through at Amherst, where I played short and third base, I was given a flattering offer by the Providence club. I had played my four years of college ball. I needed money to push my law studies, for I had a hankering to work through the Harvard law school then, and I signed. I played with Providence the first year and had the luck to do well enough to be drafted by Pittsburg.

"I don't think that a young fellow who has his heart set on a profession should quit college to play baseball for a living. In many instances this has been done.

"Somehow or other, no matter what thrilling games a fellow is in as a professional, he always looks back to his college games and remembers them the longer. When a fellow's playing a college game of ball he is usually playing the game as he wants to play it himself. There is hardly a college player that can be called a steady player. At that stage of the game the boys, many of them, are brilliant players, but they have their bad days.

"A college trainer or coach says: 'Come on, old man, get out there and win today. We want the game. Take a chance on everything. You're our one biggest bet, you know.'

"The professional manager says: 'Here, you cub, you're going out there to play ball today, d'you mind. It isn't going to be football. You are to get your hands on the ball and know what to do with it when you've got it. There's no "rah, rah fellows" in this game you are going to play. If you cannot get out there and show something we've got plenty who can.'

"Oh, there's a great difference between the college and the professional game, but the calm, practical way of doing things in the professional ranks makes a player calm and steady himself and makes him a far better player than he could ever be in college."

WOMEN NOT TO ENTER IN JERSEY AUTO RUN.

Entries of five well-known women motorists in the two-day reliability contest from New York to Atlantic City and return on May 10 and 11, have been rejected by the Motor Contest Association, 1777 Broadway, by whom the Around New Jersey Tour is being conducted. The rejection of the entries was made in accordance with the 1910 contest rules of the American Automobile Association and the five women were notified that men only would be permitted to compete in any kind of an automobile contest that is recognized and sanctioned by the national association.

The women who were anxious to enter the Jersey event were Mrs. J. N. Cuneo, Mrs. Evelyn B. Buckman, Miss Mildred H. Schwarbach, Mrs. Peter Back and Miss Alice Heyes, of Brielle, N. J., all being trophy winners in a touring contest last summer, in which only women competed.

The latest accepted entry is a Cole "30," which was nominated by the Colt-Stratton Company, of Broadway and Sixty-eighth street. The car will be driven by Harry Endicott, a brother of the young pilot, who has driven a Cole to numerous victories in the stock car races on the Los Angeles Motordrome during the present month, breaking two world's stock car records.

ARRANGING A SCARF.

A picturesque result is obtained on many gowns by a masterly arrangement of scarfs. These may be of crepe de chine bordered with a deep fringe, or they may vary from heavy silk to the lightest tulle or net.

But in the draping of the scarf lies the making of a gown, and the main point to be observed is the individual requirement of the wearer.

Experiment until every good point is accentuated and every defect is concealed. When it is intended to drape a slender figure a result can be arrived at by securing the scarf in a point at the back and passing it over each shoulder through jeweled clasps. The draperies can then be crossed in front and held by a buckle on each side. From the girdle the ends should fall in straight lines to the hem of the skirt.

Secure a comparatively plain frock and a long, well-arranged scarf, and the result is in your hands.

WILL HE ESCAPE CHAIR?

Prosecutor Says Sentiment is Changing in Murderer's Favor.

HE FINDS SOME FRIENDS.

Reported That Money Will Be Raised to Employ Able Counsel for the Defense of the Slayer.

Although a self-confessed murderer, John Buckley, alias John Grant, who shot to death Mrs. Frederick Covely on last Thursday morning, stands a chance of escaping the electric chair, it is believed. It became known yesterday that several prominent North Plainfield citizens have interested themselves in the youth and will unite in a fight to save him from being electrocuted. While at first sentiment was bitter against the prisoner the pendulum is now swinging in his direction.

It was reported yesterday that a well known lawyer of Somerset county will be engaged to defend the prisoner. Hon. Alvah A. Clark is prominently mentioned as the probable lawyer for the defense.

Prosecutor Frederick A. Pope did not hesitate to tell a Daily Press reporter yesterday at the Somerset county jail that sentiment is changing in favor of the murderer. Mr. Pope declared that he has received scores of letters and telephone messages protesting against sending Grant to the chair. Even the sympathetic expressions outnumber the requests that the prisoner be accorded a speedy trial, convicted, and made to suffer the death penalty at the earliest possible moment.

It was also stated by Prosecutor Pope that he has received information from a reliable source to the effect that prominent North Plainfield citizens will stand by the lad "and dig down in their pockets" for funds to secure able counsel to defend him.

Nothing, as yet, has been heard from the relatives of the murderer. In addition to having two brothers living it is believed that the lad's parents are still living in Charlestown, Mass. Information furnished the authorities by the murderer, since he confessed, shows that his relatives were living when he ran away from home when thirteen years of age because of parental restraint. His parents at that time were known as hardworking and honest people and among the respectable residents of the Boston suburb.

Whether Grant will be accorded a speedy trial, or whether the case will be put over until the September court, rests largely with Supreme Court Judge Parker. If his Over-land Perimeter calendar is well will not be tried until fall. Prosecutor Pope, however, is inclined to believe that Grant will be tried next month.

COLORED LAD CARVED BY FRISKY NEIGHBOR

If Frank Brown didn't stab Willis Turner intentionally on Saturday night Judge William N. Runyon would like to know just how Willis came by a severe gash in his right arm, which required several stitches to prevent his bleeding to death. According to testimony produced in the city court Monday Master Turner, who like Brown, is a colored boy, got a circular cut in his right arm which bled so profusely that the attending physician had to take several stitches in the bleeding member. Conflicting stories were told by the Brown boy to several of his friends and to Patrolman McCarthy who arrested Brown.

Young Turner told a simple story in court saying that when he was about to leave the premises after trying to sell some tickets for an entertainment the Brown boy caught him up in his arms and hugged him and at the same time he felt a stinging sensation in his arm immediately afterwards he saw blood falling from his finger ends and became badly frightened and ran to his home, where the "blood covered half the kitchen floor."

Brown denied stabbing Turner, but could not account for the knife which Patrolman McCarthy found after much persuasion with Brown. Judge Runyon believed the Turner boy had been stabbed and held Brown for appearance before the juvenile court on Saturday morning when Probation Office Hamilton will take the case up. During the hearing Monday the respective mothers of the two boys indulged in a wordy war each extolling the virtues of her son. Turner is a frail little body and his story impressed the court with its very simplicity. The absence of motive for the stabbing is its most peculiar feature.

TRACKWALKER KILLED ON JERSEY CENTRAL

A westbound train struck and instantly killed John Barone, a trackwalker, on the Jersey Central tracks about 100 feet east of the pumping station at Netherwood Sunday night, about 9 o'clock. The body of the victim was found by Engineer John Dineen about half an hour later. The latter stopped his train, took the body aboard, and notified the police. The remains were afterward taken to the undertaking establishment of George Cole.

Baron's body was buried a distance of fifty feet and was picked up on the eastbound tracks. The victim's head was completely disembowelled. His head was badly crushed, one leg was off and the other almost severed from the body. An arm was also broken.

Barone was twenty-six years old and resided at 220 Richmond street. He is survived by a wife and child. He had been in the employ of the Jersey Central about six years.

When Barone's body was put on the train his lantern dangled from his right arm. A revolver which he had in his possession was smashed in two pieces and the night club he carried was found about fifty yards from where the body had been found.

The section boss of the gang, in which Barone was employed, called at the morgue this morning and paid this tribute to the dead man:

"John was a steady workman and always attended strictly to his duties. He was known as one of the most reliable trackwalkers in the employ of the company." Barone was well known in local Italian circles.

VOTED WHERE MISSION MONEY SHOULD BE SENT.

The Sunday school of Hope chapel had a vote Sunday on the question of giving money for foreign missionary purposes. The teachers selected three schools which are in need of money for advancement in their work, the school at Peking, China, the school in India of which Gilbert Lovell, of this city is in charge and the third a school in India.

Twenty-seven classes voted. Twenty decided in favor of the Gilbert Lovell school, five for the school in India and two for the Peking object. Mr. Herbert Condict, who originated the plan, was highly pleased with the results obtained. He said a similar vote will be taken in disbursing money for home missions.

Here's a Fish Story.

Patrolman Thomas Flatley is a devotee of Izaak Walton and in pursuing his favorite pastime Saturday night it is reported that he made one of the greatest catches of the season. It was said this morning that the angler caught enough flat and cat fish to give the whole police department a good feed and have enough left to sun-dry and that later in the season he will endeavor to repeat his feat.

A May Reception.

Mrs. William Crowley Ashwell and her daughters, the Misses Ashwell, have sent out cards for a reception to be given on Saturday, May 7, from 4 until 7 o'clock at their home, 751 West Seventh street.

NEW JERSEY COLORED PYHSICIANS MEET HERE

Several addresses on "Preventitive Medicine," and subjects of hygiene were the features of the second educational meeting of the North Jersey Medical Association, colored, held at the Mt. Olive Baptist church Monday afternoon. A majority of the twenty-four members of the association were present and the edifice was filled to its capacity with interested spectators.

Dr. J. C. Anderson, of this city, opened the meeting, and introduced Dr. James F. Lawson, of this city, as chairman. These papers were presented: "Consumption, Its Prophylaxis," Dr. Peter F. Ghee, of Jersey City; "The Care of the Teeth," W. P. G. Curling, D. D. S., of Newark; "Infectious Diseases," Dr. W. A. Alexander, of Orange.

Following the papers, short addresses were made by Dr. William Burnett, of Montclair; Dr. W. H. Sutherland, of Orange, and Dr. W. H. Washington, of Newark. After this A. G. Lambert sang a solo, and the meeting closed with a prayer by Rev. Dr. Vaughn, pastor of the church.

CHURCH CHOIR HONORS THEIR RETIRING SOLOIST

Miss Louella C. Harris, of Elizabeth, who for fourteen years has been the soprano soloist at the First Baptist church, sang Sunday in that capacity for the last time. Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto, who entered upon her position at the church the same time Miss Harris did, but who resigned two years ago, returned Monday for the day to sing with the old quartet for the last time. She sang a solo at the morning service.

Saturday evening the regular rehearsal was held at the home of Charles W. McCutchen, upon his invitation, instead of at the church, and followed a repast. After the rehearsal Mrs. McCutchen presented Miss Harris, on behalf of the choir, with a beautiful pearl and diamond pin, in appreciation of her long and faithful services. The gift was highly appreciated.

Several members of the choir have notable records. William Holmes, the baritone soloist has completed seventeen years in that capacity, and George Smith, tenor soloist, has served sixteen years. Howard Case has been organist for fourteen years, while E. J. Fitzhugh, who has had *charge of the choir, coming here ex*actly Saturday night for the rehearsal, as on enviable record of twenty-two years. Owing to other duties announcement of his retirement was made Saturday night. In the presentation speech to Miss Harris Saturday evening Mr. McCutchen referred to the complete harmony that has always existed among the members of the choir, a fact that gave him unusual pleasure, and he spoke feelingly of the faithful service rendered by Miss Harris and how much she would be missed.

Commencing next Sunday, new soprano and contralto soloists will be heard, and a strange co-incident is that the new soprano bears the same name as the retiring one, although no relation. Her name is Miss Ruth Harris, and she will be assisted by Miss Hazel Hattfield, also of New York. They are both said to have voices of unusual sweetness and are sure to be worthy successors of those who retire. There will be no other changes in the choir.

In the course of his remarks, Mr. McCutchen said that he personally had had charge of the music at the church for forty-two years, adding humorously that he was a year and half old when he began. He also announced that Howard Case, organist would succeed Mr. Fitzhugh, and hereafter would be the choirmaster, in recognition of his faithful services.

BOROUGHITES SMOTHER THE NEW BRUNSWICKS

Pounding the ball hard and fielding in fast style the N. P. H. S. nine smothered New Brunswick High's aggregation on Saturday by the score of 25 to 2. New Brunswick was lamentably weak in the field, the Middlesex athletes piling up an even dozen glaring misplays. They were also unable to hit the horsehide to any extent, C. Smith and Townley holding them down to three bingles.

C. Smith furnished a lot of fireworks with his bat, the borough athlete registering three hits, one a circuit drive, one triple and a double. Taylor and Adams also slapped the pellet for three hits each. The score:

NORTH PLAINFIELD A.C. STARTS WITH VICTORY

Fredericksen was in fine condition, securing fifteen strike outs and allowing five hits. Eddie Conshee twirled five innings and struck out nine batters in all. Perry finished the game and also secured five strike outs and was touched up for three hits.

The features of the game was the classy catching of Mullen, the star playing of Largehi, Driver and Feiring of the North Plainfields. The playing at third base of Lambertson was especially good. The Netherwoods appeared in their new uniforms and presented a fine appearance. The score:

YOUNG WOMEN LUNCH AT WASHINGTON ROCK.

Twenty-seven members of the Young Women's Christian Association participated in a walk to Washington Rock on Saturday afternoon. The young women journeyed to Dunellen on a trolley car and returned on foot via the Grant avenue road.

When the Rock was reached a campfire was built, coffee made and a lunch provided. While the eatables were being prepared many of the young women walked across the mountain side and gathered dogwood and violets which they found in plentiful quantities.

In Honor of Bride.

Invitations have been sent out by Mrs. Martin L. Cooley, Mrs. Gilford Webster Cooley and Mrs. Lemon Matthews Pattrick for a reception to be given Wednesday, May 4, from 4 to 7 o'clock at their home, "Glenoran."

Mrs. Gilford Webster Cooley was Miss Mary Mauldin Chambliss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Chambliss, of Brownsville, Texas, whose marriage took place at the home of her parents, April 6. She is also a grand daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Chambliss, of Central avenue.

For a Black Hat.

When deciding on the trimming for that little black velvet hat hearken to that little voice from Paris. The very latest idea is to trim the shape, which, by the way, is turned up at the back, with a huge bow of cream-colored silk. This bow silk is brocaded or embroidered with old gold and rose silk, and as a last touch a narrow band of fur is placed on each edge.

SOME PASTORS PREACH ON GREAT WHITE PLAGUE

"The Gospel of Health," was the subject of a discourse by Rev. J. W. Musson at the Temple Baptist church Sunday morning, being appropriate to the general topic of tuberculosis which was world-wide in all churches. Mr. Musson took his text from the second verse of the third Epistle of John: "Beloved I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth."

Mr. Musson said that Christianity is a universal religion, it meets the needs of all men everywhere and it meets all the needs of man, it provides for the soul, mind and body. While the soul is paramount, the body must be nourished and cared for, at all times.

Mr. Musson then spoke on three sub-topics of the disease—its extent, nature and prevention. Under the first topic he said that there were more deaths from tuberculosis than all other diseases combined, 600,000 annually. By way of comparison he said that during the four years of the Civil War there were killed and wounded on both the Union and Confederate sides 205,070, while in the same period there were nearly 700,000 deaths from this disease.

The preacher then spoke of the nature of the disease, explaining that it is a germ disease, contagious, and great care must be exercised not to throw out these germs carelessly In speaking of the prevention, Mr. Musson said it was necessary to make a thorough study of the disease to find a prevention. He referred to environment and conditions under which the disease thrives and urged all to exercise the greatest care of the body and thus make it possible to serve God better.

In conclusion Mr. Musson told what *is being done here by the Anti-Tuber*culosis Society and urged everyone to lend their help in the work of preventing the spread of the disease.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, did not preach a sermon on tuberculosis Sunday morning, but incidentally made reference to the subject prior to his sermon. He said that he was not competent to deliver a discourse on the topic, but he felt sure his people were acquainted with the nature of the disease and means of prevention and doubtless would do all that is possible to spread the plan of edu-

Rev. Mr. Bailey, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, spoke on the subject of tuberculosis at his church, last Sunday. His subject was "David's Pet tion to Stay the Plague."

Something which was mentioned once before but which has evidently been forgotten is that the children who are being treated at the local pavilion are intensely interested in a flower garden and they would like it if they had more plants to care for. To be sure they have planted seeds and are cultivating what they have, but a few more potted plants are needed by them and anyone who feels interested enough would gain a whole lot of appreciation if they would send some flowers to the children to care for.

GOLF IS INTERRUPTED BY CADDIES' STRIKE.

That the strike fever is contagious was evidenced on the links of the Cranford Golf Club yesterday when the caddies of that institution went out on strike. New caddies were secured but the pickets of the strikers were active and after work awhile they decided to quit. The matter is expected to be settled today when a board of "arbitration committee" to consist of striking caddies and members of the club will hold a conference.

The cause of the strike was due to the introduction of a new time card system which permits the caddies to earn an average of 20 cents per hour and tips. Under the old scale the caddies were paid by the round system.

LOCAL GUNNERS SHINE AT CRANFORD TRAPS.

A delegation of trapshooting experts of the Log Cabin Gun Club, of this city, were guests at the opening of the Cranford Gun Club on Saturday afternoon. All of the local marksmen participated in the different events at the traps.

George Schoonmaker was the winner of the first prize, a cut glass and silver mounted decanter, and Harvey Fisk, president of the Cranford Club, was the winner of the second guerdon, a cut glass silver mounted ash tray.

The Plainfielders who were present were George Schoonmaker, Thomas Van Boskirk, J. H. Green, Jr., Percy B. Stewart, Samuel Huntington, George S. Ring and Howard Hunting.

Twenty-eight Years Organist.

Arthur L. Titsworth, the efficient organist of Trinity Reformed church, completed the twenty-eighth year of active service in that capacity Sunday. This is a remarkable record for faithfulness and efficiency. The current church calendar says: "We consider him a part of our church and we cannot get along without him. When the new organ arrives we hope he will stay with us for another twenty-eight years at least. Congratulations and many thanks for your faithful and untiring services."

VICTORY IN FIRST GAME

Plainfield Opens Season by Defeating Crack O.N.T.'s in 10 Inning Struggle.

THE SCORE WAS TEN TO NINE.

Barnes' Timely Wallop Brings Boyd Home With Winning Tally—McLaughlin Pitches Fine Article of Ball.

A ten spasm thriller, topped off with a Plainfield victory, marked the opening of the home baseball season on Crescent Oval on Saturday afternoon. Score—Plainfield, 10; O. N. T., 9. The 9,999 fans who stayed at home missed a splendid contest and the 299 odd fans who braved the iceberg germs witnessed the local warriors win a grand uphill battle. More power to the Dorflingerites.

When the Newark aggregation completed its tenth portion the score was 9 to 9. Charley Boyd opened Plainfield's tenth by journeying to the first corner on a free pass. That paved the way for a victorious finish and the "faithful" murmured "Amen."

Our Norman Barnes, of giraffe reaching fame on first sack, followed by pasting the ball square on the nose, lifting the same Fitzpatrick's noodle in center field, and Boyd scampered home with the winning tally. It was a pretty and timely welt and a volley of hurrahs shot out from the regiment of bleacherites when Barnes' club negotiated the wallop which terminated the contest.

The visitors started off like young cyclones in the opening rounds and at the end of the third they had a total of eight runs to their credit, while there were only three on the Plainfield side of the ledger, but it all goes to show that the old saying, "The game isn't over until the last man is out," will apply to diamond battles in the 1910 season.

Warry McLaughlin was on the slab for the locals and although his delivery was rifled for ten swats, the southpaw veteran twirled a fine game. After the third round he was particularly effective. In the remaining seven innnings he fanned four Newarkers and held them to two hits.

O. N. T. marked up a pair of runs in the opener. Sasserman got to first base on Benbrown's error and scooted home a few minutes later on Miller's double to left. Miller was dispatched across the plate on Jameson's single to right field.

Noble Brit Martin inaugurated Plainfield's initial inning by banging out a double to left and Boyd immediately followed suit, sending the two-sacker, to left scoring Brit. Clarke punctured Barnes' ribs with a flighty inshoot. Clarke fanned Nelson, but he insisted on filling the bases by passing Benbrown; then Warry McLaughlin toed the scratch, banging a center field scoring Boyd and Barnes. Warry purloined second, but Schott and O'Loughlin were extinguished on weak infield pops.

The visitors added another pair to their total in the second. Dodge placed a neat Texas Leaguer over Benbrown and Tighe walked for a starter. Clarke succumbed to McLaughlin's curve and Gunderman was chased to the bench after his foul fly was safely squeezed by Nelson. Then came two singles in a row that made trouble, Sasserman's swat to center scoring Dodge and Fitzpatrick's wallop to right sending Tighe home.

"Old Ned" was raised by the thread makers in the third when they fattened their tally by adding four more runs. Matters looked dark for the locals after the completion of the third-fest. Miller opened the inning by singling to left and Jameson walked to first. When Swiss flied out to Barnes, Dodge grounded to Benbrown. The latter was slow in handling the ball and the sacks were filled. Tighe hammered the ball to center scoring Miller and Jameson and Clarke's bang to the same territory, scored Dodge and Tighe.

There was an awakening for Plainfield in the fourth when McLaughlin doubled to center. Boyd who was put in to run for Warry advanced to third on Schott's strikeout and scored on O'Loughlin's infield out.

In the seventh both teams scored but Plainfield gained some loss ground by tallying three to the Newarker's one. With only down Brit made himself a hero by batting the globule to left for a triple. Boyd was retired on an infield tap. At this point Clarke began to weaken. He pased Barnes who later stole second and Nelson banged a hot ground-er which was too hot for Swiss to handle and Martin scored. Benbrown's crack to center bore the fancy label for it brought Barnes and Nelson home.

For the visitors Miller was passed but he was forced out at second by Jameson. Swiss advanced the latter along to third on a nifty tap to right and "Jamey" romped home on Dodge's infield out. That ended the scoring for the visitors.

The locals corralled three more tallies one each in the eighth, ninth and tenth. Plainfield had the sacks all occupied in the ninth but the locals were only able to negotiate a single tally. This was due to over-anxiety on the part of the our hitsmiths to annihilate the leatherette.

Finale—Barnes pushed Boyd home with the bacon in the tenth on his two-base bilt to center. The score:

Stolen bases—Martin, Boyd, Barnes, McLaughlin, Nelson, Barnes. Left on bases—Plainfield, 8; O. N. T., 5. Time of game 2 hours. Umpire—Richard Scott.

Brit Martin with his trio of bingles, a triple, double and a single, stamped himself OK K. With his *trusty club he is still the idol of lo*cal fans.

Billy O'Loughlin covered himself with glory in center field. Billy made a quartet of classy nabs in the struggle. If he continues this fancy work he will be a fixture in the central garden.

Benbrown, although he had two errors, handles himself well and looks good. The former New England leaguer's timely smash to center in the seventh brought home two tallies.

The O. N. T.'s arrived here minus one player and Dodge, a local boy, filled in with credit at right field station for the visitors.

There are no flies on Warry McLaughlin. Manager Dorflinger displayed good judgment in placing him in sixth position in the batting order, as Warry was always strong with the stick. On Saturday Warry's record showed a double and a single.

Lew Miller, who covered second base for the Newarkers, is a brother of the famous "Dots" Miller, Pittsburg's star player. He performed in classy style and appears to be a comer.

Fans bear in mind that Brit Martin made the first hit and scored the first run of the season for Plainfield.

Three members of the "Old Brigade" were in the bleachers—Former Councilmen L. B. Woolston, George Hallock and A. J. Leader.

The locals extended splendid support to McLaughlin in the last three innings when the visitors were frose out in one-two-three order.

Walter Nelson, the New Market boy, made a good impression behind the bat, although he fanned the first three times he came to the bat.

George Seery, last season's backstop, viewed the game from the player's bench.

Some class to Johnny Madden, the ex-St. Mary's second baseman. He journeyed to and from the game in an automobile.

Dunellen will be the destination of the Plainfields next Saturday.

Richard Scott blossomed out as an umpire and he made good. All of his decisions were fair and impartial and gave satisfaction to the fans.

Manager Sam Lunn was unable to accompany his aggregation here owing to the serious illness of a young son.

"Pitching is an art only perfected by constant practice. There must be absolute harmony between the pitcher and his catcher. I use about ten different forms of the curve ball, and when speed is a factor it gives me a wide scope in putting in a mixture of balls that only the best have a right to negotiate."

College Club to Entertain.

The College Club of Plainfield has invited the senior class girls of the North Plainfield High School to a reception and entertainment to be held at the Hartridge School auditorium, Saturday afternoon, April 30.

SCOTLAND SHOWS THE WAY

How the "Housing Problem" is Solved in Great Britain,

PORT SUNLIGHT A MODEL.

Congestion of People in Cities Under Investigation Throughout the World May Lead to Improvement Here.'

The Housing Problem was the subject of an address by Rev. Bernard J. Newman, of Willow Place chapel, Brooklyn, in All Souls' church Sunday night, which was illustrated with some splendid stereopticon views taken from past and present conditions among the working classes in Scotland and England. Threatening weather kept many away, but as it was a fairly good audience enjoyed the lecture.

Home environment was given as the great moulder of character among the working classes and the movement which was started in 1842 has in view the bettering of the surroundings of the people who must perforce live cheaply. This movement is being taken up in the United States and bids fair to remove the congestion which now obtains among the population of Greater New York. The speaker declared that if crowding into quarters as thickly as in some parts of the city were to be practiced everywhere there the population of the entire country, the Philippine Islands, Hawaii, Mexico and Central America could all be housed and have some room left over.

Mr. Newman pointed out the dangers of this overcrowding showing how disease is propagated by the huddling together of twelve and thirteen people in a single room ten by twelve feet and even worse conditions than this are known to exist in New York. Many places in Great Britain were in a considerable worse condition than New York is in today, but the reform movement is gradually taking hold and some day we will see ideal conditions through the occupancy of the suburban towns with houses properly built to admit of plenty of fresh air and sunlight and reasonable enough in price to suit the pocketbooks of the poor.

The speaker called attention to a statement by Governor Charles E. Hughes, of New York, in which he is quoted as saying that it is useless to appropriate money for hospitals and other institutions when the homes are producing more cases than the money thus appropriated can care for. In New York alone there are 100,000 dark interior rooms and the tenement house law of 1901 does not meet the situation. The death rate is as high as 48 while in the model built by Lever of Port Sunlight in England has a rate of slightly over 3 in 1,000.

Laws have been passed in Great Britain which allows a municipality to condemn huddled quarters and build other houses in their places. Such a system in this country would change the working man's condition so much that a veritable heaven on earth could be established.

Some of the maps and pictures showed the designs of the new style of houses which are building in various parts of the empire and the inside rooms thoroughly well lighted and ventilated show a pleasant contrast from the previous crowded conditions. Manchester and other large cities are taking advantage of the new system and are building up garden cities for the poor who may rent houses and apartments all the way from $2 a week up.

The objects which the investigators of the situation in this country hope to attain will be similar in scope to those accomplished in England and Scotland, and Mr. Newman prayed that the people of the United States would do their share toward helping to better the conditions here.

Dr. Grace R. Powell Returns.

After an absence of several months from 141 Grace street, Dr. Powell, of Duer street, has returned home and resumed practice. Shortly after the death of her father, T. Wilfred Powell, she was called from the city in consultation on the illness of a life-long friend. The case was of a serious nature and Mr. Powell remained constantly with the patient until Monday of last week, when she was able to return home and bring her patient here for treatment.

Raised $410 for St. Stephen's.

At the concert given at Hartridge auditorium on April 7 for the benefit of St. Stephen's church, $410 net was realized. At the last meeting of the vestry a vote of thanks was extended to the following artists who contributed their services on this occasion: Edith Chapman Goold, soprano; Sarah More, soprano; Mildred Potter, contralto; John Young, tenor; Raymond Loder, baritone; Frederick Wheeler, basso; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McIntyre, pianos. The concert and programe were under the direction of Lewis J. Geary.

Y. M. C. A. LOSES FIRST GAME OF THE SEASON

Montclair A. C.'s crack collegiate aggregation proved too strong for the Y. M. C. A.s on Saturday at the former place, the Essex county aggregation winning by a score of 9 to 4. The locals, however, made a splendid showing and looked like a speedy combination.

Montclair secured a commanding lead which the locals were unable to overcome by scoring four runs in each the first and third innings. After this setback the locals improved in their work and held their opponents down.

Y. M. C. A. rallied in the fourth and fifth innings by totaling four runs, but after that it was all Montclair's way. Captain John Fritts led the locals in stickwork with three bingles. Evans, Hand and Stover were also three with a pair of wallops each. The score:

OCEAN GROVE PROGRAM FOR THE COMING SEASON

Dr. Aaron E. Ballard, president of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association of the Methodist Episcopal church, has made public the summer program of religious and musical events. As in former years, Tali Esen Morgan, of New York city, will have charge of the music. He has arranged for the appearance of Mme. Schumann-Heink for a concert for August 2, and other well known grand opera stars will be engaged.

There will be two children's festivals, with a chorus of one thousand voices, and the fairyland entertainment given in connection with the Asbury Park baby parade. The usual oratorios are to be dispensed with because of the heavy expense involved in their presentation.

The religious program, arranged by the devotional committee, of which Dr. Ballard is the chairman, will begin Sunday, June 19, when the opening sermon of the summer will be preached by Bishop Rudolph Dubbs, of the Evangelical Society. Other well known ministers engaged include the Rev. Dr. John Wesley Hill, the Rev. Dr. William Eekman, the Rev. Dr. McMullen and the Rev. Dr. John Kranz, of New York city; the Rev. Dr. J. R. Shannon, of Washington; Bishop Candler, of the Methodist Church South, and Bishop Quail, of the Methodist Episcopal Church North.

The annual camp meeting will extend over two Sabbaths, beginning Friday, August 19, and continuing for ten days. Bishop Luther B. Wilson, of Philadelphia, vice-president of the Camp-Meeting Association, will preach Sunday morning, August 21, the first Sabbath of the "camp." Well known evangelists will assist the devotional committee in conducting the twelve daily services of the camp meeting.

The young people's meetings, held daily during the summer at 9 a. m., will be in charge of the Rev. Dr. Charles L. Mead and the Rev. Dr. William H. Morgan, both of Newark, and both members of the Camp Meeting Association. The holiness meetings, held at the seven hour, will be led by the Rev. Dr. John F. Alday, of Ocean Grove. The Sunday afternoon Bible class, said to be the largest in the world, will be in charge of the Rev. Dr. Leander W. Munhall, of Philadelphia, the Bible reader and evangelist.

The National Association of Friendly Inns will hold its annual conference on the camp ground in July, beginning the week of the 6th. Two thousand delegates, it is expected, will attend. The annual Independence Day oration in the Auditorium will be delivered on the morning of the Fourth by Whitehead & Kloonts, president of the North Carolina Senate.

NEED MARRIAGE LICENSE

New Law Prevents Hasty and Indiscreet Matrimonial Ventures.

TAKES EFFECT ON JULY 1.

Aims to Put an End to Elopements —Clergy and Civil Authorities Interested in the Act.

Aimed primarily at runaway marriages, but tending generally to minimize the evil of all indiscreet matrimonial affairs, revolutionary changes in the safeguards making for good husbands and wives will be brought about in New Jersey when the law introduced by Senator Brown, of Monmouth, consisting of a revision of the act concerning marriages, goes into effect on July 1. On and after that date every marriage consumated in the State will have to be accompanied by a license acquired under the restrictions designed to work to the advantage of society at large, and holding to strict accountability any minister or civil officer empowered to tie a matrimonial knot in the state. The exact wording of the law is that "it shall be necessary for persons intending to be married within this State to first obtain a marriage license and deliver same to the clergyman, magistrate or the person who is to officiate before the proposed marriage to be lawfully performed."

The State Board of Health is prepared to secure a rigid enforcement of the new law, which will be felt especially in Camden, where a great many marriages of Philadelphia couples are consummated, and also in Jersey City and Hoboken, where many New York couples go at present to avoid the restrictions imposed by New York State.

Great interest is being manifested throughout the State by clergymen and others authorized to perform marriages, as well as by municipal authorities upon whom the duty falls to receive applications from lovelorn couples and granting them the license necessary to plight their troth. The administration of the new law, so far as the State is concerned, rests with the Bureau of Vital Statistics connected with the State Board of Health. The officers of this department draughted the bill that was introduced by Senator Brown, and are now preparing explanatory literature to be forwarded to the clergymen and all others whose duty it will be to respect and enforce the law.

Under the law marriages may be solemnized by the chief justice and associate justices of the Supreme Court, the chancellor and vice-chancellors of the State, the court of Common Pleas, justices of the peace, recorders, police justices and mayors of any city in the State and every stated and ordained minister of the gospel. Marriages may also be consummated under the rules and customs of any religious society where either one or both of the contracting parties are members of such organization.

According to the law, "If the female party to the proposed marriage is a resident in any municipality of this State such license shall be obtained from the registar of vital statistics, if there be such officer, and if not, then from the clerk of such municipality wherein such female resides; of if the female parties to the proposed marriage is a non-resident of this State such license shall be obtained in the municipality where the female party to the proposed marriage resides. If both parties to the proposed marriage are non-residents such license shall be obtained in the municipality where the proposed marriage is to take place." Where there is no registar of vital statistics the assessor of taxes is authorized to attend to the application for the license. Licenses to marry cannot be issued when either of the parties, at the time of making the application, is under the influence of intoxicating liquors or narcotic drugs or is imbecile, epileptic, or of unsound mind.

Before any municipal officer shall issue a marriage license he shall require one of the contracting parties to subscribe and swear to an oath or affirmation attesting the truth of the statements required by the legality of the proposed marriage, and he shall issue the license only after it shall be so made to appear before him that no legal impediment to such marriage exists. The law requires the licensing officer to satisfy himself beyond reasonable intervention of the proposed marriage is a proper one in all respects. When the applicant for a license are strangers to him, the rules laid down by the State Board of Health under the law will require the identification of the parties by some person known to the officer. If one of the applicants is not properly identified, the license cannot be issued.

When the prospective bride and bridegroom are under the age of eighteen and twenty-one years, respectively, a license shall not be issued unless the parent or the guardian of the minor shall first certify in the presence of two reputable witnesses their consent thereto.

The officer to whom application for a license is made must satisfy himself thoroughly that the prospective marriage is a proper one before he grants the application. The fact that a license has been issued does not relieve the clergyman or civil authority requested to perform the ceremony of the duty to make sure in his own mind that there are no reasons why the couple should not be wedded.

Where any person applying for a license wrongfully makes false answers to any of the inquiries asked of them he or she shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and any one performing a religious ceremony between the parties without the presentation of a license therefore shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishment by imprisonment not exceeding six months or the imposition of a fine not exceeding $500.

LODGE MEN CELEBRATE

Plainfield Council, Jr. O U. A. M. Observes Fourth Anniversary.

INFORMAL PROGRAM RENDERED

Address of Welcome by Winfield S. Angleman—State Vice-Councilor LeRue Also Makes An Address.

Addresses, an entertainment and refreshments combined to make the fourth aniversary of Plainfield Council, No. 294, Jr. O. U. A. M., a pleasing affair Monday night. Despite the storm nearly one hundred members and friends of the order were present.

The program opened with an address of welcome by Winfield S. Angleman, after a piano selection by Charles Leland. Then followed a selection by the Harmonica Musical Club, an address by State Deputy Trimmer, of Roselle, after which Emil Closs, a professional entertainer from New York, amused the audience with his clever lightning change character impersonations.

Another piano selection by Mr. Leland preceded an address by John B. Oakley, of Elizabeth, and other selections by the Harmonica Club. State Vice-Councilor LaRue, of Bound Brook, made a few interesting remarks, congratulating the council upon its growth and success, as did also Mr. Angleman, who called attention to the excellent principles of the order. The program was concluded with a sketch, "The Village School," by Emil Closs, which kept everyone filled with laughter. Refreshments were served under the direction of the general committee comprising William F. Richards, chairman; Asher Fleming, William Peck, Frank Downs and Julius G. Williams.

Plainfield Council was instituted four years ago and today it has a membership of 124 and is constantly growing. These are the officers:

Councilor, William F. Richards; vice-councilor, Harvey VanPelt; past councilor, Arthur Spicer; conductor, Asher Fleming; warden, D. J. Fleming; inside sentinel, Joseph Boone; outside sentinel, Pearse Downs; chaplain, John B. Oakley; recording secretary, Fred E. Sebring; financial secretary, Joel Pennington; treasurer, Julius G. Williams; assistant recording secretary, Arthur Spicer; trustees, William Peck, Arthur Spicer and Julius G. VanWinkle.

The refreshments left over from last night's affair, and there was a large quantity, were sent to the Children's Home.

Entertainment for Young and Old.

Prof. Milton Henderson, of New York, father of Mrs. Charles Graves, of this city, well-known throughout the country as a clever sleight-of-hand performer and entertainer of children with "Punch and Judy" show, ventriloquism, etc., will give an entertainment for the benefit of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Thursday night, May 5, at 8 o'clock. He will entertain the older folks with a marvelous magical seance; also the children with puzzling magic, "Punch and Judy" show and other pleasing features. The affair is under the auspices of the board of trustees of the church.

Announce Business Changes.

Edward C. Paterson, of this city, certified public accountant, announces that he has opened an office in the general practice of accounting at 141 Broadway, New York city, and in this connection Henry J. Cochran, also of this city, announces that he has entered the office of Mr. Patterson.

Planning for Fete Champetre.

Henry Johnson, the steward of the Park Club, has begun operations preparing the grounds for the Fete Champetre known to the order as the latter part of May to help along the playground work here. L. W. Randolph, who owns an adjoining piece of land, has kindly consented to allow the use of it for the affair, if those in charge will keep it in condition. The land will all be cleaned off, sodded and otherwise beautified. Mr. Johnson is co-operating with the committee of women in charge of the affair to make it a success.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE WORK

Mrs. Haff Tells Local League of National Convention Doings.

SHE REVIEWS PROCEEDINGS.

Mrs. Champlain L. Riley Chosen President at Annual Election of the City—Borough League.

The Plainfield and North Plainfield Equal Suffrage League at its annual meeting Monday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Stephen Haff, elected new officers and heard the report of the former president of the league on the experiences of the delegates to the recent convention held in Washington D. C., in which sensational papers alleged conduct unbecoming women. Mrs. Stephen Haff, who had announced her intention to resign the presidency of the league when firm in her determination and resigned and Mrs. Champlain L. Riley was elected in her stead.

The other officers elected were as follows: Vice-president, Dr. Clara DeHarte Krans; treasurer, Mrs. Samuel Huntington; secretary, Miss Mary B. Wells. A rising vote of thanks was given the retiring officers for their devoted services and regret expressed that Mrs. Haff would not accept a renomination to the office of president.

Mrs. Haff, who attended the recent convention at the nation's Capitol, was asked to give an account of the proceedings in the House of Representatives and in the Senate. She said she was not present when the reported hissing of President Taft took place, but that she understood that it was merely a slight sound immediately suppressed by the gavel of Mrs. Anna Shaw, the National President of the league, and deeply regretted by the convention as a whole.

Rucker, of Brooklyn, is another left-hander who is troublesome for the Giants, and rarely fails to win his game. So is Brown, of Chicago. Battling against Mathewson, the Giants' peer, Brown has won a number of notable victories.

Mathewson, however, has the Indian sign on a whole lot of teams, including the Phillies and Cincinnati. The Phillies were mighty glad that President Fogel and Manager Doolin obtained Bob Ewing, for the latter, when a member of the Cincinnati team, consistently defeated the Quakers.

Magee, of the Phillies, has gone on record as saying that Ewing is the hardest pitcher in the league for him to hit. He is mightily pleased that he doesn't have to bat against Ewing for this year at least.

The Athletics have no hoodoos, notably Powell, of St. Louis, and Joss, of Cleveland. When the Mackmen defeat Joss they think it is worth two victories. Young, of Cleveland, has the singular habit of casting an extra-inning hoodoo on the Athletics.

Old Cy does not always beat the Mackmen, but when he walks to the box, the Athletic players always say, "Well, it's extra innings today." Waddell once beat Young in a twenty-inning game. Plank finds the Sox and Griffs easy foes, while Bender is also a Jennings batter.

Pittsburg players always detest the sight of Spade, of Cincinnati, and McIntire, now of Chicago, when they warm up just before a game. The champions have had little success against either man.

The Boston team of the National League, and the Washington team, of the American League, had the same trouble last year, only every opposing pitcher seemed to be their hoodoo. That was one of the reasons both teams finished in last place.

CO. K'S RIFLE TEAM MEETS WITH DEFEAT.

Under the direction of Major W. B. Martin, of Elizabeth, a Second Battalion rifle team shot a match with Co. K's team at the armory. The battalion team won by a total score of 718 to 702. On the standing position, the battalion team scored 238 against 233 for Co. K, and prone the former scored 230 to 270 for the home team.

These composed Co. K's team: Sergeant Hort, Corporal Cosklin, Private Peasall, Corporals Niles, Dow, Winder; Privates Winder and Pearsall.

SUPERSTITION EXISTS AMONG SOME PITCHERS

There is something more than superstition in the assertion that a big league pitcher always finds one or more teams that he nearly always defeats.

Just why this is a fact is unknown, but it is, nevertheless, true that some clubs, even if the line-up is frequently changed from year to year, have a hoodoo pitcher that they beat only by accident.

Take Harry Krause, the phenomenal young left-hander of the Athletics. Records show that Krause has a habit of beating about every team in the league, but he is particularly successful against Boston.

Last season Krause shut out Boston an five occasions, two of these performances coming in one series. This year Boston and the Athletics met for the first time last Friday, in the Hub, and Mack, with Krause's performances of last year in mind, picked the left-hander to pitch. The result was another shut-out triumph for this marvelous young left-hander.

Krause's complete mastery over Boston probably has no parallel in baseball, although there are other clubs which have their "goats."

For instance, Coveleskie, the former Shanty Hogan of New York if he can't beat any other team in the league. He put the Giants out of the pennant running in 1908 by beating them three times in five days, and has been as successful against the same club ever since.

When the Giants face the big Pole, Coveleskie can be depended upon to win, but it is unfortunate for him that he is not nearly so formidable against other clubs in the league.

Rucker, of Brooklyn, is another left-hander who is troublesome for the Giants, and rarely fails to win his game. So is Brown, of Chicago. Battling against Mathewson, the Giants' peer, Brown has won a number of notable victories.

Mathewson, however, has the Indian sign on a whole lot of teams, including the Phillies and Cincinnati. The Phillies were mighty glad that President Fogel and Manager Doolin obtained Bob Ewing, for the latter, when a member of the Cincinnati team, consistently defeated the Quakers.

"BABE" ADAMS IS A MODEL ATHLETE

To the good influence of his mother who taught him to preserve, and never to smoke a cigarette or drink intoxicating liquor, Charles ("Babe") Adams, the famous pitcher, who helped the Pittsburg Club materially to win the world's championship, attributes his wonderful success on the diamond.

"The secret of success in baseball," says Adams, "is not different from the secret of success in any business undertaking. My early boyhood in Indiana was spent on a farm. I did my best on the farm, too. About all I ever got was $9 a month. I used to practice curves with potatoes, stones, or any old thing I could get my hands on. I t used to tickle dad and mother to see me throw, and the fact of their pleasure in my physical development encouraged me to do better.

"Finally I got on a local team, and I still remember how I swelled up when I saw myself in the glass with my first uniform. My early success was phenomenal, and encouraged by my folks I worked harder, got up earlier, went to bed earlier. I never smoked cigarettes or tasted liquor—nor have I yet—and finally landed a good job pitching. I consider luck and opportunity, backed by a life of moderation through the influence of father and mother, and the encouragement of the best girl in the world —my wife—are the secrets of my success.

THEY WENT ROWING

"Us wants to go rowing, Tommy!" called one pretty young woman of the group of three.

Tom Hurd looked up from the camp fire with a comical expression of deprecation. "But, Marjorie, I can't take you now," he said. "I've got to 'tend to this cooking. Wouldn't after supper do?"

"Didn't say we wanted you to take us rowing, Tommy. Much as we enjoy your society, it isn't required this time. All we want is to have you get that heavy old boat into the water, and then we'll row. We know how."

"Sure you do, Marjorie?"

"Of course. I've rowed just millions of times."

Marjorie gathered her dainty skirts about her and looked down on Tom with the pretty pout that had won her checkered way through life so successfully.

Tom rose to his feet. In a moment the Idler was out of the boathouse and run down to the water. The girls gathered around him, expectant.

"Me—me—me for the front end!" squealed Gladys, with a flash of bronze shoes and pink petticoats, as she skipped nimbly across the seats, assisted by Tom's long arm.

"I'll go in the back," said Marjorie, hesitating on the string piece.

"I thought you were going to row," commented Tom.

"Oh, yes! You row, Margie," protested Gladys. "I can't and Sybil doesn't know how. You used to row up at the lake."

"Well, all right. Oo, how it wiggles! I shall fall, I know I shall! Tommy! Be careful! Oo!"

"And I'll steer," said Sybil, languorously descending into the cushioned stern seat and picking up the tiller lines with an air.

"What do I do now, Tommy?" asked Marjorie.

"Put your oars into the rowlocks and pull while I push off," he explained as a small wave broke over his tan shoes.

"Rowlicks? Oh, these things like parentheses? All right. You do it like this, don't you?" and Marjorie nearly capsized the boat with a vigorous sweep.

"That's fine—but wait till you're off. Now—sit tight!"

An incoming wave broke as Tom pushed them off, and the three girls shrieked in unison. Marjorie made a mad gesture with the oars and caught two crabs. Another wave, evidently the wash of a distant steamer, rolled in and slewed the Idler sidewise.

"Oh, girls! Look where we're going! Oh, that horrid wave! Oh, Tommy!"

"Why don't you go ahead, Marjorie?" asked Gladys.

"I am—but the boat won't. I wonder if I'm doing it right?"

"Pull on your right oar, Marjorie!" protested Tom from the shore. "No, the right one—right, right! You're pulling on the left one, Marge. For goodness' sake get her around!"

"Well, I've been pulling on it for hours and it didn't make us move a speck," retorted Marjorie.

"You're pulling on the left oar. Pull on the right and you'll go ahead."

"Oh, how silly! So I have. There!"

"Correct. Now keep straight ahead and use both oars.

Marjorie pulled on both oars, but made the little mistake of backing water, and the Idler serenely proceeded back to the beach, stern first, while all the youngsters on the beach hooted and Tom danced helplessly on the sand. With a soft bump the Idler grounded on the sandbar and stuck fast.

"Oh, Tommy. What'll I do? I can't get us off," wailed Marjorie, making feeble prods with her oar.

"Come and rescue us!" cried Gladys.

"I can't get it off!" wailed Marjorie again.

There was nothing else to be done. Tom waded out 15 feet, sacrificing his immaculately creased trousers and tan oxfords, and shoved while Marjorie pulled, incidentally hitting him on the shin with an oar blade.

"Now pull straight ahead," he said curtly, sending them into deeper water with a final jab.

The Idler began to progress in 18-inch jerks. Disgustedly Tom waded back to the beach, poured the water out of his shoes and discovered that his batch of biscuits were burned to a crisp. Muttering something under his breath, he got out the flour sack and proceeded to stir up another pan-ful.

Out at the end of the pier Marjorie laid down her oars. "Don't let's go any farther," she said. "All I wanted was to get where I could powder my nose without all the boys looking at me. Put up that sunshade, Sybil, and don't let anybody look around it, or I shall die."

And the House Adjourned.

"Of all the perfectly silly things I ever heard of, it's this idiotic agitation for postal savings banks," said Mrs. Pynnhedd, with much spirit.

"And women should have votes!" groaned Mr. Pynnhedd. "What's your pet aversion to the scheme, Mrs. Morgansfiller?"

"Why, you lowbrow," warmly retorted Mrs. Pynnhedd, "what would be the sense in putting postals in savings banks? Aren't albums the proper place for them?"

Philosophy.

There are some people—and I am one of them—who think that the most practical and important thing about a man is still his view of the universe. We think that for a landlady considering a lodger, it is important to know his income, but still more important to know his philosophy. We think that for a general about to fight an enemy, it is important to know the enemy's number, but still more important to know the enemy's philosophy. —Gilbert K. Chesterton.

To a Chemist.

"I want you to prepare for me a formula for making the best pumpkin pie that can be made," said the pie manufacturer to the chemist. "I've used turnips and ochre and potato flour and all the things my rivals use, and have been there a little bit at their own game, but now I want to put out a pumpkin pie that will simply outclass all other brands. I will pay you whatever fee is right for the work."—Life.

Fair But Stormy.

A gentleman boarded the Karori car at Kelburne avenue. Recognizing a friend on one of the seats, he nodded pleasantly, and then said: "Well, what do you think of the weather?" "Oh, horrible!" was the reply. "And how is your wife, to-day?" "She's just about the same, thank you!"—New Zealand Free Lance.

Asking Too Much.

"Nobody should be allowed to purchase anything from a pharmacist without a physician's prescription," said the cautious citizen. "Nonsense," replied the druggist. "You couldn't expect even a doctor to knew the correct Latin for soda water and chewing gum."

To Take Ink Stains From Ivory.

A piece of priceless old ivory became badly stained with ink. I tried vainly to remove this with fear and trembling I used my cream silver polish. This proved precisely the right thing and improved the luster of the ivory.—Good Housekeeping.

Foolish Principle.

There is a principle which is a bar against all information, which is proof against all arguments and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance; this principle is contempt, prior to examination.—Herbert Spencer.

Value of Friendship.

True friendship is one of the greatest blessings upon earth. It makes the cares and anxieties of life sit easily; provides us with a partner in our afflictions, and is a sure resort against every accident and difficulty that can happen to us.

The Limit.

A bridal pair recently had a street fight because the wife insisted that the husband carry her pet poodle. Notwithstanding the unusual excellence of this excuse for a squabble, street fighting is bad form.

Courted Responsibility.

Labor Exchange Clerk—"What are you?" Seedy Applicant—"I used to be a steam roller flagger, but am open to take up any post that promises an equal amount of responsibility and danger."

A Hopeless Case.

"His will never make a society reporter." "Did he fall down on the assignment?" "Fall down? He states that among those present were a duke, a count, and a few other titles."

Nothing Left for Him.

"Wake up, Henry! There's a burglar in the room after your money." "Poor fellow! Why, I saw you searching my pockets just before you came to bed."

Scientific Rations.

Prison rations of England give 51.4 ounces of food daily to the prisoner doing hard labor, but only 46.8 ounces in the case of a prisoner doing light labor.

A Lesson.

Possibly when one finds a brick with strange characters on it a wise plan is to let it alone, unless it may be of use to throw at a yellow dog.

Valuable Possession.

There is nothing so great as to be capable of happiness; to pluck it out of every moment and whatever happens.—Anne Gilchrist.

Good Breeding.

Good breeding is a sincere, kindly consideration for others, put in its pleasantest and most delicate form.—Annie Payson Call.

The Chinese Way.

In China children are brought up almost as if they were deaf and dumb. A Chinese boy or girl will sit in the presence of father or mother for hours and never say a word unless spoken to. The Chinese boy who would speak to a caller at the house unless he had permission would be considered a most impudent rascal. Here in America the children do most of the talking, and the old folks have to keep quiet.

The Modern Child.

A young girl, incorrigibly given to slang, went with her mother to the funeral of an aunt. The dead woman had been strikingly handsome in life, and her features retained all their attractiveness. "How do you think Aunt Blanche looked?" asked the mother when they had viewed the corpse. Enthusiastically the child replied: "Dead swell, didn't she, mother?"

Your Violets May Have Dyspepsia.

With all its fascinations, violet raising is often attended with many disappointments. Perhaps one reason for amateurs having trouble with unhealthy plants is an over-richness of the soil that is given them, for, unlike some other flowers, violets are apt to have a sort of dyspepsia all their own from over-nourishment.

Prevents Blood Poisoning.

If any one cuts, scratches or gets a splinter into his hand go to the druggist and get what is called old-fashioned sticking plaster, writes a carpenter. Heat the plaster and put it on a piece of cloth and put it on and it will take the soreness all out and will prevent bloodpoisoning.

Up-to-Date Method of Voting.

Secret voting is universal in Australia, Canada and the United States. In some districts of this country, however, ballot papers have been supplanted by voting machines which show the number of votes cast at any moment while the election is still proceeding.

An Omission.

Nervous and Inexperienced Host (rising hurriedly at the conclusion of a song)—"Ladies and er—gentlemen, before he started to—er—sing, Mr. Bawnall asked me to apologize for his —er—voice, but I—er—omitted to do so—er—so I—er—apologize now!"

A Hard-Luck Story.

"Politeness always pays." "I don't know about that," replied Mr. Hunting Work, "I had a pretty good position as a bill collector. But I made myself so agreeable that people held out on payments for fear I'd stop calling on them."

Fond of Mosquitoes.

The nighthawk is said to have a great appetite for mosquitoes. It has a huge mouth, and when it wants a meal it just opens it wide and sails into a cloud of mosquitoes. Its favorite morsel is the malaria mosquito.

Help on the Way.

"I hear that Chose, the great savant, is in dire poverty. Isn't it possible to do something for him?" "Oh, yes, they have been collecting funds *for three months to put up a monu*ment to him."—Bon Vivant.

In the Game.

"I am in the hands of my friends," said the political sidestepper. "Yes," replied the harsh critic, "and every time your friends look over their hands they seem impatient for a new deal."

He Heard It.

"Has your neighbor an ear for music?" "You'd think so if you could hear the coal and clods of dirt rattle against our house when my daughter starts her early morning practice."

COUNTRY CLUB PROGRAM

"Twelfth Night" to Be Given on June 7, by Coburn Players.

GOLF COURSE IMPROVEMENTS.

Links Will Cover 6,000 Yards—Fourth of July Celebration —Twenty New Members.

The Plainfield Country Club has fixed May 7 for the annual field day and reception. That day members may bring friends to the club, without restriction, and all members of the Watchung Hunt, Park Golf and Park Clubs will be given the free use of the links and tennis courts, as well as to order meals at the club and attend the afternoon reception and dance in the evening.

The out-of-door Shakespearian play, "Twelfth Night," will be given on the club grounds on the evening of June 7. The performance will be given by the Coburn Players.

President Leighton Calkins announced at the April meeting of the Board of Trustees Tuesday night that plans were being perfected for piping the golf course this spring. The amount received for that purpose now amounts to $1,200 and only $800 additional is required for the work. Plans and specifications have been drawn and a contract has been made whereby the work will be completed within four or five weeks after the balance of the cash is subscribed. This will be one of the greatest and most far-reaching improvements ever made to the links and will enable the club within a year or two to offer its members an entirely different grade of putting greens from anything which Plainfield has had before. With the links lengthened out to a full 6,000 yards by September, and with first-class greens composed of rich thick turf, always closely cut, rolled, and free from worms, Plainfield will soon possess one of the best courses in the entire State.

The trustees have decided to have an evening Fourth of July celebration, with an extensive display of fireworks. George S. Clay has been appointed chairman of a special committee to arrange the details, with power to appoint members of the club at large on the committee. The committee will comprise about fifteen members and will have power to issue invitations to residents of Plainfield who are not members.

The chairmen of the golf and tennis committees are arranging their schedules of events and it is expected that a number of new prizes will be offered by the members this season. The play for the golf spring handicap will begin April 20. The lower tennis courts are now in order for play. The upper courts are to be partially rebuilt and will not be in commission for a week longer. It is planned to offer golf prizes for boys to be played for Saturday mornings.

New horse-sheds are to be erected adjacent to the stable where members driving to the club can leave their rigs if they wish. The old automobile plaza will be suitably equipped. The old horse-sheds are now open to automobiles and members who leave horses there, or who use the main driveway in approaching the club with horses, do so at their own risk.

The club starts the season with twenty new active members just elected, more than twice the number usually received at the April meeting. A large number of new associate members and juniors have also been elected and the membership is again approaching the limit. Julius E. Erickson has been elected a trustee to fill the vacancy caused by Willard Wadsworth's removal from the city, and the former has been elected chairman of the golf committee, a position he is familiar with; also the handicapping.

TWO NEW JABOTS.

In the spring neckwear are two jabots that can be made of bits of embroidery and lace.

One is made from nine inches of batiste embroidery, finished with Irish lace edged two inches deep and worked in eyelets above it. The embroidery is sloped at top so the left side of tie is seven inches long and the right side six inches. These sides are rolled and finished with narrow val lace put on without fulling.

Plait tie 36 inches long and finish top in a narrow hemmed band.

The other tie is made of two pieces of ecru Brussels lace of heavy mesh. Each piece is four inches deep and fourteen long, with the ends overcast on wrong side to make a tubular section.

The two ends are joined in centre with an overlapping of gilt gauze ribbon wound so tightly that the two sides fall in a festoon, one over the other.

Subtle Flattery.

"I'll bet that cook will remain with us indefinitely."

"Why so?"

"We've had an oil painting made of her."

G. H. UNDERHILL IS HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY

G. H. Underhill, of Watchung, was held in $150 bail to await the action of the Somerset grand jury, on the charge of assault preferred by Freeman Strait, at a hearing heard before Justice Snape in the borough police court Wednesday afternoon. Testimony that was offered in the case was identically the same as presented last Thursday when Strait was the defendant and Underhill the complainant. When the charge against Straight was dismissed last Thursday, the latter had Underhill arrested.

The fracas took place on Saturday night, April 9, at Watchung. In court yesterday S. S. Swackhamer represented Underhill and Josiah Stryker, of Trenton, was attorney for Strait. The hearing was enlivened by several tilts between counsel and witnesses. Underhill was the main witness in his own behalf; his two sons and daughter also appeared on the stand. Mrs. Strait, Constable Clemens, Dr. A. H. Dundon and Mr. Strait were witnesses for the complainant.

ASA D. POPE PASSES AWAY IN HIS SIXTIETH YEAR

Asa D. Pope, aged 59 years, died Thursday in his apartments in the New Madison, from kidney trouble, with which he had been a sufferer for a long time. Owing to poor health in recent years he was able to work only part of the time.

Mr. Pope was probably one of the best known members of the Knights of Pythias in this State, being identified with Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, for a great many years. He was also a member of Miantonomo Tribe of Red Men, No. 118, I. O. O. F., of this city, and Friendship Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of New Market. He had worked his way through the chairs in Perseverance Lodge, and for several years had been the lodge representative to the Grand Lodge. He was also a member of the law committee of the order. He was always deeply interested in the work of the Knights of Pythias and devoted much time and effort to promoting its welfare.

Mr. Pope was born at Dunellen and removed to this city seventeen years ago, where he continued to reside ever since. He is survived by a wife, two sons, James L. Pope, who is employed at the Potter Press Company, and George W. Pope, who is employed at the Public Service Corporation; also two brothers, James C. Pope and Howard A. Pope, of this city.

The funeral services were held from the late residence, 1 New Madison avenue, Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

IMPROVEMENTS AT TRINITY INCLUDE NEW ORGAN

At a special meeting of the Consistory of Trinity Reformed church in the church parlors Wednesday the subject of building an addition to the rear of the church to accommodate the increased attendance of the Sunday school was thoroughly discussed and the needs for the building were so apparent that the wardens were empowered as a building committee to get estimates and go ahead with the improvement and enlargement. F. P. Cane and F. E. Smith were added to the building committee, making that a committee of five instead of three.

The same committee was also authorized to have the interior and exterior of the church renovated, repaired and painted. When these improvements are completed, the new organ installed, a new carpet laid in the auditorium, the church will be in first class condition and thoroughly equipped for better work.

The music committee of the Consistory, together with F. S. Cutter and A. L. Titsworth was delegated with authority to install the new organ (a gift to the church) and dispose of the old organ.

A Novel Salad.

If a housewife does not know what to serve after the meat at her next luncheon or dinner party, she should try a palatable salad made of large white cherries and broken nuts. This is arranged on small lettuce leaves and covered with mayonnaise dressing. A delicious salad is made of peeled pineapple with the centre removed. Around each slice are thin slices of banana and Maraschino cherries. This is mixed with French dressing, or one that has wine in it. The latter is made by mixing six tablespoons of sherry, three of Madeira and a half cup of sugar.

A Wise Physician.

"I told the doctor I was tired of waiting, so he asked me to put out my tongue and close my eyes. Kept me that way ten minutes."

"And meanwhile?"

"He attended to four other patients."

"CONNIE" MACK'S ADVICE TO YOUNG PLAYERS

Connie Mack—than whom there is no wiser club owner, manager or observer in baseball—said recently:

"The best advice I can give a young man who aspires to make for himself a great name on the diamond is: 'Practice and study catching. Become a second "Buck" Ewing. There is practically no limit to the salary that a man the equal of Lou Criger or of Roger Bresnahan, when these two catchers were at their best, could command today.'"

Every ball player, every fan and every club owner knows that Connie —who was once a first class catcher himself—is right. The demand for backstops of the Kling-Bresnahan-Simon - Kelly - Carrigan - Sullivan stamp is vastly greater than it is for great pitchers, hard hitters or fast fielders; infinitely greater, in fact, than is the supply.

Singularly enough it is only by cycles or by decades, one might almost say, that star catchers are developed. In truth, so seldom does it occur that when a Clarke, an Easterley or a Gibson appears in the baseball sky the whole country sits up and gives attention.

Major league scouts unite in saying that only a small percentage of the young aspirants to places in the major league clubs today are trying to get jobs as catchers. This is hard to explain, inasmuch as the great catchers of the past occupy fully as important a place in baseball history as do the pitchers, the Clarksons and the McCormicks.

Indeed, no names in all the annals of baseball are more familiar than are those of "Buck Ewing," "Charley" Bennett, "Jim" McGuire, "Duke" Farrell, "Jack" Boyle "Charley" Ganzel, "Lou" Criger, "Charley" Zimmer, "Jack" O'Connor, "Tom" Daly, "Doc" Bushong, Wilbert Robinson, "Dick" Buckley, "Charley" Snyder, "Calliope" Miller, John Clement, Emil Gross, "Mike" Kelly, "Silver" Flint, Vincent Nava, "Jim" White and "Doc" McVey.

They were among the most famous backstops that have ever stood behind the plate. Those who saw them in action cling tenaciously to the belief that no better catchers will ever be seen on the diamond.

"If the major league club owners are asking, "these old backstops, many of them bare handed, could afford to take the risk in the days when the pitchers came at them on the hop, skip and jump and let the ball go at top speed at a distance of 60 feet 6 inches. Now, with all the ambitious young players of today, protected by gloves as broad as a palmleaf fan, try for reputations when the pitchers are fifteen feet farther away and are forced to keep one foot on the slab when letting the ball fly.

The question may never be answered, but it is fair, perhaps, to assume that the reason may be found in the fact that the old catchers were proverbially modest, and when the bell rang for their retirement quietly slipped out of the spotlight and kept still. There is none to sing their praises today but the fans who saw them in action.

"Charley" Bennett was on the crest of the highest wave of popularity when he met with the terrible accident that forced him to retire. In his day he handled such pitchers as Staley, Nichols, Stivetts, Clarkson, Shaw, Conway, Getzein, and Baldwin, and in 1881, 1882, 1885, 1886, 1887, 1888, 1889, 1890 and 1893 he led the old league.

"Buck" Ewing, Nolan and Vincent Nava were small men but how grandly and gamely they faced the hurricane pitching of "Old Hoss" Radbourne!

"Silver" Flint kept on catching until he had no more unbroken fingers. He caught Larry Corcoran, Fred Goldsmith, Jim McCormick and John Clarkson when they were at their best. He was Anson's mainstay when the old White Sox won the pennant in 1880, 1881, 1882, 1885 and 1886. Mike Kelly gave him great assistance in the last two seasons.

Ewing's best work was done behind such superb pitchers as "Tim" Keefe, "Hank" O'Day, "Mickey" Welch, Amos Rusie, "Cannon Ball" Crane and men of that stamp.

"Chief" Zimmer caught 88 games for Cleveland in 1894, with the wonderful fielding average of .935, and came back again in 1901 with Pittsburg with an average of .952 for 67 games.

"Duke" Buckley was known in the '90s as the "man who made Rusie."

Charley Snyder's work in Boston, when he virtually brought out "Tommy" Bond, will never be forgotten. Years afterward in Cleveland he was still one of the grandest men behind the bat.

"Duke" Farrell caught the pitching of such whirlwinds of speed as Rusie and Meekin with as much grace as is shown by a Lajoie in handling an ugly bounder.

With such heroes to inspire them, it is, indeed, a wonder that more of the ambitious young men today do not put on the mask and protector, and go out for the records they might never be able to obtain in other departments of the game, overrun as they are by thousands of recruits.

IMPORTANCE OF TAXATION

A. C. Pleydell, Secretary of N. Y. Tax Reform Association Explains It.

AT BEREAN CLASS DINNER.

"Functions of a National Bank" Told by Frederick Coriell—Fifty Diners at Table.

A. C. Pleydell, secretary of the New York Tax Reform Association, delivered the address at a dinner of the Berean Bible Study Class, of Warren chapel, Thursday, the affair being given by the teacher, Emerson E. Parvin. Mr. Pleydell spoke on "The General Importance of Taxation." He prefaced his remarks by reviewing the various methods of taxation in the early centuries up to the present time.

The hardships the old methods wrought were thoroughly explained and the modern system of taxation was made clear by the speaker. He condemned the personal tax. Taxes effective with absolute precision, and by which no evasion was possible, were good taxes, the speaker declared.

The "benefit theory" that taxes should be based on the priviledged and not upon property was advocated by Mr. Pleydell, as the ideal system of taxation. The inheritance tax also met his approval. He urged upon his hearers the fact that this government is a government of cooperation and that all should take an active interest in it. The peculiar *fact that the people generally speak*ing, instead of being keenly interested in these matters, allow a few men to dominate legislation, and consequently vicious legislation was too often true.

The amendment to the constitution permitting an income tax to be levied by the Federal government was, to Mr. Pleydell's mind, entirely constitutional and should be adopted by various State legislatures. Mr. Pleydell readily answered any and all the questions put to him at the conclusion of his talk, which proved interesting and instructive.

"The Functions of a National Bank," was the subject of a talk by Frederick Coriell, cashier of the Borough National Bank, and his remarks showed that he was thoroughly conversant with the subject.

The dinner was given in the large dining-room of the chapel. Covers were laid for fifty. The color scheme was pink and white, daffodils and daises were effectively used. Numerous candelabra threw a soft glow of light, harmonizing with the other colors.

At the speakers' table with Mr. Parvin were Frederic Coriell, A. C. Pleydell, Rev. D. M. Kelvey, pastor, Joseph W. Gavett, D. O. Evans, president of the class; Charles F. Windham, Alexander Galloway and Charles Everitt, of the executive committee.

Following the serving of an excellent dinner and before adjournment to the chapel parlor, D. O. Evans, president, presented to Mrs. Parvin, with the compliments of the class, a beautiful bouquet of American Beauty roses. Mrs. Parvin made a happy response to the unexpected thoughtfulness of the class.

A short business session was then held. Charles Everitt, treasurer, reported a balance on hand. Charles Windham reported these names for election to the class: H. E. Bunker, James Foster, Walter Scribner, and Theodore Mason. They were unanimously elected on motion of Mr. Parvin. After the addresses of the evening, a flashlight picture was taken of the gathering by P. Frank Stone. Mr. and Mrs. Parvin were *warmly congratulated upon the suc*cess of the affair and the pleasant evening.

FINE PROGRAM OF MUSIC AT EDUCATIONAL RECITAL.

A small audience gathered in the auditorium of the high school Friday night to listen to an exceptionally fine program of songs and violin selections given by Miss Lenore Smith, violinist, and Frederick S. Rodney, baritone. Mrs. Albert Vaughan was a very capable accompanist.

The recital was an educational one and elicited much favorable comment for its exceptionally fine quality. Miss Downs and Mr. Rodney sang with sympathetic taste and Miss Smith's splendid rendition of difficult compositions were greatly appreciated. Meyerbeer, Mendelssohn, Scarlatti, Wieniawski, Powell and other masters were represented on the diversified program.

Something Wrong.

*"I've only got one seat left for to*night," said the man in the theatre ticket office.

"How much?" asked the prospective buyer.

"Two dollars."

"Is it a good seat?"

"Well, it's behind a post."

"What's the matter? Isn't the show worth seeing?"—Exchange.

PUBLIC LIBRARY LECTURES AT ASBURY PARK IN MAY

The New Jersey Public Library Commission has announced that the fourth session of the summer school for library training will be held at the Asbury Park Free Public Library from May 23 to June 25. No entrance examination will be given and as in the past the course will be free to anyone holding a position or who is under appointment to a position in a New Jersey library. This is the fourth annual session of the summer school.

The purpose is to give enough training to librarians in charge of small libraries to enable them to reorganize their own libraries and make all of their material accessible, to economize the expenditure of time and money, to enable them, after the library is reorganized, to carry the work on as it should be; to give enough training to subordinates to enable them to carry on intelligently their part of the work.

Among the lecturers will be: J. W. Wyer, State Librarian of New York; Miss Mary W. Plummer, director of the Pratt Institue Library School; Miss Theresa Hitchler, head of the cataloguing department of the Brooklyn Public Library; Miss Anna G. Moore, head of the Children's Department of New York's Public Library; Miss Clara W. Hunt, head of the Children's Department Brooklyn Public Library; Miss Sarah B. Askew, reference librarian of New Jersey; Cedric Chivers, of the Chivers Book Binding Company.

REV. DR. CHAS. A. EATON TO ADDRESS GRADUATES

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, of Watchung, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York, has been secured to deliver the commencement address at the graduation exercises of the North Plainfield High School, which will be held in the Plainfield theatre on Friday night, June 24.

Members of the borough school board are highly gratified at being able to secure Dr. Eaton to deliver the address. It is likely that two of Dr. Eaton's children will be students in the borough high school next year.

SENATE PRESIDENT ENTERTAINS MEMBERS

Governor Fort and the members of the Senate were guests of President Frelinghuysen, of the Senate, last Thursday night at his home in Raritan. The affair was purely social, and no politics were discussed. The Senators who reside close to the President's home did not remain over night, but those from a distance were unable to return to their homes until today.

Many of the Senators arrived early in the afternoon, and were given an automobile ride through that section of the State. There were a number of cars for the lawmakers, and the trip was highly enjoyed. Later in the evening dinner was served, and there were a number of jokes passed across the table.

Governor Fort and Senator Frelinghuysen have long been close personal friends, but the Executive's recent attitude toward the Senate of New York, in the course of which he made some sharp criticisms of the New Jersey Legislature, jarred this intimacy. The speech in question was made the subject of a bitter executive session discussion during the closing days of the Senate, and Mr. Frelinghuysen and others were emphatic in their denunciation of the Governor's talk. In fact, one or two of the Senators were of the opinion the executive should be "called down," and there were some who felt he should be called upon to prove his allegations, or retract. Resolutions to this effect were offered, but were allowed to die in committee.

The whole matter, however, has brought about a spirit of coldness on Mr. Frelinghuysen's part, and where he previously had been seen almost daily in the Governor's office, his visits afterward, personally and with official character. In inviting his Senate colleagues to be his guests over night, however, Mr. Frelinghuysen forgot his personal feelings. The Governor, who has always contended that his New York remarks were not made personally, and who still has, as he always has had, the warmest regard for Mr. Frelinghuysen, was quick to accept the invitation.

Making Money.

"How would you like to be America's poet laureate?"

"I couldn't afford the honor. I am already poet laureate of a prosperous bean packery."

The Lesson of the Winter.

There's a lesson we may all discern,
And shouldn't underrate;
For while we long for spring we learn
To shiver and to wait.

CARDS AND CARD PLAYING

The earliest direct mention of playing cards was discovered so far is in the "History of the City of Viterbo," says the New York Telegraph. The author quotes Covelluzzo, who wrote about the end of the fifteenth century: "In the year 1379 was brought into Viterbo the game of cards, which comes from the country of Saracens and is with them called "naib." It is worthy of remark that Covelluzzo did not write at that date he mentioned, but a century later, in 1840, and it is quite possible that he may have been mistaken in attributing the cards to Saracenic origin or may have simply been quoting a popular tradition.

The Saracens were familiar with naibis, the predecessors of cards, but they did not invent the game of cards, of which naibis were only a part. The earliest date about which there can be no dispute at which playing cards are directly mentioned by a writer as a matter of his personal experience is that discovered in the register of the court treasurer of France in the reign of Charles VI. The entry is under the date of February 1, 1392, as follows:

"Given to Jacquemin Gringonneur, painter, for three packs of playing cards, in gold and various colors and ornamented with the several devices, to carry before the king and Kings for his amusement, fifty-six sols of Paris." This is the foundation upon which is based the popular notion that playing cards were invented for the amusement of a crazy French king. Critics have pointed out that the price paid for the cards and the hand painting and decoration of the cards. There is nothing in the entry that gives grounds for supposing that the cards themselves were new.

There are on exhibition today at the National Library in Paris what are supposed to be seventeen of these cards that were painted for Charles VI., and this has strengthened the impression that they are the original model from which all playing cards have been copied. Unfortunately for the fame of the exhibit it has been proved that the cards shown in Paris are really very fine Venetian tarok cards and are part of an edition made at least as late as 1425.

During the twenty years that follow this date of the royal treasurer's (1392) literature is full of reference to playing cards. Not every author that mentions games of gam*bling* paraphernalia particularizes one or more games of cards. But before that date no allusion has been found to a game that could be construed as a card game, although there are several writers who might reasonably be expected to mention cards if they were acquainted with them. Hugh von Tymberg, who wrote in the second half of the fourteenth century; Petrarch, who wrote in the first half of the fourteenth century; Chaucer, who wrote in the second half of the fourteenth century, made no mention of cards, although in the writings of all of them are references to gambling games and implements.

In the Escurial library there is a manuscript composed by order of Don Alphonos the Wise, dated 1321, which gives the rules for a number of games, especially chess and dice, but does not contain a word about cards. But one naturally asks if the earliest mention of cards is to be found in the register of the royal treasurer of France, where did cards come from if they were not a new thing to him?

To go back a little it is well known that there existed long before the date of any mention of playing cards a series of pictures called naibis, which were used by gipsies and others for the purpose of fortunetelling and sorcery. It is probably these naibis that were brought to Europe by the Saracens, and perhaps they were supposed to be of Saracenic origin.

Authorities seem to be pretty well agreed that toward the end of the fourteenth century some (inventive genius, probably a Venetian, selected a number of these naibis or pictures, and added to them a series of numerical cards, so as to convert them into implements by which the excitement of chance and the interest of gambling might be added to the amusement afforded by the original naibis.

The principal reason for assuming that cards originated in Italy and not in France is that the names of the cards themselves and the names of the earliest known games played with them are all Italian, and that these Italian terms were carried all over Europe, while were of French origin the nomenclature might be expected to be French. There is an abundant evidence that the playing cards which rapidly found their way all over Europe were made in Venice. As each country got to making its own cards, the designs of the suits were changed to please the national fancy, until there is nothing left today of the original faith, charity, justice and fortitude which were represented on the first Italian pack.

MACHINISTS IN SESSION

Hear Seeches from Leaders on Union Topics and Business.

SHORTER HOURS; MORE PAY.

John H. McLean and Hugh V. Reilly Talk to Members—Closed Session Is Held.

John H. McLean, of Newark, former president of the Essex Trade Council, and Hugh V. Reilly, also of Newark, business agent of district No. 47, International Association of Machinists, addressed a large gathering of machinists at Eagle Hall last night, the keynote being a more effective organization and higher wages.

It was expected that Fourth Vice-President Wilson of the machinists' association, and E. J. Lynch, of the Metal Polishers' Union, Newark, would speak, but both were detained, the latter by the illness of his father.

Mr. Reilly first addressed the men, telling them at greater length of what other machinists are doing in all parts of the country, and urging the local men to band themselves together for a stronger organization for in this way only can they hope to get a readjustment of wages which means more money. The speaker's remarks were pertinent and he said that instead of some of the machinists remaining outside of the organization finding fault it was their duty to co-operate with the union men.

"Some of the machinists have swelled heads," said Mr. Reilly. "They are good mechanics. I know they are, but that is no reason why they should not join us in getting what we deserve. There is always a chance for friction. Things don't always go right in an organization, and it is same way in the shop. It is up to you men to organize and then you will be in a position to better your condition."

Mr. McLean, although a carpenter, is well acquainted with all branches of trade unionism and his address an hour he interested the men with a review of trade conditions. He told what had been accomplished by the carpenters, how today they are receiving $3 a day, eight hours a day, and four hours on Saturday, and he could not understand why the local machinists were willing to work long hours for a small wage, small as compared with what is being paid machinists in other parts of the country.

Mr. McLean told of conditions in Newark, stating that yesterday he was ordered on strike for the first time, although when he was a business agent he frequently had to call other men out. He said that the government drafts a man in times of war and when a man is wanted for jury duty he must obey the summons. In view of this he could see no reason why men in all trades should not respond to the invitation to join together in an organization to better their condition.

After the open meeting a closed session was held to obligate men who applied for membership in the association.

SIR ARTHUR PINERO'S "TRELAWNY OF THE WELLS" TO BE PRESENTED BY A TALENTED CAST OF PLAINFIELDERS

Performances Will Be Given in Aid of Muhlenberg Hospital.

That most delightful of all Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's plays, "Trelawny of the Wells," which will be presented by Charles Frohman in New York next season, will be produced at the Plainfield Theatre on Friday and Saturday nights, May 20 and 21. William L. Saunders, who consented to gather together Plainfield's most talented amateur thespians, for the noble purpose of enriching Muhlenberg Hospital's coffers, is directing the affair. He is being ably assisted by Mr. Patterson as coach, and Henry C. White as stage manager.

Such favorites as Colonel William R. Cock, Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell, William N. Runyon and Charles H. Lyman are members of the cast which boasts of two professionals whose names are famous in the drama of two continents. One is no less a personage than Edward Sheldon, author of Salvation Neil and a score of equally successful plays. The other is Effingham Pinto, who made his reputation as a member of The Climax cast, which delighted New York, Chicago and London in turn. Pinto is a Plainfielder and Sheldon is no stranger in these parts. His grandfather owned an immense estate near Bernardsville somewhat less than a century ago.

Among the other particularly talented ones in the cast are Mrs. Serrell and Miss Louise Saunders. Mrs. Serrell has frequently appeared in amateur productions for charity's sake and her gifts as an entertainer are exceptional. While abroad a few summers ago just for amusement she took the examination for the Comedie Francais passing with high honors, though, of course, she took no part in any of the performances. Miss Saunders is not only a charming young actress but is a playright as well. Some of her work has been published by the famous house of French and the foreign rights have been acquired in England and France. This is the entire cast:

Tom Wrench, Judge William N. Runyon; Ferdinand Gadd, A. M. Abbott; James Telfer, W. L. Saunders; Augustus Colpoys, Laurens H. Van Buren; Rose Trelawny, Miss Louise Saunders; Avonia Bunn, Mrs. A. M. Abbott; Mrs. Telfer (Miss Violet), Mrs. Henry C. White; Imogen Parrott, of the Royal Olympic, Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell; O'Dwyer, Prompter at the Pantheon, Mr. W. T. Pelletier; Vice-Chancellor, Sir Wm. Grower, Kt., Charles H. Lyman; Arthur Gower, Effingham Pinto; Clara De Foenix, Miss Louise Curtis; Miss Trafalgar Gower, Mrs. Harry L. McGee; Captain De Foenix, Clara's husband, Harry L. McGee; Mrs. Mossop, a landlady, Mrs. Laurens H. Van Buren; Mr. Ablett, a grocer, Hugh S. Jarvis; Charles, a butler, William R. Cock; Mr. Denzil, Mr. Van Wyck Brooks; Mr. Mortimer, Edward Sheldon; Mr. Huntston, William T. Gleeney. Here are the scenes:

Act I.—Mr. and Mrs. Telfer's lodgings, at No. 2 Brydon Crescent, Clerkenwell, England. May.

Act II.—At Sir William Gower's, in Cavendish Square. June.

Act III.—Again in Brydon Crescent. December.

Act IV.—On the stage of the Pantheon Theatre. A few days later. Period—Somewhere in the early sixties.

Under the Direction of W. L. Saunders at the Plainfield Theatre.

Before returning a few weeks ago from London, where he appeared under the direction of Mr. Frohman in "The Climax," Effingham Pinto, who takes the part of Arthur Gower in "Trelawny of the Wells," had the good fortune to witness several rehearsals of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's celebrated play which opened its run there on April 5 and this is the criticism of the London Evening Standard and St. James' Gazette:

"I have an idea that "Trelawny of the 'Wells'" will be a classic—that it will be revived through the generations, and that each succeeding generation will like it better than the last. It is, first of all, a picture—legitimately exaggerated, but by no means a caricature—of two utterly different strata of society in the "Early Victorian" era; it has humor, sentiment and character. To see the crinoline in its habit as it lived, to have famous folk moving before us, thinly disguised, to laugh heartily at genuine comicality, and to appreciate a satire none the less keen because of its good temper, is to enjoy an entertainment without the necessity of numbing the intellect. And this is the experience we had at the Duke of York's Repertory Theatre last night. "Trelawny of the 'Wells'" has not 'aged' at all. It is as fresh as when first we saw it at the Court Theatre about twelve years ago. The audience last night appreciated it more highly than the audience then, and the audience five years hence will enjoy it more greatly still. Every year will add to its value, for the life it reproduces will be further off and the more different from our own.

"The rollicking, vulgar, good-hearted Bohemians, the actors and actresses of Bagnigge Wells Theatre —Sadler's Wells in front of course —to Wrench, otherwise Robertson, who rejuvenated the stage, come before us. We hear of Phillips, which means Phelps; of Kean, which means Kean; and we see the tragedians, the comedians, the 'ingenues,' the romantic heroes of the 'early sixties.' Contrasted with them, with their lodgings in Clerkenwell, is the dull, respectable, opulent house in Cavendish Square, wheer live the Vice-Chancellor, Sir William Gower, and his sister, Miss Trafalgar Gower—born on an anniversary of Nelson's crowning victory—where it is 'out of place' for a young lady to sneeze more than twice, or for her betrothed, the son of the house, who is sent out to sleep during her visit, to act the 'troubadour' by gazing at her bedroom window from the other side of the street; where whist is a game of malevolent intensity, and where Dundreary whiskers are the pendants of faces as long as kites.

"In the last act—as good as any that has preceded it—we watch Tom Wrench's new play in rehearsal at the Pantheon Theatre. The old actors cannot find anything to 'get their teeth into' in the quiet, short, natural speeches—there is a grimness beneath the Pinero fun which cannot, however, deprive it of its comicality. The play ends brilliantly, and once again we thank Mr. Frohman for his Repertory Theatre. Such revivals as these make us very grateful for his enterprise."

WHEN MARK TWAIN WORKED IN MISSISSIPPI.

Steamboat men of the old days were regarded with envy by the landsmen of river towns, and rated in proportion of the importance and grandeur of the boat on which they ran, says Raymond Lee Hill in The Travel Magazine for April. A proud thing it was for a chap to be employed on such steamers as the Grand Turk, the Alex. Scott or the Robert E. Lee, especially for negro barbers and deckhands. Mark Twain tells of a husky darkey who with his pompous airs kept offending the guests at a colored ball in New Orleans until finally one of the managers approached him and demanded:

"Who is you, anyway? Who is you? dat's what I want to know!"

"Who is I?" retorted the latter, in nowise discomfited, and bristling with importance. "Who is I? I let you know mighty quick who I is! I want you niggers to understan' dat I fires the middle do' on de Alexk Scott!"

On another occasion the daughter of a middle-aged negro woman was following the usual custom of her colored friends—enjoying a twilight flirtation—when her mother put her head through a broken window pane and called out in a proud voice, loud enough for her neighbors to hear:

"You Mary Ann, come in de house dis minute! Stannin' out dah foolin' 'long wid dat low trash, an heah's de barber off'n de Gran' Turk wants to cowerse wid you!"

Pilots of this time were of special consequence. Every courtesy was shown them by captains and crews, and extreme deference by the negro barbers, waiters and roustabouts. Their wages were high. As a general rule, the scale was about $400 per month, but during the flush Kansas trade on the Missouri river, a good pilot received as much as $900 a trip, which amounted to $1,800 a month. But a pilot only mastered his trade after long experience and close application. And he had to be well versed in his vocation, for in those days there were no snag and dredge boats, beacon lights or powerful search-lights to play ahead of the vessel. The pilot must have a mental map of the river, remembering the location of every snag, sand bar, shallow and other danger, not only on clear days and nights, but also in the darkness, fog, sleet and snow. No danger must be considered. In fact, many of the steamboat disasters were due to sheer foolhardiness.—The Travel Magazine.

A FINE OLD ENGLISH RECIPE.

The roast beef of old England is presumably the finest in the world and has been celebrated in both song and story; but one seldom hears of the many other excellent ways in which English cooks prepare this meat. One of their most pleasing dishes is beefsteak stewed without the addition of water or any other fluid. To prepare this have 3 or 4 pounds of rump steak cut about an inch thick. Put one tablespoonful of butter in the frying pan and let it melt without browning. Wash the steak quickly in cold water, put it in the frying pan, cover closely and let it slowly become very hot. As soon as it is thoroughly heated add one teaspoonful of salt and a saltspoonful of white pepper, then keep it just simmering (never allowing it to boil) until perfectly tender. It should be closely covered all the time. It will require about an hour and a half to cook it just right. When done place the steak on a heated platter, and add half a teaspoonful of walnut or tomato catsup to the gravy in the pan, let it get very hot and pour it over the steak. Sometimes a slice or two of onion or carrot are added to impart a delicate flavor to the steak, but it is quite delicious without.

FOWLER BREAKS TRUCE

His Attempt to Renew the Rules Fight Ends in Dismal Failure.

INSURGENTS ARE NOT READY.

Resolution Depriving Speaker of Committee Appointing Power Is Ruled Out Quickly.

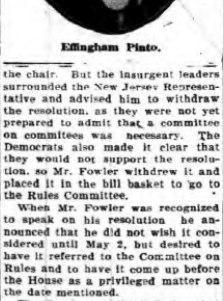
Washington, April 26.—An ill advised and single handed attempt by Representative Fowler, of New Jersey, to bring about another battle over the rules of the House has proved a dismal failure, and the New Jersey Representative was unmistakably "sat upon" by the Democrats and by his insurgent colleagues. Contrary to the general understanding that there shall be no renewal of hostilities until the President's legislative program has been enacted, Mr. Fowler arose early in Wednesday's proceedings and offered what he said was a privileged resolution providing for the appointment of two committees on committees at the next session of oCngress. here was a meagre attendance at the time, but the news spread through the Capitol that war was about to be declared and the chamber promptly filled.

The clerk had hardly completed the reading of the Fowler resolution when Representative Payne, of New York, made the point of order that it was not privileged under the rules. Representative Hardwick made the point of no quorum, after which the Speaker ruled that the resolution was not privileged.

It was at this point that Mr. Fowler expected his insurgent colleagues and the Democrats to join him in an attempt to overrule the decision of the chair. But the insurgent leaders surrounded the New Jersey Representative and advised him to withdraw the resolution, as they were not yet prepared to admit that a committee on committees was necessary. The Democrats also made it clear that they would not support the resolution, so Mr. Fowler withdrew it and placed it in the bill basket to go to the Rules Committee.

When Mr. Fowler was recognized to speak on his resolution he announced that he did not wish it considered until May 2, but desired to have it referred to the Committee on Rules and to have it come up before the House as a privileged matter on the date mentioned.

The Speaker, while declaring that the resolution was not in order, said he was willing to hear arguments on the point. Mr. Fowler then said he would withdraw the resolution and "deposit it in the basket." With his resolution in his hand, he walked to the clerk's desk and deposited it in the basket. Derisive laughter from the regular Republicans greeted this action.



Effingham Pinto.

"Some forty minutes of the time of the House have been consumed at this stage of the session," shouted Speaker Cannon above the confusion, "and now the gentleman withdraws his resolution and says he puts it in the basket." The emphasis he put on the "says he" again provoked laughter, in which both Republicans and Democrats joined.

The Speaker had some difficulty in restoring order, and used his gavel vigorously. After several minutes of incessant hammering the excitement subsided.

The resolution provided that both the majority and the minority shall have a committee on committees, to be selected according to geographical limits. Afterward the insurgent leaders reiterated their determination to do all in their power to prevent a repetition of the rules fight until the closing days of the session, when the motion to depose Speaker Cannon will be made.

A Fancy Initial.

An odd, quick method of working the thicker parts of an old English letter instead of padding and covering with satin is a modified buttonholing.

One side of the outline is buttonholed at regular spaces, the length of stitch being taken to opposite line. The other side of the letter is then worked, the buttonholing done so the spacing alternates.

This row has the stitches but half the length of the first, or to the middle of space to be covered.

Use a rather heavy cotton, coarser than for solid embroidery. But buttonholings may be alike, or one can be blue, the other white or two tones of a shade.

Something Wrong.

Belle—What do you think of her new diamond ring?

Beulah—I didn't notice it.

"Didn't notice it? What's the matter? Are you stone blind?"

ONE WAY TO SHAMPOO.

A specialist who has had success with treating falling hair has novel ideas on shampoos that are easily adopted by the girl who washes her own hair.

Make a strong lather of soap suds by putting a cake of pure white soap in a pitcher that holds a couple of quarts. Pour a pint of boiling water over the soap and shake until a thick lather is formed, when the soap is removed.

Let the mixture cool to blood heat, or so that it will not scald the skin, and pour a little at a time over the scalp, rubbing it in with the tips of the fingers.

When scalp is well cleansed, pour the rest of hot mixture over the long hair, washing it gently down from the roots toward the ends.

Rinse with warm water, using a bath spray, and keep it up until no soapsuds remain either on scalp or long hair. Part hair and spray scalp, especially at sides of head and at nape of neck.

Have several smooth towels made very hot and dry the hair with them. When nearly finished separate hair into strands, thread with fingers or comb to remove tangles, then draw fingers from scalp to ends of hair until it is dry, soft and fluffy.

This specialist does not believe in cold water rinsing, which most hairdressers feel will prevent cold. The hot water gives more of a gloss and prevents harshness. She also avoids combing the hair when wet or pulling it when dry.

Beaded Flowered Nets

Among the artistic new fabrics for handsome indoor gowns there is a white net that glistens with crystal or silver dewdrops and is lavishly sprinkled with vividly colored flowers. This is an attractive addition to the materials for lovely new gowns and no doubt will prove very popular.

VARIATIONS OF WHITE.

Already a fashionable cauturier is making fascinating soft white silk dresses, with draperies or over-dresses of colored chiffon. The new models have taken the fancy of women, and it is safe to predict a vogue for these light-colored silks.

Much depends upon the shade of white, for you must remember that there are many variations of this, ranging from oyster white through the pearl shades to the warm ivory tints. There must be no crude contrast between the colored chiffon and the white foundation.

The ivory whites look well with any tints that harmonize with pale yellow, while the gray whites can be beautifully allied with the shell pink and lavender of the seashell.

Many complexions cannot stand the trying contrast of color against the skin; therefore, the chemisette *of soft white tulle or net is most fre*quently used to give the softening effect.

One silk foundation might serve for more than one chiffon tunic or draped over-dress. Of course, the wisdom must be seen in purchasing silk of durable quality for the playing of this double role. But do not forget the kind of white when selecting the soft materials to be used with it.

Not Mr. McChanic.

Scotch highlanders, who still speak the Gaelic at times, settled much of the country north of Toronto. One day Dr. Rutherford, locally famous, was looking for some men to do some work for him. He went to a village blacksmith shop and found several of these Scotchmen standing about.

"Are you a mechanic?" he asked one of them.

"Nap," he replied. "I'm a McCuig."

SCHOOL TEAMS ON EDGE

Big Interest Centered in P. H. S.-N.P.H.S. Baseball Game This Afternoon.

BOTH SIDES ARE CONFIDENT.

Managers of Both Sides Name Their Strongest Batting Orders—Records of Rival Teams.

When the ball tossers of the Plainfield High and North Plainfield High clash on Crescent Oval in the first battle for local scholastic diamond honors this afternoon it will be a case of Greek meeting Greek. Athletic contests between city and borough institutions are always marked with keen rivalry and tomorrow's game is sure to be one of the biggest events in school sports of the season.

They're all talking about it. Not only the students and members of the faculties of the two schools are interested in the impending fray, but the alumnis of both schools will be largely represented at the game. The victorious team is hard to select as the season is early and neither nine has displayed signs of steadiness.

Both sides are naturally confident of a triumph. Manager Howard Runyon, of the P. H. S. combination, declared this morning, "I don't see how we can lose, I anticipate an easy victory."

Russell Conroy, the captain of the borough nine, is equally as confident. He said: "I expect that we will win the game by our batting. Everybody is hitting the ball hard and we are sure to give a lot of trouble to the P. H. S.'s twirlers."

The P. H. S. nine has been traveling along a rocky road since the opening of the season, but yesterday's victory over Newark High caused a lot of jubilation and boosted the hopes the cohorts of the city line. Plainfield up to date has figured in ten contests, five of which were victories and five losses, but in the aggregate number of games played, Plainfield has tallied 37 runs to 43 runs scored by opposing teams.

Manager Howard Runyon announced this morning that the P. H. S. batting order will be as follows: Captain Van Zandt will start the game in the box and it is possible that Terry will wind up the game. The line-up follows:

Doane, centre field; Zerega, short-stop; Lidgate, catcher; Nash, first base; Runyon, third base; Runyon, left field; Van Zandt, pitcher; Bristol, second base; Terry, right field.

North Plainfield High has participated in seven contests, six of which were victories. The borough athletes made a better showing against New Brunswick and Roselle than the city team, and if comparisons count for anything, the borough team should reign as a favorite.

The borough team smothered New Brunswick by a score of 25 to 2, while it took P. H. S. extra innings to win a 11 to 10 decision. Saturday, N. P. H. S. annexed Roselle's scalp by a score of 7 to 1, while the city team worked hard to beat the latter team by a 2 to 0 score.

Captain Conroy announced the probable line-up of N. P. H. S. as follows: Taylor, second base; Bailey, first base; P. Bailey, shortstop; C. Smith, pitcher; H. Smith, left field; Adams or Townley, centre field; Conroy, third base; Dunning, right field; Stine, catcher; Walker, substitute.

Here are the records of the rival teams to date:

Plainfield High—P. H. S., 1; Somerville, 2. P. H. S., 2; Camp Bowser, 7. P. H. S., 5; Boys' High, Brooklyn, 7. P. H. S., 18; Hasbrouck, 2. P. H. S., 2; Morris High, 3. P. H. S., 2; Roselle High, 0. P. H. S., 6; Poly Prep., 5. P. H. S., 3; Montclair, 4. P. H. S., 11; New Brunswick, 10. P. H. S., 17; Newark High, 2.

North Plainfield High—N. P. H. S., 5; Alumni, 6. N. P. H. S., 12; Alumni, 2. N. P. H. S., 9; Bound Brook, 2. N. P. H. S., 27; Rahway, 3. N. P. H. S., 25; New Brunswick, 2. N. P. H. S., 7; Roselle High, 1. N. P. H. S., 10; Westfield High, 1.

Margaret, the fifteen year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Longman, of Brooklyn, died on Sunday morning after a brief illness. The funeral service was conducted in that city this morning. Miss Longman had a large circle of friends in this city. GEORGE ALBERT PASSED AWAY THIS MORNING

George Albert, one of the best known residents of Scotch Plains, passed away at 7:30 o'clock this morning after an illness of three months duration. Mr. Albert was a native of Germany and had been a resident of Scotch Plains for twenty-five years, during which time he was employed as night watchman at Seeley's Paper Mills.

The funeral service will be conducted at his late home on Montague avenue at that place on Friday morning at 8 o'clock, and at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's church, where a solemn requiem mass will be celebrated. Interment will be made in St. Mary's cemetery.

Surviving Mr. Albert are a wife and six children. Five sons, Anthony, Nicholas, John, Henry and Joseph, reside at Scotch Plains and a daughter, Mrs. William Stewart, who lives in this city.

DEACON SHEDS TEARS, MUST KILL HIS HORSE

Spencer Conway, the owner of a horse which will be remembered as an exhibit among the animals submitted for inspection of the Mayor and the S. P. C. A. last Saturday, will remain but a memory, as under the decision of Judge Runyon rendered this morning, the horse will have to be shot.

Deacon Conway tried hard to convince Judge Runyon this morning that he was not directly responsible for the lamentable condition of the animal which excited pity and anger in the judges of the exhibition on Saturday afternoon. The deacon protested loudly that his friend Culp had harnessed the horse and that they should have reported the condition of the poor animal to him. "Why," he said, "that mare got a feed of four and five quarts of oats three times a day and she had no business to be thin." He also told the man who sells me the feed that I bought enough to keep her in fine shape, but somehow or other she didn't flesh up like she ought to have done."

Judge Runyon listened patiently to the aged negro's rambling talk about why his animal was not in the best of condition, but after hearing the testimony of Veterinary Dr. F. C. Herbert decided that the deacon's horse had no excuse for living and suffering any longer and ordered Mr. Conway to shoot his animal. He has been tomorrow morning so that she may be destroyed in a humane way. It is said that the mare was sent to New Market by Conway to get her out of the way.

The case was prosecuted with much vigor by Mrs. Stephen G. Vanhoesen, the S. P. C. A. special agent.

OFFICERS ARE INSTALLED BY BUZZARDS' CLUB.

An interesting meeting was held by the Buzzards' Club, in Buzzards' Roost, Babcock building, last night. The newly elected officers were installed as follows: Secretary, Edward Koechlein; sergeant-at-arms, Harry Doty; house committee, William Hoffman, chairman; Roy Lee, George Cole.

The chief subject discussed was the proposed May walk which will take place May 15. Chairman Niles reported for the committee and his remarks were met with favor. The committee has arranged to have steamed clams, lobster, cigars and refreshments on the grounds at the completion of the walk. A sub-committee composed of Raymond Harvey, Frank Denton and Wallace Hill, was appointed to prepare a program of sports. Final arrangements will be made at a special meeting of the club next Tuesday night.

The report of Treasurer Harry Hoffman and the retiring secretary, Edward R. Honeyman, were read and showed the club to be in a good financial standing. Several applications for membership were received and laid over to the special meeting next week.

The Methodist Social Union, comprising all of the local churches of that denomination, will hold a union service in the First M. E. church, Wednesday evening, May 11. Addresses will be made by Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, district superintendent, and the pastors of the Methodist churches.

William H. Clark, of East Ninth street, and Miss Irene May Koplin, of Hellertown, Pa., were married by Rev. Dr. W. H. Neilson, of this city, at the home of Mr. Clark, Saturday afternoon.

NO MANUAL TRAINING FOR DUNELLEN SCHOOL

The proposition to add manual training to the curriculum of the Dunellen public schools, for which an appropriation of $500 was asked, was voted down at the annual school meeting at that place last night. John Y. Wilson was the only one to oppose manual training in a speech, but the opponents of the proposition had sufficient votes to defeat it by a vote of 33 to 11.

The remainder of the budget, which included $4,000 for current expenses, an increase of $200 over last year, and $300 for school repairs, was unanimously endorsed.

Forty-seven voters attended the meeting which was held in the borough hall. Rev. Ernest O. Brown acted as chairman of the meeting and Professor Guy H. Reutsechler acted as clerk.

'PLAINS FIRE CHIEF SLAYS A MAD DOG

Residents of Scotch Plains had the thrills of a mad dog scare this morning which terminated in the killing of the canine by Fire Chief Charles Meyer. The dog was a brindle bull belonging to Lynus Walpole, of that place.

Just as the children of the village were going to school shortly before 9 o'clock the brindle bull rushed down the middle of Park avenue, barking savagely and snapping at dogs on the way. Strange to say the canine made no attempt to attack the passing children but lent its efforts toward chasing other dogs, several of which were bitten.

News that a mad dog was creating havoc brought scores of villagers from their homes to the street. One was Fire Chief Meyer. Sizing up the situation he secured his revolver and followed the dog to Mountain avenue where he killed the animal.

RESIDENTS OF W. FRONT ST. WANT ADDITIONAL LIGHTS

Residents of West Front street, between Giraud and Grant avenues, are greatly interested in a plan to secure additional lights for that thoroughfare which is now so poorly lighted. On the west side of Grant street between the points named, there is just one light, and now that the foliage is coming out, it is entirely inadequate. The street is narrow at that point. There are double car tracks and several accidents have occurred there. According to the records of the police department women have been stopped between Plainfield and Grant avenues.

It is the intention of the residents to present a petition to the Common Council soon asking for additional electric lights. The Councilmen of the Fourth ward have promised to give their support to this matter and there is no doubt but that the improvement will be granted.

GAVE DELIGHTFUL RECITAL OF "THE SERVANT IN THE HOUSE."

Edward A. Mead, of New York, gave a recital of "The Servant in the House," before a small but appreciative audience in Vincent chapel of the First M. E. church last night. Mr. Mead stated at the outset that in the absence of so many people it was no doubt due to the fact that the play of that name is to appear in this city soon.

However, Mr. Mead's interpretation of the story was delightful and true to every line. The various characters were presented in a polished and pleasing manner and Mr. Mead held the close attention of everyone for more than an hour as he told the strong and impressive story of "The Servant in the House."

Nelson A. Miller, as president of the Vincent chapel society whose auspices the affair was given, presided and introduced Mr. Mead.

FETE FOR PLAYGROUNDS

City Commission Plans for Spectacular Entertainment at the City Park.

MAY 26, 27 AND 28 THE DATES.

More Than 300 Young People Will Participate in the Spectacle Which Will Be Directed by Miss Florence.

Plans were set in action last night, at a meeting of the City Playgrounds Commission, at Y. M. C. A. hall last night, for a unique out-door fete, which will be participated in by more than 300 young people, at the city park, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the interests of city play grounds for children.

The entertainment is carded for Thursday, Friday and Saturday, May 26, 27 and 28, and will be conducted under the supervision of Miss Florence, of Elizabeth. The event will be similar in character to the Kirmess which was given for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital in 1908. There will be costume dances and other features and arrangements will be made to illuminate the park brilliantly for the spectacle.

The object of the entertainment is to provide a fund for the maintenance of two city playgrounds that are about to be equipped, the maintenance of the athletic field and play-ground soon to be turned over to the city by A. McLean Parker and the establishment of other playgrounds in congested districts of the city, particularly in the west end.

As a result of the purchase of equipment for playgrounds at the Bryant and Stillman schools the city appropriation of $1,000 for that purpose, is about exhausted. It is expected to have the apparatus established at these grounds within three weeks, and funds are needed to provide for the expense of supervision.

It is hoped that sufficient funds will be realized from the proposed outdoor fete to defray the cost to the Commission for this year. In connection with the promotion of the entertainment, it is the plans of the Commission to carry on a city-wide campaign of education as to the needs and value of play grounds for children in the city.

The Commission elected H. E. Parker, temporary secretary, and also appointed the following committees for the fete.

General committee: Mayor C. J. Fisk, G. P. Mellick, H. W. Marshall, I. W. Sandford, J. W. Gavett, W. S. Kinney, H. A. Sorbers, E. Smart Simons, W. R. Townsend, D. J. Carney, W. R. Causbrook, G. A. The program includes Gounod's "Praise Ye the Father," Gloria, from Mozart's Twelfth Mass; Barnby's "King All Glorious," and the two wedding marches, Lohengrin and Mendelssohn's from "Midsummer Night's Dream."

Chester Chamberlain, the boy soprano soloist, will sing two numbers and a male quartet will also take part. The concert promises to be one of the best of the season.

Sent Back to Summit.

John Nelson, fifty-five years old, was taken into custody by Patrolman McCarthy yesterday afternoon when the officer discovered him loitering in the neighborhood of Belvidere avenue and acting suspiciously about a vacant house. Judge Runyon told Nelson this morning to go back to Summit, where he claimed to have been employed.

MR. EDWARDS' WORK ATTRACTS COMMENT

There is a wealth of variety in the forty-third annual exhibition of the American Water Color Society at the American Fine Arts galleries, New York. This comment of a celebrated art critic will be of especial interest here:

"One feels the breath of the sea and the rise and fall of the staunch boat in the picture of "The Fishermen," by George Wharton Edwards, who may be styled the master of the water colorists as exemplified in the present show. Two sturdy fishermen in heavy coats, with hats pulled well down over their heads, are seen pulling at their oars, and the feeling of action expressed by the artist is grippant. It is one of the best examples of art in the lighter medium and an interesting study of life on the ocean wave."

SERVANT IN THE HOUSE COMES HERE SATURDAY

Few well-known actresses in America are able even if they are willing, to share their husband's work and prove a genuinely helpful ally in practical plans for artistic movement. One of the rare exceptions is Edith Crane, who is the wife of Tyrone Power, creator of the famous Drain-man role in "The Servant in The House," which will be seen at the Plainfield theatre Saturday, matinee and night, May 7. Miss Crane is leading woman of the Henry Miller Associated Players, the New York company headed by Mr. Power. The acting of these two distinguished players looms large in the great success of the play. That is as much as the public knows. But away from the theatre, husband and wife are strenuously at work on the preliminary details of a production that will be made next year, and a play in which, as it chances, there is no big female role for Miss Crane. It is an elaborate revival of Shakespeare's "King Lear" in which Henry Miller has promised to star Tyrone Power.

NO MORE SUNDAY GAMES AT 'PLAINS.

Manager Joseph Albert, of the Scotch Plains baseball club, announced today that he had received notice from John Coles, the lessee of the grounds which the club used for baseball park, that no games may be played on the tract. Mr. Albert stated that he will abide by the decision of Mr. Coles in the matter and will not attempt to play any Sunday or Saturday games on the land.

Mr. Albert also declared that Sunday games would be discontinued for the present at least. He intimated that other grounds would be secured.

Caught Twenty-nine Dogs.

A dog belonging to J. M. Hawkins, of 437 East Seventh street, which has been under observation for the past few days, broke away slipping his collar over his head yesterday and is now at large. Dr. Butler, the veterinary, believes the animal has rabies, a symptom of which it is now shown when it was placed under observation. Dogcatcher Keiderling corraled twenty-nine dogs yesterday, but Mr. Hawkins' animal was not among the number.

An Appeal for Memorial Day.

Stephen R. Struthers, of West Front street, a veteran of the Civil War, addressed the pupils of the Plainfield High School this morning on the subject of "Memorial Day." He made an appeal for the co-operation of all pupils this year in making Memorial Day all that it should be.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. SIDNA R. VAIL HELD

The funeral of Mrs. Sidna R. Vail, mother of Charles E. Vail, who died on Sunday at the home of the latter, was held from the meeting-house of the Religious Society of Friends on Watchung avenue, yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Vail was a life-long member of this society and always a regular attendant of the services, until she met with an accident which caused her death.

The services were impressive, being in conformity to the custom of the Friends. William D. Williams, also a member of the society, offered prayer and spoke of the exemplary Christian life of the departed; also of her devotion to her family and home. Following the remarks the rest of the service was given up to meditation on the part of the mourners.

The burial was in the cemetery in the rear of the meeting-house, and the pall-bearers, all grandsons of Mrs. Vail, were Benjamin Vail, Horace Vail, Eden Vail, Benjamin Vail, Alebtr Vail and Walter Vail.

BOROUGH DISAPPOINTED OVER THE CITY'S ACTION

No small amount of adverse criticism is being voiced by boroughites of the action of the Plainfield Common Council in discharging its representatives on the city-borough commission for a joint sewage disposal system. As told yesterday, the city fathers at their regular monthly meeting on Monday night relieved the committee from further work at the suggestion of the chairman, Representative Myrgatt, who advised that all further business in that connection should be considered directly by the respective governing bodies. Explaination was made by him that the joint commission was unable to arrive at an agreement. The city's representatives, it is asserted, proposed that Plainfield bear seventy per cent of the expense while the borough representatives took the position that the city assume seventy-five per cent of the financial burden.

When a member of the borough sewer commission was seen today concerning the action of the city's governing body, he expressed himself as displeased at the unexpected attitude of the city. "There is no reason why we could not get together and arrive at some satisfactory agreement," said this man. "But the action of the city, it seems from what I can learn has now placed us in the position that we must go ahead independently. This will mean a greater expense to both places for each has to have a new plant. It would have been cheaper to build one big plant for the use of both.

"If I remember right, the original proposition was that the city should bear seventy-five percent of the cost but for some reason I don't know they wanted to insist that the city only stand for seventy per cent."

There will be some definite action taken at the meeting of the Council on Friday night. At that session a report is expected from North Plainfield's commission which it is understood will be asked to continue its valuable services.

P. C. C. PLAN HOUSE OPENING AND FIELD DAY.

The Plainfield Country Club has issued invitations for the annual house opening and field day to be held Saturday, Club members and all members of the Park Club, Park olf Club and Watchung Hunt Club are cordially invited. The privileges of the golf course and tennis courts will be extended to all guests throughout the day and there will be a house committee reception from 2 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon, with music and dancing in the evening from 8 to 11 o'clock.

Stages will connect with all cars, afternoon and evening. Guests as well as members may obtain luncheon or dinner, or both, at the usual rates, by telephoning their orders to John Hilton, superintendent, not later than Friday, May 6. Tables will be reserved for parties, to the full capacity of the club, in the order of application.

May Party for Miss Overton.

Eighteen young folk of the Washington Park section were the guests at a May party given on Monday afternoon in honor of little Miss Penelope Overton, daughter of Mr. and and Mrs. T. C. Overton, at the latter's home, 21 Rockview avenue. There was dancing around a May pole and other amusements for the guests and the affair was very enjoyable.

CONDITIONS IN SCHOOLS

Parent-Teacher Association Sends an Interesting Report to Education Board.

CONTENTS NOT GIVEN OUT.

Mr. Moy Makes Unsuccessful Effort for Publicity—Mr. Maxson's Statement as to His Position.

Wilbert H. Smith, an engineer of New York city, was the principal speaker at the meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association in the Franklin School assembly room last night. Mr. Smith was secured through the good offices of A. B. McNeeley and interested the audience with his descriptions of the present ventilating system in the public schools of this city.

A report was read by Mrs. G. Stuart Simons, chairman of the committee on sanitation which created a stir, which will be remembered for a long time by all the members of the association, and resulted in the appointment of a committee, of which Howard Williams is chairman, to take up the matters suggested by Mrs. Simons' report and refer them to the Board of Education.

It transpired that in one of the schools thirty-nine children in the kindergarten are compeled to drink from one cup and an absence of a toilet in the Franklin School compels a pupil to walk nearly a block. Some discussion arose as to the desirability of making these matters public, but in the opinion of George W. V. Moy, who spoke in favor of the open discussion of public matters, the greater the better and the more speedy the publicity the better results for all.

It is remembered that this same question came up about a year ago and nothing was done to relieve the situation, nor in fact, as far as is known no attention was paid to the then existing conditions. The discussion of Mrs. Simons' report led to a most exciting debate in which several of the women members of the association took an active part.

"The concealment of facts vitally interesting to the public at large, especially where they refer to the children of taxpayers who are enabled to all the consideration which an up-to-date public school system should provide, does not seem to be the proper thing in this city, where the lives of our children are concerned from the standpoint of hygiene or any other standpoint," said this man. "But the action of the city, it seems from what I can learn has now placed us in the position that we must go ahead independently. This will mean a greater expense to both places for each has to have a new plant. It would have been cheaper to build one big plant for the use of both.

"If I remember right, the original proposition was that the city should bear seventy-five percent of the cost but for some reason I don't know they wanted to insist that the city only stand for seventy per cent."

There will be some definite action taken at the meeting of the Council on Friday night. At that session a report is expected from North Plainfield's commission which it is understood will be asked to continue its valuable services.

P. C. C. PLAN HOUSE OPENING AND FIELD DAY.

The Plainfield Country Club has issued invitations for the annual house opening and field day to be held Saturday, Club members and all members of the Park Club, Park olf Club and Watchung Hunt Club are cordially invited. The privileges of the golf course and tennis courts will be extended to all guests throughout the day and there will be a house committee reception from 2 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon, with music and dancing in the evening from 8 to 11 o'clock.

Stages will connect with all cars, afternoon and evening. Guests as well as members may obtain luncheon or dinner, or both, at the usual rates, by telephoning their orders to John Hilton, superintendent, not later than Friday, May 6. Tables will be reserved for parties, to the full capacity of the club, in the order of application.

May Party for Miss Overton.

Eighteen young folk of the Washington Park section were the guests at a May party given on Monday afternoon in honor of little Miss Penelope Overton, daughter of Mr. and and Mrs. T. C. Overton, at the latter's home, 21 Rockview avenue. There was dancing around a May pole and other amusements for the guests and the affair was very enjoyable.

A report was read by Mrs. G. Stuart Simons, chairman of the committee on sanitation which created a stir, which will be remembered for a long time by all the members of the association, and resulted in the appointment of a committee, of which Howard Williams is chairman, to take up the matters suggested by Mrs. Simons' report and refer them to the Board of Education.

It transpired that in one of the schools thirty-nine children in the kindergarten are compeled to drink from one cup and an absence of a toilet in the Franklin School compels a pupil to walk nearly a block. Some discussion arose as to the desirability of making these matters public, but in the opinion of George W. V. Moy, who spoke in favor of the open discussion of public matters, the greater the better and the more speedy the publicity the better results for all.

It is remembered that this same question came up about a year ago and nothing was done to relieve the situation, nor in fact, as far as is known no attention was paid to the then existing conditions. The discussion of Mrs. Simons' report led to a most exciting debate in which several of the women members of the association took an active part.

"The concealment of facts vitally interesting to the public at large, especially where they refer to the children of taxpayers who are enabled to all the consideration which an up-to-date public school system should provide, does not seem to be the proper thing in this city, where the lives of our children are concerned from the standpoint of hygiene or any other standpoint," said this man.

This statement from George W. V. Moy, this morning, merely emphasizes the condition which confronted those present at the meeting last night and the end it not yet.

"We do not want this resolution published," said several of the women and their reason was that they did not want the board of education criticised, so they said. "But the facts remain," said Mr. Moy today, "publicity under present conditions is worth tons of reorimmations later. Publicity will make the necessary reforms quicker and better." Superintendent H. M. Maxson, who with President Leander Lovell, of the Board of Education, opposed publication of the proceedings, said this morning:

"We do not oppose publicity, but to favor it; only it seemed to me that if the reports were printed in the form in which they were read, they would be taken by the casual reader in a different spirit from that which the writers intended. I knew that they were written in a kindly, helpful spirit, but there were quite a number of minor things included, which were mere matters of housekeeping and when understood were not objectionable, but were, in fact, to be commended, yet the public, reading them in the way in which they were presented, would take them as criticism. If the reports were to be printed, these matters would better be left out, and attention concentrated on the main points, like the recommendation of a need of a toilet for the Franklin building, additional school accommodations, etc. These are matters of vital importance. Publicity will help attain them. I am sure the Board of Education would be glad to have all possible help in procuring the money to get them."

"I also suggested that the reports be presented to the Board of Education in condensed form, with specific requests, so that the Board would have definite issues to consider."

Haberle Must Support Family.

John Haberle, of North Plainfield township, who was arrested for non-support of his family, and had a hearing before Justice Hughes last night, furnished $200 bonds that he would pay eight dollars a week to his wife and children.

SOLVING A DIFFICULTY

"Yes, we've finished our housecleaning," said Mrs. Darby, with a sigh. "It was a great task and I'm glad it is over."

"We are waiting for the calcimoners," said the caller. "I certainly dread them."

"We didn't mind the decorators. It was on our dining-room rug that gave us the most worry."

"Oh, did you get a new one? I knew you said you were planning to do so."

"Well, we did—several of them," laughed Mrs. Darby. "Though our old one was not actually in holes, the family felt that it was dingy and Louise said it was old fashioned. George called my attention to the antiquated pattern of the center and Mame declared that it never had been a pretty rug. My husband said there was an indescribable something about it that made it look as if it had come out of the ark. I never knew my family to feel so strongly about anything before as they did about getting rid of that rug."

"I always liked it so much," remarked the caller.

"So did we, at first. But you know how you get to feel about things you have had a long time. The family were united on the subject. Perhaps we should not have noticed it so much if we had not invested in new bookcases. New furniture always manages to make everything else one may have in the room look so shabby."

"Yes, doesn't it?"

"Louis spoke of it first, for she believes in having things so new that the whole place smells of varnish."

"That's the way with young girls," said the caller.

"She said so much about it that I finally consented to get a new rug. I intended, of course, to choose it myself, but before I got around to it Louise went down and selected one. She came home so tired out that she had to go to bed, but she took satisfaction in telling me that the rug would be up in the next day.

"It came when she was over at Olive's, so I had the old rug taken up and the new one put down in order that she might get the effect as soon as she came in. There was a good deal of red in the border—that turkey red which is so very abominable—but I made no comment. Louise remarked so many times that the rug was a bargain that I began to suspect she was not satisfied, but, of course, she would not acknowledge it.

"As soon as it began to get dark she turned on the electric light, remarking that she had first seen the rug by artificial light. I could not see that it was improved by the change. When my husband came home he gave the rug one look and said it was atrocious, whereat Louise melted into tears.

"As a result we had the store send for the rug. My husband said he would stop in somewhere and choose one himself. He did, but he forgot to ask the price. I acknowledge that his taste was good, but I thought $300 was a little steep."

"Well, I should think so," said the caller.

"Aunt Martha was so disturbed by all the rug controversy," Mrs. Darby went on, "that she selected a choice specimen in shades of brown. She made the salesman carry it from window to window to get the different lights on it before she had it sent out. It really was a handsome rug, but when it was laid down it clashed with everything. We couldn't make up our minds just what was wrong, but something jarred on all of us. Even Aunt Martha had to acknowledge that it wouldn't do. By this time all our relatives were interested in our search and so many persons sent up rugs for our approval that I am sure the stores grew suspicious of us. There are people who keep their floors covered with rugs sent up on approval, you know."

"I've heard so," said the caller.

"I didn't mind the relatives so much," Mrs. Darby said, "but I was a little provoked when that Mrs. Kadew from across the street ran in and offered to sell me her dining room rug. She said they were breaking up housekeeping and would be glad to give me a bargain. I thought if my affairs were so much neighborhood property as all that something would have to be done."

"Oh, Mrs. Kadew always knows everything that's happening," said the caller.

"So I made up my mind to take the matter into my own hands."

"I should think you would have done so at the beginning," said the caller. "I should have insisted on it."

"Yes, but when you have kept house as long as I have you won't," said Mrs. Darby. "When everybody is so sure that a thing is very simple the best way is just to let everybody try it."

"How did the affair come out?" asked the caller. "I see you have a very handsome new rug on the floor now."

"That was my choice," said Mrs. Darby. "I had it put down and let the family see it without their knowing where it came from. Every one of them was perfectly satisfied with my selection. I made sure of that before I told them the story of the rug."

"You always had exquisite taste," said the caller.

"Thank you. But the point is that this isn't a new rug. It's just the old one cleaned."

HORSE SHOW JUNE 2, 3, 4

Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Judge Moore and J. W. Harriman Among Directors.

ORVILLE T. WARING PRESIDENT

The Officers Re-elected and Board Increased to Twenty Members —Who the New Ones Are.

Arrangements for the seventh annual horse show together with changes in the organization were effected at the annual meeting of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club Wednesday. The board of directors was increased from twelve to twenty the new members elected being Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Judge William H. Moore, J. W. Harriman, Edward R. Finch, and Frederick K. Bull, all of New York; Charles W. Watson, Baltimore, and Joseph W. Ogden and Walter P. Bliss, of Morristown. Tonzo Sauvage, of Morristown, was chosen to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of George A. Heaton, of this city, and Henry L. Finch in place of Daniel F. Ginna, both of this city. The other directors who continue in office are Orville T. Waring, of this city president; Robert A. Fairbairn, of Westfield, vice-president; Edwin S. Hooley, of this city, Plainfield, treasurer; William J. Buttfield, Charles J. Fisk, Charles W. McCutchen, George P. Mellick, Lewis E. Waring and S. A. Cruikshank, all of this city.

In former years the National Horse Show Association has always given Plainfield the immediately following the Philadelphia exhibition, but inasmuch as the Quaker City has not been able to make a financial success of the horse show and has therefore abandoned it, the local club will have its seventh annual exhibition earlier this year. The dates announced last night are Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 2, 3 and 4. Cups will be offered by Vanderbilt, Thomas W. Lawson, Edwin S. Hooley and two score of others, and an effort will be made to equal the Madison Square Fair.

President Waring last night announced these judges for the exhibition: Saddle horses and ponies in harness—R. Lawrence Smith, Smithtown, L. I.; hunters and jumpers—Clarence F. Levin, Avon, N. Y., and Major J. D. Harrison, of London, England; harness horses and ponies in harness—James G. Marshall, New York, and Walter P. Bliss, Morristown; roadsters—George Willing, Philadelphia.

These are the officers of the club: President, Orville T. Waring; vice-president, Robert A. Fairbairn; treasurer, Edwin S. Hooley; secretary, Lewis G. Timpson; assistant secretary, Charles W. Smith. The veterinary judge is Dr. E. R. Voorhees, of Somerville. President Waring will announce his committees in a fortnight.

ODD FELLOWS CELEBRATE NINETY-FIRST ANNIVERSARY

After the business, an adjournment was taken to the banquet rooms, where supper was served and a social session enjoyed. There were brief informal speeches by the visiting officers, during which Queen City Lodge was highly complimented for its fine work, it being the banner lodge of District No. 10, with a membership of two hundred. Adam Jordan is the present noble grand and was in charge of the program. The committee which provided the entertainment comprised George Slorah, Albert Ford and Clark Bird.

There were about one hundred Odd Fellows present from Rahway, Elizabeth, Perth Amboy and this city, and all entered heartily into the spirit of the occasion, being proud of the record of the order during the ninety-one years of its existence.

IS ALEX. S. GRANT DEAD?

Wife He Deserted Six Years Ago Hears That He is No More.

RECEIVES STRANGE LETTER.

"George E. Love" Writes from New York, that Grant Died, but Does Not Explain When, Where or How.

Mrs. Alexander S. Grant, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Hand, of 423 Orchard place, has received a letter from a man who signs himself George E. Love, that her husband is dead. The report came to her on Wednesday in a special delivery letter postmarked New York, but it failed to state where Mr. Grant died or give any further particulars. The writer further alleged that Mr. Grant had told him that he had a wife and child in Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant were married six years ago next month, and two months later Mr. Grant left his wife, going to Camden, where his relatives lived at that time. She says that she received a letter from him soon afterward in which he said that he was going west and instructing her not to write him unless she heard from him. She has received no word from him since that time but from time to time she has received postal cards from a person signing themselves "George E. Love" giving her to understand that Mr. Grant is dead. The postals have caused her much anxiety. One recently came from Philadelphia.

Mr. Grant came to Plainfield with the Pedrick & Ayer Machine Company, about six years ago, when that concern located here. Soon afterward he met Miss Ella Hand, whom he afterward married in June of that year and then left her two months later. Mrs. Grant has a daughter, Helen, who is about five years old. The former is employed at Young's laundry on East Third street. Sometime ago the institution proceedings for a divorce, which are now pending, but if her husband is dead, which she believe he is, further efforts on her part in obtaining a divorce would be unnecessary. The basis of her suit for divorce was desertion. She says that since he went away he has not contributed one penny toward her support and has made not the slightest effort to provide for her and her child.

Mourning stationery was used for the letter received by Mrs. Grant on Wednesday. She is unable to explain why this person who signs himself as "George E. Love" should conceal his identity or fail to inform her as to where her husband died, giving date, etc. She says that she knows no one by the name of "George E. Love." Mrs. Grant is about twenty-eight years of age and her husband was about the same age. Friends of Mrs. Grant believe that Grant himself wrote the letter.

JUDGE ADMONISHES ITALIAN OFFENDERS

Matteo Papillo, Nicolo Brazio and his wife, Maria, and several other Italians, residents in the little colony at 39 Watchung avenue, will hereafter keep the peace or pay into the city $50 apiece.

The scrap which occurred on Sunday, April 17, seemed to involve everybody in the house and, as appeared Thursday, was the result of an old feud between Papillo and the Brazios who happened to get the greatest number of wounds. Mrs. Brazio was cut on the head and her husband had contusions on his head and cuts on his face, while an innocent peacemaker, Frank Cuneo showed evidences of having been stabbed over the right eye.

Papillo declared, through an interpreter, that he had been threatened with a "Bigga da gun" in the hands of Nicolo Brazio, who was assisted by his wife, whose dextrous handling of a broomstick complicated the matter so that it was impossible to see anything but flying bedbottles and brooms.

Judge Runyon advised the excitable people to keep away from each other in the future and imposed fines of $50 in each case, suspending execution of the sentence pending further disturbances.

A Doctor's Wooing.

When Dr. Johnson asked the Widow Porter to be his wife he told her candidly that he had no money and that his uncle had been hanged. The widow replied that she cared nothing for his pecuniary status; that she had no money herself, and that, though she had no relation hanged, she had fifty who deserved hanging. So they made a match of it.

Unfamiliar Language.

"Oh, you, kiddo!" exclaimed the little Boston boy.

"Is that some Hungarian you have picked up, Waldo?" inquired Mrs. Backbay. "I have noticed you playing with a little foreign boy of late."

MONUMENT COMMITTEE DISCUSS COUNTY LAWS

Members of the Soldiers and Sailors' Monument Committee of the Board of Freeholders held a consultation Wednesday in the Courthouse at Elizabeth. Discussion was directed chiefly to the law which compels the county, through its supervisor of headstones, to see that the graves of all veterans are decorated with flags and flowers on Memorial Day.

General J. Madison Drake, supervisor, informed the committee yesterday that he had written to all the Grand Army posts in the county and explained that the county would furnish them with flags and flowers to decorate the graves in their sections, if so desired.

The general also made an interesting informal report on his work relative to marking the graves of the Continental soldiers buried in the county. He has just finished an examination of the records of the "Old First Church" in this city and took from the records the names of about 200 men who were buried in the churchyard between the years 1775 and 1810.

The records of the church burying ground during its early history, the general says, were kept in a manner peculiar to the time. He intends to trace the history of each name found in the records and learn, if possible, whether or not the man named was a soldier in the great war for liberty.

This will be an arduous undertaking, and it will probably take some time to glean the necessary facts. In glancing over the papers the general found the records of twenty-five graves in which it is stated soldiers were buried. One grave is marked "a rifleman;" another "Capt. ——." On still another grave the general finds the name of a man and his age as 67. An inscription says "died of old age."

The general is preparing a petition which will be presented to the trustees of the church asking them to set aside a plot of ground to be used by the county on which to erect Government monuments in memory of the unknown and known Continental soldiers. The freeholders' committee is agreed with the general that, as many graves cannot be loacted in the churchyard, a plot should be set apart and the monuments erected according to a plan to be suggested. The monuments will be inscribed "a soldier," and will cover imaginary graves.

In studying the law yesterday the committee learned a new point in regard to veterans' graves in the county. It is that the Board of Freeholders is responsible for the perpetual care and preservation of all the graves. This will mean considerable work and expenditure on the part of the county, as many graves have been neglected.

ASSESSMENTS FIXED ON P.S.C. GAS PLANT

The appeal of the P. S. C. from the assessment on its gas holder and property at East Fourth and Church streets was settled Thursday after a hearing before the State Board in the Court-house at Elizabeth when Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh made a vigorous and successful effort to have the work of the city assessors sustained.

The gas holders assessment was placed at $51,600 after Mr. Marsh had made a convincing argument before the Board to which L. D. H. Gilmour, representing the P. S. C., replied. Mr. Gilmour fought to have the assessment reduced to $40,000 on the ground that such a tank could be purchased for that price at the present time, but Mr. Marsh demanded that the assessment be fixed according to the original contract which was proven by the city's counsel. It was admitted by all concerned that $2,500, instead of $5,000, was a fair "assessment on the office building and trestles. The tax on $81,000 of personalty had already been paid. The assessment of $13,000 on the land stands as before.

Mr. Marsh proposed to have the decree entered forthwith to which Mr. Gilmour finally agreed. The decree was affirmed by the Board.

The Gray Day.

The sky of gray that hangs aloft
Is but an empty canvas where
Ere long the sun with colors soft
Again shall trace his pictures fair.

The lonely sullen hours we know,
That seem so void of hope and cheer,
Are backgrounds over which shall glow
The pleasures that we hold most dear.

—Exchange.

A Different Instrument.

"You are a typewriter, I believe?" said the professor.

"Yes, sir."

"Very good. Now, my dear young lady, in playing the piano, you must not pay too much attention to your speed."

MRS. ABBOTT'S LECTURE

An Illustrated Talk Given Before the Monday Afternoon Club.

TWENTY-SECOND ANNIVERSARY.

"The Period of Marie Antoinette" the Theme of Boston Woman —A Social Hour Follows.

A unique entertainment marked the twenty-second anniversary of the Monday Afternoon Club given Thursday afternoon at the Hartridge School auditorium. With an effective stage setting of evergreen and bay trees, "La Grande Pandore," a creation of John Colby Abbott, of Boston, illustrated "The Period of Marie Antoinette" in a causerie that was a pleasing combination of the instructive lecture and an exhibit of the foibles and furbelows of the past.

On account of the serious illness of Mr. Abbott, who was engaged to give the lecture, his wife, Mrs. Abbott, acted as his substitute, proving herself an interesting speaker with much charm of manner. She told of the famous fashion doll in the Court of Louis XIV. called "La Grande Pandore," the costumes being set by the king's edict, and copies of each new vogue sent to Rome, Vienna and London. With the cardboard imitation of this famous doll and exquisitely painted costumes, Mrs. Abbott had not a mere running account of different styles of dress at varying periods, but showed in a most interesting manner, the inter-relation between clothes and society and how a political reborend might lead from one extreme to another as the fashions of the day. Many of the extravagant and preposterous head dresses grew out of some social intrigue or national crisis. One arrangement, honored a dead king and welcomed his successor, another commemorated a naval victory, and another with intent to please Americans was called "The Chapeau de Bunker Hill."

The tragic history of Marie Antoinette was told in the changing costumes, giving a pageant of Versailles and Trianon, until the last gala day that preceded the Revolution and her sad fate.

The beautiful little poem so well recited and so effectively concluding the pathetic story of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette, we have learned incidentally, was written by Mrs. Abbott.

At the conclusion of the entertainment refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed. The large number of club members and their guests were received by Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch, the president, Miss Susan Hubbell, a vice-president, and Mrs. Henry M. Maxson, the former president.

The auditorium was beautifully decorated with branches of dogwood and the table was a pretty sight with pink shaded candles and an exquisite basket of pink and lilac flowers. The entertainment committee deserves much credit for their successful efforts in beautifying the hall and securing the comfort of their guests. The members of the committee were: Mrs. Frank D. Warren, Mrs. Charles H. Tompkins, Mrs. James R. Joy, Mrs. Frederick W. Yates and Mrs. Noah C. Barnhart.

LOUIS MOREL, SR., DIES AGED SEVENTY-SIX YEARS

Louis Morel, Sr., for thirty-eight years a resident of Scotch Plains, died Thursday. Death was due to the infirmities of old age. Mr. Morel was seventy-six years of age and was a native of France. He was well known at Scotch Plains and this vicinity where he was employed by several families of a landscape gardener.

Surviving the dead man is Louis Morel, Jr., who is engaged in the plumbing and heating business at Scotch Plains, and a son-in-law, John Warta, of Siegfried, Pa. Mr. Morel's wife died on March 4, 1909, and since that time he has been in feeble health.

"So I notice," responded Adam. "It's just a fad; it can't last."

FIVE HUNDRED MILE SPIN ON RUNAWAY MOTORCYCLE

Valentine McLaughlin, a Dunellen barber, had a 500 mile spin on a motorcycle Wednesday which he will not forget in years. Six months ago McLaughlin was bequeathed $5,000 and last week he received the legacy. The first purchase he made with his funds was a $300 motorcycle.

McLaughlin received the machine on Saturday and he started taking lessons on Monday. Wednesday Mr. McLaughlin conceived the idea that he was able to operate the machine and he started out on a ride.

He had a ride. He mounted the machine and never got off until he had covered about 500 miles of territory. McLaughlin's thrilling journey was due to the failure of the controller or "throttle" of the machine to work and he was obliged to remain on the machine until the six quarts of gasoline gave out. When that time came McLaughlin was exhausted and fell from the machine near Peapack.

According to McLaughlin he covered and re-covered a large aera of territory. Leaving Dunellen he journeyed to Somerville. It was at that town that he discovered that the controller on the machine refused to work and there was nothing for him to do then but to remain on the machine.

From Somerville McLaughlin steered his machine over the bumpy course to Peapack. Through this staid old village McLaughlin and his machine whizzed through at a 60-mile-an-hour clip to the consternation of the natives.

From Peapack McLaughlin turned around and returned to Somerville, and then he retraced back to Peapack. Realizing his predicament McLaughlin decided to continue on and stick to the machine until the gasolene supply was exhausted. He bolted through Bernardsville, thence to Morristown, through Madison, Chatham and over the hills to Newark.

After whizzing through Newark thoroughfares for half an hour McLaughlin steered off toward Springfield and took the Union county road toward home. When Scotch Plains was reached the machine slackened its speed but McLaughlin didn't have the grit to jump off. On South avenue, Plainfield, the machine gave out, the machine gave a wobble and McLaughlin fell off in the road.

McLaughlin left Dunellen at 10 o'clock in the morning and it was 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon when he fell from his machine. He was found by Frank Seaside, along-side of his machine, by John Bloodgood, a farmer of Willow Grove. McLaughlin sustained numerous bruises by the fall but he was not seriously hurt. Dr. F. W. Westcott, of Fanwood, attended McLaughlin.

NEW JERSEY PLANS TO WELCOME G. A. R.

Plans for the participation of New Jersey in the annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which will open at Atlantic City September 19, were discussed in the executive chamber Thursday by Governor Fort and a delegation consisting of Colonel Charles Boroughs, of Rutherford; Frank M. Sterrett, executive director of the National Encampment; J. Haynes Lippincott, treasurer of the Committee of One Hundred of Atlantic City, and A. T. Bell, of Atlantic City. State Treasurer Daniel S. Voorhees and State Controller Henry J. West were also present.

It was partly at the request of Mr. Voorhees that the conference was called to determine the regulations which should govern the expenditure of $25,000 provided for in the bill of Senator Edmund Wilson, of Atlantic county, for the entertainment of visitors at the encampment. It was agreed that the State Treasurer should formulae rules for the expenditure of the money.

Of the appropriation it was decided that one third should be turned over to the Citizens' Committee thereof, one-third in July and one third in September.

Announcement was made yesterday by the Governor that the Sea Girt camp of the National Guard would be held from July 25 to August 6, this year, two weeks instead of five, one-third of the latter period is due to the fact that the First Brigade will manoeuvre with the regular army at Gettysburg.

Only Preaching, Perhaps.

A clergyman, the other day, told a story in his sermon which, in the opinion of some of his auditors, required considerable faith to swallow. This opinion was fully shared by the clergyman's little daughter, who, at the dinner table, looked earnestly at her father and asked him if the story was quite true.

"Why, certainly, my child," answered the minister in amazement; "but why do you ask me?"

"Oh," she responded, very quickly; "I don't know—I thought that maybe you were only preaching."

DEATH OF L. L. MANNING

A Well Known Business Man Succumbs to Heart Disease.

AGED SEVENTY-TWO YEARS.

For Fifty Years He Was Engaged as Marble Cutter—Funeral Services on Sunday Afternoon.

Lebbeus L. Manning, aged seventy-two years, one of the best known residents of this city and for over fifty years a successful business man here, died at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon at his home, 807 West Seventh street., following an illness of less than two weeks with heart trouble. He was taken ill with a severe cold, which compelled him to give up business. Complications of the heart developed and he rapidly grew worse despite the best of medical attention.

Mr. Manning was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Manning, and was born near Sauptown. The family has been connected with the earliest history of this city, being prominent in many ways. Mr. Manning always lived here. He learned his trade as a marble cutter with Andrew Anderson and worked for him for many years. Later he engaged in business for himself at West Front street and Central avenue, acquiring that property, and for more than fifty years was successful. He was a man of the highest integrity and respected by all who knew him.

He carried on an extensive business in marble cutting and during his business career erected hundreds of monuments not only in this city, but throughout the whole State. On many occasions he was engaged to make special works of art in his line from elaborate designs drawn by well-known artists. There were instances of where such monuments cost thousands of dollars and the execution was perfect.

Mr. Manning was a life-long member of the First Baptist church and a regular attendant at all the services. Until taken ill recently, he always enjoyed the best of health and had spent some time in pleasure travel. His last trip was to Bermuda with Mrs. Manning and a party of Plainfielders.

Mr. Manning was married twice, his second wife, who survives him, being Miss Heyniger, also of this city. He also leaves a daughter, Mrs. Philip Macintyre, and a son, Walter M. Manning, of this city, by his first marriage; also a brother, Daniel Manning, of this city, and a sister, Mrs. David Townsend, of Bound Brook.

JURY ACQUITS RICHARDSON OF CRUELTY CHARGE

It required a jury of "twelve good men and true" to decide that Robert I. Richardson was justified in shooting a bulldog which attacked his pair of setters on Sunday, March 27, and at the same time exonerated Mr. Richardson for protecting his property. Westfield was the scene of the trial and Judge Tounce presided. Walter L. Hetfield defended Mr. Richardson, while Paul Q. Olliver prosecuted the case for the S. P. C. A., represented by Mrs. Van Hoesen.

The story as told in court showed that Mr. Richardson, with his friends, Messrs. Dallas and Walker, had been accustomed to take their dogs out for an airing every Sunday morning, weather permitting, and that on Sunday, March 27, while passing the home of John Keegan, in Westfield, a bulldog owned by Mr. Keegan attacked the dogs held in leash by the three men. Ordinary persuasion augmented by sundry kicks and blows failed to make Keegan's dog release his hold on Mr. Richardson's dog, and the bulldog ex-Sheriff Richardson, having in mind the recent mad dog scare and having prepared for an emergency, drew his revolver and fired a shot over the head of the belligerent bull. This had no effect and the next shot took effect in the anatomy of the bulldog so effectively that he released his hold and went whining home.

Dr. Butler, a veterinary of Westfield, extracted the bullet from Mr. Keegan's dog and the pugnacious animal is alive now and appears to be getting stronger every day.

The cruelty charge, in the light of recent happenings in Westfield could hardly be sustained and especially so when Mr. Keegan had warned others of the ferocious character of his dog. The excitement has not entirely disappeared in Westfield and strange dogs or those which exhibit unusual traits are liable to meet with summary treatment.

FANWOOD FEELS FUNNY

When the Township Committee Meets to Consider Certain Things.

'PHONE FRANCHISE TO WAIT.

Suit Against John Mair by Mr. Guttridge Subject to Decision of Court.

At the meeting of the Fanwood Township Committee Friday night, something outside the ordinary took place including the petition of the New York Telephone for wire privileges in the township and a calling to account of the P. & R. Railway for the running of a car. Then, the suit instituted by James Guttridge against John Mair for false arrest in which the amount involved is $10,000, was aired, and some complicated matters in connection therewith made plain.

The petition of the New York Telephone Company for permission to lay or string its wires was referred to Township Counsel Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and the matter will be taken up at a special meeting of the committee on May 7. The withdrawal of the 8 o'clock car, the trolley car on Sundays was the subject of protest and the corporation was notified that it was violating the terms of the franchise in withdrawing the car. This matter will be pushed.

A committee headed by John Mair made a further complaint against the rendering factory of the Glazer Company and according to all accounts the story of complaint against the company was a rehash of the story so frequently mentioned in this paper. The committee listened patiently to the tales of woe presented by the citizens of Alton and advised the complaining people to put their grievances in proper form of affidavit after which the proper attention will be given the complaint.

In the matter of the suit brought by the 8 o'clock car, the $10,000 to which the attention of everybody in the township appears to have been called, and which the defendant in the suit, John Mair, claimed that the Township Committee should assume the expense of suit, will have to wait for the case in October next, when the perplexing question as to errors in the framing of the complaint, on which Mr. Guttridge suffered arrest, are settled.

'COLLEGE' ATHLETIC MEET AT GRACE M.E. CHURCH

A miniature college athletic meet furnished a unique entertainment given under the auspices of the Epworth League of the Grace M. E. church Friday night. There were four teams in the competition, Princeton, Columbus, Cornell and Yale. The Tiger team, captained by Clarence Steiner, was victorious. David Smalley captained the Yale aggregation; Rev. Ora J. Shoop, piloted Columbia, and Russell Hardin headed the Ithicans.

Football was played on a board with ping pong balls. Other games entered into the fun of the night, throwing the discus and a fan ball contest. The members of the different teams wore miniature flags indicating the colors of the various colleges represented.

Despite the stormy weather about seventy-five were in attendance, following the "athletic contests" refreshments were enjoyed. The entertainment was supervised by J. Russell Hardin and Raymond Miller and these were assisted by the social committee of the league which consisted of the Misses Grace and Lucetta Clark, Ada Van Horne, Mary Steiner, Edith Major, Nettie Bauersachs, Benjamin Schuck and David Smalley.

Making Underwear.

When making up flannel garments it is a good plan to wash the flannel before cutting the garment. Even the best makes of flannel have an unpleasant way of shrinking and it is very annoying to find that the garment has become too tight after it has been washed two or three times. If not washed, it is wise to make flannel garments loose to allow for shrinking.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Wholesome, native American humor never scored a more sweeping victory than in "The Fortune Hunter," Winchell Smith's comedy of town and country, which is now in its thirty-fifth crowded week at the Gaiety theatre, at 46th street and Broadway. This pleasant piece so perfectly played by John Barrymore and his supporting company has won the cordial commendation of ministers, priests and rabbis in New York and Chicago. Vice-President Sherman declared on his last visit to New York that he came from Washington to see it." The story is engrossing in its cumulative interest, the stage pictures are so typical and the humor so redolent of the soil that the American play-goer feels that here at last is a comedy that is nobly of the United States. The end of the run is still far, far away and seats are selling four weeks in advance. All visitors to New York should see "The Fortune Hunter." It represents theb est in our national life and throughout it is delightfully entertaining. Up-to-date advice has been given from a score of New York pulpits to see this comedy and to learn of what high things the modern stage is capable. John Barrymore heads the cast which includes Mary Ryan, Eda Bruns, Forrest Robinson, Hale Hamilton, Ethel Dovey and many other sterling artists. Especial attention is paid to orders from out of town and reservations are first made for those coming from a distance.

Not long before Clyde Fitch died, last summer, he declared to a friend that "The City" was the finest play he had ever written. "The City," which is being produced at the Lyric theatre, where it ought to stay for many months to come, is deprived of those intimate bits of individualism which the playwright was accustomed to bestow upon his plays; but for all that its first hearing amply justified its author's confidence. The last thing that Clyde Fitch ever did, it is also far and away the most powerful. Mr. Fitch is said to have declared that he set out to write "The City" as an answer to people who had said that he was all very well as a student of feminine foibles, but that he couldn't write a "man's play." Now if by this he meant a play whose principal act is a masterpiece of suspense, piling climax on climax, a play in which even the shooting of a girl by a man who has married her an hour before and now finds out that she is his own half-sister, is made the climax that is three or four climaxes below the supreme climax, then Mr. Fitch's last play is surely a "man's play." Thrill followed thrill, gasp crowded hard upon the heels of gasp until, when the curtain at last fell, the resultant long-pent enthusiasm was really a tumult.

Maud Milton, who is playing the Marquise de Sé Maur in Charles Frohman's revival of "Caste" at the Empire theatre, is prominent in England as a Shakespearean actress, Miss Milton played with Sir Henry Irving ten years, and was leading woman with Edwin Booth, Wilson Barrett and Madame Modjeska. She has made several tours of the United States, the first with Wilson Barrett in "The Silver King" and "Claudian;" later with Edna May in "The Catch of Meadow Bloom;" again with Irving, and this season with Marie Tempest in "Penelope." Miss Milton talks enthusiastically of her workers, she enjoys vacation times best. "When one has acted as long as I have," she says, "one is justified in feeling a little tired of working. Really, you know, I ought to have been a farmer's wife, for then I could indulge my passions for gardening and raising cats and rabbits to my heart's content."

SOUTH PLAINFIELDS ARE VICTORIOUS AT RAHWAY.

That the South Plainfields are playing fast ball was demonstrated on Sunday when Manager McDonough's combination journeyed to Rahway and defeated the strong El Cid A. C. of that place by the score of 2 to 1. The Mullin brothers put up a gilt edged article of ball and the snappy playing of the entire infield was a feature of the game. Ramsberger made his initial appearance on third sack and made a favorable impression. The lineups:

TO EXTEND THE SEWERS

Public Hearing on Night When Bids for Work Will Be Accepted.

FOR THE FINAL PASSAGE.

Gloak Also Has Passed to Third Reading Besides an Ordinance for $30,000 Bonds for Street Improvements.

Among several proposed ordinances introduced at the May meeting of the Common Council Monday night was one presented by Chairman Gloak of the street committee, providing for an extension of the sanitary sewer system, and the installation of two pumping stations and all other necessary equipment. The ordinance carried with it a provision for accepting bids for the necessary work on Monday night, June 6, and maps, plans, specifications, etc., were filed last night. The ordinance was adopted on two readings and ordered advertised and a public hearing will be granted on June 6.

The streets included in the extension of the sewage system are Monroe avenue to Sherman avenue, Hobart avenue, West Fourth and Fifth street, West Eighth street to Monroe avenue, West Seventh and Eighth streets, Sherman avenue, Plainfield avenue, Randolph road, Radcliffe street and East Front street.

Another ordinance offered by Mr. Gloak and adopted on two readings and ordered advertised, provided for the issuance of $30,000 worth of street improvement bonds, to date 1910, run for three years and bear interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. The streets to be improved on petition, shall be macadamized with a bituminous binder and be equal to the work on Union street, between Arlington and Stelle avenue. The work is to be given out by contract to the lowest bidder. The ordinance further provides for the appointment of commissioners by the court for the assessment of benefits and damages. A public hearing will be granted on the ordinance June 6.

MURDERER PRESENTED A NATTY APPEARANCE

When John V. Buckley, alias John Grant, slayer of Mrs. Frederick Coveley, appeared before Judge Parker in the Supreme Court at Somerville, yesterday, and heard his counsel, Robert Newton Crane, enter a plea of not guilty to the indictment of murder against him, the youth was hardly recognized by persons who saw him after he had been arrested.

Buckley presented a natty appearance. He was attired in a dark gray suit and wore a white shirt, a new collar and a tie. Buckley was also carefully groomed, having his hair trimmed and neatly parted on the left side. As he faced the judge he gave every appearance of a happy schoolboy of sixteen, instead of an unkempt and happy-go-lucky individual as he appeared when placed under arrest.

The youth was as "cool as a cucumber" when the court crier shouted, "Prisoner to the bar." This command was heard without a tremor and he answered with alacrity to the bar with his counsel, Mr. Crane. After Lawyer Crane entered a plea of not guilty, and Judge Parker announced Wednesday, June 1, as the date for the trial, Buckley nodded and smiled at his counsel.

One of the peculiar features of the case is that neither the prisoner's counsel or the prosecution has heard anything from the boy's relatives, who are supposed to be living at Charlestown, Mass., and now it is a question as to whether they are living or dead, or moved to other parts.

Since the arrest of the prisoner, Buckley has exhibited a fondness for making confessions. The prosecution, it is said, has in hand five confessions made by Buckley from as many different witnesses. When Counselor Crane was questioned on this point he said:

"Yes, that's so, but that won't make any difference to the line of defense."

Since his residence in this city and vicinity Buckley it is asserted cultivated a friendship with only five persons, two of whom are sticking to him in his trouble.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Rev. Henry N. Jordan has been appointed as census enumerator for a portion of Piscataway township and the New Market district.

John Acton and family have taken possession of the house on North avenue, which was recently vacated by John Tinsman and family.

Members of the borough fire department have completed a test of all of the hydrants and found all in good condition.

Earl Fulton has decided to learn the electric business and has entered the employ of F. F. Randolph as an apprentice.

WHAT TO OBSERVE IN HEAVENS IN MAY

The United States Weather Bureau has sent out the following memorandum relative to observations to be made on May 17 and 18 especially, and 19. John Neagle requests all interested to assist him in making observations and report the same to him.

First. Auroral displays. Auroras serve as indicators of the electrical state of the outer atmosphere, and as this state possibly may be affected by the tail of the comet as we pass through it, auroras should be watched for at that time. The location, color, shape, extent, and other features as well as the times of appearance, changes and disappearance should all be carefully noted.

Second. Meteoric trails. The number, times of appearance, lengths of duration, and direction and lengths of visible paths of meteors should be noted on all three nights, but especially on the night of the eighteenth.

Third. Bishop's ring. This curious effect of light was seen around the sun after the eruptions both of Krakatoa and Mount Pele, and conceivably might also follow the passage of the earth through the tail of a comet. It therefore should be carefully looked for on the days specified, and, occasionally, for some days thereafter. As the light of this ring is rather faint, observations of it are best made when the sun is hidden behind some steeple or other opaque object.

Fourth. Color of the sun and sky. Both the general color of the sky and the color of the sun depend on the dust and other contents of the atmosphere, and should be carefully noted on the given dates.

Fifth. Twilight phenomena. Twilight colors, their distribution, and order of changes depend largely on the work of atmosphere, and, consequently, these are phenomena that need to be observed on the days indicated.

Sixth. Luminous clouds. Neither the material of these clouds nor the cause of their light is definitely known, but they belong to the very high atmosphere, and therefore should be looked for at night in connection with out transit across the comet's tail. These clouds are circus-like in appearance, but may be distinguished from the true ones by the fact that they are brighter than the background of the clear nocturnal sky. During the forepart of the night they are seen above the northwestern horizon.

Seventh. Zodiacal light. From work recently done at the Lick and at the Mount Wilson observatories it is probable that the zodiacal light is caused by the reflection of solar light from dust in and near the plane of the ecliptic. If so, then a change might be expected in it at the time of the comet's near approach to the earth, and therefore its extent, brilliancy, and other features of the zodiacal light as they appear at that time should be carefully noted.

Eighth. Gegenschein (counter glow). But little is known of the cause of this faint glow seen in the ecliptic at a point directly opposite to the sun, or along the shadow of the earth. Presumably it has the same origin as the zodiacal light, and consequently may be modified during the transit of the earth across the tail of a comet. At any rate it should be observed on the nights mentioned, and its brilliancy at these times compared with that on nights when there certainly is no cometary disturbance. To locate the gegenschein at any hour of the night, look in the direction where the sun was twelve hours previously.

Ninth. General phenomena. Solar and lunar halos and coronas, and all other appearances that may seem unusual and worth noting.

*Owing to the position of the moon on the given dates it is probable that the most satisfactory night observations will be obtained during the last two or three hours before daylight.

DECISION FAVORS CHILDREN.

Jersey City, May 4.—A decision involving the three Warren estate, worth $200,000 has just been handed down by Vice Chancellor Garrison. The decision is in favor of the testator's children.

It was provided in the will that the estate was to be conveyed to the children as they became of age, provided all mortgages had been paid off, or if the mortgages had not been paid off when the children had attained majority the trust was to continue until the mortgages had been liquidated.

When the youngest child became of age, in March, 1909, the mortgages still remained unpaid. The children, claiming they alone had any interest in the property, offered to pay off the mortgages and demanded that the trustees convey the property to them. Warren would not agree to this, and a suit in chancery was instituted.

Harry C. Smith and family, late of Scotch Plains, have taken up their residence on North avenue.

The condition of Neil Huff, who is at Liberty, New York, is reported to be slightly improved.

A TOUR ABOUND ETNA.

The tour which the King and Queen made around Etna is one of the most beautiful and interesting, as well as the least known in Sicily. The light omnibus or steam tram goes straight uphill from Giarre, through olive woods, groves of lemon trees—loaded at this season with the pale, waxy fruit, set round with ivory blossoms—and orange trees with masses of red gold oranges, says the Pall Mall Gazette.

The air is heavy with the scent of white cloves, and the railway banks are ablaze with mesembryanthemum, great rose pink flowers the size of saucers. Along the railway runs the old road—that road which Hamilcar followed four hundred years before the Christian era, and where Charles V. and his armies marched in 1324 A. D. Old, old towns remain which saw their passing. The yellow brown walls and towers of Castigilione stand out against the deep blue ravine of the Alcantara Valley. Palermo recalls the Saracen ravages everywhere from time to time; a hideous torrent of petrified lava reminds one of the other terror which within these fair scenes are so familiar.

The highest town upon the mountain slopes is Randazzo, and here a night's lodging is possible with the help of a well-filled luncheon basket. Randazzo, though so close to the crater, has always escaped destruction, and its most important place in the Middle Ages, and the tall spikes on its ducal palace still tell where many a noble Sicilian head has moulded away. The green copper domes of its churches, interspersed with tall cypresses, would drive a painter wild with delight. The women and girls wear shawls drawn over their heads of a coarse cream woolen stuff, which look very picturesque in the back streets.

The country, as the railway winds up above Randazzo, is one sheet of lava. The petrified flood extends on all sides and it is difficult to believe that that swishing torrent is really hard and still. Woodspurge has grown up among it, and the flowers have taken rich colors yellow and orange and crimson from the iron in the soil, as are in startling contrast to the black masses, behind which arches the blue purple slopes till they reach the snowy cone, and we behold Etna enthroned in all her glory.

As the train reaches the highest point and begins to go rapidly down, it passes Bronte, the station for Maniace, the ducal estate which Ferdinand IV. presented to Lord Nelson, and which is still the property of his descendants.

At one station a group of peasants are assembled to bid farewell to a young emigrant, such handclasps and kisses on both checks, the poor boy must undergo before he can take his place at the back of the train and looks long to get the last glimpse of his mountains. If he makes money he will come back to build a tiny house and end his days under the shadow of Etna. Every mile of the country has historical associations. Below Aderno, and near it in ancient days was the Temple of Hardranos, guarded by a thousand dogs.

The railway rolls down to the rich warm air and semi-tropical vegetation. Lemon orchards and geranium hedges smile round bright Catania, but even among the white villas and fragrant gardens the traveller is aware of that presence, that serpent's course, which has followed them from their mountain heights to the very edge of the land and is only lost to sight beneath the peacock blue waters of the Sicilian Sea.

CITY FATHERS RECEIVE REPORTS AND PETITIONS

Residents of the West End renewed their request to the Common Council Monday, in reference to extending Dunellen avenue and joining it with Myrtle avenue in the borough, calling attention to the many benefits that would be derived from the improvement, providing a thoroughfare free from car tracks and other undesirable features. The matter was referred to the committee on streets.

The Public Service Corporation notified the Council that it had erected seven electric lights as ordered and that they are now in service. The usual request was received from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., for an appropriation for the observance of Memorial Day. The matter was referred.

Residents of Radcliffe place asked for sanitary sewers and this was referred to the sewer committee. The agreement between the city and the Spicer Universal Joint Company, for the blowing of the fire alarm was received and ordered filed.

The result of the recent water election was officially reported by the Boards of Election and Registry and ordered entered on the minutes at large.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Herlick have been entertaining friends from New York and Barnegat.

MAJOR W. B. MARTIN ATTENDS CO. K DRILL

Major W. B. Martin was among the distinguished visitors at the drill of Co. K Monday when Captain Kitchell put the men through their maneuvres and was also present at the business meeting which followed. At the latter session it was announced that the outdoor drills would be resumed next Monday.

Sergeant A. R. Tranchand was present and bade good bye to the boys as he stars today for New Orleans. Sergeant Tranchand received the good wishes of the whole company in his future work and they all expressed sorrow at losing him from the company. Next Monday night an election will be held to select a successor to Corporal Samuel Rothberg, who has completed five years of active service and who leaves with regret. Corporal "Sam" has always been looked upon as one of the standbys of the company and only resigns because duties in another direction demands his time.

When asked this morning what he would do in case for the services of the company became necessary in an emergency, Sam said "I'd stand with the company first, last and all the time and with the country forever."

FOWLER STILL WARS ON SPEAKER CANNON

Announcement was made yesterday that Representative Fowler of New Jersey will make no effort to force the consideration of his resolution providing for the creation of a committee on committees. This resolution was brought up in the House some weeks ago and caused a stir for about a minute. It was thrown into the House without notice and for a time it was thought Mr. Fowler was going to insist upon a vote. It developed, however, that the resolution specifically set forth that it should not be taken up for debate until May 2. The insurgents say they have no desire to place any obstacles in the way of the Administration's legislative program and they have persuaded Mr. Fowler to hold off for a time.

In an interview yesterday Congressman Fowler said:

"My resolution, which, by its terms was to be called up not earlier than Monday, May 2, was introduced by me for the purpose of calling the attention of the House and the country to that reform that goes to the very core of Cannonism—viz., the power to make and unmake men by appointing the 400 members of the House upon the various committees.

"When this reform is effected, it will strip the office of Speaker of its chief, if indeed, not its only power for political graft or political corruption, and relieve every member from all obligations to the official spoilsman, whoever he may be, and make him a free representative of his constituents.

"The resolution will be called up at the proper time after those who have this important reform at heart have fully considered the matter and agreed upon the exact terms of the resolution to be adopted.

"To me, great advantages seem to be in favor of the terms of my resolution because through it the population, geography, the business interests and the dominant political representation in any one of the seven districts in which the country is divided by a railway rolls down to the rich warm air and semi-tropical vegetation. Lemon orchards and geranium hedges smile round bright Catania, but even among the white villas and fragrant gardens the traveller is aware of that presence, that serpent's course, which has followed them from their mountain heights to the very edge of the land and is only lost to sight beneath the peacock blue waters of the Sicilian Sea.

"Unless the Republican party now demonstrates its power to regenerate and reform itself, the people will perform that service for it as they did at Rochester, N. Y., last week. And unless the Democratic members of the House now join with the progressive Republicans in achieving this all-important reform, the people will repudiate those Democrats at the polls who have proved recreant to their plighted faith. Indeed, everyone will be put on trial for his political life when the roll-call is called up, and if he fails to respond to the voice of the people who are more interested in the moral awakening of the hour than the success of either party, he will go home only to receive his just sentence. For the people will not stand for a political or commercial graft in every form shall be stamped out so far as human ingenuity can accomplish it.

"Every sign of these present times marks the pending conflict as one of good faith and morals—political and commercial. The people are behind a revival of old-fashioned common honesty in every phase of human life; and, if the leaders of either party fail to see it, the people will take pains to demonstrate that fact. Indeed, it is the desire and determination of the American people that the parties shall stand for the best thought and highest ideals of this nation. And that party which fails to appreciate this fact will cease to be the party of the people."

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church will hold its monthly business meeting Friday night in Vincent chapel. This will be the last meeting before the election of officers for the new year and a large attendance is desired.

CITY FATHERS ENDORSE PHTHISIS HOME PLAN

During a suspension of business at the May meeting of the Common Council, Monday, the privileges of the floor were extended to William Dutcher, president of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield, to explain the advantages of a proposed plan to establish a hospital in the county for the care and treatment of tuberculosis patients. Dr. F. E. DuBois, also an officer of the league was present but did not speak.

Mr. Dutcher made a brief address after a communication from the Board of Freeholders was read. In this letter it was stated that a resolution had been adopted by the board favoring the plant and requested the Council for its endorsement. A communication was also received from the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield urging favorable action.

Bill No. 263, passed at the recent session of the Legislature of Freeholders power to establish such hospitals, was explained by Mr. Dutcher. He explained what had been done and what is being done in Plainfield through the league to stay the progress of the disease. Later in the evening the city fathers on motion of Mr. Mygatt endorsed the "county plan," the matter having been referred to the committee on public affairs. The Board of Freeholders will be informed of this action.

CITY COUNSEL REPORTS ON OUR LEGAL AFFAIRS

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh presented a report to the Common Council at its May meeting, Monday, relative to several legal matters pertaining to the city. He stated that the case of the Seigel, Cooper Company against the city, is now held up pending an appeal, and in the case of the city against Steinman, ejectment proceedings, execution papers were issued, the building in question was removed and the entire cost put on the defendant. Mr. Marsh said that the case of the American Sewage Disposal Company against the city remains in status quo. He also reported that he had paid H. P. Reynolds $150 on account of damages in connection with the widening of Sycamore street, and obtained his release therefore.

Mr. Marsh also reported the settlement of the tax assessment matter with the Public Service Corporation, as reported in The Daily Press a few days ago. The assessments referred to apply to the company's holdings in this city, including the large gas holder between Watchung avenue and Church street. The report of Mr. Marsh was filed.

APPROPRIATION MADE FOR POLICE CHIEF'S TRIP

A resolution offered by Councilman C. C. Randolph at the May meeting of the Common Council, Monday granting Chief of Police P. S. Kiely a ten days' leave of absence to attend the convention of police chiefs at Birmingham, Ala., and appropriating $100 for chief's expenses, met strong protest on the part of Councilmen Mygatt and Holt, representing the majority of the police committee.

"The majority of the police committee is against this resolution," declared Mr. Holt, "granting the chief ten days leave with an expenditure of $100. It is not necessary to send the chief away every year, especially in view of the economy that is now being practiced in the police and other departments. With out limited force I am opposed to the resolution."

Mr. Mygatt also protested. When Mr. Holt had expressed himself, Mr. Mygatt said: "We cannot afford what we want in the police department and yet we plan to send the chief away for ten days. The services of the chief at home will be more important than at Birmingham. I believe that this action is absolutely unwarranted at this time. We are not obliged year after year to send the chief away on such a trip and I protest strongly against the action."

A vote on the resolution was then taken with the result: Ayes—Councilmen Buxton, C. C. Randolph, Frank Randolph, Taylor, Tolles, Gloak, Wilson and Montgomery. Nayes—Councilmen Mygatt and Holt.

FOR WATER PROBE $5,000

First Appropriation for Municipal Ownership Investigation.

TO ENGAGE AN ENGINEER.

Public Affairs Committee to Go Ahead With the Idea for Public Ownership of Water Plant.

That it is the intention of the Common Council to follow out the purpose of its original plans regarding the water question was shown at the May meeting Monday, when in accordance with a resolution offered by Councilman F. E. Mygatt, chairman of the special water commission, $5,000 was appropriated, the major portion of which will be paid a competent engineer, who will advise the city as to water supply, ways and means of establishing either an independent plant or adopting condemnation proceedings in a plan to acquire the present plant of the local water company.

The resolution carried with it the statement that the question submitted to the voters of the city had been assented to and in view of this $5,000 was appropriated for accomplishing the purposes as set forth in the question voted upon, under the provisions of the Legislative act giving the city the authority to provide itself with a pure and wholesome water supply.

The resolution also named F. E. Mygatt, George S. Clay, Frank L. Holt, William L. Gloak and F. L. Montgomery, also the committee on public affairs, to take up the matter with the engineer to be engaged for the purposes named.

GENERAL GRUBB URGES A CLEANER ELECTION

Edgewater Park, May 4.—Declaring that, before any political party can hope to make good its campaign pledges to the people, it will be necessary for the Federal Government and the individual States to enact more powerful laws to prevent unscrupulous men from buying their way into office, General Grubb has issued an open letter on the subject. He urges Democratic candidates for the Legislature and for Congress in the coming campaign to make his suggestions a part of their platforms.

The general's proposition is an amendment to the election laws making the well-sustained charge of bribery in the interest of a candidate a powerful lever by which he can be pried from the seat thus purchased and prevented from again seeking public office. In his letter, General Grubb cites the conditions in New Jersey under the laws to-day and compares them with similar scenes in England before that nation adopted anti-bribery laws.

General Grubb would have the following amendments placed on the statute books looking toward the abolishment of bribery:

"Upon the trial of an election petition, reporting that any corrupt practise has been proved to have been committed in reference to such election, by or with the knowledge and consent of any candidate at such election or that the offense of treating or undue influence has been proved to have been committed in reference to such election, by any candidate of such election, that candidate shall not be capable of ever being elected to or sitting in the Legislature of this State, and if he shall have been elected his election shall be void and he shall have to be subject to the same incapacity as if at the date of said report he had been convicted on an indictment of a corrupt practise.

"If, upon the trial, the electors shall report in writing to the speaker that a candidate has been guilty either by himself or his agents of any corrupt practise in reference to such election that candidate shall not be capable of being elected and sitting for seven years after the date of the report, and his election shall be void, and any person who is convicted on an indictment of any corrupt practise (in addition to any punishment as above provided) shall not be capable during the seven years after the date of his conviction of holding any public or judicial office within the meaning of this act, and if he shall hold any such office the said office shall be vacated."

DEAN RODMAN MEMORIAL

Costly High Altar and Reredos in Memory of Beloved Clergyman.

AT GRACE EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

The Altar to Be of White Marble and Reredos of French Stone

—The Estimated Cost Is $6,000.

The parishioners of Grace church are planning to erect a handsome and costly memorial to Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, who, for so many years was the honored rector of the parish and who was beloved not only by his own people, but the community at large. Announcement of the proposed plans were made on Sunday by the rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, and aroused considerable interest among the congregation.

The memorial is to be in the form of a beautiful altar and reredos, the approximate cost of which will be about $6,000. About fifty per cent. of the desired amount is now in hand. The altar is to be of almost pure white marble and the reredos of French stone. The installation of the altar and reredos will undoubtedly be granted by Corporation Counsel Marsh, and there was a storm of protest on the part of Councilmen Buxton and Clay. It was finally decided that the reading of the ordinance should be for information only and that a hearing be granted on Monday night, May 16, to which date an adjournment was taken.

The ordinance is similar to the one that has been adopted in hundreds of cities throughout the country including many in this State. It and that a committee of clergymen of the parish, to which body it was referred, would be glad to receive any suggestions as to the proper memorial to be erected in the church.

SEWER COMMISSION RELIEVED BY COUNCIL

The special sewer commission, of which Councilman F. E. Mygatt is the chairman, reported at the May meeting of the Common Council last Monday the result of its conference with the North Plainfield commission, as published exclusively in The Daily Press last week, and upon his motion the commission was discharged. It was explained by Mr. Mygatt that the commission took the position that all further communication or business should be considered directly by the governing bodies of the two municipalities.

Mr. Mygatt stated that the commission made as a proposition that Plainfield bear seventy per cent. of the cost of construction, and North Plainfield thirty per cent., but that the borough representatives wanted Plainfield to pay seventy-five per cent. and North Plainfield twenty-five per cent. It is said that the commissions were "dead-locked" on the proposition and the Plainfield representatives hearing nothing further from the borough commission recommended that the Plainfield commission be discharged. He said that the city representatives would not agree to the borough's proposition, not being willing to recommend its proposition to the Common Council. The matter will rest where it is for the present unless the borough makes another move.

FOR 'SAFE AND SANE' 4TH

Public Hearing on Fireworks Ordinance Set for Monday, May 16.

BUXTON MAKES OBJECTION.

Plainfield May Follow Example of Other Cities to Protect Life, Limb and Property.

Anticipating that the Common Council intended to take some action relative to a "safe and sane" Fourth of July, Dr. A. F. VanHorn, one of the school physicians, in a communication to that body Monday urged it to act favorably on the proposition, and thereby prevent many accidents likely to occur on that day. The matter was referred to the laws and ordinance committee.

Councilman Holt, of the laws and ordinance committee, presented the measure, which was prepared by Corporation Counsel Marsh, and there was a storm of protest on the part of Councilmen Buxton and Clay. It was finally decided that the reading of the ordinance should be for information only and that a hearing be granted on Monday night, May 16, to which date an adjournment was taken.

The ordinance is similar to the one that has been adopted in hundreds of cities throughout the country including many in this State. It and that a committee of clergymen of the parish, to which body it was referred, would be glad to receive any suggestions as to the proper memorial to be erected in the church and decided to pay due honor to one who had accomplished so much for Plainfield.

should be referred to the fire and buildings committee, but Mr. Holt explained that that committee had considered it. Mr. Clay, as well as President Tolles, considered the ordinance too drastic, but Mr. Holt said that he anticipated in that there would be objections to the measure and for that reason was in favor of a public hearing. Personally, he believed the ordinance a good one, and other members agreed with him. Those who opposed the measure did not seem to have a knowledge as to what is being done in all parts of the country toward making a 'safe and sane" Fourth. This was shown in Mr. Clay's remarks, when he asked, "What is the occasion for the passage of such an ordinance?"

The ordinance provides a fine of $200 for any person or corporation violating the provisions of it as to the sale of fireworks and a fine of not more than $20 for those who violate the ordinance in discharging fire-works or firearms as prohibited. The chief of the fire department is given authority to remove all fire-works from any place where sold in violation of the ordinance.

Donald C. Mortimer Returns.

Donald C. Mortimer, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mortimer, of West Seventh street, has returned from Boston, where for the past two years he has been engaged in business. He has now taken a position in New York city. Before leaving Plainfield he was prominent in athletics at the High School and Hope chapel. While in Boston he made the fast basketball team of the Boston Y. M. C. A., playing centre.

ANTIQUE NECKLACES.

One sees on every hand wonderful necklaces antique and imitation. These are worn by women who could put on a row of pearls or diamonds without depleting the jewelry casket. Some are worn by women who have no other kind of jewelry to display.

Of course the jewelers are remounting ancient into this fashion and offering new ones to catch the artistic buyer.

Small pearls are very much in favor, strung in festoons, caught with medallions of quaint workmanship. Many of these have been planned by the wearers and carried out by amateur metal workers, who are now widely in demand. Even diamonds or emeralds are set in odd mountings, with the gem partly covered, so that all attention can be given to the metal workmanship.

Many of the finest examples of antique specimens of colonial work at the Metropolitan Museum during the Hudson-Fulton celebration gave rise to this new fashion, for when women who have always been the chief adorers of Paul Revere because of his genius in saw the marvelous things he had fashioned as a silversmith, they at once went out and ordered jewelry mounted in similar style.

TOWN FACES A LEGAL WAR OPPOSE VOTING MACHINE

Dunellen Council Ignores Petition of Citizens in Equator Co. Controversy.

THREATEN LEGAL PROCEEDINGS

Council Refuses to Consider Proposition to Extend Dunellen Avenue Through Land Company's Plot.

A big fight, which gives promise of being taken to the courts for final decision, is on at Dunellen. On one side is the Dunellen Board of Trade and about seventy-five property owners, representing more than one half of the real estate valuation on the north side of the Jersey Central tracks, and the Borough Council and the Equator Realty Company are on the other side.

The scrap was inaugurated by the Board of Trade at its meeting last week when an unanimous opposition was expressed to the plans of the Equator Realty Company, in the manner in which the land company intended to lay out streets, in the Sanford tract of about sixty acres in the western end of the town, which was recently purchased by that company. The board of trade claims that the land company lays out the streets, according to plans, that a greater part of the beauty of the western section of the borough will be spoiled.

At the meeting of the Board of Trade petitions were directed to the Common Council asking that the land company be stopped in their building of streets as planned; a petition was also adopted that the Council extend Dunellen avenue through the Sanford plot to Gallagher's corner, on a straight line, by condemnation proceedings if necessary.

This action was backed up by a petition signed by seventy-five property holders being presented to the Council Monday night; also an ordinance prepared in legal form, providing for the extension of Dunellen avenue was presented. Both were ignored by the Council, and now the property holders interested and the Board of Trade are talking fight.

The petition and ordinance were presented to the Council by Councilman Firman H. Gise. Mr. Gise made a motion that the petition be granted and that the ordinance to extend Dunellen avenue to Gallagher's corner be adopted on its first reading, but none of the other councilmen seconded the motion and the matter died.

F. D. Baerman spoke in favor of the passage of the ordinance. He declared it was the duty of the Council to act in compliance of the wishes of so large a number of property holders and residents of the only person to talk on the subject.

After the Council ignored the matter, one of the prominent property-holders declared that the matter would be taken to the courts, and fought to the bitter end. He declared that mandamus proceedings would be instituted in view of forcing the Council to bow to the will of the majority of tax payers.

Should Dunellen avenue be extended through the Sanford plot as demanded by the property-owners and board of trade there would be a continuous road, 50 feet wide, from Myrtle avenue, North Plainfield, to Bound Brook, while the other streets are only 66 feet wide.

The fire ordinance was also passed on its second and third reading. Considerable routine business was also transacted.

Democratic Club Petitions City Fathers to Restore Paper Ballot.

MAYOR MAKES APPOINTMENTS.

Monthly Reports Read and Other Routine Business at the City Fathers' Meeting.

A petition was received from the Plainfield Democratic Club protesting against the continued use of the voting machines in this city and urging the Council to abolish them in the future. Accompanying the communication was a copy of a resolution adopted by the Elizabeth Council abolishing the machines in that city and asking that similar action be taken here. The matter was referred to the laws and ordinance committee.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk made the following appointments and they were confirmed by the Common Council:

Poundmaster and keeper for horses and cattle, Fred Breem; poundmaster for dogs, W. H. Kitchen, both to serve to January 1, 1911; special policemen, Joseph Dunlap, Class B, to serve to Jan. 1, 1911; callmen in the fire department, John O'Brien, Jr., John Cashin, Patrick McDonough and Fred J. Frey.

Street Commissioner Gavett reported that he had granted thirty-five permits for sewer connections during the month and Building Inspector Doane reported the granting of 23 building permits during the same period.

Overseer of the Poor A. D. Ayers reported expenses for the past month of $291.89, and Horace G. Adams, clerk of the District court, reported receipts of $144.44; disbursements, $39.14, and a balance of $105.30.

The sum of $350 was appropriated for the use of the fire and building committees throughout a resolution by Mr. Taylor, for the purchase of a new horse for the East End firehouse, and another resolution by Mr. Taylor, which was adopted, appropriated $125 for the installation of a new fire-box at East Fourth and Sycamore street.

The tax ordinance was adopted on third reading on motion of Mr. Buxton, and a resolution by the same member which was adopted appropriated $500 for the annual audit of the city books by Patterson, Teele & Dennis, of New York city.

The sum of $1,000 was ordered transferred from the general fund to the fire fund in a resolution offered by Mr. Buxton and another resolution by the same member called for an appropriation of $250 to enlarge and improve the office of Tax Collector William R. Townsend.

Public hearings were granted on ordinances to establish the grade on certain streets, to open up and lay out Martine avenue, between Park and Plainfield avenue and they were adopted on third reading, no one objecting to their passage.

Immediately afterward a nine-minute recess, which lasted forty-five minutes, was taken to discuss matters which afterward came up in the regular meeting.

DUNELLEN'S MAYOR SQUELCHES A KICKER

Hardly a meeting of the Dunellen Council passes unless Michael Gallagher, one of the strenuous opponents of the location of the government of that borough, appears to voice his grievances against the officials.

Mr. Gallagher's point of argument, or fault finding, Monday was presented in the shape of a petition which charged Mayor Sanford with permitting a "speak easy" to do business in the borough. Mayor Sanford ruled that the petition was not in order. This prompted Councilman Gise to suggest that Mr. Gallagher be permitted to speak on the matter. To this Mayor Sanford replied:

"If Mr. Gallagher has anything to say on the speak-easy question, it is his place to tell all he knows to the Middlesex county prosecutor."

At the April meeting of the Council Mayor Sanford also squelched Gallagher when the latter made an attempt to deliver a speech before the Council.

HERE AND THERE.

With the rapid elimination of the telegraph as applied to the handling of trains and the substitution of the telephone, in this connection attention is directed to the railroad official who was among the pioneers to attest as to the practicability of the telephone for train dispatching, in the person of Superintendent Telegraph Frederick G. Sherman, of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, who resides in Woodland avenue, Plainfield. Mr. Sherman has had a long and interesting railroad career and is the acknowledged authority on many matters pertaining to train dispatching, telegraph and telephone installation, maintenance and operation. Born on a farm near Beloit, Wis., in 1885, the future railroad expert removed with his parents to Oswego County, N. Y., in 1864, where he resided until he reached the age of sixten, when he left the Empire State with his parents and settled in Illinois.

On March 28,1873, young Sherman entered railroad life as night operator at a station known as Indian Creek (now Wyoming), on the Burlington, having mastered the intricacies of key "between times" while engaged in farm work. This was his first experience in railroading, except a short time in which he was employed by a contractor named Belden, grading for the Syracuse Northern railroad, now part of the New York Central system. This was in 1869 or 1870. He continued with the Burlington as operator and station agent at various points until 1882, when he entered the service of the Chicagy, Milwaukee and St. Paul and was sent to Astor, Iowa, as operator and agent, and as such sent the first message from that town, which was the ratification of the completion of the Council Bluffs division of that road. This telegraph message was sent from an office located in an old shed without floor, which was used as a stable for horses, there being no other building near, on the wild prairie, except a few scattering farm houses.

In 1884 Mr. Sherman again engaged with the Burlington as dispatcher at Aurora, Ill., remaining with the company in that capacity until September, 1899, when he entered the service of the Reading railway as train dispatcher. May 1, 1902, Mr. Sherman quit the Reading to accept a position of assistant trainmaster on the Central Railroad of New Jersey and on October 8 was promoted to superintendent of telegraph. During his railroad experience Mr. Sherman has witnessed the evolution of the system of train dispatching from the single order in various forms to the duplex order system, then the first edition of the standard code, followed by the present standard code, which is generally in use, and he has assisted several railroads in the adoption and interpretation of the same.

Mr. Sherman is held in high regard by his subordinates, and that he possesses their respect and confidence is amply attested by the high standing of his department.—The Railroad Employee.

His bid for oats was $1.25 a bag, that for hay $23 a ton and that for straw $18 a ton.

After consideration in committee the award of the contract for school desks was given to Kennedy Bros. & Wolkens, who submitted figures of $3.25 and $4.35 for the desks.

Tax Collector William R. Townsend reported the receipts of $536.31 on account of school taxes and no report was received from the custodian of school moneys.

Nothing outside of routine business occupied the attention of the board excepting the consideration of an application of the school medical examiners, who believe that they are entitled to at least as much as the dental examiners. On the suggestion of President Lovell this matter was laid over.

LADIES' CHRISTIAN WORK SOCIETY'S YEARLY SESSION.

Officers were elected and interesting reports presented at the annual meeting of the Ladies' Christian Work Society, of Trinity Reformed church Monday afternoon. The review of the past year's work was encouraging to the women in undertaking plans for the coming year.

The women decided to hold a strawberry festival early in June. Mrs. Edward T. VanWinkle is chairman of the committee in charge and the date will be announced later.

The report of the treasurer, Mrs. Jennie Chickering, was most encouraging. This showed that the society had raised for the benevolent purposes the year $924.36, including $69.25 which was divided equally between the foreign and home mission societies. The disbursements were $528.04. There is in the sinking fund, for the furnishing of the church, $250.44 and the general balance is $15.74.

Eleven new members were elected during the year, making the total membership about sixty-five. During the year the society sent a box of clothing valued at $100 to a mission at Summit, Ill.; also boxes and barrels of clothing to the Scofield School at Aiken, S. Pleated Neckwear.

There is just at present a rivalry between the pleated collarette that turns back from the round neck and gives the delightful appearance and the dignified jabot of the Directory, that so well fills in the space between the long years.

The pleated round shape is, of course, outgrowth of the Dutch collar of a few seasons ago. It is decidedly feminine, and is at its best when fashioned of the sheerest line or net. Frequently it is edged with a narrow line of black, and some of the innovations are huge squares or disks of color, embroidered with linen threads.

It is the day of the collarless blouse, and the neckwear very naturally has taken to itself an importance which may rely upon the makers to duly emphasize.

GESANG'S BALL TOSSERS WIN A HARD CONTEST.

The Gesang and Turn Verein's fast ball team added another victory to its string on Saturday by defeating the classy West End Field Club aggregation by the score of 7 to 6. Van Drood's sensational work in the box for the Turners was a distinct feature of the game, the youthful slab artist fanning nine twelve batters. Fulton, the West End's swirler, also performed well and had eleven strikeouts. The West End boys rallied in the ninth but were unable to get more than one tally across the plate. The lineups:

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

How many of those who go to see the sights of New York care to see the greatest sight of all? The spectacle of Broadway from Trinity church to Madison Square is a moving panorama of the city and the continent, the peoples of the earth and their ant-like hurry-scurry after the rolling dollar. The other morning a tramp up town as the grand march of business men swept down to their dens revealed the old familiar scenes by the way. A still smouldering fire, a horse sprawling before a gaping crowd, who did not see until reminded that its failure to rise was because its body was downhill and its feet up. Then the spectacle of the younger sallow-faced Rockefeller, driving his cart with an ancient footman behind, half-hid in a silk hat dating from the Ark.

Thus far not an American or English name has caught the eye among the throng on the corners, and you may pace for miles without finding more than a sprinkling among the foreign names, mostly German and Jewish. Union Square is getting to be like a cockpit walled by sky scrapers. Fourth avenue is growing them fast on every corner, and you church, the artistic landmark that keeps in sight from the gate of Trinity, for passing sinners willing to turn aside from the Broadway that leadeth from destruction to instruction, and gives them a corner to kneel and stand on. Here we see the big Metropolitan tower, ugliest and cheapest in the world, with its welcome clock and musical Westminster chime bells, apparently standing sentry at the corners away up. A demure young girl, in deep mourning unwarily treads on the subway grating near 23rd street; an express speeds under and blows the poor creature into the semblance of a slim black queen of the ballet. Here passes one of the kings of finance, gifted with large views and condensed expression, whose scanty allotment of inches, if expressed in dollar millions, would give him near the stature of the tower. Over there come three men abreast on the quick march, so much of a muchness that it is a puzzle to tell whether they are detectives hold one thief or vice versa. This snapshot is only a dot on the face of the ever-changing panorama of humanity, enjoyable every hour of every day by the sightseer weary of the littleness of stage life.

But we weary after two hours of Broadway in spite of its myriad things to see and think about, and then we turn for restful charm to the paradise of Plainfield. A guileless city, if such there be, except that the craze for being up to date in every fashion has smitten it with the latest thing in the murder line. Merely an echo of the first Eden and its fall. The culprit no native, of course. Some whisper of another craze, the mania for flooding criminals with distorted sympathy, while spotless sufferers are passed with tip-tilted noses by Levites on the look-out for paying investments.

A green city, with dainty foliaged trees waving their feathery plumes in bright relief against the deep blue sky, forming avenues and bowers of delight as they shut from the spears of sunshine that grow slimmer every day. To sit at one's window, which not long ago used to show a desert of snow diversified with dabs of glittering ice and splotches of melted mud, and give occasional shelter to the census taker.

A few more gems of wisdom from the mouths of babes and sucklings. When Mrs. B. has called upon Mrs. A. and the hostess has received the visitor with the most gushing enthusiasm, it is embarrassing for Tommy A. to sidle up to Mrs. B. and ask, "Do you live in a nice room, Mrs. B.?" Because Mrs. B. replies, "What a curious question! Why do you ask it?" To which Tommy answers, "Why, as you were coming up the garden, mamma said that your room was better than your company."

Unconscious also must have been the child who said, "Quotation is the answer to a division sum." The child who defied "antidote" as a silly ant" probably analyzed the former as an ant in its dotage. The following definition of a lie was probably the fruit of experience:

"An abomination in the eyes of the Lord, but a very present help in the time of trouble."

There is a true story about that wonderful dream of Jacob's and the angels going up the ladder to heaven. "Please, sir," asked one of the boys in the class, "why did the angels want to go up the ladder when they had wings?" This noplused the teacher, who took a strategic movement to rear by saying, "Ah, yes! Why? Perhaps one of the boys can answer that." And one did. "Please, sir," said he, "because they was a-moulting."

"Who made the world?" snapped out a rather testy inspector, years ago, to a class of very small boys. No answer. Several times he repeated the question, getting louder and more incensed each time. At last a poor little fellow, kneading his eyes vigorously with his knuckles, blubbered out, "Please, sir, it waddn' me."

DR. WOODROW WILSON'S VIEWS GIVEN EDITORS

President Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton University, was a speaker at the banquet in the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, Thursday of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. His address was on "The Power of the Editorial." He said in part:

"We have witnessed in our day an extraordinary mutiplication of journals of all sorts and an extraordinary increase in the amount of printed matter of every kind. Printing has become so cheap that it has become almost a commonplace medium of speech. There was a time when everything we saw in print seemed very serious and deliberate. It had an extraordinary adventitious dignity and we attached to it a corresponding weight and significance. Journals were comparatively few in number. The utterances of their editors and contributors attracted a great deal of attention, and there was more time than there is now to give them a deliberate and serious reading. But in our time there has been a notable falling off in the influence of printed opinion. The power of the editorial is certainly not what it once was.

"The telegraph and the telephone, moreover, have drawn the world together into something like a single community. It is now as easy and natural to read the news of yesterday from Rome as the news of yesterday from the neighboring town. And with the news comes the comment, comment from every quarter, not only from our neighbors, but from editors and correspondents all over the world. And so what we read begins to have for us only the significance of what we hear. Printed opinions are coming to take their rank with casual spoken opinions, and editorial comment has little more weight than conversational comment.

"A very interesting thing has happened, therefore, involving an entirely new assessment of what we read. We are beginning to judge what we read as we judge what we hear, by the character of the person uttering it. It is no longer a matter of common knowledge who own certain journals, for example, and that the opinions of those journals are the opinions of the owners; that they may not be at all the individual opinions of the editor who writes and signs. In other instances the whole country knows the character and antecedents of the chief editorial writer of a particular paper. If his character is high, his opinions carry great weight. If it is not, they are merely among the negligible elements of the day.

"The same thing is going on, therefore, in respect of our attitude toward what we read that is going on upon so wide a scale and at so tremendous a pace with regard to our attitude toward public affairs. We are coming to nothing less than a grand reassessment of character and motive. The close contacts of the world are bringing men's individualities clearly into view. The court of public opinion has direct sight of the men whom it is assessing, to whom it is according praise or to blame, its faith or its condemnation. Back of everything lies a man and a motive, and it is to that our judgment is penetrating. It goes very far beneath the surface."

The Philadelphia Record.

Prints every day in the year the undoctored news of the day, only weeding out mere sensation and smut. The Record prints the actual markets, the record each day of actual transactions. Its market figures are the hands upon which the seller sells and the buyer buys on the date of its quotations. It is a recognized authority. There is no other paper printed in Pennsylvania that takes such painstaking care to keep farmers and merchants thoroughly posted. There is no other paper that more strongly appeals to the general reader who reads to be informed. There is no other paper in the State of Pennsylvania of such wide circulation.

BORO' CIVIC CLUB DINES

Representative Citizens Speak at North Plainfield Assn. Banquet.

MR. M'CUTCHEN TOASTMASTER.

One Hundred and Sixty Hear Talks Given by H. C. Krebs, Robert Clark, Jr., Newton B. Smalley and Others.

More than 150 representative citizens attended the initial banquet of the North Plainfield Association at Debele's auditorium Thursday. It was one of the most democratic gatherings of its kind in the history of the borough, men in all walks of life being present.

The interior of the auditorium presented a gala appearance with profuse decorations of flags and bunting and flowers. There were no hitches to mar the enjoyment of the guests and everything went along with clocklike precision. Jollity was lent to the occasion by the singing and musical features. David J. Carney, chairman of the banquet committee, introduced an unexpected feature by providing the guests with a minature newspaper, "The Boro Man." On the first page was a photograph of the late Peter Wooden, who was one of the pioneer residents of the borough.

Samuel St. John McCutchen was ast toastmaster and speeches were made by Superintendent of Schools H. C. Krebs, Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, former Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., George T. Hughes, of Watchung, and Mayor Newton B. Smalley.

In introducing Mr. Krebs, Mr. McCutchen intimated that citizens in the borough as a rule do not interest themselves in the Board of Education and its work as much as they should. Mr. Krebs gave an interesting talk which contained an array of facts and figures relative to the borough's school system.

In the course of his remarks Superintendent Krebs said that a new high school building is needed. He declared that such a structure should be erected for the exclusive use of high school pupils and he maintained that a building to accommodate 150 to 200 pupils should be erected in the Washington Park section.

Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, spoke on civic pride. He lauded the advantages of the borough and also pleaded with his hearers to always strive to better the unpleasant conditions of the municipality. Good morals, he declared, is needed just as much as improvements.

George T. Hughes, of the New York Evening Mail, and a resident of Watchung, referred to the relations of Watchung Valley and North Plainfield. He predicted a *bright future for the Watchung sec*tion. "Whatever improvements come to the borough is bound to benefit Watchung and the outlying country," said Mr. Hughes. The speaker also declared himself in favor of the proposed sewerage system and told of the advantages to real estate valuation which are sure to accrue from the improvement. Mr. Hughes interpersed his remarks with flashes of humor which found favor with the audience.

Former Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., dealt in political reminiscences. He referred to the old political battles in the borough and said that he was gratified that everything is harmonious at last.

Mayor Smalley was the last speaker, and he dwelt on the borough government. "The reason I have been mayor so long," said Mr. Smalley, "is because North Plainfield is easily governed." He boosted the *North Plainfield Association and de*clared that the borough would be greatly benefited by the new organization. "The Association," said the Mayor, "will take the place of the old primary meetings."

The dinner, an excellent one, was served by DeMoli. The last course was served at 10:30 o'clock and as that hour the speechmaking started and continued until after midnight. Horace J. Martin, chairman of the music committee, distributed song sheets, and all of the guests participated in a song fest, augmented by Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan's orchestra of ten pieces.

The success of the banquet is largely due to the indefatigable labors of David J. Carney, chairman of the committee of arrangements. Mr. Carney was assisted on the committee by Councilman L. B. Woolston, Theodore Dryden, Dr. Frank W. French and Councilor Alvin Chapman Carney was given a vote of thanks by the diners after the speechmaking.

YOUTH ATTACKS GIRL AND COMMITS SUICIDE

Barricading himself in a two-story clubhouse on the bank of the Hackensack River near the little town of Caristadt, Clarence Wood, a young cripple and member of a well-known family of Rutherford, held a Sheriff's posse at bay for five hours Thursday, while bullets riddled the frame building. Then after dangerously wounding a Chief of Police, he turned his revolver on himself and sent a bullet into his brain just as a hundred or more armed men, having mustered courage enough to charge the building, were about to break down the doors.

Before the fighting began young Wood had attacked Miss Anna Kipp, a popular member of the Rutherford social set, whom he had lured to the boathouse early in the morning under the pretense that she was to be one of a party of half a dozen mutual friends who were to go on a launch party on the Hackensack. After attacking her with a bludgeon and trying to strangle her, Wood's nerve seemed to fail, for the girl escaped his grasp and staggered several hundred yards along the river bank to a hotel, where she gave the alarm.

It was to avenge the attack on the girl and capture Wood dead or alive that the Sheriff's posse was formed. Wood is supposed to have become suddenly demented after his brutal attack on Miss Kipp, for during the hours in which he held the crowd of armed men at bay, firing now and then a lot of them know that he was still prepared for the attack, the young man practically wrecked the interior of the clubhouse, smashed the bottom of several canoes with a hatchet, nearly demolished the club piano, slashed most of the pictures with a knife, and wrecked most of the club furniture.

Humoring Him.

'Oh! I forgot to tell you to bring down my scissors, dear," said the spoiled wife. "They're on the table in the bedroom. Won't you get them for me?"

"See here," complained the indulgent husband, "I'm tired of waiting on you in this way—"

"Are you, dear? Well, just be patient and I'll let you wait on me in some other way."—The Catholic Standard and Times.

FRESH AIR HOME PLANS

Legacy of $75,000 Received Will Permit Improvements to Be Made.

FUND'S CUSTODIANS NAMED.

J. D. Loizeaux Chosen President for Year—George A. Chapman Submits an Interesting Report.

The Netherwood Fresh Air Camp Association at its annual meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday, elected officers for the coming year, discussed plans for the summer and listened with much interest to a report of George A. Chapman, chairman of the finance committee, who told of the details of the bequest of $75,000 received toward the support of the fresh air work at Netherwood under the will of the late Frederick C. Hewitt.

The payment of the above amount was made in securities, stocks and bonds, $150,000 of the $225,000 going to The Little Missionary Day Nursery, New York, and $75,000 to the local fresh air fund. In his report, Mr. Chapman presented definite facts, which served to explain from a financial point of view, all the details of the bequest.

The income from the securities amounts to about $3,000 a year, and plans are now underway for the acquisition of additional land and the establishment of a permanent home for Miss Curry's work either in the present location, or elsewhere. For the present season it has been decided simply to renovate and refurnish the house and make such repairs as are necessary.

These officers were chosen last night: President, J. D. Loizeaux; first vice-president, James F. Parker; second vice-president, George A. Chapman; treasurer, David M. Runyon; secretary, B. F. Hadley; finance committee, J. D. Loizeaux, Frank Runyon, George A. Chapman; chairman devotional committee, Mrs. Herbert Henry; chairman entertainment committee, Herbert Henry. The election of the chairman of the house committee was deferred until the next meeting.

The report of the treasurer showed a balance on hand from last season of $422.61; receipts for the year from all sources, $1,843.68, making $2,266.29; expenditures, $2,246.21, leaving a balance at present of $20.08.

"There is an excellent opportunity at the camp for young people who have spare time to devote a little of it to teaching the girls there how to sew, embroider and do other kinds of fancy work, and any one who can lend their aid in this way is requested to communicate with Mrs. Herbert Henry. The camp will be opened for the season on July 1, when Miss Curry and her many charges will come to Plainfield.

It was with sincere regret that Miss Curry and Louis Rolston were unable to be present at last night's meeting. Both were detained at The Little Missionary Day Nursery, New York, where the cooking school was holding its graduation exercises. Appreciation was expressed for all assistance in the past with the hope that it will be continued.

The report was presented by Geo. A. Chapman, as chairman of the finance committee:

"So much of importance to the Asodation has occurred since the last annual meeting, that you have requested me to supplement the treasurer's statement with a special report, which I beg herewith to submit.

"The Little Missionary's Day Nursery has received $225,000 in payment of the legacy bequeathed to it under the will of the late Frederick C. Hewitt. The payment was made in securities (stocks and bonds) aggregating in value the above named amount at their market price at the time the transfer was made. Under the provisions of the bequest, $150,000 of this sum was to be applied toward the support of the Nursery work in New York, and $75,000 toward the support of the Fresh Air Work, at Netherwood. D. Loizeaux, J. F. Parker and George A. Chapman were invited to become members of the Board of Trustees of the Little Missionary's Day Nursery, but being residents of Plainfield, they deemed it unwise to assume the responsibility for the New York end of the work. In lieu of this, therefore, these gentlemen have been constituted a committee to represent and care for the interests of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home Association.

"The payments received in payment of the bequest under the will of Mr. Hewitt for the benefit of the Netherwood work have been deposited by the officers of The Little Missionary's Day Nursery in a box in the safe deposit vaults of the Fidelity Trust Company, access to which can be had only by the presence of any two members of the above mentioned committee.

The income derived from the above named securities will be about $3,000 per annum. Mr. Morgan's property has proved to be entirely too small for the proper accommodation of the large number of women and children that Miss Curry cares for during a season at Netherwood. Early in the winter, therefore, negotiations were commenced with the object of acquiring additional land adjoining this property. These negotiations are still pending, for it was discovered that, owing to the absence of the owner in foreign lands, it would be impossible to acquire title to the property this season. Next year, it is hoped, a permanent home for Miss Curry's work will be secured, either in the present location, or elsewhere. For the present season, it has been decided simply to renovate and refurnish the house, and to make such repairs to the outbuildings and grounds as are absolutely necessary. The cost of these repairs and furnishings, however, will absorb a large amount of our income this season, and we shall need all the financial aid our kind friends are willing to extend to us."

JURY OUT OVER FIVE HOURS IN COW CASE

The case of the S. P. C. A. against John Winges, of Dunellen, was too knotty a problem for a twelve-man jury in Justice Rogers' court at New Market Thursday afternoon. The jury considered the case for five and one half hours and then made it known to Justice Rogers of their inability to agree. The jury began its deliberations at 4:30 o'clock and was locked up in Justice Rogers' rear office until 9 o'clock.

Interested in the case was Mayor W. A. Sanford, of Dunellen, and it was at his instigation that the society was notified of the alleged act of cruelty. Several weeks ago Sanford claimed that Winges peppered one of his choice cows with a load of buck shot. Justice VonMinden looked after Mayor Sandford's interests, while Judge William Newcorn was counsel for the defendant. Col. Edwards, of Newark, represented the society.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS TO HAVE A CLUBHOUSE

Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, is planning to own its home in the near future and negotiations are reported to be going on between the lodge and the owners of the Lindsay property on West Front street, adjoining the First Baptist church. The property is considered ideal for a clubhouse and if the deal materializes whereby the lodge will secure the house, it will be remodelled and extensive improvements made.

The Knights expect to boost their home fund at the open air carnival, which will be conducted in June. Several thousand dollars is already in hand for the project. The lodge since its organization has been burned out twice and is now occupying temporary headquarters since the blaze in the old Van Deventer building.

DOG ORDINANCE SHOULD BE ENFORCED THEY SAY.

Dogs and the nuisances they are to many residents of the city have become the subject of a lively discussion among the owners of handsome homes and it is the opinion of the majority of those whose gardens have been scratched up that something ought to be done to prevent the depredations committed by the wandering canines.

Among the most beautiful gardens which decorate the residences on Belvidere, Woodland and South, Stelle and Central avenues, West Seventh, Eighth and Ninth streets, Franklin place and in fact wherever flowers are cultivated for their landscape beauty, dogs are continually uprooting the flowers and plants besides undoing the work of the gardeners whose pride in their work in this city is proverbial.

The present city ordinances are sufficiently correctional and preventive and many of the property owners would welcome some drastic measures looking toward their enforcement.

CONFAB WITH BOSSES.

Machinists Make Demand for More Wages.

There is little chance of machinists in the employ of local printing press factories getting an increase in wages, according to rumor. All of the manufacturers, with the exception of the Scott Printing Press Works, were represented at a conference yesterday afternoon.

What the result of the conference was is difficult to ascertain. Representatives of the Hall Printing Press Works, Dunellen, and the Potter factory evaded all questions of a Daily Press reporter this morning. It is known that a conference was held, and reliable reports say that the printing press manufacturers will not grant the increase asked by the machinists.

ELIZABETH BIG WINNER

Musical Instructor Wilson Shows Proof of Efficiency in Methods.

APPLAUSE REPLACES HISSING.

Changes in System of Contests Suggested by Friday's Performances in Local Auditorium.

The second and final tests between pupils of the various public schools were contested Friday afternoon and evening in the High School auditorium before immense audiences, and again Elizabeth children distinguished themselves by winning with ease in all but one of the numbers. This last went to Plainfield, four-part songs, with a mark of 78, the nearest competitors being three other schools between which the judges could not make a selection. Elizabeth, New Brunswick and North Plainfield receiving the same mark, 76. This contest was not finished until nearly midnight.

The afternoon competitors began with two-part songs in which Elizabeth won with ease, with a mark of 76. New Brunswick was next with 75 1-2 and Plainfield third with 74 2-3. In the three-part songs Elizabeth again showed in front with a mark of 79¾. Bound Brook, pitted against New Brunswick, unexpected home a winner, with 78. New Brunswick's figure being 76 2-3 with an added honorable mention. This caused some cheering and a few hisses to which a prompt stop was put by superintendent Maxson.

Miss Anna Jamba, of Elizabeth, showed the way in the sight singing tests which followed. Miss Jamba won easily with 78. Isabelle Kohlhepp and Ethel Samuels, of New Brunswick, were next in order.

Interest centered in the orchestral work of the pupils which was third on the evening's program. Here again Elizabeth came to the front with the unanimous verdict of the judges, while Bound Brook was given second place. The only other competitor was Old Westfield School orchestra. Elizabeth also won the boys' chorus two-part song contest, having a shade the best of Westfield.

From the opinions gathered by those in attendance it is believed that the making of the contests an annual event will materially aid the children of the schools to cultivate the taste for music, but some other arrangements will be necessary in order to avoid the delays and late hours made necessary by the present system. It was long after midnight Friday night when the last of the children got away from the school and they were a tired lot of youngsters. From the viewpoint of the supervisors of music the contests were a success. Supervisor Thomas Wilson, of Elizabeth, was the recipient of many congratulations for the wonderful showing made by pupils of the schools over which he worked so hard for this contest. Miss Ethel Bray, of Westfield, shared in the honors. Some of the Westfield singers and players showed remarkable talent. Plainfield will do better another time, and is prepared to be content with her share of applause.

Plumber and poet toil away—
They're not of the same stripe;
For while the poet pipes a lay
The plumber lays a pipe.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 8, 1910.

Topic—The Christian graces.—II Pet. iv, 2-11; Col. iv, 5. Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The second "grace" is used in several senses in the gospel. First and foremost it is the free and unmerited favor of God, as when Paul says in Eph. ii, 8, "By grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God." In the second place, grace is used to designate an adorning attribute of the Christian life, such as faith, hope and love, with the number of other virtues that should characterize the true Christian character. In this sense the apostle Peter uses it when he says "Grow in grace," or in the Christian graces (II Pet. iii, 18). It is in this sense that we are to study of grace—that is, as it applies to the qualities of Christian character and is designated by our subject, "The Christian Graces."

In the highest references we have injunctions concerning certain Christian graces by the two greatest of apostles, Peter and Paul. Let us therefore consider these exhortations and heed them.

The apostle Peter speaks of certain Christian graces from the angle of the coming of Christ. Like the other apostle, Peter looked for a speedy return of the Master. This was an error so far as Christ's second coming was concerned. "The end of all things is at hand," he declared and emphasized the virtues appropriate to such a condition. But it was not for Peter "to know the times and seasons," nor is it for us, but we do know that our time is short and, above all, uncertain. These graces, therefore, should be a constant possession. They should at all times be a part of our lives. From this standpoint he first emphasized the grace of soberness or self restraint. "Be ye therefore sober." Hold yourselves in self restraint. The Thessalonian Christians had become greatly excited over the thought of Christ's coming, had neglected their work and become idlers, and many others when He did not come disbelieved and gave free reign to their passions and appetites.

The thought of our short and uncertain time in this life should guard us against each one of these extreme errors. It should inspire us to soberness of thought and life at all times. We should quietly live our lives, no matter when the time is at hand, and should avoid sin and its excesses. This soberness should be unto prayer or associated with prayer. "Be sober unto prayers" is the better translation of this part of the apostle's injunction. Soberness, self restraint, receive their strength from God, and he who realizes the seriousness of life from the standpoint of eternity will spend much time in prayer. Peter also enjoins hospitality and charity or intense love, which will cover a multitude of sins—not ours, but the sins of others. He who intensely loves another will shield his weaknesses rather than parade them. Again, the gifts or graces bestowed upon us by the Spirit, who is the divine source of Christian grace, should be imparted to others. Let us remember that the time is short, that the end may be near at hand, and practice the graces and virtues that will best become us when the hour of our departure does arrive.

Paul speaks of Christian grace in only one relation, that of speech, "Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man." Grace in speech means graciousness, winsomeness. Salt is pungent, but if words of grace are seasoned with salt the speech is sweetened. It is the only method of speech to impress the non-christian. "A soft answer turneth away wrath," and kindly spoken, gracious words win men for Christ, and "he that winneth souls is wise."

BIBLE READINGS.

Matt. v, 1-16; vi, 14; I Cor. xiii, 15, 10; Eph. ii, 1-8; Num. xii, 3; Col. iii, 14; Phil. iv, 8, 9; John iii, 5-8; Pet. iii, 18.

Japan to India.

The Japanese Endeavorers sent a warm greeting to the Agra convention. The far east unites with the mighty empire of central Asia, the land of mystery, meditation and marvelous history, the great teacher of the past. In their greeting the Japanese hope that when India catches the true spirit of Christian Endeavor, which is a happy combination of devout meditation and practical helpfulness, India will rise to great achievements and become once more a teacher and leader of the nations.—Christian Endeavor World.

The Christian Endeavor Army.

According to the report of General Secretary Baer, there are 74,465 societies enrolled in the great Christian Endeavor army, with 3,353,100 members. Practically all denominations are represented, the Presbyterians being first with 10,198 societies. There are 48,561 members of the Quiet Hour and 25,773 members of the Tenth Legion who give one-tenth of their income to the Lord.

The Model Christian Endeavorer.

The model Endeavorer will not waste time in vain regrets over the past.

With every rising of the sun
Think of your life as just begun.
The past has perished and buried deep
All yesterdays; there let them sleep.
Nor seek to recall in mournful bath one ghost
Of that innumerable host.
Concern yourself with but today.
Woo it and touch it while you may.
Your will and wish. Since time began
Today has been the friend of man.
But in his blindness and his sorrows
He looks to yesterday and tomorrow.
You and today! A soul sublime.
And the great progress theme of time.
With God himself to bind the twain.
Go forth, I say—attain, attain!

—"Record of Christian Work."

BRIDGE RINGS.

With the prevalence of card games and parties, a new finger ornament is seized with avidity by the woman who would keep pace with things up to date, and who has the wherewithal to indulge.

The new bridge rings, as they are called, are an evolution from the cider but equally stunning banquet or dinner rings. Artificial light is not now demanded to make them good form.

They are designed for the small finger of the left hand, and the separate beauty of each ring has as much to do with its attractiveness as the value of the stones with which it is inerusted.

In the design an irregularity of outline is one of its most interesting peculiarities, and the settings are often an inch in length and sometimes longer, while their width depends upon the design chosen or the size of the finger they are to adorn.

There is usually a large centre stone—or three of varying sizes are used, and around these the smaller stones are set.

The old-fashioned brilliants and round diamonds used in brooches and rings of bygone days and hoarded among family treasures may be used in fashioning one of these bridge rings, and when thus congregated will give sensational value to what is really a most striking and individual ornament.

THE CHIFFON BURNOOSE.

A gauze cape, made on the loose, flowing lines of a peignoir, but worn as a wrap for the drawing room costume, is in high favor.

It is truly graceful and becoming to the soft feminine type of wearer, and it offers a happy enveloping wrap for the woman who is angular.

The latest style is arranged at the back of a burnoose drapery of the supple material. The large, loose sleeves are reminiscent of the kimono. The sleeve effect is curved and pointed up at the back; an edge of embroidery outlines the sleeves, collar and skirt.

A jeweled ornament buttons the pointed front edges, almost in the effect of a Louis coat.

The dress underneath need not be elaborate when embellished by the chiffon or silk coutilke drapery. Grace and beauty are in every line of this idea.

THE COCKADE.

The new French cockade is taller than the cabochon, and although it is called a rosette, this is a misnomer.

"Simply a cockade," says the Parisian letter which tells us all the latest news; but the cockade is not so very simple unless we know its construction.

The present one in Paris is tall, upstanding and not the pleated bit of gilt of the tricorne winter hat.

While the cockade may be of leather, braid, velvet, ribbon, gilt or lace, it is now upstanding, in fact, wired to give it absolute certainty of position.

Lace or maline is the cockade par excellence of the present movement.

Finely pleated black lace is wired into a tall fan and fastened with a jet cabochon to a gold-colored straw turban for wear with a pongee frock.

HINTS ON SAVING.

Here are a few hints on how not to save:

1. Don't go without your lunch, even once, it will injure your health.

2. Don't walk home after a day's shopping, you can save money later, but never a new constitution after your one and only one has been undermined.

3. Don't sew in the twilight. Artificial light is cheaper than the bill of an oculist.

4. Don't wear thin clothing on cold days, flannel is cheaper than medicine.

5. Don't use cheap soap It will necessitate an expenditure in cold cream, etc. to remedy the harm upon the skin.

6. Don't try to do the work of an upholsterer or carpet layer. You may, if you do, never feel again like trying a piece of hard work.

7. Don't overwork, nobody will thank you sufficiently for it and nerves and temper may be permanently ruined.

Rice a la Creole.

Chop one large onion and a small slice of cooked ham fine; put in a saucepan with one tablespoonful of butter, add one cup of cooked rice, also one small can of tomatoes or a dozen fresh ones, one teaspoonful of salt and a little paprika. Mix well together and beat thoroughly. Then put in baking dish, cover with bread crumbs and put in the oven for fifteen minutes. The tomatoes should be stewed until thick before serving.

To Make It Go Up.

Redd—What's become of your motorboat?

Greene—Oh,I did something to the engine, and the whole thing went up in the air.

Redd—Tell me what it was you did, can't you. I might be able to use it on my aeroplane.—Exchange.

Rushing Convent Plans.

It is expected that work will be started on the new St. Mary's convent some time during next month. The specifications have been prepared and are now being figured on by local contractors.

HERE AND THERE.

An epitaph placed on the tombstone of a man who died recently in Heligoland has given rise to an action for libel. The words that have given offence were chosen by the man's widow and were as follows: "Neglect shortened your life, my beloved, when you were in the prime of manhood."

The physician who attended the husband during his last illness, Dr. Woltersdorf, considers the inscription a reflection on himself and has taken proceedings against the widow. On her side she maintains that the accusation refers to herself alone and that she had it placed on the tomb as an everlasting record of her own negligence.

Mrs. Chapman, of Staines, near Windsor, England, who first handled a rifle less than four years ago, has won the world's record for women's rifle shooting with 99 points out of a possible 105 in a competition of the South London Rifle Club at Bisley. Quartermaster-Sergeant Fulton, winner of the Queen's prize in 1888, secured the same aggregate, but was beaten by Mrs. Chapman at 500 yards, although he scored 34 to her 32 at the longest range.

Mrs. Chapman, who has won over 100 prizes, uses the regulation Lee-Metford. She took up rifle shooting as a recreation much as other women play golf or croquet.

At Bisley last year, where she was the only woman shooting with the service rifle, her name appeared in the Alexandra Brownlow and civilian prize lists, her scores being 62 out of a possible 70, 36 out of 35 and 67 out of 70.

Lemonade.

There is nothing more satisfactory, usually, on hot days than a good lemonade or "lemon squash," as our British cousins call it. One lemon to one pint of water, very little sugar, is best. But when one is forty miles from a lemon, a harmless substitute may be made from citric acid, either pulverized or in crystals, and lemon extract for flavoring. No ill effect can result from using this acid in such small quantities as to make tart a cooling drink or pudding sauce, for it must be remembered that this is the acid found in the fruits of the citrus kind—lemon, the lime, orange, grape fruit, etc., and used in moderation is healthful.

His Occupation.

"He had a good business, but he lost it."

"Did he drink?"

"No; but he was too busy being a prominent citizen to attend to anything else."

BARTLE GETS VERDICT AGAINST A CONTRACTOR

Judge Isaac P. Runyon, as counsel for William E. Bartle, of this city, against Barnhard & Son, of Trenton, in the Supreme Court at Somerville Friday, gained a notable verdict for his client in which the jury upheld a verbal contract.

Barnhard & Son were the contractors for the stone work on the Darrow avenue school. In sub-letting the contract the Trenton firm issued specifications calling for "native stone." Among those who furnished figures on the job was Bartle. The latter's estimate was $1,800 and the Barnhard firm accepted his offer verbally and told him to start on the work.

According to the evidence in the case Bartle got the stone from his quarry after $400 had been involved for work and expenses; at this point Bartle was notified by Barnhard & Son to stop all work as they were going to use lime stone and later gave the contract to a Trenton man, for Indiana lime stone.

The Barnhards asked Bartle to give them an estimate on the latter grade of stone but Bartle refused to do so when he was told the expense involved in furnishing stone according to the verbal contract which had been repudiated by the Barnhards.

Accordingly Judge Runyon instituted suit and the jury awarded Bartle a verdict of $450, being the full amount of damage, claims and profits involved in carrying out the verbal contract.

Barnhard & Son were represented by Linton Satterthwait, of Trenton, and John Frech, of Somerville.

There was a reduction of $250 on the Plainfield Trust Company loan. The working assets of the club are $1,566.20, and increase of $456.11 over last year. The building and real estate is valued at $22,500, furniture, $6,000, a total of $30,066.20. The working liabilities are $1,441.49 against $1,918.82 last year.

The report shows receipts for rentals of $901.50; profit on cigars, $427.46; initiations, $420; Comedy Club, $75, an increase of $220.09.

ARTIFICIAL BOUTONNIERE.

The French mode of wearing artificial flowers on the street costume has for months been knocking at our doors, and at last has been accepted with a rush.

American women have been prejudiced against the cloth or silk gardenia or dahlia, though why we cannot explain to the astonished Parisians. "Why madame, you wear no real flowers on your hats," said one emphatic Frenchman, "yet you will not bring the exquisite touch of spring down to your coat!" And it gives us an appreciation of the possibilities of the boutonniere.

It will not wither, and gives just a suggestion of relieving color below the face.

Carmelias streaked with pink, white gardenias surrounded with waxy leaves, or violets that are scented in their never-fading glory are the most favored.

Of course, in the selections of these flowers it is cheaper to pay a high price, which sounds paradoxical. They last a longer time and look emphatically better than the *cheaper grades. The coloring is al*ways better in the more expensive varieties, and though deception should not be encouraged in dress, there is an attractive freshness of the higher-priced flowers that is second only to the real thing.

The Ingredients.

Buds, floods.
Whitewash and suds.
Birdies that gleefully sing;
Bees, trees,
Maybe a breeze.
Such are the factors of spring.

Hats, gnats,
Searched for flats,
Stray butterflies on the wing;
Sleet, heat,
Carpets to beat,
Such are the factors of spring.

MINSTRELS MAKE A HIT

More Than 1,000 Attended the Burnt Cork Performance at Hope.

TOPICAL SONG A WINNER.

Verses Composed by Judge Runyon and Sung by Thomas M. Muir

—Troupe Makes a Present to the Coach.

The third and last night of the Hope chapel minstrel show went off without a hitch last Friday night and the young men played to a capacity audience. Under the direction of William N. Runyon, the troupe acquitted itself with great credit. There was frequent and hearty applause particularly following the solo work, the wholesome jokes, as well as the rest of the program.

Special mention should be made of the work of Thomas M. Muir in the singing of his topical song. It was the hit of the show, and before he concluded the many verses he was presented with a beautiful bouquet of roses. William Anderson, Frederick V. Tallamy, W. J. Firstbrook, as well as the other soloists came in for a share of applause.

More than 1,025 people witnessed the performance during the three nights it was given. Friday night just before the medley was sung closing the first part of the show, Ben Evans, the interlocutor, on behalf of the troupe, as well as the William N. Runyon Association, under whose auspices the affair was given, presented Judge Runyon with a handsome diamond stick pin. The Judge made a happy response, thanking the troupe and association; also the many patrons of the affair.

After the show the troupe, together with several friends, adjourned to the Hotel Iroquois, where a repast was enjoyed. Covers were laid for fifty-six. There was an informal song-fest in celebration of the great success attending the show.

A feature of the program last night was the violin and piano playing of Joseph Denny. His versatile work brought down the house, being exceedingly clever not only on the violin, but with the piano. He was recalled several times.

The committee which had charge of the show and also arranged for *the supper, comprised William An*derson, chairman; Benjamin Evans, John Chamberlain and Russell Randolph. Jewett Penny was chairman of the finance committee and Allen Snyder was in charge of the box office. The verses of the topical song as composed by Judge Runyon and sung by Thomas M. Muir follow:

IN THE SWEET BYE AND BYE.

If you listen I will sing a little song of joy to come
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
We'll have everything adjusted and no longer on the bum
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
Every man will hold his temper and remain sedate and cool.
Every kid will start to beller if they keep him out of school.
And the only law in town will be the good old golden rule.
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.

Chorus.

In the Sweet Bye and Bye,
Gee I hope it comes about before
I die.
I'd be very glad to wait,
If they'll only fix a date
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.

Do you think the Eastern Bottling Company's going to get its pay?
In the Sweet Bye and Bye?
For the stuff it sold the city last July on Charter Day
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
They have stung it good and proper,
and it seems extremely queer,
That the Mayor and Common Council should for pretty near a year,
Do nothing else but promise that that they'd pay the bill for beer.
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.

—Chorus.

People say the city autos will improve the town a lot,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
The Street and Fire Departments will be Johnny-On-the-Spot
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
Now that Mr. Gavett has a car to help him with his cares,
Now that T. O. Doane can motor out to see the baseball players,
Don't you think they'd ought to buy another one for Alden Ayers?
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.

—Chorus.

Since the great election 's over, do you think we'll win or lose,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
Will it cost us more or less to get the water that we use?
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
Now unless the P. P. A. is wrong,
the price will ne'er annoy,
We will gather round the bath tub
every day and sing for joy,
But in case our taxes jump, I'm going to lick Depew or Moy
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.

—Chorus.

All the ladies in the town would like to have a children's court
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
Where the Judge could act as papa for the kids of every sort
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
That's an awful job to ask a single man to take alone,
And if nothing else will suit the hens
but highly moral tone,
They had better get a Judge who has some children of his own,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.

—Chorus.

When we get our public play grounds
all the kids will be polite
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
They will all be "Perfect Ladies" and will never, never fight,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
They'll play "Ring Around a Rosy," and will neither spit nor hoot,
They will "Skin the Cat" correctly
in a manner that is cute,
But they'll never know the joy of being swatted on the snoot
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.

—Chorus.

All will be serene and lovely when we're ruled by Suffragettes,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
All the men will tend the babies when their wives smoke cigarettes,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
We've been taught that lovely woman is a creature who enchants,
But how different when our sisters and our cousins and our aunts
Learn to drink and chew tobacco and go round all wearing pants,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.

—Chorus.

Do you think that we will have some honest men in politics,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
If they're asked to run for office will they up and holler "nix."
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
What with Aldis and Conger in New York they've got an awful mess,
And the merry Trenton rummies haven't been a great success.
All the decent men would much prefer to stay at home, I guess.
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.

—Chorus.

When T. Roosevelt gets back home again, there'll be the deuce to pay,
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
For I think when he sees Mr. Taft, he'll have a lot to say
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.
He'll say "Bill, your Tariffs rotten,
you're a big disgrace,
Mr. Ballinger is crooked, and I'll tell you to your face.
If you don't improve, you bet your life, I'm going to take your place."
In the Sweet Bye and Bye.

TINY HOT WATER BOTTLE.

A tiny hot water bottle for a baby is now a necessary part of its outfit.

Therefore it makes a good gift to a young mother.

To make the gift daintier looking include a cover. These covers can be bought, but are more attractive when made.

One is of flannel in blue, pink or white. It is cut large enough for the bag to slip in easily and is bound together with wash ribbons. A draw string is in the top and on one side the initial of the baby in a contrasting color.

The letters should not be too heavily padded, as they are not comfortable if pressed on delicate skin.

Another cover, newer than the embroidered flannel ones, is the crocheted one in heavy knitting silk. These covers are in blue and pink with inch-wide ribbons to draw them at the top.

Patterns for such bags can be found in books on crochet and form a pleasant change from the interminable silk neckties which most women keep on hand to fill odd minutes.

STARCH BATH FOR THE SKIN.

The starch bath is a good means of allaying itching or annoying skin eruptions.

Into a tub of say ten gallons of water drop one-half pound of starch.

The gelatin bath serves a similar purpose. It is soothing to an irritated skin. The proportions are ten gallons of tepid water.

Two hundred and fifty grams of white Fiend gelatine, are used.

The cold bath is a stimulant for those who are strong enough to react from it. The test is whether after the cold plunge the skin turns red. If it turns blue the vitality is not sufficient to stand the treatment. Cold baths should not be taken without the advice of a competent physician.

The hot bath is soothing, but if taken too often is enervating. Once a week, under ordinary circumstances, is often enough for a hot bath.

The tepid bath, graduated to a cool bath by letting the cold water run in as the warm water runs off, is the best daily bath.

What Did He Think?

Yeast—All Rotterdam street cars carry first-aid packages for relief in case of accident to crew, passengers or pedesterians.

Crimsonbeak—But don't people ever steal the flasks?

STAMP MACHINE FACTORY WILL BE LOCATED HERE

One of the things which is interesting Uncle Sam and a whole lot of people all over the country is a machine invented by P. H. Pollock, of Baltimore, Md., which is intended to do away with microbes and other bacilli which one might encounter in the ordinary course of events when trying to mail a letter, a stamp vending arrangement. Mr. Pollock, the inventor of the machine, has been here for about a week endeavoring to interest Plainfielders in his machine.

The object of Mr. Pollock's visit to this city is to interest investors in a machine which has the approval of the United States Government. The invention is a marvelously simple one but it answers the requirements of all the demands made upon it by the government officials.

The machine is so sensitive to the attempts of "pushers of the coin" that a counterfeit cannot get by and therein lies the value of the machine. Kenneth Mackenzie, one of the promoters of the new company, demonstrated the working of the machine to a few interested persons this morning and the probabilities are that before the week is over there will be nothing in the way of preferred stock to be bought. The company proposes to build a factory here and operations will begin before the summer is over.

Postmaster Bird, of this city, has placed the stamp of approval on the new device, as it is said, and the Washington authorities have made it apparent that they will approve the machine as soon as a plant sufficiently capable is established to produce the machines as fast as wanted.

The coin detecting device on the machine is absolutely perfect in separating spurious from genuine coins *and a special little mechanism pre*vents duplication of delivery of stamps from the slot. It is understood that the company will locate its factory in this city and the officers are now looking for a location.

COURT REFUSES LIQUOR LICENSE FOR DUNELLEN

The application of Edward A. Hirsch, of Dunellen, for a wholesale liquor license at that place was denied by Judge Lyon in the Middlesex county courts at New Brunswick Friday. Hirsch presented an application signed by eighty persons who favored granting the license and also informed the court that Dunellen was in need of another place and that the town is now being annexed from the saloons that come from other places. Hirsch represented to the court that Mayor Sanford and other officials in the borough were in favor of the license being granted.

Judge Lyon, in refusing the application, declared that he had received two objections to the place from manufacturers, and even if he had not, he would have refused the license as he had repeatedly stated that he would not grant any new petitions. Judge Lyon also declared that he would not renew any applications where there have been violations of the law.

DUNELLEN HAS FIGHT WITH LAND COMPANY

Protests were registered by the *Dunellen Board of Trade at its meet*ing Friday over the plans of the Equator Park Development Company of that place in laying out streets on the former Sanford tract which was purchased by the company several months ago. It was claimed by the members that the plans of the company, if carried out, will spoil the beauties of Front street, Dunellen Court, First, Second, Third and Fourth streets.

The Borough Council was petitioned to prevent the land company from carrying out its plans on the above named grounds. Another resolution was adopted petitioning the Court of Chancery of the company insist in carrying out its plans, to run Dunellen avenue through the tract on a straight line to Gallagher's Corner by condemnation proceedings.

Indications point to a merry fight between the land company and the borough authorities in the future should the former decide to adhere to their plans. Speeches against the proposition were made by Edward Maurer, F. D. Baerman, former Mayor Harry Swackhamer, Borough Clerk A. S. Cortell and George Sumner Smith.

Another Kind of Scratch.

"I hope you'll take good care of your doll, dear!" said the mother. "Be careful and not scratch it."

"Why, mamma?"

"Because you'll spoil it if you scratch it."

'It won't spoil it to scratch its head, will it, mamma."—Exchange.

VICTIM OF ACCIDENT DIES

Mrs. Sidna R. Vail, of Norwood Avenue, Passes Away Aged 88.

FRACTURED HIP AND SHOCK.

Survived by Five Sons, Sixteen Grandchildren, Two Great Grandchildren and Many Friends.

Mrs. Sidna R. Vail, died Sunday at the home of her son, Charles E. Vail, 26 Norwood avenue, as the result of an accident a week ago, when she fell and fractured her hip. Owing to her advanced age, there was practically no chance for recovery. Mrs. Vail was one of the oldest members of the Religious Society of Friends and a regular attendant at the Plainfield meeting.

Mrs. Vail was the daughter of the late Jonah and Rachel (Pound) Vail and was born nearly eighty-nine years ago on the old homestead farm on the Greenbrook road, nearly back of Dunellen, the place where Washington stopped to ask for a guide to conduct him to a sightly point on the nearby mountains from which he might get a view of the country. This had been the home of her ancestors for several generations.

In 1841 she married Edward R. Vail, whose home was on the adjoining farm and on a section of her father's farm. Between these two homes a house was built, where the youngest couple passed more than fifty years of wedded life. It was here that their five sons and one daughter were born and where the daughter died in early childhood.

The five sons who survive her are Alfred R. Vail, of Duer street, North Plainfield; William H. Vail, of North Branch; George S. Vail, of Dunellen, and Charles E. and Randolph W. Vail, of this city. Beside these there are sixteen grandchildren, twenty-two great grandchildren and four great-great grandchildren. Adelbert Vail, of East Fifth street, is a brother and Bella R. Vail, of Church street, is a sister.

DUNELLEN'S SPEEDY NINE

Plainfield Aggregation Whitewashed by Suburbanites in 12 Inning Game.

BIG SURPRISE FOR THE LOCALS.

Battle Ended With Score 1 to 0—Brilliant Pitching Duel Between Warry McLaughlin and Jimmy Montross.

Dunellen's band of ball boosters opened the season auspiciously at that place on Saturday afternoon by dipping Manager Dorninger and his Plainfield "bunch" into the kalsomine bucket. The battle waged twelve innings, score, Dunellen, 1; Plainfield, 0. Great was the rejoicing among the fans of the old Middlesex burg when the eagle flopped its wings and screeched forth victory.

It was the most notable victory in the ball history of the town according to the demonstration that prevailed after the contest. The demon D. A. C. athletes were accorded all the honors of heroes. There were showers of bouquets of violets hurled at them as they picked up their bats and bags to leave the field, and many of the more frenzied of the fans displayed their exuberance by carrying the victors off the diamond on their shoulders, and then to cop it off, Thirty-third Ward Alderman Pidlington, Sr., father of Dunellen's noble first sacker, speeded to Peter Ratti's soda water and cigar emporium and left an order to treat the athletes with highly flavored ice cream soda and cigars.

The contest waged itself into a brilliant pitching duel between Warry McLaughlin, of the locals, and Smiling Jimmy Montross, also a local favorite. Honors were about even. Both boys performed in magnificent style, each having ten strikeouts to their records, while each flinger distributed five bingles.

The victory perched itself on the Dunellen banner in the twelfth round, two errors and two well placed bunts figuring in the episode. After Boyd's error gave Craig a life on first base, the sacks were quickly filled when Miller and Montross bunted safely. Then followed Plainfield's fatality. Nonemaker, the blonde-haired left fielder, cracked out a Texas leaguer to right. Lidgate, who had been performing in brilliant style all through the fray, ran in for the fly. The globule struck square in the High School's catcher's mit, and bounded away. It was all over then and Craig scooted home with the winning tally.

Plainfield had numerous chances to score but Jimmy Montross' splendid headwork checked the locals in this direction. In the fifth round O'Laughlin started operations by peeling off a single to center field and Lidgate reached first on Giles' jumbling play. This was followed by a lightning double play in which O'Loughlin and Martin perished. Martin lined out a long fly to Miller in centre, and O'Loughlin in trying to make third, was nailed on Miller's splendid throw to Craig.

In the following round Montross was invincible and the local hitters powerless before his delivery. Barnes, Nelson and Macaulain successively struck in the Whiffville Route in jig time and all Dunellenites smiled, including "Smiling Jimmy."

Nonamaker starred for Dunellen. His half dozen chances were all thrilling nabs which stired the spectators to their heartstrings. The score:

SPEAKERS FROM PROFESSIONS.

Give Their Opinions From Actual Experience at Congregational Men's Club Meeting.

An unique and largely attended service under the auspices of the Men's club was held in the Congregational church Sunday, at which three professional men addressed the audience upon the "Opportunities for Christian Service in the Professions." Hon. J. Warner Wallace, represented the legal; Dr. Ellis W. Hedges, the medical, and Professor H. C. Krebs, superintendent of the Somerset county schools, the educational profession. Music was furnished by a male quartet composed of W. G. Smith, Charles E. Lewis, M. C. Vandervoort and Elmer Cutting. Mr. Cutting also sang a solo.

Rev. Charles L. Goodrich introduced the speakers, Mr. White being the first to tell of the opportunities a lawyer has to influence people for good. Mr. White gave several illustrations from his practice in the courts of New York in which he showed conclusively that the lawyer is a much maglined being; while as a matter of fact, if he is a good lawyer, which means a good man, he exercises an influence for good, when by letting an easy moral sense have the sway untold injury to the public could inevitably be done.

In the making of a reputation which shall last and which shall tell for the good of the profession and his fellow man, it is the duty of every lawyer to use his intelligence in the way that will best bring the good results to his client, to himself, to the profession and to the public. Of course, there are men in the profession whose attributes were not conducive to confidence, but in exceptional cases only should the profession at large do have and do take advantage of innumerable opportunities to do good in preventing crime where the client fails to see that he intends to commit it. The dissemination through discussion of public questions of knowledge which is valuable to the thinker and voter, Mr. White said, was one of the surest and best ways of influencing men to do the right thing at the proper time. He must aid his intelligence by absorbing the best knowledge which as a matter of learning comes to many cases from the clients themselves.

Dr. Hedges, who followed, said that he believed the best way a doctor could render Christian service was by getting very close to his patients. As many of the professions had laid claim to being nearest to the people, including the clergy, the clergyman, lawyers, doctors, shop girls and trained nurses he was not sure but that the doctor really does get a greater insight to human nature than any profession or calling, the doctor's life is made up of hope, patience, forbearance and sympathy, and there is opportunities which cannot come to other men. Some times it becomes necessary to scare men into being good and this method while it may seem harsh is the very best way at times.

The doctor was humorous at times and in some of the stories used to illustrate his points provoked mirth among his hearers. He brought out, however, the pathetic side of the life in a way to make one feel that after all the medical profession has a wide sphere of influence for good and the majority of the members do day exercise the privilege they have for passing on the best that is in them for the good of others.

Mr. Krebs told the audience that he believed that the teachers in the public schools, or in fact teachers everywhere have the largest sphere of influence because there they mold the immature mind and must be more lasting than on the minds of people who have gone out into the world to make their way. The child comes to school with respect for his teacher and in an expectant attitude which gives the teacher the chance to instill the things which are to make for the good of that child's life, or the reverse. There in the schoolroom the opportunity becomes great for awaking the divine spark which must be fanned into a flame to withstand the false influence which comes from the practical lessons taught form the foundation for the upbuilding of the young life.

The speaker gave various examples of how an indirect influence is exerted and why the strict observance of personal cleanliness is a factor in character building. Not necessarily the cleanliness of body alone, but every attribute which goes to make up the good man and woman. This he said was tremendously important. The pupils are stimulated by good example and the good seed thus sown is bound to bring forth good fruit. The opportunities are boundless and the hourly contact with the children day by day finally shows in the after life of those who have been under the proper influence.

The speeches made a great impression on the audience which gave the closest attention. The members of the Men's Club felt that their special effort of last night had well repaid them.

The funeral services of Lebbeus L. Manning were held from the late home, 807 West Seventh street, at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, and was largely attended by relatives and friends, including all of the employes of Mr. Manning. There was a large and beautiful display of floral tributes, including a number of set pieces, cut flowers, etc., which completely hid the casket from view.

The burial was in Hillside Cemetery and the pall-bearers were James Manning, William R. Codington, Frank Weeks, George H. Batchelor, A. C. Stebbins and William Johnson.

LARGE CONGREGATIONS HEAR REV. DR. MAGUIRE

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, preached to large congregations Sunday morning and evening which taxed the capacity of the edifice. In the morning his theme was "Lost" preached on the subject of "The Writing on the Wall," depicting the scenes at the feast of Belshazzar.

During the course of the morning service, Mr. Maguire to test his congregation, asked those present whether the book of "Hezekiah" was in the Old or New Testament, requesting them to raise their hands. A large number of hands went up when he asked whether it was in the Old Testament and almost as many hands were displayed when Mr. Maguire asked if it was in the New Testament. He then told them that it was in neither, that there was no book of that name in the Bible.

Mr. Maguire declared during his discourse in the morning, that "If a church gets the preacher by the coat-tails, God help him; he has a call to some other place." Both sermons were forceful, full of pointed and genuine Irish wit. In the evening Miss Arline Brown sang a solo.

POTTER'S SINGLE MEN DEFEAT THE BENEDICTS.

There was big doings on the Clinton Avenue diamond on Saturday morning when the Single and Married Men's ball nines of the Potter Printing Press Works clashed for honors. In a nip and tuck battle the bachelors downed the benedicts by the score of 15 to 14. The game was featured by heavy batting by both teams. Captain Duffy of the Single's Men's aggregation walloped the ball for two home runs and two corking singles. Porter caught a fine game for the victors and Magee starred for the benedicts. The score:

CLERGYMAN'S TRAMP LASTED WHOLE WEEK

Emulating the late Bishop Leighton Coleman, of Delaware, whose practice it was to take long walks for the benefit of his health, Rev. George A. Warner accompanied by two of the choir boys of his church and Will O'Brien, the organist, completed a tramp on Saturday morning aggregating about 118 miles in all.

On Monday the quartet walked from High Bridge, going from Plainfield by train, to Hackettstown, a distance of 18 miles thence to Newton, another stretch of 18 miles. On Tuesday they traveled from Newton to Diagman's Ferry and on Wednesday the trip took them from the Ferry through Bushkill to Delaware Water Gap, a distance of 26 miles. From the water gap to the next stopping place, Buckwville, they walked to Clinton passing through Manunkchunk. This took up all of Thursday and on Friday the tramp lay along the beautiful country roads to Clinton where Jud Stewart took them in his automobile and brought them home.

SUNDAY BALL GAME PLAYED AT 'PLAINS

Despite threats of the Sabbath observance advocates at Scotch Plains to stop Sunday ball playing the game scheduled between the team of that place and the Stirling A. The Brooklynites won handily by the score of 9 to 2. The score:

Incorrigible.

"Your son looks so very much like your daughter, Mrs. Raymond," said the friend. "Are they alike in temperament?"

"Not a bit. She's easy to handle, but that boy, I can't do anything with. Why, I can't keep him at home at all, he's continually running away for days at a time!"

"Well, tell you what to do. Put him in girl's clothes and I'll gamble he won't move out of your back yard!"

"You don't know my boy. I tried that scheme!"

"Surely he didn't appear on the streets in his sister's clothes!"

Didn't he? He hadn't been in them ten minutes, when his sister's fellow came along and seeing him sitting in the hammock with a book, invited him out to the theatre and supper; and he went!"—From Norman E. Mack's National Monthly.

Why He Was Lonesome.

Tommy, whose varying points of view are illustrated by the Farm Journal, had not yet learned the Golden Rule. Neither have a good many of his elders.

"I should think, Tommy," said his father, "that you might find some boy to play with you. Now what's the matter with Johnny Jenkins and the little Dobbs boy?"

"Pooh! Why, they're a whole year younger than I am," Tommy contemptuously. "I couldn't play with them!"

"Well, there's Jack Spear and Willie Harlow. Won't they do?"

"Yes, but they're a year older than I am," said Tommy, wistfully; "so the mean things won't play with me."

K. T. Auxiliary Tea.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary to Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., a sale and tea was held Saturday afternoon at the home of the president, Mrs. James Shores Pray, on East Sixth street, from 3 to 6 o'clock. The proceeds, which will amount to about $30, will be placed in a fund to endow a bed at Muhlenberg Hospital. Mrs. Pray had general supervision of the affair.

Nielsen—Fritts.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Baldwin, of Westfield announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss May H. Fritts, to Olof Nielson, of this city, at their home, 115 Broad street, on last Wednesday. Rev. William I. Steins performed the ceremony. Mrs. George Collins, of New York city, sister of the bride, was matron-of-honor and Nells Nielsen, brother of the groom, was best man.

"There's bound to be a reaction from these modern plays."

"That's what. And when it happens I'm going to revive the 'Black Crook' and take it over the lyceum circuit."

"I started farming on a capital of $1."

"I started on a package of free seeds sent me by a Congressman."

SLOCUM FOOLS NEWARK

Youthful Y. M. C. A. Twirler Pitches Locals to Victory Over Marathon A. C.

STRUCK OUT FIFTEEN BATTERS

Evans Starred at the Bat and Linke Shone in Rightfield—The Score Was 8 to 2.

Slocum, the youthful twirling artist of the Y. M. C. A. nine, proved himself a wizard of the mound on Saturday afternoon when he hypnotized the Marathons of Newark to such an extent that the contest was in the shape of a walkover for the locals, Y. M. C. A. defeating the Newarkers by a score of 8 to 2.

Now ye big league scouts who are after young Mathewsons, take a trip to our town and see the young phenom perform. Slocum's work on the slab was the stellar feature of the contest. He fanned fifteen of the Essex county representatives and limited them to three wallops. Quite a big day's work for young Mister Slocum, all will agree.

It was the initial home game of the tribe of Listman of the season and the Association boys performed in a capital fashion. They banged the horsehide hard and often for a total of twelve swats, three of the binglers being two-baggers. Although three errors were charged against the locals Manager Listman's aggregation played a sharp field game, and taking everything into consideration, the nine performed in classy style.

Evans starred in the hitting and run getting stunts. This athlete hit safely four times, two of his whacks being two baggers, while he crossed the pan twice with tallies. Linke had an extremely busy day in right field and pulled down seven flies during the battle.

The visitors chalked up a tally in the initial round but the locals retaliated by marking up three times that number. Murphy started the Plainfield artillery by nailing one of Wilson's offerings for a single and he advanced to second base when the Newark twirler ribbed Linke with an inshoot. Fritts was an easy out, and then Hand came to the front with a timely hit which scored Murphy and Linke. Smith fumbled Dumont's grounder and the latter afterward purloined second and scampered home on Evans' wallop.

In the fourth session the association athletes piled up four more tallies to their credit. Singles by Dumont and Evans gave the locals a flying start and Coyle's two-sacker dispatched the pair home in a jiff. Allistons error allowed Coyle to score and placed Stover on the bags. Another error by Alliston, after Slocum and Murphy were retired, permitted Stover to score.

Plainfield added another tally in the sixth when Evans led off with a two-bagger, the local swatsmith crossing the plate on Coyle's sacrifice. The Marathon also got another run in the seventh. The score:

Choice New Batistes.

For the dainty home-made frock there can be found no more attractive material than barred and printed batiste. It is of a delicate filminess; it is barred even as plaid muslins are, and then there are printed over its surface, regardless of the bars, the daintiest little old-fashioned bouquets in gay colors. Particularly suitable is this dainty stuff for the quite young girl, and altogether pretty enough for a short party frock. Ideal material for the garden party, which you will be considering before you know it.

No Excitement.

CHANGES IN THE CHOIRS

New Soloists Heard Yesterday in Many of the Local Churches.

SOME EXCEPTIONAL TALENT.

A. H. Betteridge Succeeds Mr. Pettigrue as Organist at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Interest was largely centered in the church music Sunday, changes in the personnel of several of the choirs having been made to take effect on May 1. At the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church the changes included a new organist, baritone and soprano. Alexander Russell replaced R. A. Laslett Smith at the organ and A. H. Betteridge took B. B. Pettigrue's place. Miss Watt, of New York, is the new soprano and as a whole the quartet is well balanced. The music of yesterday in this church left nothing to be desired.

At the First Presbyterian an entirely new quartet sang Sunday. They were Miss Elizabeth De Cant, soprano; Miss Winifred Carroll, formerly of Trinity Reformed, contralto; Aleck McGowan, tenor; Charles P. Titsworth, baritone. This choir seems to be splendidly balanced and if Organist Braider's plans for musical services during the summer months are carried out, the public will have opportunities of hearing some splendid singing.

At Trinity Reformed the only change was the replacing of Miss Winifred Carroll by engaging Mrs. Bayard Hawthorne, of Dunellen, as contralto soloist. Mrs. Hawthorne has a remarkable smooth voice of considerable power and was heard with pleasure.

Miss Ruth Harris, soprano, and Miss Hazel Hattfield, contralto, were heard for the first time at the First Baptist church Sunday morning and evening by large congregations. Both have sweet voices of good range, and doubtless will prove a valuable acquisition to the choir. In the morning Miss Harris sang the offertory solo, "These are They," in a pleasing manner, showing perfect control and displaying a voice of exceptional quality. Miss Hattfield has a true contralto voice. She had a solo part in an anthem in the morning and in the evening sang a duet in an anthem. Her voice has unusual volume and is very sweet.

GOLF SEASON OPENS AT THE COUNTRY CLUB

The formal opening of the active season at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday was an auspicious one, and in fact it was a gala day at the popular club house. The fifty entries were posted in competition for the Spring Handicap cups. Classes A and B, which is to be continued weekly until the latter part of June. Judging by the number of entries this contest will be more popular than ever and there is sure to be considerably rivalry.

For this time of the year the course is in exceptionally good condition, making competition a pleasure for all. There were no social features Saturday night, the opening being reserved until next Saturday, when the golf clubs of the city and borough have been invited to join in the festivities and accept the hospitality of the home club.

On Saturday, E. T. Wilson won first honors for the Class A cup, Leighton Calkins finished second, while R. S. Rowland, Clifton Wharton, Jr., and E. P. Goodwin divided the remaining points. For the Class B cup, H. S. Brown won first honors and H. F. Fox and L. R. Hopton divided the remaining points. The leading scores:

Class A—E. T. Wilson, 86, 12-74; Leigton Calkins, 85, 8-77; R. S. Rowland, 85, 7-78; Clifton Wharton, Jr., 92, 14-78; E. P. Goodwin, 93, 15-78; W. T. Glenney, 86, 7-79; Arthur Murphy, 87, 8-79; Stuart H. Patterson, 94, 15-79; J. A. Lane, 94, 16-79; C. B. Morgan, 87, 7-80; R. G. Morse, 93, 13-80; J. Whitney Baker, 88, 7-81; T. R. VanBoskerck, 95, 13-82; G. T. VanBoskerck, 98, 14-88.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST

MR. FOWLER'S CANDIDACY

Chairman Smith Tells Why It is Not Popular in Union County.

"A . SELF-CENTERED MAN."

Voorhees Declares that as a Regular Fowler and His Friends Should Support McGraw, Morris County's Choice.

Frank H. Smith, chairman of the Union County Republican Committee, and a close political friend of United States Senator John Kean, had a short conference yesterday afternoon with State Treasurer Voorhees concerning the situation in the Fifth Congressional District. Mr. Smith found the State Treasurer strong in his determination to defeat the renomination of Representative Charles N. Fowler for election to an eighth term in Congress.

"Frankly speaking," said Mr. Smith in talking about the Congressional nomination, "Union county is not very enthusiastic about continuing Mr. Fowler in Congress. As I said the other day, I do not know of any opposition in the county to Mr. Fowler, but nevertheless he is not strong with the organization men. He is a self-centered man in his political ambitions and has never been active in a campaign except when he has been a candidate himself. This has not tended to make him especially popular with the men who fight the battles of the Republican party in our section. More than this, he has gone out of his way at times to cast reflection on the loyalty of members of the county committee with reference to his own candidacies, and remarks of this character certainly do not set well with the men at whom they are aimed."

Mr. Smith said the State Treasurer seemed to be thoroughly in earnest in his opposition to Representative Fowler and he intimated that as a result of this new development in the situation Mr. Fowler's chances of being returned to Congress were not as bright as they appeared to be a short time ago.

When State Treasurer Daniel S. Voorhees today was shown the statements made by Frank H. Smith, Union county's Republican chairman, as to the position of Union on Fowler's candidacy, he declared that Morris county's position is one in favor of its candidate rather than one merely in opposition to the present representative. He also emphatically declared that Mr. Fowler is a regular and should not be classed as an insurgent.

"Morris has a candidate of its own this time," said "Uncle Dan," "and the past we have formed the nomination of Mr. Fowler on Union and now as we have a candidate we expect Mr. Fowler and his friends to support him. Mr. Fowler is not an insurgent; he's a regular and as such we expect his friends to support the nominee.

"We don't feel like pressing Fowler upon Union county this time. Union has the majority in the convention but we expect that it will turn in for our candidate. James H. McGraw is the man Morris wants for the place and he will accept the nomination. It is generally understood that Warren will be with us; it always has in the past. You see that Warren and Morris were in the old district and we have always acted in harmony. I want it understood that the fight is not one against Mr. Fowler; rather it is one in favor of Mr. McGraw.

When asked how it was that two years ago, according to general rumor, Morris had backed out after agreeing at a conference with Union to oppose Fowler, Mr. Voorhees shed new light on that situation.

"At that time we told the Union county people that we would support the man who got the majority of delegates in Union. Mr. Fowler got them and we lived up to our agreement. That is all. In my judgment Mr. McGraw will be the nominee and he will make an excellent candidate.

As to the number of delegates Mr. Fowler would control in the convention, Mr. Voorhees said that he conceded him approximately twenty, and that these would come from Union county. Most of these twenty he believed would be from Plainfield and Westfield, where Mr. Fowler's forces are marshalled by James T. MacMurray and Charles N. Codding, respectively. Mr. MacMurray is out of town, but it is expected that he will make a heroic fight again for Mr. Fowler. It was said by Mr. Voorhees that he had not heard from Mr. MacMurray although the latter had called him up on the 'phone last Sunday when he was not home.

Mrs. J. H. Greene, of West Seventh street, has returned home after an extended visit with friends in Metuchen.

GREAT CROWD HEARS THE Y.M.C.A. ORCHESTRA

Martin A. Korff rounded out twenty-five years as an orchestral director at the Y. M. C. A. last night at one of the most artistic concerts ever given by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra. The auditorium was packed to its capacity and several hundred people were unable to gain admittance to the hall. In appreciation of the orchestra's services the Y. M. C. A. will tender a dinner to Director Korff and his musicians on next Tuesday night.

All of the artists acquitted themselves creditably and were obliged to respond to encores. Miss Grace Carroll was contralto soloist and Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnston played the violin and Dr. Leonard Waldo played the 'cello.

The male quartette of Grace P. E. church, directed by S. Frederick Smith, sang several selections. In the quartet were William Tallamy, first tenor; Harry Yaeger, second tenor; Mr. Van Miner, first bass, and Bertram Tallamy, second bass.

A feature of the program was the rendition of Joseph Haydn's Symphony Militaire by the orchestra. The program was as follows:

WESTFIELD WOMAN SEEKS A SEPARATION

Vice-Chancellor Walker conducted a preliminary hearing yesterday at Trenton on the application of Mrs. Dorothea Louise Arnold, of Westfield, for an order requiring her husband, Oscar M. Arnold, also of Westfield, to pay her an allowance pending the result of an action for maintenance and alimony.

The court made an order allowing the wife $7 per week and also $30 for counsel fees. Mr. and Mrs. Arnold are both past middle age. They separated on April 18 last, the wife charging that her husband was self-willed and penurious towards here and had also abused her. In a lengthy affidavit submitted yesterday by Former Assemblyman Samuel Swackhamer, counsel for the husband, the latter denied the charges made against him. He declared that all the trouble between himself and his wife was due to the latter's grumbling because he did not provide money enough for her.

Arnold is employed in New York in the insurance business at a salary of $1,400 per annum, which he says is much less than he formerly earned. William A. Codington, of Plainfield, represents Mrs. Arnold.

WILLIAM GAUB MAY BE COUNTY DETECTIVE

William Gaub, a former lieutenant of the North Plainfield fire department, is an applicant for the position on the Somerset county detective staff. Gaub rendered efficient service to the police in the hunt for John V. Buckley, alias John Grant, the murderer of Mrs. Edna Covely, of Somerset place, and the movement to make him a county detective is a result of an effort on the part of North Plainfield people to reward Gaub for his services.

Gaub was also prominently identified in the capture of George Wood, who murdered George Williams, the Watchung grocer, about five years ago.

Gaub, in his efforts to land on the county detective bureau, is being supported by Mayor N. B. Smalley, Chief Weiss and other influential citizens of the borough.

WON'T EXTRADITE LEWIS

Governor Fort Decides That There is Not Sufficient Evidence.

VICTORY FOR C. A. MARSH.

Governor Hughes' Application for Custody of Alleged Embezzler is Refused—The Reasons Given.

Basing his decision on conclusions similar to those which guided him in refusing to grant a requisition in the case of the Beef Trust prosecution, Governor Fort yesterday at Trenton refused the application of Governor Hughes, of New York, for the extradition of Frederick Lewis, of Newark, who was arrested in this city several months ago charged with having committed the crime of grand larceny in the State of New Jersey. Lewis, who is represented by Craig A. Marsh, was arrested here and released on bail.

The Governor decides that Lewis is not a fugitive from justice, because sufficient evidence has not been presented by the New York authorities to show that the latter was in the State of New York on April 1, 1909, the date that the alleged crime was committed.

In refusing to order the extradition of Lewis the Governor was guided by an opinion given by Attorney-General Wilson, who conducted a hearing on the case and advised the Governor as follows:

"Accompanying the requisition is an affidavit made by John A. Palmer, reciting that he knew the defendant, and 'personally saw him in the city of New York on the first day of April, 1909, at Twenty-third street and North River.' This is the only evidence offered by the demanding State as to the presence of the defendant within the State of New York on the day the indictment alleges the crime was committed.

"As controverting this essential jurisdictional fact, an affidavit of the defendant has been filed, which recites that he was not within the State of New York on the first of April, 1909, and had not been in that jurisdiction since September, 1908.

"There is also an affidavit made by his wife, corroborative in character. She recites that she resides in the city of New York, and that her husband has lived in Newark, New Jersey, for more than two years; that she has been in the habit of visiting him weekly during that time, and that she did, in fact, visit him in Newark on the first day of April, nineteen hundred and nine; that she was with her husband from 11 o'clock in the forenoon until 5 o'clock in the afternoon; that she spent the whole time, between the hours just named, in the company of her husband, and that he left her when she entered the railroad train at the Newark depot on her return journey to New York.

"An affidavit is also presented, made by the grandson of the defendant. In it he recites that on the first day of April, 1909, he called personally to see his grandfather at the latter's residence in Newark; that he remembers the date by reason of the fact that on that day there was to be a reunion at the home of deponent's parents in New York city, and that it was concerning said reunion that the deponent conversed with his grandfather, and took messages from his grandfather to deponent's father and mother; that when deponent rang the bell at the residence of his grandfather, the person who answered the bell informed deponent that his grandfather had gone to the depot to meet his wife, whereupon deponent started for the depot, but had gone less than a block when he met his grandfather on Broad street, in Newark.

"From this review of the testimony, it would seem to me that it had not been reasonably established that the defendant was, in fact, within the jurisdiction of the demanding State on the controlling day, viz., the first day of April, 1909. This fact must be established to the satisfaction of a reasonable mind. The failure of the proof upon this jurisdictional defendin m was, in fact, should prompt your Excellency to deny the application of the demanding State."

PASTOR'S WIFE TELLS OF HORRORS OF CONGO

Before an audience of women that filled the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Maguire, wife of Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, gave a missionary talk, telling something of her experiences during the two years she spent on the Congo with her husband. For more than an hour she held the close attention of the women as she described the terrible condition of the natives when she first reached the Congo.

Mr. and Mrs. Maguire were located at a place called Mayombe, which they established as their headquarters. From this point they worked throughout that whole section, being about 150 miles inland on the north bank of the Congo.

Mrs. Maguire told of one pathetic incident she experienced soon after her arrival. She found a little girl lying outside her but crying as though her heart would break. When questioned Mrs. Maguire learned that the child had been sold to an old man for his fifth wife. In the rule of a man must pay for his first wife. After that the wife must work and raise money to pay for her husband's second wife, and this rule continues indefinitely or until the husband dies.

Especially fascinating in its weirdness was Mrs. Maguire's story of the "witch doctors" and how the natives are led to believe them capable of driving away the evil spirits. The process is one of barbarism and almost beyond comprehension. There are thousands of villages and towns throughout that section being densily populated.

Mrs. Maguire compared by way of contrast the condition of the children when she and her husband went to that country and when they left there, showing what a change had taken place. The children instead of being dirty and living on any old thing they could find to eat, were clean, well dressed and attended church and Sunday-school regularly. Instead of the barbarous practices the church bells were heard and everything took on an air of civilization. All this was in the section of the country where Mr. and Mrs. Maguire were located. They succeeded in establishing four mission stations during their sojourn. Of course, she said that the interior of the country was not even touched by the missionaries and there yet remained a great deal of work. At the close of Mrs. Maguire's talk the women extended to her a vote of thanks.

Authority was given at the regular monthly meeting of Muhlenberg Hospital's Board of Governors Monday night to the managing committee to engage a business manager for the institution at a salary not to exceed $1,500. This manager will have general charge of the business affairs of the institution exclusive of the actual care of patients and supervision of the nurses which will be in charge of Miss Hughes, the superintendent, as heretofore.

The board voted unanimously in favor of extending for one year from June 1, 1910, the present arrangement with the Anti-Tuberculosis League.

The annual election for governors to serve for three years resulted in the selection of the following: Leighton Calkins, J. E. Erickson, Charles J. Fisk, Benjamin A. Hegeman, Jr., David T. Kenney, S. Durell Lounsberry, William L. Saunders, John P. Stevens. All of these were re-elected except Mr. Stevens, who goes on the board as a new member.

The medical report for April showed thirty-four patients remaining in the hospital on April 1, and seventy-three admitted during the month. Fifty-two were discharged cured; seven were discharged improved, and one was discharged not improved. Five died. This left forty-two patients remaining on May 1. The total number of patients treated was 107, with seventy-nine operations. In the dispensary there were seventy-seven patients treated and 153 daily dispensary visits. In the contagious ward there were six patients during the month, two being discharged. One patient was discharged from the tuberculosis pavilion, leaving seven patients remaining. There were 1,323 general hospital days.

The special committee appointed some time ago to consider the advisability of consolidating the managing committee and the buildings and grounds committee, reported favorably, and submitted amendments to the by-laws for the purpose of carrying out this change. These amendments will be acted upon at the next meeting. If acted on favorably, there will in the future be an executive committee having general management of the administration of the hospital.

MAYOR FISK APPOINTS THREE PUBLIC WEIGHERS

Mayor Charles J. Fisk has decided to take advantage of section 14, chapter 259, of the New Jersey laws of 1908, which permits him to designate places where public scales may be maintained and he has selected the following:

Boice Runyon & Co., 238 Park avenue; George O. Stevens, 747 West Front street; Joseph Harrigan, 929 South avenue.

These firms have formally accepted the designation and have agreed to furnish bonds in the sum of $100 for the faithful performance of duties to be required of them; also, to provide themselves with the proper test weights. These scales will be intended for the public weighing of coal only. Official notice of the Mayor's action will be made in a few days. The scales will be subject to inspection at all times.

Anyone can demand that their coal be weighed on these scales, and the charge will be twenty-cents a load to be paid by the purchaser of the coal. In return a properly signed certificate will be furnished showing that the coal was weighed on the designated scales and is of the call-ed-for weight if that fact is proved. It will be optional with anyone as to whether he desires the coal weighed in this manner, there being nothing compulsory about the action of the Mayor in designating the scales, except to establish them according to law.

CITY BROKE AGREEMENT

Borough Sewage Committee Says City Backed Down Out of Arrangment.

ARBITRATION IS SUGGESTED.

Wants Election Held and Shows Why Original Plan for Proportionate Expense Is Equitable.

The following report of its work was presented to the North Plainfield Council Friday night by the borough members of the bi-municipal sewage disposal commission:

"In our report of October, 26, 1904, we made reference to a tentative agreement that had been reached with the city's committee, under which the cost of a joint outfall sewer and disposal works should be apportioned, seventy-five per cent. against the city and twenty-five per cent. against the borough. We also gave figures showing that by such joint action and under such apportionment the borough would save $25,000, as compared with the cost that would be incurred by the construction of its own Independent works.

"After reaching such agreement we were faced with the opinion of the city corporation counsel that there was no legislative authority for the proposed joint undertaking. The act was accordingly dropped.

"During December of last year, your committee was approached by the Honorable Charles J. Fisk and Mr. Mygatt, chairman of the city committee having charge of the matter in question, and we were asked by these two gentlemen to undertake through Sherrerd Depue, Esq., counsel for the borough, the framing of an act that would overcome the obstacle raised. After considerable work and some expense, this was accomplished, and with the earnest assistance of our Somerset senator and representative at Trenton, and the mayor of Plainfield the passage of the bill through the New Jersey Legislature was secured.

"Last week your committee met in joint conference with the city's committee composed of the selfsame gentlemen with whom our previous negotiations had been conducted, and with whom the agreement above referred to had been reached. Lest there should be any misunderstanding as to this agreement, we quote from a report filed with the city's Common Council, under date of December 19th, 1904, by all the members of the city's committee, as follows: 'It was therefore agreed that each committee would recommend to its respective Council that the cost be adjusted on the basis of seventy-five per cent. thereof to be paid by Plainfield, and twenty-five per cent. by North Plainfield.'

"At last week's conference we were met with a refusal on the part of said city's committee to join in any recommendation on the basis previously agreed upon as above stated, and the city placed an arbitrary apportionment of seventy per cent. and thirty per cent. as the only one they would now report for approval to their Council.

"This proposition was declined by your commission for the following reasons:

"The 1905 census figures show that Plainfield had at that time 77.08 per cent. and North Plainfield 22.92 per cent. of the combined population of the two communities. We believe that the census figures of 1910 will show that this borough's population does not exceed 20 per cent. of the combined population, and if this assumption proves correct, North Plainfield's just apportionment would be one-fifth of the cost. The apportionment of seventy-five per cent. and twenty-five per cent. was agreed to by your committee as a compromise and not as an estimate of a fair division.

"Plainfield's committee maintains that a further concession should be made to the city for the abandonment of its present plant, but in such a proposition your committee can see no justice for the reason that the city has enjoyed the sole use of its present works, and North Plainfield has in no way benefitted therefrom, but rather the reverse.

"Presuming that North Plainfield has now one-fifth of the combined population, under the city's proposal the borough would be charged $25,000 over and above its share, which amount is equivalent to a large part of the net interest ($30,000 less value of the real estate) that the city would abandon. In other words the city would have received for many years the entire benefit of its present disposal plant, and it is now proposed to take the major share of the loss due to its removal, should it born by our community.

"Your commission has always contended that a proper division of the cost of a joint municipal improvement such as is contemplated should be upon the basis of the population served or property values benefitted. These are the methods adopted in the case of the Metropolitan Boston Sewerage District, the Passaic Valley Sewerage System and also that of Montclair, Bloomfield and Glen Ridge. We have yet to learn of a single instance where any other plan of apportionment has been used. We joint improvement as compared with Plainfield's present operating expense. This sum capitalized is equivalent to another $70,000. The removal of the city's disposal works would set free real estate valued at upwards of $50,000 and it is therefore not difficult to figure an actual, immediate saving to the city, by joining with the borough, on the basis of seventy-five per cent. and twenty-five per cent. apportionment. In addition to this consideration, there is no question that the city's ratables would materially increase by the proposed change in its disposal site. On the other hand the city's further investment of $70,000, above mentioned, would be an ultimate dead loss, and what is still more serious, each year's delay will mean in increasing difficulty in finding any nearby disposal site.

"While it is not within our province to criticise or make suggestions as to the city's policy, but we are entitled to place before your honorable body all the facts reflecting upon the reasonableness of the position taken by either side, so that an intelligent decision may be reached by the borough. We have been willing to recommend an apportionment on the basis of ratables or upon the population as shown by either the 1905 census or that of the present year. If the apportionment was based upon the 1905 census the city's proposition would result in a capita charge on North Plainfield 45 per cent greater than the per capita charge upon the inhabitants of the city, that is to say, the cost to the borough would be $12.64 per capita and to the city $8.64 per capita. If the latter proposition were dropped, this disparity would be considerably increased if the probable relative growth of the city and the borough since 1905 is considered.

"If the preponderance of benefits to be derived from joint action was with the borough, there might be some reason for the city's position, but on the contrary, we believe that the balance of such benefits would lie with the city. It is believed that removal of the city's works is only a question f a few years. If temporary makeshift is made of their failure to enter into a joint action, the city will be compelled to expend $70,000 upon enlargements and improvements. There would be a saving in maintenance to the city alone of $3,000 per annum under a rough, and the onus for the failure of these negotiations may be correctly placed.

"It is further suggested that the entire question in dispute be submitted to arbitration and in doing so we believe that a limit to concessions has been reached.

At our request Mr. Depue has prepared an amendment to the borough act providing for the issuance of serial bonds, i. e., bonds as to which a stated amount shall be retired each year. This will obviate the necessity of a sinking fund with the dangers and expenses incidental to caring for such sinking fund for 40 years.

Notice of the intention of the Council of this borough to submit to the voters of the borough, at a special election, the question of the construction of its own sewerage system, has been published, as required by law, and before this time will have elapsed on Friday, the sixth inst. To prevent any question on this score, we recommend that the Council, when it adjourns, does so for one week to May 13, next, and on that day pass a resolution fixing an early date for said special election.

Respectfully submitted,

A TESTIMONIAL FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPT.

In recognition of his long and faithful services as superintendent of the First Baptist church Sunday-school, the officers and teachers presented George H. Batchelor with a handsome testimonial Friday in connection with the last social of the season. The testimonial was in the form of a book, leather bound, and contained the names of the officers and teachers. The presentation was made by George A. Chapman, to which Mr. Batchelor made a happy response.

A social followed, during which a professional imitator and ventriloquist, of Philadelphia, entertained, and refreshments were served. The committee in charge comprised Mrs. Harold Serrell, chairman; Mrs. Louis Metlack, Mrs. Rilla Brown, Miss Helen Armstrong, Miss Conant, Mrs. John G. MacLaughlin and Miss Van Winkle.

The Phrase That Allures.

"How did you manage to sell Mr. Cumrox all of those dull books on philosophy?" asked one agent.

"Easily," replied the other. "I looked mysterious and told him it was an unexpurgated edition."—Washington Evening Star.

BRAINS A BIG ASSET IN PLAYING BASEBALL

More and more baseball as exploited by major league teams is becoming a battle of wits. There is significance now in every play, in every ball pitched.

Strategists sitting on the bench vie with each other, the one trying to execute an unexpected play, the other striving just as earnestly to fathom, the intentions of the opponents.

With the man in the box pitching out, the hitter working in harmony with the baserunner, and the alert and quick-brained defenders to outguess the others, baseball today is a contest of brains.

Probably the game has not had such notable tacticians as it has today. Look over the list, Mack, Doolin, McGraw, Griffith, Jennings, McAleer and the others. All straining their intellects to devise new plays to confuse the enemy, and at the same time eager to divine what the opponents in turn will try on them.

Two brilliant coups stood out in the series between the Phillies and Giants last week. One was made by the home team and the other by the visitors.

In the third inning of the game Thursday, the Phillies faced a crisis. Ituuness were on third and first and Doyle was out, with Larry Doyle, the Giants' best hitter, at bat.

Moore was pitching for the home team and Doolin catcher. Doolin at once knew that Devore, the man on first, would try to steal.

If the man did steal he would mean that Ituuness could score on a single. If the throw to second was wild, the man on third could score and the other proceed to third. It was a ticklish situation, although it is common in baseball. There are man plans to beat it, but they are not always successful. It is a tough problem any time, even if it comes up in every game.

New York's runners, of course, realized that Doolin knew that Devore would try to steal second and that he would make every attempt to defeat it, but they never divined the particular play Doolin was going to use.

All this reasoning and counter-reasoning took only a few seconds' time. Doyle set himself at the plate with his bat and Devore slowly scrapped his feet away from first, ready for a sprint.

Doolin, with his plan in mind, signed Moore for a wide ball, and the instant Moore drew back his arm Devore bolted for second. Doolin caught the ball and whipped it to Doolan, who looked for a second *toward the keystone bag and then sud*denly turned about an shot the ball to Grant, who unnoticed had crept toward his base.

The result was that the man on third was caught by a foot. Devore was safe at second, but Doyle was retired for the third out, and the Phillies passed a dangerous crisis through sheer headwork.

It was great sagacity on the part of Doolin, Doolan and Grant. Doolin conceived the play and signed for it and Doolan did his part by making his bluff to tag Devore and put Raymond, on third, off his guard. It is such quick-witted plays as these that make championship teams.

The Phillies were the victims of the other, and it took place on Wednesday. The score was 3 to 2 in favor of the Giants, with the inexcusable Mathewson pitching. It was the eighth inning and still anybody's game. The first two men in the inning were retired and then Doolan reached first on an error.

Here was a chance for the Phillies. Mathewson started to throw to Merkle to keep Doolan glued to first. While this was going on he got two strikes on Doolin. Suddenly he whipped the ball to Merkle, who made no effort to get Doolan, but shot it back to Matty as hard as it was sent. Matty, all set to pitch, caught the ball and instantly hurled it over the groove.

Doolin made a belated swing, and *as easy roller to Doyle was the re*sult. Mathewson possibly averted a tie game or defeat by the maneuver. The ball had been pitched so unexpectedly that Doolin had no time to get a proper range on it.

These are the early season samples of tactics that are employed by the master minds who run baseball clubs, and we will see more before the race is finished.

Silk Scarfs.

To one item of fashion we are to remain faithful. It is the broad scarf made of satin, cashmere de soie or even fine cloth, edged and striped, with marabon. It is a very reliable friend in the cool evenings of spring and summer, when the need of something for the shoulders is felt. The scarfs are three or four yards long, and the most attractive are of dull colorings that hint of lovely autumn schemes and suggest the delightful possibility of harmonizing with any other color.

Why Not.

"Where are you going with that terra cotta dog?"
"After clay pigeons."

FREEHOLDERS DECIDE ON TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL

The principal thing done by the Union County Board of Freeholders at its meeting in Elizabeth Thursday afternoon was to finally decide on the erection of a county tuberculosis hospital, reports having been received from the different municipalities throughout the county giving their indorsement of the project.

After these communications were read Freeholder Krouse, of Linden, offered a resolution which was unanimously adopted by the board.

The resolution provided that the director appoint a committee of three, together with the county collector, Nathan R. Leavitt, to investigate the cost of a tuberculosis hospital, and to examine into the cost of maintaining the same, and to investigate institutions of like character erected by other counties or municipalities in the State, and report back to the board the result of their investigations, and to make such recommendations as they deem necessary. Director Cady, of Summit, appointed as the committee Freeholder Krouse, of Linden; Doane, of Plainfield, and Haviland, of Elizabeth. The director himself is also a member by virtue of his position.

A resolution was adopted by instructions from Circuit Court Judge Vail threshing the salary of the court crier, Henry J. Shoppe, from $900 to $1,200 a year.

Freeholder Wilbur offered a resolution which was adopted, that the County Road Committee be instructed to go ahead and properly finish the road from Roselle to Elizabeth, and deduct the cost of this from the balance due Contractor James C. Parks who, it was claimed, had failed to complete the job to the satisfaction of the board.

Parks, in a communication to the board, threatened a law suit if any of his money was withheld. The above action is its reply to his threat.

A resolution was passed to pay Contractor Clarence H. Winans a balance due him of $1,000 for improving the Edgar road when the Auditing Committee approves of his bill.

The county collector reported a balance of $77,815.78 in bank to the credit of the county. It was resolved to erect two bridges, each forty-eight feet long, with a six-foot span over the brook on Grier avenue, in Linden township.

A committee of three was appointed to report on building a bridge across Effington place, Westfield. The Sinking Fund Committee reported it had $61,564 at its disposal. It was decided to run a pipe 100 feet long across a culvert at Woodside avenue, Lyons Farms, at a cost of $300.

HERE AND THERE.

Robert Newton Crane, of this city, is the only lawyer in New Jersey who has a certificate of his appointment as a Master in Chancery which is signed in two places by the Chancellor. The usual form for such a certificate is for the Chancellor to sign as the appointing power, below which the Clerk in Chancery puts his signature testifying to the fact that the lawyer has taken the necessary oath before him. Mr. Crane possesses the distinction of not only being appointed by the Chancellor, but also of taking the oath of office before him. When Mr. Crane was appointed by Chancellor Pitney, Clerk in Chancery Robbins was not in his office and so the Chancellor administered the oath.

NEW JERSEY HONORS MRS. ERNEST R. ACKERMAN.

Governor Fort Thursday notified Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield, of her appointment to the commission created for the purpose of establishing a National Park along the Delaware river, three miles above Trenton, where General Washington crossed the ice-filled stream. Among other women whom Governor Fort similarly honored are Mrs. Frank Jos. Patison, of Colonia; Mrs. John Wahl Queen, of Jersey City; Mrs. C. Ledyard Blair, of Peapack; Mrs. William L. Dayton, of Trenton; and Mrs. Thomas I. Craven, of Salem.

OBSERVE ASCENSION DAY

Trinity Commandery Attends Service at the First M. E. Church.

FOLLOW THE ANNUAL CUSTOM.

Banquet at Knights Templar Asylum Where Local Ministers Make Informal Addresses.

Ascension Day was observed generally in the churches of this city Thursday and special services in commemoration of the great historical event were conducted at Grace P. E. church and at the First Methodist church last night. At the latter Trinity Commandery, K. T., held special services, at which Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson preached the sermon. After the services in the church the members of the Commandery adjourned to the asylum in the Babcock building where a banquet was served and some speeches made by Rev. Dr. Anderson, Rev. Ora M. Shoop, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire and Judge John Ulrich.

The service at the First M. E. church was most impressive. Preceded by the choir the church the Templars to the number of forty in full regalia accompanied by twenty others not in uniform, marched up the center aisle of the church singing "Onward Christian Soldiers" with a volume of surprising excellence joined by the large congregation gathered to participate in the service.

Dr. Anderson's sermon was the big feature of the evening and thoroughly interested the huge audience. He took for his text the first chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, in which the ascension of the Saviour is described. Dr. Anderson drew a lesson fgrom the last three years of the life of Jesus during which He manifested the truest attributes of humanity in His splendid assumption of the sins and weaknesses of mankind drawing from them lessons particularly applicable to men of the present day.

The opening prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Shoop, following which was an anthem by the choir. Miss Bertha VanNuis Willis sang a solo as the offertory and after the singing of a hymn Dr. Anderson delivered his sermon.

*Sixty-five members of the Com*mandery adjourned to the banquet hall immediately after the concluding hymn and here the knights listened to some witty and stirring speeches not the least of which was that given by Rev. Mr. Maguire. In speaking of the advantages of being a mason, regardless of the part of the world in which one happens to be living or staying, Mr. Maguire told of an actual experience in Cairo, Egypt, the place of the mysterious crimes occur and where their perpetrators are never discovered. Mr. Maguire accompanied by his wife and sister had been annoyed by the too persistent attention of an individual who had dogged their footsteps from the hotel to and through *the purlieus of the Egyptian city un*til becoming annoyed Mr. Maguire stepped out from one of the bazaars demanding the reason for the apparent espionage of the stranger.

In an instant the supposed highwayman or worse accepted Mr. Maguire's invitation to tell why he was following the party saying he had noticed the square and compass on the lapel of Mr. Maguire's coat and knowing that he and his wife were in a dangerous part of the city had determined to follow them closely to insure their safety. This story was followed by others equally interesting, Matthew H. Ewart, Eminent Commander, contributing in no small degree to the general amusement and entertainment of the company present.

At Grace Episcopal church splendid musical program was rendered by the choir and Rev. Mr. Stevenson preached a powerful sermon on the topic of Christ's life during the period of three years preceding the crucifixion. A large congregation listened to the magnificent singing and were deeply impressed by the sermon preached by the rector. The offertory number in which Messrs. William and Bertram Tallamy had solos was rendered in the customary artistic manner and for a postlude Organist Hahn played with effect the "Marche Solenelle" with beautiful effect. Services were also held in the Lutheran church.

Mr. Feickert Treasurer.

At a meeting of the directors of the Ransome Concrete Machinery Company Thursday, Edward F. Feickert was elected treasurer, and as such, will have charge of the financial affairs of the concern. The company, of which E. L. Ransome is president; A. W. Ransome, vice-president, and F. V. Lawrence, secretary, moved its plants here from Jersey City some three years ago. Its business has shown a steady increase since coming here, and at present the shops are working day and night endeavoring to keep pace with the orders that are being received.

Tea will be served in the ladies' pavilion and a maid will be in attendance in the ladies' cloak room.

MR. FOWLER A CANDIDATE

Fifth District Representative so Announces to Mayor Charles J. Fisk.

HE STATES HIS POSITION.

"Insurgent" Republican Leader Wishes to See Some Reforms Made by Congress—Will Accept Nomination.

In the following letter received Thursday by Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Representative Charles N. Fowler, of the Fifth district, announces his candidacy for an eighth term in Congress:

"My Dear Mr. Fisk:

"I am just in receipt of your letter of May 2; and in reply want to thank you for your interest in the matter, and to advise you of my attitude with regard to a renomination.

"About three years ago, I took the position that the Rules of the House of Representatives should be changed, and about two years ago I announced myself as a candidate for the Speakership upon a platform that limited the power of the Speaker to the single duty of presiding over the deliberations of the House. I did this for the sole purpose of bringing the matter to issue.

"We now seem to be upon the very threshold of achieving this great reform, although it may project itself into the next session.

"In May, 1907, I did my utmost to have a provision for a broad tariff commission incorporated in the Dingley Tariff law; but the matter then seemed to meet with disfavor. Nevertheless, I have persisted in my advocacy of this important economic reform. It is perfectly clear, in the light of what has happened, that if the recent revision of the tariff had been based upon facts ascertained by such a commission the present dissatisfaction and undertaking would have been obviated, and the business of the country would have moved along for years to come without interruption or disturbance.

"It is possible that at this session we may obtain with the appropriation asked for by the President, such concessions in this score as to accomplish this most desired end; although this is almost more than we can hope for now.

"Ever since I entered public life, I have been making a fight, as you are personally aware, for financial and business reform. At present now seems to be so much in the public mind as to encourage the hope that before another commercial crisis we may secure some broad and constructive legislation bearing upon this question. Of course, this cannot come about during the present Congress.

"Since I am greatly interested in all of these reform measures in particular, I should consider a renomination as an approval of my course here, and also as a further opportunity to carry forward these reforms; and, therefore, event a greater honor than any nomination heretofore tendered me.

"To have a part in the great reform of one's time, and to receive the approval of one's constituency in these slow, at times doubtful and always anxious moments is a source of profound satisfaction and inspiration to one in his efforts to advance the general welfare.

Again thanking you, I am,

"Very sincerely yours.

"CHAS. N. FOWLER."

Mr. Fowler's statement was prompted by a letter written him by Mayor Fisk a few days ago. The letter follows:

"My Dear Mr. Fowler:

"Since many are inquiring whether you would accept another nomination to Congress, I think it would be both fair to your many friends and just to yourself to advise the public upon this question.

"I am writing this note of inquiry to you because now, as on former occasions, there are those who, for some reason or other, are intimating that you will not be a candidate for renomination.

Sincerely hoping that your reply will put all such rumors at rest, and that you will permit its publication, I am,

"Very sincerely yours.
CHARLES J. FISK.

Gave Talk to Children.

Rev. J. W. Musson gave a talk on "Kings and Queens" to the children of the T. T. L. yesterday afternoon. The attendance was good, there being present a number of invited guests. The address of Mr. Musson was followed by a short talk by Mrs. Bodine. Mrs. Thomas, the superintendent, with her helpers, Mrs. Staats and Mrs. Griffen, served cake and cream to the children and their friends.

A Bad Start.

"A man always looks foolish when he proposes," said the frank young woman.

"Yes," answered Mr. Meekton, "and I have evidently failed to overcome the absurd impression I made on Henrietta on that occasion."

PRESBYTERIANS TO MEET

General Assembly to Be Held at Atlantic City This Month.

RECEPTION FOR THE PRESIDENT

Sessions to Begin on Thursday, May 19, and to Continue Ten Days —Important Matters for Discussion.

"One of the largest religious gatherings that have been held in New Jersey in years," says the New ark News, "will be that of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church. The sessions, which will open in Atlantic City May 19, will continue for at least ten days, the convention hall being the auditorium of the Steel Pier at the foot of Virginia street. Added interest is given to the gathering by reason of the fact that President Taft will attend Saturday, May 21, and the day following.

"Only once before has a general assembly of the Presbyterian church been held in this State," continues the newspaper mentioned. "That was in 1864, when the old school branch met in the Third Presbyterian church, Newark. The same year the new school met at Dayton, O. The separation of the schools had taken place in 1838, and not until 1869 was the reunion of the two effected. The united body will thus meet next month for the first time in Jersey. Combining in the same year the two united in the past is now the Cumberland branch, which was amalgamated in 1907, and first met with the general assembly in 1908 at Kansas City. Altogether, there will be upward of 800 delegates present at the assembly.

"The Steel Pier is well adapted for large conventions. The auditorium for the regular sessions will be the one farthest out by the sea, called Music Hall. The central auditorium, half way out on the pier, will be used for the exhibits of the boards of the church, and Casino Hall, near the Boardwalk, will be used for various incidental meetings, except when band concerts are in progress.

Concerning Moderatorship.

"One of the first questions asked about a general assembly is that concerning the moderator. Who shall he be? The office is considered a high honor, and naturally is conferred upon men of established reputation in the denomination.

"There has been a growing tendency of recent years to turn the several so-called sections of the country in the yearly distribution of the honors of moderatorship. Last year the middle west was recognized by the election of Dr. James M. Barkley, of Detroit, who was nominated by the late John Willis Baer, of Newark. The previous year Dr. Baxter P. Fullerton, of the Cumberland branch and section, was honored.

"No doubt a strong effort on behalf of the Far West will be made again this year, as not since the assembly at Los Angeles in 1903, when Dr. Robert F. Coyle, of Denver, was elected, has that section been recognized. But the East has this year a candidate to present at Atlantic City, and perhaps two of them.

"From a reliable source some possibilities for moderator have been learned. The Rev. Dr. George Alexander, of New York city, for many years pastor of the University Place church, has been mentioned by his friends. Dr. Alexander is much esteemed generally, and the presiding

AN INDEPENDENT WEEKLY.

A. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

Plainfield, N. J., May 12, 1910.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Lew Fields' production of "The Jolly Bachelors," with Nora Bayes, continues its routine of playing to absolute capacity eight times per week at the Broadway Theatre. The entire company numbers 200 people and the principal members of the cast in addition to Miss Bayes are Harold Crane, Jack Norworth, Lionel Walsh, Billie Taylor, Elizabeth Bruce, Stella Mayhew, Nat Fields, Robert Dailey, Ethel Kelly, Jessie Hadler, Nellie Lynch, Lew Fullerton and Henry Lehman. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Best seats Wednesday matinee $1.50.

"Lulu's Husbands," with Mabel Barrison and Harry Conor, under the management of the Messrs. Shubert, is evidently destined to be an all-summer dramatic attraction, for it has started with a rush and seats are in demand for many weeks in advance. It has been computed that there are more than 100 laughs in the entertainment which means that the fun continuous from start to finish. In addition to Miss Barrison and Mr. Conor, the cast contains such expert laughmakers as Louise Closser Hale, Panchin Campbell, Sophie Tucker, Mae Carlisle, Edward Heron, Robert Dempster, Riley Chamberlain, George Sheloir, H. S. Sargent and F. T. Daniels. Matinees Wednesday and Saturdays. Best seats Wednesdays matinee for $1.50.

Wholesome, native American humor never scored a more sweeping victory than in "The Fortune Hunter," Winchell Smith's comedy of town and country, which is now in its thirty-fifth crowded week at the Gaiety Theatre, at 46th street and Broadway. This pleasant piece is perfectly played by John Barrymore and his supporting company has won the cordial commendation of ministers, priests and rabbis in New York and Chicago. Vice-president Sherman declared on his last visit to New York that he "came from Washington to see it." The story is engrossing in its cumulative interest, the stage pictures are so typical and the humor so racy of the soil that the American playgoer feels that here at last is a comedy that is nobly of the United States. The end of the run is still far, far away and seats are selling four weeks in advance. All visitors to New York owe it to themselves to witness "The Fortune Hunter." It represents the best in our national life and throughout it is delightfully entertaining. Up-to-date advice has been given from a score of New York pulpits to see this comedy and to learn of what high things the modern stage is capable.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Fowler Wants Another Term.

Representative Charles N. Fowler announces he is a candidate for renomination in the Fifth District. The announcement does not take the voters of the district by surprise. There would have been astonishment if Mr. Fowler had stated that he was not a candidate. Representative Fowler's attitude in Congress is well understood. He is not classed with the Western men, who are "insurgents" from principle. It is well understood that if Speaker Cannon had resigned the chairmanship of the Banking and Currency Commission he would now be in line with the Cannon regulars. He was displaced and chargrined. Personal animosity toward the speaker inspired his subsequent actions and colored his motives. During his time in Congress Mr. Fowler has been a chronic abstentee. He has taken little or no interest in public affairs apart from the currency question, and his dominant idea has been to get a currency system adopted with the Fowler name attached to it. Nor has he abandoned that ambition. Mr. Fowler wants another term.—Newark Star.

Annual Statement First M. E.

The annual statement of Samuel Bingaman, treasurer of the First M. E. church, has been made public through the weekly bulletin. The balance on April 1 1909, was $137.-84, and the receipts for the year were $7,013.57, including $5,062.57 received through the envelope system. The expenditures were $7,-151.50, laving a balance on April 1, 1910, of $1.91. This includes the pastor's salary, $2,500, and $1,-826.77 for music, which comprise the two largest items of expense.

Mutton Broth.

When carefully prepared this is a very good and nourishing soup. The stock is made from neck, breast or shoulder pieces. When the broth is ready the mutton is boned and the meat cut into dice. Additional flavor is given to the broth by small cubes of carrots and turnips, some barley, celery, leeks and parsley.

CHURCH SOCIETY NOW ON ITS 30TH YEAR

Twenty-nine years of activity and successful endeavor have been rounded out by the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church. The occasion was marked by a special anniversary service which was conducted in that church Sunday.

One of the interesting features of the observance was a comprehensive report presented by Mrs. Mary A. M. Newell, secretary of the society, which noted all of its achievements during the year.

Mrs. Newell's report was augmented by words of praise for the society by the pastor, Rev. John C. Broek, in which the latter congratulated the members of the organization for their faithful performances to their duties, and their many acts of self-sacrifice displayed in the work.

The altar was made beautiful by profuse floral decorations of dogwood, lilacs and other spring blooms.

In referring to the record of the past year, Mr. Broek said:

"The work which you have accomplished during the past year has required a large amount of time, sacrifice, worry, hard work and money. This work you have wrought not simply for this church but for whom you love. You have not been ashamed to do the lowliest forms of service for Christ. The spirit behind all service counts as much as the work which has been accomplished. You have been especially generous and kind to me this year. I hear such good things concerning the future plans of your society for the uninterrupted improvement to our church that we all rejoice. You are striving to outdo your splendid record of the past."

The text was taken from John 21:15-17, Simon Peter, "Lovest Thou Me," "Feed My Sheep.

It is interesting to study Peter's character. He was changed from a humble Galelean fisherman to a prophet and apostle, when a horizon appears before him which is limitless. The reason Jesus asked Peter this question, "Lovest Thou Me," was to impress upon his church and all Christians that the one essential requisite for all Christian service is love to Christ. Love must be the fountain from which all our Christian service flows.

Peter made the discovery of his life on this day. He found that it was not his knowledge, his faith or his good works that equip for service, but it was love to His master.

The command, "Feed My Sheep," was welcome news to Peter. Where there is love there is activity. If Christ had not given Peter something to do, his heart would have ached.

We serve Christ not for reward. The joy of the Lord is not receiving a crown or a harp, but it is helping Christ save. Friendship with Christ is only won by doing God's will in love.

Mrs. Newell's report in detail is as follows:

The 29th year of the Society has been one of successful endeavor along the usual lines of work. Eleven new members have been added, making a membership of sixty-six and nine associate members. Ten regular meetings with an average attendance of thirty-four, and two special meetings have been held.

Of every committee it may be said "Well Done."

The flower committee has sent flowers to the sick room and to the homes of the sorrowing, and most efficiently decorated the church and lecture room on all special occasions.

The missionary committee collected $58.25, which was evenly divided between the Women's Board of Domestic Missions and the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions.

The visiting committee made 191 calls, and brought cheer to the sick and shut-ins by sending flowers and the greetings of the season at Christmas and Easter.

The sewing committee held six meetings, preparing and sending a box of clothing and home supplies valued at $103.94 to the pastor of a small Western church. The society is endebted to the Young Woman's Mission Band for a contribution to this box. At the same time a barrel of clothing was sent to the Kentucky Mountain Mission, and the same to the colored school at Aiken S. C.

The devotional committee has furnished leaders for the half-hour's devotional service which always precedes the regular business meeting.

The relief committee sent out three dinners, fruit and flowers at Thanksgiving; five dinners and four baskets of fruit at Christmas; and in relieving cases of need have tried to lighten, in a measure, the burden of those who are afflicted.

Our finance committee, surpassing all previous efforts, realized from the turkey supper $315, from the subscription quilt $77, from the concert given last May $22, "Mile of Pennies" $39, Larkin's soap $10, making a total of $463 added into the treasury by this most untiring committee.

In response to an appeal from the Sewing Guild of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions articles to the amount of $15 were collected and sent to the board rooms in New York to be used on the Abarian field.

Five dollars was given by the society towards supporting an interpretor at the Winnebago Indian Mission. An individual gift of $5 for the same purpose was also made.

Two hundred dollars was given towards support of the choir and $25 to the Netherwood church fund.

The pastor's study has been enlarged, redecorated and refurnished at a cost of $187.

With sadness we report that death has again entered our ranks and claimed three of our number. Mrs. A. L. Force, our vice-president, and Mrs. Disborough, two of our beloved active members, and Mrs. Thompson from the associate list, have been called home.

While our committees have worked faithfully and well, and our success has been most gratifying, we would pray for still more earnest and consecrated endeavor for the coming year, realizing that of ourselves we can do nothing, only as we are blessed of the Master for whom we work.

Respectfully submitted,
MARY A. M. NEWELL,
Secretary.

IN MEMORIAM.

The following poem written by the Rev. A. E. Finn, who was Miss Dorothea VanD. Opdyke's pastor while in Plainfield outlines some of the beautiful traits in her character and will doubtless be read with interest by her many friends in Plainfield. Miss Opdyke died at Colorado Springs on April 20.

Seven Beautiful Things in the Life of Dorothea.

A rainbow backed by a dark black cloud,
Attracted my vision one morn.
Radiant against the darkness,
It shone with the brightness of dawn.

It brought a message of love that day,
To hearts with sorrow bowed down.
It spoke of some rare and beautiful things,
In the life of Dorothea that shone.

These beautiful things in this beautiful life,
Were all the more bright that day;
They were backed by a very mysterious cloud.
That on our stricken hearts lay.

Her love for Jesus was strong and true,
So strong that nought could sever,
Her affections fixed on Christ her Lord,
Forever and forever.

Confess Him? yes, she often spoke
Of Christ her loving Lord,
And with the witnesses for Christ
She was in full accord.

The little children loved her so,
They sought her, not a few,
In this she honored Christ her Lord
Who loved the children, too.

She loved the Holy Word of God,
Its truths she did absorb,
And gave them out to those about,
And led them to the Lord.

Her loyalty to Christ's own church,
Was cheering to us all,
In sunshine, rain; in heat or cold,
She answered the church's call.

Her effort to win souls for Christ,
Was crowned with great success.
She lived and worked and prayed for those,
Whom Jesus died to bless.

A life true, loving, kind and sweet,
Has gone from us today.
She travels on the shining path,
Where Jesus led the way.

But we who linger here below,
In a world of sin and dross,
Are grieved and stricken, sore and sad
By this our awful loss.

But thou, O Lord, hast been so good
Our broken hearts to bind.
That ever, ever while we live,
In thee our help we'll find.

It is thy will our Father God,
Thy will be done our King;
This is the prayer we offer now,
The song we'll always sing.

—A. E. FINN.

15TH ANNUAL INSTITUTE OF S.S. TEACHERS UNION

The fifteenth annual institute of the Plainfield Graded Union of Sunday School Teachers was held Monday afternoon and evening in the First Baptist church and the meetings at both sessions were largely attended.

The afternoon session included the devotional service conducted by Mrs. D. L. Darby; a piano solo by Miss Elizabeth Martin; an address by Mrs. F. W. Miller, of Somerville, on the new graded work in the Sunday-school. Miss Marjorie Brown played a violin solo and immediately afterwards the offertory was taken. Miss Josephine Baldwin, of Newark, took the place of Miss Kate Z. Gaston, who was to have spoken on the junior lesson. Miss Elmira Runyon conducted the hand work in grades.

The principal speaker at the evening session was Rev. Milton S. Littlefield, pastor of the Bay Ridge Presbyterian church, Brooklyn. The devotional exercises were in charge of Rev. Ora J. Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church, and the responses to the roll call were hearty and prompt. The solo by Miss S. Etta Rayber was beautifully sung.

Rev. Mr. Littlefield's speech on "The Challenge of Adolesence" was a masterly effort and showed where the parental and Christian influence could be best applied with boys and girls. Mr. Littlefield said that a boy, between fourteen and eighteen years of age is more approachable than when he reaches a more mature age, while the best time for good influences to make progress with the girl is when she is twelve years old or at the latest thirteen. Character and life impulses receive their greatest stimulus at this age and remain forever factors in the after life of the man and woman.

RECEPTACLE AT DOOR OR NO MAIL DELIVERY

If a bill that was reported favorably Monday in the United States Senate at Washington, by the Senate committee on postoffices and post roads becomes a law the delivery of mail by city letter carriers will only be made at such residences and places of business as provide at the door or entrance receptacles for the mail. The passage of the bill favorably the committee transmitted to the Senate a letter from Postmaster-General Hitchcock in which he declared that its enactment would not only result in an important saving in the cost of city delivery, but would render the service more efficient by reason of a speedier delivery of the mail.

The postmaster-general stated in this letter the average wait by city letter carriers at each place of delivery is fifteen seconds and that the 26,000 carriers would save an hour and a half each working day as a result of the enactment of this law. Mr. Hitchcock figures that the measure, if put into operation, would reduce the cost of city delivery several million dollars annually.

ROUTINE BUSINESS OF BOROUGH COUNCIL

Adolph Bohren, of Greenbrook road, who has plans to erect a combination store and dwelling on Stone street, has encountered opposition from the property owners of that thoroughfare. The opposition is due to Bohren's intentions to erect the proposed structure on the front part of his lot, which is the sidewalk line, or about fifteen feet in front of the other houses on the street. The matter came up informally at the meeting of the Council Friday night. Several Stone street property owners were on hand to oppose the granting of a permit to Bohren but the matter was laid over until the next meeting of the Council. The cost of Bohren's proposed building is $5,000.

On the motion of Councilman and Building Inspector J. J. Stahl a batch of other permits were granted. They were as follows:

Fanny G. Bolan, garage on Fairview avenue; C. L. Force, double dwelling on Westervelt avenue; Thomas Rutledge, tool house on Chatham street; Nischwitz and Bellis, concrete garage on Watchung avenue; E. W. Hall barn and tinshop on Duer street; J. J. Stahl, concrete garage on Grandview avenue; Frank Mobus, garage on corner Watchung and Coddington avenues; M. S. Trimmer, repairs to barn on Somerset street; J. V. E. Vanderhoef, addition and repairs to dwelling on Prospect place; H. S. Bartle, double dwelling on Watchung avenue; Philip Geise, double dwelling on Watchung avenue; John Wirth, dwelling on Duer street; H. M. C. Clark, work shop on Grandview avenue; H. J. DeMott, wagon shed on Pearl street; George Summers, hennery on Prospect street; W. W. Schenck hennery on Somerset street.

A petition for property owners on Harrison avenue was received asking that sidewalks be laid on the south western part of that thoroughfare between Rockview Terrace and Cedar street. The matter was referred to the street committee with power.

Somerset place property owners petitioned that that street be macadamized. The petitioners informed the Council that they are willing to pay fifteen cents a foot toward the work when completed.

Bills amounting to $3,165.10 were ordered paid. Included in this amount was $500 for Lindaberry, Depue and Faulks, counsel to the sewer commission. The sum of $35 waws appropriated to Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., for Memorial Day expenses.

Councilman J. J. Stahl, chairman of the fire committee, reported the expenses of his department as $250 for April. Recorder Dolliver reported twenty-six arrests during April and $28 collected in fines.

In the absence of Mayor N. B. Smalley, Councilman L. B. Woolston, president of the Council, presided.

ANOTHER BURGLARY.

Small Haul at a Butcher Shop Reported by the Police.

The butcher shop of U. G. Pierson, on Watchung avenue, was burglarized sometime between Saturday night closing time and Sunday morning. The safe was broken open and the money drawer extracted. This box was taken to the rear of VanZandt and Voorhees' feed mill near the railroad tracks and there broken open with a cleaver stolen from the shop. The box contained forty dollars in money.

It is believed by the police to have been an "inside job" and they are working on that theory to apprehend the burglar.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, at the morning service in Trinity Reformed church Sunday read a letter which he had received from Dr. Paul W. His address is Busrah, Arabia, Persian Gulf, via Bombay.

BURNETT'S TRAGIC DEATH

Smalleytown Man Falls Off Wagon and Dies of Strangulation.

HORSE DRAGGED HIM HOME

Dead Man Visited this City Monday and Purchased Things for a Birthday Celebration Next Friday.

Peter Burnett, of Smalleytown, met a tragic death while on his way from Sterling to his home Monday. Burnett fell head foremost from his wagon, his neck catching between the axle and the front wheel.

County Physician Long, of Somerville, after viewing the remains this morning, declared that Burnett died of strangulation and not a bone in the dead man's body was broken. Burnett's face head and arms were cut and bruised, and according to Dr. Long was dragged fully two miles.

Unable to extricate himself Burnett was carried to his home with his body dangling between the wheels and axle of the vehicle. Mrs. Burnett discovered her husband's body as a result of the constant neighing of the horse.

Burnett was in this city yesterday making purchases for a party in honor of his forty-second birthday, which was scheduled to take place next Friday at his home.

While in the borough he purchased a new wagon at W. J. Conroy's wagon manufactory and after visiting other places at 6 o'clock left for his home. According to reports Burnett made several stops at Stirling, which is about two miles distant from his home.

Burnett is the son of the late John Burnett, who was killed by a train on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at South Plainfield about fifteen years ago. He is survived by a mother, a wife and four children.

Burnett was well known in this city. For several summers he was in the employ of the Natural Ice Company.

The funeral services will be held at his late home on Thursday afternoon. Burnett was a member of a Jr. O. U. A. M. lodge at Summit.

Surviving him are a sister, Mrs. Henry Bodenheimer, of Somerset street, and a brother, Charles Burnett, of Washington street. There is also an unmarried sister, Kate, and three brothers John, Edward and George, who reside at Smalleytown, in addition to a wife and four children.

BANKS RECOVERS $500 DAMAGES FOR ASSAULT

The case of W. T. Banks against Eugene J. Schwartz, tried Monday in the Union County Circuit Court, at Elizabeth, resulted in a judgment in favor of the plaintiff for $500. The action was for damages for assault and battery and false imprisonment. The evidence showed that in September last, Banks went to the office of E. J. Schwartz & Co., woolen manufacturers, their factory at Jersey City, and while there was assaulted by E. J. Schwartz, president of the concern.

Schwartz accused Banks of purchasing goods in the name of his concern. Banks denied it and at first declined to pay the bill. He was then assaulted by Schwartz and a policeman was called in. Banks was taken to police headquarters, where he was held a prisoner without any complaint being made. Later on in the day, Schwartz called up police headquarters and obtained from Banks a check, which Banks paid under protest in settlement of the alleged bill, and then Schwartz ordered his release.

The testimony was very conflicting, and it was a hard fought case. MacLear and Fort represented the defendant. Codington and Swackhamer representing Banks. The evidence showed that Banks was considerably injured, and the jury rendered a verdict in his favor.

STREET LIGHT PROBLEM

Tungstens, 32 Candle Power, May Supplant 25 C. P. Incandescent.

ARCS ARE NOT FAVORED.

Conference of Civic Bodies at Mayor's Office—P. S. C. to Give Free Trial of Tungstens in Business Section.

The question of securing better lighting facilities, not only for the business section, but the residential section of the city, was freely discussed Friday night at a conference arranged by the Councilmanic lighting committee. As the result, H. P. Chandler, of Elizabeth, district superintendent of the P. S. C., offered to install thirteen Tungsten lights on Front street, between Watchung and Central avenues, for a month's trial. The offer was accepted.

Mr. Chandler declared that the twenty-five candle power lamp now in use is antiquated, that it never was adapted to street lighting and never will be. He said he believed that the 32 candle power Tungsten which is being used extensively now throughout the State to be the ideal light for street purposes. Mr. Chandler was not prepared to quote prices to the city for installing these lamps, but added that a rate of $18 a lamp per year is charged in New Brunswick, Metuchen, Somerville and other towns.

Arc lights were discussed, but it was the general opinion that they would be too expensive and would not give the desired result even in the business section.

The centre of the business section which it is desired to illuminate especially includes Front street, between Watchung and Central avenues; Park avenue from Front street to Fourth street; Fourth street, from Park to Watchung avenue; Watchung avenue, from Fourth to Front street and North avenue, from Watchung to Park avenue.

Those present at the conference were Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Councilman W. Scott Stevens, George H. Clay, F. L. Montgomery, Herbert Buxton, F. E. Mygatt, City Treasurer W. F. Arnold; R. H. Depew, representing the P. P. A.; William Jeffery, representing the Board of Trade; P. A. Duttenhofer, representing the Plainfield Civic Association, H. P. Chandler, W. R. Causebrook and George H. Andrews, representing the Public Service Corporation.

Mr. Depew did not favor arc lights but advocated the Tungsten lamp. He said he is of the opinion that the lamps now in use are unsuitable for street lighting purposes. He declared that he and Mr. Montgomery made a tour of inspection Thursday night and found many lamps in poor condition. In his opinion the Public Service Corporation does not keep the lamps often enough. He thought there should be seven or eight changes a year to get the best service.

The discussion brought out the fact that a 60 candle power Tungsten is equal to the old-style lamp now in use and does not consume as much current, while it gives a whiter light. Those representing the various civic associations had something to say on the subject of street lighting and there was not such a wide difference of opinion after all sides were heard.

Mr. Chandler said that he was authorized to quote a price of $80 a year for arc lights on a five year contract, for fifty or more lights, but this proposition was not enthusiastically received, those present being more favorable to the Tungsten lamp. No decision was made for conference and the Councilmanic light committee will doubtless take the matter up later and make some recommendations to improve the lighting conditions.

The councilmanic light committee and Mayor Fisk took up the question of drafting an ordinance to provide for changing the system of wiring for street lights, and this was discussed with the representatives of the Public Service Corporation. It will probably take a month to prepare an ordinance that would be satisfactory to all concerned but the change is thought best inasmuch as it is proposed to make a change in the style of lamp to be used on the streets.

TROLLEY CAR AND AUTO FIGURE IN A COLLISION

A collision between an automobile and a Public Service Railway sand car occurred near the corner of Park avenue and Front street on Saturday afternoon in which damage to the amount of $350. was inflicted on the machine which is the property of Stephen H. Voorhees, of 602 Madison avenue. With Mr. Voorhees in the car were his two children and one of their little friends and fortunately none of them were injured.

The sand car was in charge of Motorman Patrick Greely and Conductor Emil Mueliner and on the motorman, according to bystanders, lies the responsibility for the accident. Traffic was congested at the point of collision and it was causing the traffic policeman all kinds of work to get the vehicular movement untangled when Chief Nolan, of the Patrolman on the job and after much persuasion with the drivers and others managed to clear the situation.

The railway men claim that the driver of the damaged auto was at fault, but Mrs. Voorhees stated this morning that the automobile was in an absolute stand-still and that it looked as though the motorman had miscalculated the distance between the cars and although moving slowly was unable to prevent sideswiping Mr. Voorhees' car. It will require at least the amount named above to repair the damage to the body of the auto and perhaps more if the machinery is discovered to be damaged.

According to all that can be learned from witnesses of the accident the sand car came from the corner of Park avenue to some distance beyond Somerset street was literally crowded with vehicles of all descriptions and it was all a simple pedestrian could do to cross from one side of West Front street to the other. It was providential that no injury was done to any person in the throng which was surging up and down and across the thoroughfare.

LAUDED MEN OF ACTION

Alexander Gilbert Paid Tributes to Roosevelt, Hughes and Gaynor.

DEPLORED CITY EXTRAVAGANCE

Banker's Address at Grace Church Men's Club Banquet—Justice Jenks and Others Also Spoke.

The annual dinner of the Men's Club of Grace church, held in the parish house Monday, was a delightful occasion, which was attended by about 150 invited members and guests. There were excellent speeches by Justice Almet F. Jenks, of New York; Rev. C. H. Mallery, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest; former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, Councilman Frederic E. Mygatt and Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of Grace church. George S. Clay, who was president of the club last year, was the toastmaster.

The keynote of all the speeches was more civic pride, while the true purpose of a men's club, that of men getting together for the promotion of religion and social features received much attention on the part of the speakers. Mr. Gilbert in his address called attention to the present extravagance in the city government, lauded Roosevelt, Hughes and Gaynor.

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert said that he had been limited to five minutes, which he said might mean that this was the limit of the capacity of the audience or his oratory. "We are living in a 'Message to Garcia age,'" continued Mr. Gilbert, "the story of which I believe originated in the Roycroft Shop and has been translated into every foreign tongue. This is exemplified in the demands being made today on public men. The people prefer action to oratory. This is in evidence everywhere.

"Three men who loom up most prominently today have established a record for doing things, of striking at the root of evil. These men are Roosevelt, Hughes and Gaynor. They have so aroused the patriotism that people now believe that it pays to be honest. Public weal is put above politics. This wave of reform is due to Roosevelt. The great reception given to him abroad is due to the fact that he dare to grapple with great questions and enforce the laws which has brought happiness to the masses.

"The influence of Governor Hughes has been felt throughout the country. Through his efforts the speculative markets have been modified and restricted and the evils of the Stock Exchange have been abolished.

"What shall I say of Judge Gaynor? His administration has inspired New York and the whole country. It is a Herculean task to rid New York of men who have dominated and controlled it, but he will surely succeed.

"Are we carrying any message to Garcia for Plainfield, to keep it as a splendid place for New York people to live. We are growing rapidly and our bonded indebtedness is increasing rapidly. The lines are sharply drawn between those who want all the improvements and the more conservative people who favor going slow. We do not want to adopt a niggardly policy, neither do we want to go about seeking how we can spend our money. You all know as business men that an evil to be avoided is that of being overburdened with debt. When this is permitted it is a case of going to the wall and prosperity and growth is retarded. We can use our influence to see that Plainfield is given a wise, prudent and systematic government and then we shall accomplish something."

The guest of the evening, Justice Jenks, who was the first speaker, was introduced by Mr. Clay as an eminent jurist, one who decides great cases regardless of the fact whether the interested parties are poor or wealthy. He said that judges are not always right in their decisions, neither will they always be serious. They are human like most folk and often consent to talk to laymen. Justice Jenks was then given a cordial reception by the diners.

"The patron or patron saint of this club, D. H. Rowland," said Justice Jenks, "invited me to attend this dinner. He made an apointment to meet at the Liberty street ferry at 4:15 sharp. I was there and saw him drive up but he could not see me. I had purchased my own ticket. The point of the story is this. Charles Clark, an eminent newspaperman, once delivered a lecture on 'The Philippines,' and afterward he was tendered a check for $25 which he declined, stating that it was a pleasure for him to be present and speak. The man insisted on Mr. Clark accepting the check, adding, 'I think the lecture was worth it.'

"Mr. Clark then replied, 'Well, if I don't accept the check what will you do with it.' The answer was: 'Why, we will keep the money and get a better speaker next year.'"

The speaker said that men's clubs are a sign of the times and he favored them. He thought Roosevelt's motto: "A square deal for everyone," expressive of the true purpose, and he added that he did not believe that people would object to trusts and combinations on that basis. He thought that there was just as much reason for the existence of men's clubs as there is for organization among tradesmen and that a man could be just as good a churchmen in a business suit as a frock coat and silk hat. He characterized it as a proper and legitimate trust, that in men's clubs, where men can work shoulder to shoulder with the clergyman for the best interests of the church.

In conclusion Justice Jenks told a pathetic story of an eleven-year-old girl who, because of many duties in caring for her brothers and sisters had not been able to attend church and Sunday school. This worried her when she was dying, and she wondered what Christ would say to her. A kind friend said to her, "Just show Him your hands." This thought seemed to comfort her.

Rev. C. H. Mallery, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, was the second speaker and he devoted his remarks to extolling the good work of the Men's Club in his parish, which has a membership of 110, while there are 106 communicants in the parish. This, Mr. Mallery said, was a mathematical problem hard to solve. In his opinion a men's club should not be wholly religious or wholly social, but a combination of both. It should be up-to-date and keep in touch with the world and church. He recalled the fact that Mayor Fisk recently addressed his club, telling all that had happened and all that was going to happen. Soon afterward work was started improving some of the streets in the west end of the West End, showing that the Mayor's visit to the club was not in vain.

In the brief remarks made by Councilman F. E. Mygatt, who was introduced as a man of whom Roosevelt should be proud, he said that great power lies in a civic body and he hoped that such organizations would become better acquainted with city affairs, for they are doubtless great moulders of public opinion.

The last speaker was Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, who sounded the praises of his men's club. He said that he valued the organization for what it has done in the past and for a promising future, and he thanked the men for their cordial and hearty support in their work in the church.

During the evening the diners were entertained with piano and mandolin selections; also popular songs by a professional singer.

Prior to the dinner, the club held its annual meeting and elected these officers:

President, Dr. H. D. Corbusier; vice-president, George M. Holstein; secretary, Oliver B. Hill; treasurer, C. G. Munro; executive committee, two years; A. Willis West, Charles DuBois, Herbert R. Jackson, J. Paul Nolting and F. W. Tredell.

The excellent dinner was prepared and served by Mrs. Henry Johnson.

AND NOW THEY WANT NEWSBOYS LICENSED

Miss Phillips, who is associated with the work of the Organized Aid Association, has written Mayor Charles J. Fisk, suggesting that a plan be adopted by the Common Council to license all boys who sell newspapers in the city, similar to the idea as carried out in Newark and Jersey City. In the latter cities the newsboys are provided with a badge which is issued by the Board of Education and in this way the board is able to keep track of boys of school age.

While the Mayor has not expressed any opinion on the subject, he has hinted that such a scheme might work a hardship in this city, that the idea is little too far in advance of the growth of Plainfield. In Newark and Jersey City there are more boys of the "street urchin" class and Plainfield is quite free from this. It has been pointed out that in the newspaper offices where regular carriers are employed, it is often compulsory to get substitute carrier at short notice and if the boy did not happen to have a badge he could not carry the route. However, the matter will be turned over to the Common Council for further consideration.

Onion Omelet.

One large Spanish onion, minced fine and fried in butter until tender. Mix the omelet as follows: Separte the whites of four eggs and beat to a stiff froth. To the beaten yolks add four tablespoonfuls of sweetened cream, a little salt, pepper, and lastly, the whites stirred in lightly. Put in a hot frying pan a tablespoonful of butter. As soon as it is melted and hot turn in the eggs. When they begin to set put the onion on the bottom, fold in the onion. Season with salt and pepper. Stir to mix. When done fold and serve hot for breakfast.

ALPHEUS L. MUNDY DEAD

Former Plainfielder Passed Away Suddenly of Heart Disease.

HE WAS SIXTY-SIX YEARS OLD.

After the Civil War He Engaged in Dry Goods Business Here—Funeral at New Brunswick Thursday.

Alpheus L. Mundy, aged sixty-six years, a native of Martinsville, and one of the best known residents of New Brunswick, died at 11:45 o'clock Monday morning at his home, 19 Carroll street, New Brunswick, of heart trouble. He had suffered several attacks with his heart recently, but went out yesterday morning for his customary walk with "Teddy," a little cocker spaniel, that had been his faithful companion for years.

Almost the last man he met on the street was the undertaker, a personal friend. This was at 11 o'clock and three-quarters of an hour later the undertaker was summoned to the Mundy home.

Mr. Mundy was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Israel C. Munday, who were also natives of Martinsville. He secured an early education in the district schools of Martinsville. At the age of sixteen years he went to New Brunswick and took a position in the dry goods store of Hagaman & Dunham as clerk. Here he served for six years.

Mr. Mundy, then twenty-two years old, secured a position in New York city with the well known dry goods firm of A. T. Stewart & Co., where he served for some time. With the outbreak of the Civil War Mr. Mundy responded to the call of his country and enlisted in Company A, Eighth Regiment, N. Y. Vols., and remained in the service until the close of the war.

After the war he returned to Plainfield and engaged in the dry goods business with Howard A. Pope and Carman Parse, under the firm name of Pope, Parse & Mundy. The firm remained in business for ten years and later Mr. Mundy engaged in the dry goods business at Somerville, N. J., remaining there for a year. Brunswick and purchased the stock of the VanCleef store on Church street, the store in which he had clerked when a boy. Six years later he sold out and then purhcased the carriage business of Ballentine & VanPelt on Bayard street. In 1905 he was elected freeholder.

Mr. Mundy was a member of the First Reformed church, New Brunswick. He was elected a freeholder under the Strong act which provided for a commissioner of five representing the county at large. He was reelected in 1907. Last year he was defeated for a third term by a small majority.

Mr. Mundy was a member of the Masonic Lodge in New Brunswick and of the Elks. He is a cousin of Walter Linbarger and Mrs. J. P. Humble, of the borough.

The funeral will be held from the late home Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The burial will be at Bound Brook.

WOMAN STILL A SAVAGE.

Dr. Baff Thinks Her Love of Adornment Proves His Theories.

Dr. Max Baff, of Clark College, Worcester, Mass., believes that the women of today are no better from a psychological standpoint than the savage of 5,000 years ago. He is opposed to woman suffrage and a bachelor, he is not a woman hater.

"My lady can't break off the habits originating with savages, whereas man has put these fads and fancies behind him," he says. "She retains them by her love of bird feathers, hanging ornaments to her ears, wearing bracelets, rings and necklaces, affecting gaudy colors. She arranges her hair in fantastic shapes by artificial methods and is partial to a diet of the powder of paint pot. Like savages, she is color blind prone to religious hysteria, and impressionable."

He thinks the suffrage agitation a form of woman's emotional insanity which will soon end.

PEARSALL SUCCEEDS ROTTBERG AS CORPORAL.

J. F. Pearsall was elected corporal to succeed Samuel Rottberg, at the business meeting of Co. K, Monday, the latter having served his full time and deciding to retire from the organization owing to the pressure of other duties. His action is deeply regretted by his fellows for he has been a hard worker. He served five years. Corporal Pearsall is a 100 per cent. member and the choice is considered a good one. John Hines captured the prize, which was won by him on the company range in a match last week.

After the regular drill the company was divided into squads for instruction in detail work and this proved interesting and helpful to a majority of the men. Sergeant Nathan Hort was complimented last night for his efficient work. He has a bright future in the national guard according to the military officers.

BAND CONCERTS ARE NOW UP TO PUBLIC

Summer is coming and so is Ben Le Vere and band concerts maybe. On the subject of the possibility of Plainfield having band concerts during the coming summer, the veteran band leader, in a conversation with a Daily Press reporter yesterday, declared he had not given the matter a thought; but Mr. Le Vere intimated that he was willing to take hold of the project, if he is assured of financial support.

Plainfield has not had any band concerts since 1907, but there is a chance of them being resumed, if a committee of citizens will organize themselves and pave the way. Mr. Le Vere informed the Daily Press reporter that with a fund of $500 on hand he will be able to erect a grandstand and provide weekly concerts, to begin the middle of June and to continue until the middle of September. The cost of each concert, Mr. Le Vere explained, would be about $75 each. But that the grandstand receipts, based on 10 cent admissions, would provide sufficient income to have them continued until September.

"If there is a demand for band concerts in Plainfield," said Mr. Le Vere, "I am willing to do my part on the musical end, but to put the proposition on a solid basis, I would suggest that those interested form a committee, solicit subscriptions and look after the financial end."

This is where Mr. Le Vere stands in the matter. Now if citizens desire concerts, it is their duty to be up and doing in the matter.

CANAL IN FIVE MINUTES.

Panama Commissioners Show the 50 Miles at a Glance.

The ideas of the average person about the Panama Canal are usually about as vague as anything can be. People know that it is going to be a waterway between the Atlantic and the Pacific, and that is about all. And this has been, not so much because they have not wanted to know, as that they have not been able to get at the facts in any concrete, understandable way, except in general through the medium of the scientific journals, which to the lay mind are incomprehensible enough in themselves.

It is to give the public a clear, concise idea of just what the work is that the Isthmian Canal Commission has recently issued a booklet in which the statistics and important facts about the waterway and its construction are set forth in the briefest possible way.

One can go through it in five minutes—the pamphlet, not the canal—and finish with a good, solid idea of just what the work is and exactly how it is going on down there where they are separating two continents.

One of the best things in the booklet is a table of simple statistics about the most important things of which one wants to know. It gives them briefly and definitely, and in a form which is nothing if not easily understood. Here are a few of the things one learns:

Length from deep water to deep water, 50½ miles; length on land, 40½ miles; bottom width of channel, maximum, 1,000 feet; bottom width of channel in cuts, through the nine miles of Culebrat cut, 300 feet; average width of channel, 600 feet; number of locks, in pairs, 12; usable length of locks, 1,000 feet; usable width of locks, 110 feet; depth of water in locks, 45 feet; depth of canal cuts, 41 feet; 4 feet for seven miles on Atlantic side, 45 to 85 feet; Gatun Lake, area, 164 square miles; excavation, estimated total, 174,666,594 cubic yards; excavation completed by April 1, 1910, 103,205,466 cubic yards; concrete, total amount in canal, 5,000,000 cubic yards; Canal Zone, area, 448 square miles; Canal force, actually at work, 39,000; canal force, Americans, 5,500; total estimated cost of canal, $375,000,000; work began by Americans, May 4, 1904; date of completion, January, 1915; time of passage through locks, 3 hours; time of transit through entire canal, 10 to 12 hours.

FETE CHAMPETRE PLANS ANNOUNCED BY COMMITTEE.

Careful preparation is being made for the Fete Champetre for the benefit of the public playgrounds to be held at the City Park West Eighth street and Arlington avenue, May 26, 27 and 28. At a meeting of the general committee at the Y. M. C. A. Monday night, it was announced the committee on grounds that arrangements have been completed for the erection of a large platform. The committee on lighting reported that the wiring of the park will begin this week.

A committee comprising Mayor Charles J. Fisk and Street Commissioner Gavett is planning the seating proposition. Rehearsals of the 300 young people who are to participate are being held regularly at the High School under the direction of the Misses Clarence. Theme women with assistants will be in charge of booths: Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney, Mrs. J. K. Myers and Mrs. W. R. Townsend.

UP A TREE

By MAX ADELER

One day last fall Peter Lamb was walking by Keyser's orchard, and the apples looked so tempting that he concluded to get over the fence and go up a tree after some. He was just fairly up the tree when Keyser came along with his dog, and as he had had a great many apples stolen, he was pretty mad at finding Lamb in the act of taking some without leave. So after expressing his sentiments in very vigorous language, he told Peter that as he was so very fond of apples he might stay up there all night enjoying them. Then he called the attention of the dog to Peter, told the animal to watch him, and walked up to the house.

As the brute lay down beneath the tree, Peter thought he had never seen such an awful-looking dog, and he called to Keyser to take it away, and to let him pay for the fruit. But Keyser pretended not to hear him. Then Peter tried to scare the dog off by pelting him with apples; but every time he hit the animal he seemed to become more ferociously determined to eat a piece of Mr. Lamb before he abandoned him. Peter then tried coaxing the dog, but the more blandishments he offered, the hungrier the dog seemed to get. Then Peter waited till the dog became calmer and lay down, and then he tried to steal down the other side of the tree; but before he reached the ground the dog was on the alert, and ready to nip Mr. Lamb's calf.

At last Peter determined to resort to strategy. He went up as high as possible in the tree, and took off his boots, his coat, his trousers, and his hat, and, fixing them together by the aid of pins and his suspenders, so that they would resemble the figure of a man, he stuffed them with leaves. Then he carried the effigy down and and set it astride one of the lower branches, propping it up so that it would be within plain view of the dog. Then he stepped softly away from it, and waited his chance to slide down the trunk. He made two or three feints, and was delighted to see that when the dog heard the noise it merely glanced at the figure, seemed reassured, and went to sleep again. At last he got clear down to the ground, and when he was a few yards from the tree he ran as fast as his legs would carry him.

It was then late in the afternoon, and he succeeded in getting over to Deacon Jones' without being observed. He found the deacon sitting on the fence, and explained his appearance in a simple shirt and pair of drawers, by saying that he had been swimming in the creek and that somebody had stolen his clothes.

The deacon lent him some raiment, and Mr. Lamb went home bent upon revenge. Redressing himself, he got a club, called his own dog—a bigger animal than Keyser's—and started for the orchard. When he reached it, his old enemy lay beneath the tree watching the effigy. Then Mr. Lamb confidently climbed over the fence and set his dog at Keyser's. A fierce combat ensued, and while it was in progress Peter crept up and knocked Keyser's dog on the head, killing it outright. It was then about dusk, and Peter considered his day to be under the tree and "watch" the effigy, while he hid behind a neighboring tree.

After a little while Keyser came out for the purpose of letting Peter go if he felt penitent. He came up to the tree without recognizing the change of dogs, and addressing the effigy:

"Well, how do you feel by this time?"

No answer.

"Want to come down?"

No reply.

"If you'll promise never to steal my apples any more, I'll let you off."

Still no answer.

"Oh, you're too mad to talk, are you? Well, you just come down, anyhow."

Silence from the effigy.

"Look here, I don't want any more nonsense from you. Come down, or I'll pull you down!"

Then Keyser climbed up the tree and grasped Mr. Lamb's stuffed coat by the arm. He was just about to utter an exclamation of surprise, when Peter came out and said:

"Well, now, you just pull away. That's my dog under that tree; your dog's dead; and my dog'll eat you up quicker'n a wink if you get off that limb before I tell you. Thought you had me, did you? If the jury knows itself, you'll roost among that foliage until morning. Sick him, Bull, sick him!"

Then Mr. Lamb knocked an apple off another tree, and sat down to eat it. Keyser first began to study up a plan for murdering him; then he thought he would swear; then he had a notion to cry for help. But at last he concluded to accept the situation gracefully, and after some conversation, Peter agreed to let him go if he would swear to send around four bushels of apples in the morning. He registered a solemn oath to that effect, and Mr. Lamb held the dog while Keyser came down. Then Keyser went as near to Peter as he dared, and, shaking his fist at him, he said:

"You low-lived, mutton-headed, bow-legged thief! If that dog wasn't here I'd knock you down and sit on you till I squashed the breath out of you, you wall-eyed scoundrel, you!"

Then he went up to the house. Peter chuckled and shouldered his clothes, and started for home. Those apples have not yet arrived, but Mr. Lamb has not yet been out to inquire for them.

Great Point of Difference.

At the trial of the rebels held at Carlisle, England, after the 1745 rising, one witness was, although a Scotsman, examined under the English form of adjuration. He gave an account so palpably wide of the truth that the prosecuting counsel had him resworn after the form of his own country. He then gave evidence of a very different stamp. On being asked how he came to utter so many falsehoods when first sworn, he replied: "Sworn! There's an unco' difference 'atween blawing on a beuk an' sennin' ane's saul to hell!"

Citizens Drove Hard Bargain.

BUCKLEY GIVES ADVICE

Alleged Murderer Tells Boys to Obey Their Mothers.

WAS DISOBEDIENT YOUNGSTER.

The Youthful Prisoner Attributes His Present Predicament to Disregard to His Mother.

"Boys stick to your mothers," is the advice that comes to youths from John V. Buckley, the nineteen-year-old murderer of Patrolman Frederick Covell, who is awaiting to be called to trial, in the Somerset county court on Wednesday, June 1. A Daily Press reporter visited Buckley in his cell Wednesday, and found young man a much changed fellow since his arrest on April 21, the day after the crime was committed.

Fifteen days have elapsed since Buckley dispatched his boarding house mistress to death by twice shooting her through the head with a 38-calibre revolver. When placed under arrest the alleged murderer declared he was anxious to suffer the consequences, but now the youth has experienced a change of heart, and says he has visions of an electric chair he says he wants to live. "I don't want to die, but I want to live," is what he told the Daily Press reporter Wednesday.

Two weeks of reflection on his crime behind the steel bars, in the presence of vigilant keepers, has sent the boy's thoughts shooting back to his childhood days when he was under a fond mother's care at a humble home at Charlestown, Mass.

"All my trouble," said Buckley, as he watched the sunbeams through the grated windows of the new Somerset County jail, "is because I was a bad boy and did not mind my mother. If I had taken her advice I would not be here today. But I've done it, and I suppose I must suffer for it."

"If you had another chance, what would you do?" queried the reporter.

"I would take my mother's advice in everything; I would stick to her. That is what all boys should do to avoid getting in trouble. I know now that all boys, poor or rich, should obey their mothers.

"Since I was twelve years old I never had a real home, except at the Mernagh farm. Those people treated me kindly, gave me new clothes and other things, but I was not satisfied," added the jailed.

Buckley's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Patrick Buckley. Failure to hear from them or his two brothers in his trouble causes the prisoner grief, but he is still confident that they will come to his succor.

John, when a small lad, according to his own story, was a "bad boy." He refused to attend Sunday morning mass; he played "hookey" from school, and when his parents chastised him for his waywardness he ran away from Charlestown to Taunton, Mass. His deportment did not improve in that city and when he got into a scrape, which involved the theft of $23, he "skipped," came to New York, and finally landed in this city nearly six years ago.

While the boy's career was checked with petty shortcomings, previous to the big crime for which he is now behind prison bars, there are two habits that failed to claim Buckley, and they were drinking and smoking. According to Buckley, he never tasted intoxicating liquor, nor smoked either chewed tobacco.

Buckley, while a closely watched prisoner, now realizes his position, but he has no complaints to register to his keepers who appear to like the lad. Buckley's pal in the county jail is G. Giovane, an Italian, who is awaiting trial on a grand larceny charge.

The pair have become fast chums and Buckley takes little notice or associates with the other prisoners with whom he comes in contact.

Buckley and Giovane while away their time in playing dominos. Buckley is an expert at the game and he invariably comes out with flying colors in the battles with the Italian. The alleged murderer, although his education has been neglected, has exhibited a fondness for reading books and magazines.

The prisoner is also a baseball fan and the jail officials keep him supplied with the sporting pages of the newspapers every day. Buckley's first questions to his keepers every morning is for information as to the results of the ball games of the preceding day.

"Did the Giants win?" That is always Buckley's first query. He was a bit crestfallen yesterday morning when he was informed that the Pittsburg team had taken the lead away from the Giants. The prisoner says that he never saw a big league contest, since he ran away from his home at Charlestown. Before then, he said, he used to go over to Boston and peep through the knotholes of the South End ball park, and watch the diamond gladiators perform.

When the reporter asked the name of his favorite club to win the National League pennant, Buckley's eyes sparkled as he exclaimed:

"Why, the Giants to be sure. Matty is the greatest pitcher in the world and no one can beat McGraw as a manager."

When the reporter handed him a copy of a magazine which contains Sam Crane's article comparing the playing in the National and American leagues, Buckley exclaimed:

"Gee, this is the kind of stuff I like to read. Bring some more down the next time you come, will you?"

Buckley is provided with one of the most comfortable cells in the jail. In the cell is a snow white iron cot with neat and clean blankets and quilts, a white chair, a bookstand and other necessities.

Considerable sympathy is expressed for the lad because of his youth and his boyish ways. On the outside it is said that it is hard to see, in face of the evidence, and the five confessions he has made, how he can escape being convicted, but the opinion seems to be that he will never expiate the crime in the electric chair.

Robert Newton Crane, the prisoner's lawyer, visits the murderer three times a week, but the former is maintaining silence as to the line of defense he will introduce in the effort to save Buckley from the electric chair.

HAVE YOU A TYPEWRITER TO GIVE TO A CHARITY?

A typewriting machine is needed by the Charity Organization Society and it is needed at once. According to the report of the secretary for the month of April the society is being called upon for much more of its time and energy than ever before. The need of a typewriter makes itself felt every time anything in the way of correspondence needs to be done.

It is claimed that the society is greatly hampered in its work because there is no writing machine in its office and while a stenographer is not essential the possession of a typewriter would aid materially to the efficiency of the work.

During April 123 cases were looked up and attended to, ten more than in the month of March and the agents of the society made 447 calls and these things involved the writing of 91 letters. This correspondence is what makes the typewriter necessary. During the month fourteen cases of tuberculosis were discovered among the applicants for relief. It is hoped that someone will furnish the typewriter before another month rolls around and even though no stenographer is employed the machine will be mastered by the present managers of the association and its letters will take on the appearance of business which is a necessary adjunct to every well organized concern.

NON-SUIT IS OBTAINED BY FRATERNAL ORDER

Because the Supreme court of the Independent Order of Foresters disputed the claim that a policy holder was dead, it set up technical defenses and non-suited the plaintiff in the first Supreme Court case at Elizabeth before Judge Vail Thursday.

Zephysnius C. Dwyer, a Central Railroad locomotive fireman, disappeared about ten years ago and his family say that they have never heard from him since then. Under the law a man that such a man is presumed to be dead. An administrator was appointed and upon his claim for insurance being rejected brought the suit at law.

The Foresters put in many technical defenses besides denying that he was dead but the interesting contest would have developed if the Foresters were required to offer evidence on the question whether the alleged deceased was in fact alive. No evidence was required on this point from the defense because of a motion to non-suit made by Craig A. Marsh on a point of law which the court held to be well taken.

The point was this: The constitution of the order provided that upon any claim for insurance being rejected the claimant should be bound to submit such claim to the executive committee of the order in Canada before bringing suit. This appeal was not taken. Mr. Kalisch, counsel for the plaintiff, contending that the constitution of the order in this respect was unreasonable and not binding on the member or the member's personal representative, and also contending that neither was bound by amendments to any constitution not made until after the policy had been issued.

Mr. Marsh combatted both positions and was sustained by the court and after elaborate argument by counsel on both sides the plaintiff was non-suited.

Beetles Destroying Trees.

According to H. Crowfut White, president of the North Plainfield Shade Tree Commission, beetles are biting off the leaves of elm trees in that vicinity. Mr. Crowfut advises citizens to spray their trees at once.

WORK OF HEALTH BOARD

Inspections Made and Permits Granted During Month of April.

WERE THIRTY-NINE BIRTHS.

Only Twenty-eight Cases of Contagious Disease—Milk Ordinance Effective on June 1.

Fewer cases of scarlet fever and diphtheria were reported during April than in any previous month, according to the reports presented at the monthly meeting of the Board of Health, Wednesday and the general sanitary condition of the city was shown to be good. The following cases of disease were reported for April:

Measles, 6; chicken-pox, 8; tuberculosis, 6; diphtheria, 2; scarlet fever, 6; total, 28.

The following inspections were reported: In connection with plumbing and sewer work, 125; milk supply, 117; general work, 672; total, 1,004. The last named included house-to-house inspections, those of rear yards for general nusances for vaults and cesspools, of toilets in public and office buildings, barber shops, bakeries, restaurants, ash dumps, etc. There were 27 sewer vault and cesspool notices served during the month and nineteen houses and sixty-three rooms were disinfected.

The usual sample of city water was taken for analysis and found to be of excellent quality. A sample was also taken from the Watchung springs and another from the Washington Rock spring. Both of these proved to be uncontaminated and of high quality. Six samples of cream and thirty-three samples of milk were analyzed. The milk was of better quality than for March, but the bacteria count was somewhat higher probably to the many changes of temperature. The new milk ordinance was adopted by the board on its third and final reading, and after the necessary advertising, will go into effect about June 1. All the garbage and offal permits, many of the plumbing permits and plumbers' bonds were due for renewal at this time, and in connection with these, permits were granted as follows:

The application of Elijah Dufford for a permit to sell milk and the application of C. W. Blake for a scavenger permit were referred to the health officer with power.

As an evangelist Mr. Hall's efforts have been crowned with success, many having been led into the Christian life through his earnest words and forceful personality. His wide experience in Christian service and his wide acquaintance with men of affairs have given him a fund of information and an insight into human character such as come to few men.

As a speaker Mr. Hall is much in demand. At the St. Paul International C. E. convention held last July he made an address that will not soon be forgotten, and delegates to the State C. E. convention held at Atlantic City in 1908 will remember his strong address on personal evangelism, also in the pavilion on the Steel Pier—"out at sea."

Besides Mr. Hall's address there will be a number of interest features in the program for "Friday, the 13th." There will be a roll call of all the societies in the county, and the badge banner, now held by the Greystone Presbyterian C. E. Society, Elizabeth, will be awarded to the society having the largest percentage of its active members present. The county union is divided for convenience into four districts, each in charge of a vice-president. The four sections are Elizabeth, Plainfield, Rahway-Westfield, Summit. The societies in each of these districts are those in the towns named and all contiguous territory. The delegates, including the people's societies, three intermediates and eighteen junior societies.

Officers for the year will be elected, the delegates acting upon the report of the nominating committee, of which Fred S. Bonteau, of Summit, is chairman. The present officers are: President, P. F. Benedict, Roselle; vice-presidents, William D. Newton, Summit; Clarence B. LaRue, Plainfield; Frederick L. Mintel, Rahway; F. Herbert Hand, Elizabeth; secretary, Marry F. Brewer, Elizabeth; treasurer, Frederick E. Woodruff, Cranford.

The meeting will begin promptly at 8 o'clock, and until that hour seats will be reserved for each society of the county, the places being designated by markers. Those societies having no colors are requested to wear them, and all delegates are asked to wear the county colors—Yale blue and white. The convention will be open to all, and friends of the young people are most cordially invited.

Psalm 139 p. m. there will be a conference of the Junior superintendents of the county, in charge of the new county superintendent, Miss Nell C. Green, of Elizabeth. Miss Green has been fortunate in securing as the speaker for her conference Chester Bradley, of Newark, the superintendent of Junior work in the Essex County C. E. Union. Mr. Bradley's work for the boys and girls has not only endeared him to the children, but has won for him the high esteem of the officers and workers of Essex. It is expected that the conference will be of great value to the superintendents.

Following the conference the junior workers will be entertained at supper by the C. E. Society of the Westfield church, of which Miss Ethel Irving is president.

A meeting of the executive committee of the union will be held at 7:15 p. m., at which the business of the year will be closed and reports received. This committee consists of the officers, department superintendents, and delegates from the societies comprising the union, each society being represented by three members—its president, one other delegate appointed by the president, and the superintendent of the Junior society.

The annual meeting last year was held at Summit and was largely attended. The year has been one of growth and advancement, and it is expected that the convention at Westfield will be one of especial interest and profit.

"Bull con," a slang phrase which means to flatter, to praise with ulterior motives, had its origin in the West years ago. When the gold brick game was started the bunko men sprung a fine, high-sounding combination of words upon the simple farmers. They called it an investment in "bullion consolidated." Years afterward the words were cut down to "bull con," and came to mean any graft that depended upon the gift of gab. Still later on it was used to describe the method of flattery.—Chicago Journal.

EDWARD VII IS DEAD; GEORGE V PROCLAIMED

British Empire Mourns the Death of Its Illustrious Sovereign.

Edward VII, king of Great Britain and its dominions and emperor of India, died at fifteen minutes before midnight, Friday in Buckingham palace, London, England, after an illness of only three days. Pneumonia, following an attack of bronchitis, was the cause of death. Anxiety over the political situation is believed to have hastened his death.

George V. was formally proclaimed King of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British Territories beyond the Seas, and Emperor of India today, following the death of his father, King Edward VII., last night.

The Prince of Wales succeeded to the Crown the moment of his father's death, according to the laws of the Kingdom, without official ceremony, but the proclamation, in accordance with precedent, was delivered from the steps of the Royal Exchange and of St. James' Palace. This ceremony preceded that of taking the oath at St. James' Palace before the Privy Council.

Edward was King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the British Possessions Beyond the Sea, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India, field marshal, honorary admiral, honorary colonel of the cavalry of the guard, colonel in chief of the Tenth Regiment of Hussars (the Prince of Wales' Own) and of the First and Second Life Guards, the Grenadier, Coldstream, Scots, Irish and Royal Horse Guards, sovereign of the Order of the Garter, knight of the Order of St. Andrew, and of the orders of the Annunciation, the Elephant, the Black Eagle, the Golden Fleece, and many more.

Edward the Seventh was the chief Free Mason. He was elected grand master of the Free Masons in England in 1874, and the next year was installed as first principal of the Royal Arch Free Masons. He originated the Royal College of Music and established a fund for the study of cancer and the search for its cure. He was god-father to more than 100 babies. His second son was named for him a field marshal of the Germau army. He had decorations, orders and military titles from every monarchy in the world.

The king had six children. His oldest son, Prince Albert Victor of Wales, Duke of Clarence, died in 1892. His second son, George, Duke of York, married his dead brother's fiancee, the Princess Victoria Mary of Teck. He was born on June 3, 1865, and was married July 6, 1893. As Prince George of Wales he was most popular "sailor prince," in the navy with which he served and among the people. The king's other children were Princess Louise Victoria Alexandra Dagmar, born in 1867, married in 1889 to the Duke of Fife; Princess Victoria Alexandra Olga Mary, born in 1868; Princess Maud Charlotte Mary Victoria, born in 1869, married in 1896 to Prince Charles of Denmark, and Prince Alexander John Charles Albert, who was born April 6, 1871, and died the next day.

The Prince of Wales, who now becomes king, and his wife, traveled around the world in 1900 as the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York. They went through the British colonies and got an enthusiastic reception in every one. It was really not until after the return from this voyage that King Edward conferred upon the duke the title of Prince of Wales. The children of this marriage are Prince Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, born June 23, 1894; Prince Albert Frederick Arthur George, born December 14, 1895, and Princess Victoria Alexandra Alice Mary, born April 25, 1897.

Washington, May 7.—President Taft last night sent this message of condolence to Queen Alexandra:

"May 6, 1910.

"Her Majesty Queen Alexandra, Buckingham Palace, London:

"On the sad occasion of the death of King Edward, I offer to your majesty and to your son, his illustrious successor, the most profound sympathy of the people and of the government of the United States, whose hearts go out to their British kinsmen in this their national bereavement. To this I add the expression of my personal sympathy and of my appreciation of those high qualities which made the life of the late king so potent an influence toward peace and justice among nations.

"WILLIAM H. TAFT."

Secretary of State Knox also instructed Whitelaw Reid, American ambassador to London, to express the sympathy of the government. Here is Mr. Knox's cablegram of instructions:

"Washington, May 6, 1910.

"American Embassy, London:

"Apart from the message which the president has sent to Queen Alexandra, you will make to the British government appropriate expression of the sympathy of the president, government and people of the United States in the loss by their British kinsmen of a ruler so beloved and so distinguished among the nations for the influence of his kindliness and wisdom toward all that is best.

"P. C. KNOX."

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Avenging His Private Griefs.

Representative Fowler has his private griefs against Speaker Cannon. Not only did the speaker in the last congress sit right down on the various erratic currency bills that Mr. Fowler, as chairman of the committee on banking and currency, concocted and introduced, with the ambition to create for himself the name and fame of father of the United States currency system, but the speaker actually deposed him from the committee, and that, too, at a time when the monetary commission was preparing to report to congress. When "insurgency" arose to demand the head of Speaker Cannon, where else would Mr. Fowler be except in the actually deposed class? There was delight in the humiliation of the speaker, but not full satisfaction. Fowler wanted decapitation. So it was that on Thursday he introduced a resolution to strip the speaker of all authority to choose standing committees at the next session. The resolution missed fire, but may come up next month. Mr. Fowler acted on his own initiative, and even the insurgents were taken by surprise. But they have no private griefs to avenge. Fowler has.—Newark Star.

Fewer Saloons.

The rule which has been established in Plainfield of refusing to grant liquor licenses except at a ratio of one to 1,000 of population has always been regarded as exceedingly drastic in New Jersey. In most cities of the State the ratio is so much lower that there is no comparison at all. In Elizabeth the policy has been to grant as many licenses as the breweries have desired. The question of a wise public policy has never been considered by those in charge of those affairs, at least not until the present excise board came into power. The result has been that we have been piling up saloons, until it is commonly reported that the business of selling liquor in certain sections of the city is not profitable, and that in order to make both ends meet liquor has to be sold on Sunday.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the excise law introduced in the New York State Legislature by Senator Brought, and known as the bill of the Committee of Fourteen, which has been reported favorably by the Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment, limits the licenses in cities of the first class to one in 1,000. At the present time the ratio in New York is one license for every 460. By the change in the ratio more than half of the saloons will be closed.

It is noted that the reports sent out from Albany are to the effect that the bill mentioned has the support of the brewer, the wholesale liquor dealers and most of the liquor sellers of the State. Their point of view is said to be that the new plan will make licenses valuable property, removing much of the competition. On the side of the reformers it is asserted that the effect of the bill, if enacted into a law, will be to make the liquor dealers themselves important factors in the enforcement of law. The reasoning is, of course, that with the license greatly increased in value the holder will not run the risk of having it forfeited. It is expected that the result would be, therefore, a raising of the tone of the liquor business, making it more self respecting and lawabiding.

The New York measure shows, in one respect at least, the tendency of the times in liquor licenses ,which is the reduction of the number of saloons. Few cities have seen the necessity of this clearer than Elizabeth. The work started by the new excise board should proceed with equal speed as is consistent with justice.—Elizabeth Journal.

A Happy Accident.

"How do you like Miss Brown's new hat?"

"I don't like Miss Brown and I never look at her hats."

"This hat was made by the senior class of the new college of millinery."

"Oh, was it? I thought the shape looked queer."

"I guess the shape is all right. They took upon it in the college as an inspiration. It seems that after the class finished it the teacher accidentally sat on it, and everybody says its too chic for anything."

'UNCLE DAN' FOR M'GRAW

Morris County Leader Opposes Fowler and Predicts His Defeat.

STATE TREASURER TALKS.

Fowler's Strongest Political Supporter Says Union, Morris and Warren Do Not Want Him Again.

That Charles N. Fowler, Representative to Congress from the Fifth New Jersey District, and the only Republican insurgent from this State, is not going to have a smooth road in his candidacy for an eighth term, which he has just announced, was announced by a declaration made Saturday by State Treasurer Daniel Voorhees, acknowledged Republican leader of Morris county, that he is against the continuance of Mr. Fowler in Congress. When asked if Mr. Fowler would secure the support of Morris county's Republicans in the Fifth District convention, State Treasurer Voorhees promptly answered that he would not. Mr. Voorhees added that Morris county would have a candidate of its own in the person of James H. McGraw, of Morristown, who has been frequently mentioned as a successor in Congress to Mr. Fowler.

"Will Morris county be able to control the situation?" Mr. Voohees was asked.

"I think it will," answered the State treasurer. "While it is true that Union county, with 118 delegates in the Fifth District convention, can outvote Morris and Warren counties in making a Republican nomination for Congress, it must be remembered that considering Mr. Fowler unfit he cannot control all the votes in his county of Union. I do not think that Mr. Fowler can count surely for himself more than twenty of the 118 delegates to be elected in Union County. These will come from Plainfield and Westfield. Morris and Warren counties, acting in harmony, as they undoubtedly will in the Fifth District convention, will easily control the nomination by securing the support of some of the delegates from Union county."

"Mr. Fowler has never had Union county sentiment solidly for him," continued Mr. Voorhees. "Two years ago he was renominated only because Morris county refused to join in a movement originating in Union county at that time to keep him out of Congress. He will be laid at that time that he would retire from Congress at the end of his present term."

"Did you talk to Senator Kean about the Congressional nomination in the Union District when you were in Washington a few days ago" Mr. Voorhees was asked.

"Is Senator Kean against Fowler?" asked the reporter.

"Senator Kean is busy on his own job—he wants to be re-elected to the Senate," answered Mr. Voorhees.

"Then you believe that Mr. Fowler will not be able to secure a renomination," was suggested.

"Yes, sir," replied Mr. Voorhees.

Mr. Voorhees does not entertain any doubt about the willingness of Mr. McGraw to become a candidate against Representative Fowler. Mr. McGraw has been prominent in Morris county Republican politics for several years, although never a seeker for office. Two years ago he was a delegate from the Fifth District to the National Republican Convention at Chicago. When Governor Fort was looking about for a man to name as a successor to Judge William Vredenburg on the Court of Errors and Appeals, he offered the place to Mr. McGraw, but the latter declined at that time. He is the editor of the Electrical World and Street Railway Journal, besides a number of other publications. He was formerly the proprietor of Success Magazine.

LECTURE ON NAPOLEON.

Clergyman to Talk on "The Little Corsican."

The Women's Guild of the Church of the Heavenly Rest is making arrangements for a lecture of a historical nature to be given at the Plainfield High School on Tuesday night, May 17, by Rev. Francis Woods, of Roselle. The subject will be "Napoleon Bonaparte," one which Mr. Woods has made an extensive study of and is well fitted to speak about. It will be illustrated with living pictures.

The members of Co. K are to be given an invitation to attend this lecture in a body. The proceeds will be devoted to church purposes. Mr. Wood, who is a student of Napoleon, has read over four hundred books bearing on the subject to obtain material for thelecture. He has given this lecture for the Board of Education of New York city, where it attracted considerable attention.

COUNTRY CLUB OPENING

Tennis, Golf, Supper and Dance are Enjoyed by a Big Crowd.

OTHER CLUBS AS GUESTS.

Park Club, Park Golf Club and Watchung Hunt Club Were All Largely Represented.

The annual housepopening and field day of the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday was all that one could desire, it being one of the most successful social events of the season. Ideal weather, together with perfect condition of golf links and tennis courts, combined to make the affair one of great pleasure. The club members as well as all the members of the Park, Park Golf and Watchung Hunt Clubs were invited and extended the full privileges of the home organization for the day.

From early morning until nearly dark, the golf course and tennis courts were thronged with enthusiastic players and it was an auspicious opening of the local season in those sports. The green committee has been working hard to get the course and greens in condition for the opening and its efforts were well rewarded.

Not only on the links and courts was the day enjoyed, but the social features at the clubhouse were equally as pleasant. Throughout the afternoon tea was served, and this was followed with a dinner-dance in the evening. Nearly two hundred guests were served at dinner. The clubhouse was never more attractive, the house committee having spent considerable time in decorating the interior. The dancing was continued until 11 o'clock. This event is not only looked forward to by the home club members, but those of the other clubs in this city, and all appreciate the hospitality extended.

Saturday morning there was the initial contest among the boys for cups offered in a weekly competition. This attracted a good sized field. The best scores:

E. R. Walbridge, 106, 10-96; L. S. Church, 110, 5-105; S. D. Warren, Jr., 165, 25-140; J. P. Stevens, Jr., 179, 23-156.

Throughout the days there was the weekly competition for the spring handicap cups, Classes A and B. There was a large number of entries and all of the scores were good. The leading ones returned in the two classes follow:

Class A—Arthur Murphy, 82, 8-74; H. F. Wilson, 88, 12-76; W. Lester Gleaney, 85, 4-81; Dudley H. Barown, 85, 4-81.

SEVEN YOUNG NURSES TO RECEIVE DIPLOMAS

Arrangements are being made for the annual commencement exercises of the Muhlenberg Hospital Training School for Nurses to be held on Thursday night, May 19, at the Hartridge auditorium. The program will be announced by superintendent, Miss Josephine Hughes, in the course of the next few days. Following the formal exercises, a reception and dance will be given by the Nurses Alumni Association.

Seven young women will receive their diplomas on this occasion, the class numerically being the same as last year. The standard of scholarship is exceptionally high. These are the members: Miss Maude Davidson, London, Ontario; Miss Josephine Culberson, Plainfield; Miss Sophia Scherpeltz, Koln, Germany; Miss Nellie Wilbee, Plainfield; Miss Clara E. Charlton, Meadvale, Ontario; Miss Florence MacDonald, Elizabeth; Miss Iva Alpaugh, Califon.

NUTLEY'S TEACHERS STAND BY MEREDITH.

Twenty-five teachers in the Nutley public schools have handed in their resignations to the Board of Education of that place because Prof. A. B. Meredith, formerly of the Plainfield High School faculty, has quit as superintendent of schools.

The majority of the board insisted that Mr. Meredith resign as Essex county superintendent of schools to devote his entire time to the Nutley schools. This he refused to do and accordingly resigned the latter post.

Mrs. Bennett's Funeral.

The funeral service of Mrs. Benjamin F. Bennett, of 315 Clinton avenue, on Saturday afternoon was marked by a large attendance. The service was conducted by the Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey. Mrs. John Manley sang two selections, "Rock of Ages" and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" impressively. Interment was made at Hillside.

DUNELLEN WINS FROM NORTH PLAINFIELD

Dunellen's crack combination of ball tossers scored its second straight victory on Saturday by defeating the North Plainfield A. A. in an exciting contest by the score of 9 to 5. The Dunellenites played a losing game in the field but they excelled the boroughites at the bat. Miller had a big hitting date. Four times he connected with the ball safely and three times did he score.

Clarke, of the P. H. S. nine, succeeded Craig on third base. He had a bad afternoon, making three errors. Craig will join the Somerville nine next Saturday. The score:

MRS. BOOTH HEARD HERE

Appeal of Famous "Little Mother" of Convicts Receives a Response.

MORE THAN $500 COLLECTED.

Park Avenue Church Crowded to Its Doors—Hundreds Turned Away—150 Added to League.

Under the spell of her great personal magnetism, Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, the "little mother" of the convicts in the various States prisons in this country, held the attention of an audience of nearly a thousand persons in the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday while she told the story of her life work. It was estimated that more than two hundred more people were turned away from the doors because of lack of room. A strong appeal from Mrs. Booth added nearly 150 members to the Hope Hall League and nearly five hundred dollars was handed to her from the collection.

On the platform with the speaker were her son, Charles Drandon Booth, Rev. J. A. Lane and the pastor of the church, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire. Mrs. Booth's daughter, Myrtle, was in the audience and later joined her brother in distributing and collecting the membership cards in the audience. Before Mrs. Booth was introduced to the people, Pastor Maguire in his inimitable way requested the removal of the women's hats. The hats came off with ripples of laughter ran through the auditorium. Judge William N. Runyon sang splendidly "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," and George E. Hall, superintendent of the Bible school, introduced the speaker.

Mrs. Booth won the attention of her hearers at the very outset when she said, "I am going to tell you the story of my boys, those about whom so much misunderstanding exists and who number approximately 84,000. They make up the population of a big city, but they are all behind prison bars and the world cannot understand why there are among them thousands who await the call of love to make them better."

The speaker took her audience through some of the prisons in the east and west and made special mention of a penitentiary near Philadelphia where her work was among an unseen audience. All the prisoners were confined to their cells and there was no place in which they could gather to hear her speak. Here while many of the men never catch a glimpse of the little woman who is winning favor with them, they know her voice and are always glad to hear it. She declared that she had never yet asked permission to enter a prison. The authorities ask her to come as she helps them with the prison discipline. "I would rather have the freedom of the prisons than the freedom of all the best cities in this country," she said.

Speaking of the prison at Trenton, Mrs. Booth said that the sooner the New Jersey legislators learned the fact that everyone of the inmates of its walls have a soul and that they should not be thrust on the world after serving a long term without sufficient funds to get to their friends and families, the better it would be for the State and the ex-convict. The prison may prove a stepping stone to better things through the mercy of God.

Experiences among the colored convicts of the South followed and here, Mrs. Booth said, contrary to the expectations of the prison keepers most wonderful results have been obtained. Instead of the spasmodic good behaviour of the negroes which the keepers maintained was due to the emotional character of the black man, the resulting appeal to their better natures has added some 1,400 names to the Volunteer Prison League while they all wear the button of the league and gambling, stealing and fighting have disappeared from among them. It is merely finding the jewel beneath the surface and polishing it up to make it shine.

Referring to the work at Hope Hall in New York, Mrs. Booth said that after the men are released from prison they are taken care of for certain periods or until they have obtained employment and it is part of the duty of the ex-convict to tell his story to the lawyer in charge of his past so as to begin honestly. Ninety-five per cent. of the men thus given a chance have "made good," the other five per cent. having been victims of their worst enemy, drink. She declared that she had been treated splendidly by the Parole Board of New York State and her influence went a long way toward reuniting broken families and helping the boys thus released to find employment and keep it. Several instances were cited which proved the wisdom of giving the fellows another chance, all of whom had become staunch Christian citizens.

Mrs. Booth made an appeal for help in the work of the Hall, stating that her whole time and that of her son and daughter and husband was entirely given up to it without compensation in money. One hundred and forty-seven people signed cards pledging support to the institution and when Pastor Maguire asked the audience if they would like to have Mrs. Booth return every hand in the audience was raised. Mr. Maguire read the scripture, Luke 15-11, the story of the Prodigal, and also pronounced the benediction. Rev. Mr. Lane offered the prayer.

MR. AND MRS. DEBELE WEDDED TWENTY YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. William Debele, of Somerset street, entertained about one hundred friends and relatives in Debele auditorium on Saturday night in honor of the twentieth anniversary of their wedding. Guests were present from Newark, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Asbury Park, Lambertville and other places.

Mr. and Mrs. Debele were assisted in receiving the guests by Judge and Mrs. Isaac P. Runyon and Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Weisman.

Following a dinner dancing was enjoyed. Beautiful dances Miss Marian Keeley, of New Market, and Miss Agnes Mehl rendered songs and recitations.

Mr. and Mrs. Debele were showered with congratulations and were also the recipients of numerous handsome presents.

COLORED ODD FELLOWS.

Attend Service Held at Mt. Olive Church.

Union Lodge, No. 4026, Grand United Order Odd Fellows, and the House of Ruth, the sister society, as well as the Juvenile society, attended worship at the Mt. Olive Baptist church Sunday, the day being the anniversary of the colored Odd Fellow lodge. There were nearly one hundred members of all three lodges present, while the church was thronged with friends.

Dr. J. C. Anderson was master of ceremonies, and made an address on Odd Fellowship, while J. W. Murry, local and grand secretary of the order, presented an annual report of the local and national order, showing the grwoth in membership and finances during the year. William Jones was marshal for the occasion. Following the report, the sermon was delivered by Rev. Dr. E. W. Roberts, of the Shiloh Baptist church, who is a member of the order. He spoke of the principles of Odd Fellowship and of the duty each member owed to the other. At the close of the service prayer was offered by Rev. Daniel Brown, of this city.

BOY PETTING DOG BITTEN BY ANIMAL.

The seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gough, of Grandview avenue, was severely bitten on the left side of the face by a dog belonging to Edward Tery, on Saturday afternoon.

Young Gough was walking on Steiner place with his grandfather, Patrick Kiely. The dog was on the sidewalk and when the lad started to pat the animal on the head the dog jumped on the boy, biting him three times on the cheek.

The injured boy was later attended to by Dr. A. H. Dundon.

Cleaning Grater.

Most every housekeeper knows what a job it is to clean a grater after grating cocoanut, lemon, or, in fact, everything she grates. If she will have handy a small scrubbing brush or hand scrub, every particle will come out immediately and leave the grater sweet and clean.

PRAISE FOR ROOSEVELT

Pastor Says He Earned Respect of Protestants and Catholics.

THE INCIDENT AT ROME.

Rev. Dr. Herring Deplores Utterances of Archbishop MacConnell and Rev. Dr. Brann.

In the course of a sermon on "Truth and Freedom" Sunday at the First Presbyterian church, Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, the pastor, made reference to the incident at Rome that prevented a meeting between former President Roosevelt and Pope Pius X. He treated the subject calmly and in expressing the view that Mr. Roosevelt had shown tact and diplomacy in the way he treated the incident, said:

"We have read with extreme regret the remarks of Archbishop MacConnell, of Massachusetts and the Rev. Dr. Brann, of New York, in which they characterized Mr. Roosevelt's refusing to take sides in a religious controversy as insulting to the Pope. The only thing that our ex-President could do for the sake of both his Catholic and his Protestant friends under the trying circumstances was the very thing he did do. It was hardly fair to place such restrictions upon his actions.

Mr. Roosevelt is an apostle of peace but of a peace that has intimate relations with righteousness. We have this confidence in him that according to his light, he is brave enough to give every man the square deal. This we do not believe that the diplomacy that made conditions which deprived him of his freedom and endangered his popularity with the American people was wise or thoughtful.

"There were just three things open for Mr. Roosevelt to do after the conditions were imposed upon him by the papal authorities. He might have accepted them and had his audience with the Pope, or he might have rejected them and addressed the Methodists. We can readily see which either of these actions would have meant in the eyes of all true Americans. There was only one other thing open to him and that was to courteously refuse to take sides.

"I believe that Mr. Roosevelt has still the great respect of the Pope, the respect of the Methodist church and Protestants generally for his wise action. More than that I believe that the great body of American Catholics have exactly the same respect."

INTERESTING EXHIBIT OF Y.W.C.A. CLASSES

Among the hundreds of people who attended the annual exhibit of the educational classes of the Young Women's Christian Association which was conducted at Shirley and Johnson's store Saturday afternoon and evening, there was hardly a single person who did not speak words of praise of the advancement and accomplishments in this department of work of the association.

The visitors to the exhibit found a display of handiwork in dressmaking, millinery, embroidery work and cooking.

The embroidery exhibit was particularly attractive and was largely patronized by the woman-folk. This exhibit was in charge of Miss Amy Lough.

The hats and ribbon flowers in the millinery department which was under the supervision of Miss Edith Caproh was also inspected by the visitors. Many favorable comments were forthcoming on the flowers which filled the vases.

A point of interest was the cooking table which was filled with dainties prepared by members of the cooking class. In charge of this department were Miss Willian A. Conner, Miss Anna Campbell and Mrs. Frank Rowley.

The articles displayed in the dressmaking exhibit also reflected a great amount of credit on the gown-makers. Miss Isabel Scarborough was in charge of this booth.

There were also on exhibition photographic exhibits of gymnastic work. This feature appealed more to the men folk who visited the exhibit.

The officials of the association are highly gratified over the splendid showing made by the different classes and preparations are being made to increase the scope of work next season. At the present there is an enrollment of 250 members in the different classes.

Warrenville Men in Collision.

Frank Cleves, of Warrenville, while returning home on Saturday evening, collided with another vehicle and was thrown from his wagon to the roadside. Cleves clung to the lines and was dragged about 50 feet before the horse was gotten under control. Cleves sustained several deep gashes on the face and head.

PLAINFIELD DEFEATS GARWOOD HANDILY

If Manager Dorflinger had offered prizes for error making in Saturday's game it is doubtful whether his band of athletes could improve on the array of frazzles uncorked in Saturday's contest with the Garwood A. C. Despite eight glaring misplays, and ragged support, Warry McLaughlin managed to pull the locals through victorious by the score of 8 to 5. The Garwoods also played a loose game, the visitors having six errors in their column.

It was a wearisome contest all the way and the fans breathed easy when Brewer ended the exhibition by grounding out to Boyd. McLaughlin twirled a fine game in spite of the punk support accorded him. Although the visitors rapped on ten hits, McLaughlin held them powerless at critical stages of the contest. Twelve Garwood men fanned the breezes.

Brewer, who pitched for the locals a part of last season, also performed well. The latter also starred for his team with the stick, Brewer having three bingles to his credit. Fielding honors were snatched by Washburn, the lightning third sacker of the visitors. Several of his stops and throws were in the marvelous class.

The locals started off well by scoring one run in the first and two in the second. Garwood got active in the third by registering three tallies and one each in the fourth and fifth rounds. It began to look as if the visitors intended to walk away with the game in the eighth round when the sacks were filled. McLaughlin, however, was on the job and after Colwell had flied to Schott, Warry fanned Grimes and Washburn out, thus retiring the side without a tally.

Brewer weakened in the last two rounds. In the seventh Plainfield tied the score by making two runs and in the eighth they clinched the game by getting three more across the pan. The score:

YOUNG FRIENDS HEAR HENRY M. HAVILAND

To protest against indifference, to suggest a wider interpretation of religion than those commonly accepted, to pray,—not, "Our Father, we thank thee for our many blessings," but "show us how to be thankful," were some of the chief thoughts expressed in an able paper presented by Henry M. Haviland, of Brooklyn, at the annual meeting of the New York and Brooklyn Young Friends' Association, with the local association Sunday afternoon. The meeting was held at the meeting-house of the Religious Society of Friends on Watchung avenue.

In spite of the unfavorable weather a large audience gathered. The paper was well written and profoundly thoughtful. In the discussion that followed others said, "that God is found in the valley, as well as in the grandeur of the mountain peak, but as well in the soul shaped to higher purpose by suffering;" that it "is essential for all of us to do something with all our heart and soul" and that "he who has lived truly, loved truly, uprightly, expresses the true religion."

The visitors who entered into the discussion were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Browning, S. Elizabeth Stover and Edward Cornell. Soon after the close of the meeting supper was served, and the guests left on an early train for their homes.

SERMON TO PYTHIANS

Unity and Perseverance Lodges, K. of P., Hear Address by Rev. L. R. Howard.

HOPE CHAPEL WAS CROWDED.

God an Inexhaustible Source of Power and Influence for Good, Says the Pastor.

Unity and Perseverance lodges, Knights of Pythias, accepted the invitation of Pastor L. R. Howard, of Hope chapel to attend the service in the chapel Sunday and about one hundred members of the two lodges were present in a body. Part of the chapel was reserved for the knights and after they were seated the edifice rapidly filled up.

The Pythians sang their ode and the chapel choir rendered some selections after which Rev. Mr. Howard delivered his address. The concluding ceremony was the singing by the combined audience and the benediction by the pastor.

At the beginning of his address, Rev. Mr. Howard expressed his appreciation of the visit of the lodges, saying that it showed their desire to live up to their ideals, and that it was of those ideals that he intended to speak. The text was John XIII., 34: "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another, even as I have loved you."

Beginning with a discussion of the necessity of gaining new things spiritually, if one is to keep alive in character, Rev. Mr. Howard went on to show that there was something new in love for every man and every community. James especially showed the new possibilities of love toward God and man in his life, and every growing life may do as Jesus did to some extent. Many persons think that there is nothing new to be learned in the realm of character and that is one reason why persons who are otherwise very much alive are suddenly found to be very weak at this vital point, if not actually dead. They learned the A B C of the spiritual life when they were children and they have never learned any more.

Contrasted with such men are others who lead the world by the force of their Christian influence. They are men who have felt the love of God as an inexhaustable source of power and influence from which they can draw as long as they kept in sympathetic touch with it. They are the men of unselfish service who have taken Christ as their ideal and the cross of Christ as their standard of love and devotion to their fellow-men.

Illustrations of the never-failing attractiveness of the truly loving life were given, and an earnest appeal was made to the men not to wait for sorrow or calamity to frighten them or to soften their hearts, but to let past calamities, especially that of the crucifixion, be enough to impel them to choose the loving life inspired by Christ and nourished by faith in God who himself is Infinite Love.

FIREMAN IS INJURED PUTTING OUT A BLAZE

The home of Mrs. Alice Peel, 117 Washington street, was partially destroyed by fire shortly after midnight Sunday morning. Cause of the fire was due to one of Mrs. Peel's boarders upsetting a lamp when he returned from town in a rear room in the upper section of an extension to the house.

Occupants of the house were speedily aroused and the burning lamp thrown out of a window, but the carpet caught fire and before the flames could be extinguished, they were eating their way up the rear of the building until the roof was reached.

Owing to the failure of the fire alarm system to operate properly considerable delay was experienced by the firemen in getting to the scene. Box 15 was pulled, and the guns blew 31, 12, 12, 45 and 6-6. It was about twenty minutes before the different companies were able to ascertain the location of the blaze, but once on the job the progress of the fire was quickly stopped.

Captain George Feiring sustained slight injuries about his face and hands while at work on the roof. Feiring stepped in a hole and crashed through the roof to the room below.

It was at first believed that Feiring was seriously hurt. City Physician Charles B. Lufburrow was summoned and the Captain removed to his headquarters. Feiring was badly shaken up and badly scratched about the hands, but he was able to resume duty yesterday morning.

The damage of the fire is placed at about $200, covered by insurance.

Charles W. McCutchen, of the First Baptist church, is a member of the general State committee having charge of this movement and he will doubtless have something to say at the meeting tomorrow night. Dr. De Wolf was in this city yesterday planning for the meeting and conferring with Rev. Dr. A. A. Shoemaker, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire and Rev. J. W. Musson, pastors of the local Baptist churches.

BOARDING HOUSE THIEF GETS $400 IN JEWELRY.

The boarding house conducted by the Misses Hayes in Fanwood was looted yesterday afternoon while the women of the house were absent. Jewelry to the amount of $400 was taken. A missing servant girl is being searched for.

The missing girl goes under the name of Annie Miller and is described as being a woman of 21, slight and five feet two inches tall. She has blue eyes and light brown hair and wore a brown dress with light blue trimmings and a picture hat with two big ostrich feathers in the crown.

Misuse of Commutation Tickets.

The practice of loaning and hiring Central Railroad commutation and fifty-trip tickets, when discovered last summer, resulted in the issuance by the Court of Chancery, of an injunction restraining this practice. That injunction applies not only to the defendants in the suit instituted by the railroad company, but to all persons in the State of New Jersey engaging in such practice. The Central Railroad has given notice that all persons violating this injunction will be proceeded against according to law.

Look at Your Tickets.

Persons having reserved seats for Trelawny of the Wells are advised to look at their tickets and see that they have the right date. The dates, either Friday, May 20, or Saturday, May 21, are printed in red ink on the face of the ticket. Friday's ticket's will not be good Saturday and Saturday's tickets will not be good Friday. The management has been requested to give a matinee on Saturday afternoon at popular prices, but so far the question has not been decided.

Planning a Football Team.

The young men of the First M. E. church Sunday school, under the leadership of Harry Little, are planning to organize a football team to represent the school next fall. As soon as the eleven is formed a schedule with other teams will be arranged. Mr. Little was formerly a member of the Holy Cross team and understands the game thoroughly.

Samuel Ayers, of New York, a former resident of Plainfield, spent Saturday in town looking after his property interests. He is a son of the late William C. Ayers, and is principal of one of New York's grammar schools and is also president of the Teachers' Mutual Benefit Association of New York.

SIR WILLIAM WILL CARRY JOHN GILBERT'S SWORD

As Sir William Gower, Knight, the vice chancellor of the realm, in Trelawny of the Wells, Charles H. Lorman will carry a big sword and "thereby hangs a tale." The sword in question is the prized possession of Colonel William R. Cock, who takes the part of Charles, a butler, in the Pigero play to be given on Friday and Saturday night at the Plainfield theatre for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital.

The weapon, which is so big that Manager White entertains the fear that even Mr. Lorman cannot handle it properly, was used by that famous tragedian, John Gilbert, as Falstaff in King Henry the Fourth. It is now a part of Mr. Cock's collection which contains stage properties used by Edwin Booth, Lester Wallack, Edwin Barrett, Mary Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Kendall, the elder John Drew and John Templeton.

Y.M.C.A. GIVES DINNER IN MR. KORFF'S HONOR

Director Martin A. Korff, of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, was the guest at a dinner given in his honor by the association at its hall last night. Around the festive board were also the other members of the orchestra. The occasion also marked the twenty-fifth year of Mr. Korff as an orchestral director and during the evening the guests of honor heard hearty wishes that he be accorded the opportunity of celebrating a jubilee. In the past season the orchestra gave seven concerts which were attended by more than 2,500 people.

After the dinner had been served remarks were made by Robert W. Barnes, Dr. J. F. Berg and Mr. Korff. Dr. Berg refrained from dwelling on musical lines in his address. Instead he gave an interesting description of a recent visit to the old Fredericksburg battle field. Dr. Berg is a veteran of the Civil War and his talk bristled with interesting reminiscences of his association with Lincoln and McClellan in the army.

Dr. Berg declared that McClellan was idolized by the soldiers in the Army of the Potomac. The sound of the general's name on the battle field was always an inspiration to the troops, he added. All of the Union soldiers, Dr. Berg declared, took it hard when "Little Mac" was deposed, and the speaker added that he was confident that history will vindicate the course pursued by McClellan.

The dinner was served by members of the Woman's Auxiliary: Mrs. Nelson Y. Hull, Mrs. C. E. Steiner, Miss Swain, Miss Sharp, Miss William, Mrs. George B. Wean and Mrs. L. C. Parker.

THE WEATHER.

Fair tonight and Thursday; moderate to brisk west winds.

Joseph Wagner, pastor of St. Mary's Roman Catholic chapel. The ceremony was performed at Mr. McKelvey's home and the couple was unattended. An early hour was chosen for the marriage as the couple desired to take the 9:15 o'clock train. After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Martin will reside on West Fourth street. Mr. Martin is employed here as a machinist.

Chief T. O. Doane reports that the fire alarm whistle has been changed from the electric light station to the Spicer Universal Joint Works on Madison avenue, and that immediately after the 5 o'clock whistle this afternoon, Box 41 will be pulled as a test to ascertain whether the apparatus is in working order.

Mrs. Lewis' Distinguished Visitor.

SEEKING NO OFFICE, SAYS THE GOVERNOR

In a talk with newspaper men yesterday Governor Fort declared he is not a candidate for any office, but that if he ever does accept another office it will be a judicial one. He would say nothing further as to his candidacy for United States Senator or United States Circuit Judge.

The Governor spoke of criticisms aimed at him and also at the President of the United States, and said the people expect too much of the Governor in the matter of obtaining legislation. They should put this matter up to the lawmakers direct, he said.

Governor Fort declared he believed the President was doing everything in his power to give the country a "constitutional administration," and said the Executive was the target of much unjust criticism.

GOVERNOR WON'T REPLY TO MAJ. LENTZ'S ATTACK

Governor Fort yesterday refused to discuss the violent speech made by Major Carl Lentz at a gathering of Germans in Newark, dismissing it with the curt remark:

"You know I would not take any notice of criticism from that source. There is no truth whatever in the allegations of Major Lentz, but I will not engage in any controversy concerning them."

Major Lentz's speech was the most bitter attack he has yet made on the Governor since the latter refused to reappoint him to the State Tax Board.

"All that I said in my speech," said the major yesterday, "is absolutely true, and I, of course, am willing now and at any time to stand by it. Moreover, if the Governor disputes my statements, I stand ready now or any other time to meet him in the forum—any public meeting or in a court of justice, where I will produce proof of other private and public delinquencies that the Governor has been guilty of."

WHEN WE GO THROUGH COMET'S TAIL TONIGHT

Beginning of contact, 10:50 tonight.

Duration of contact, about two hours.

Diameter of comet's tail, 2,000,000 miles.

Diameter of comet's head, about 200,000 miles.

Bulk of head compared with earth, 15,000 times.

Distance of head from earth at time of transit across the sun, 11 p. m. May 18, 13,000,000 miles.

Hazy light in northern heavens tonight only appreciation here of the transit.

Comet visible in western skies after sunset May 20 and until June 25.

For six hours, beginning at 10:50 o'clock tonight, New York time, according to the best calculations, this earth will pass through the tail of Halley's comet. But whether there will be much or any ocular demonstration of the fact to the ordinary man not well versed in astronomy is very much in doubt.

Accepting the estimate of Director Campbell of the Lick Observatory that the diameter of the comet's tail will be 1,000,000 along the line of the earth's transit, it may be calculated that the earth in the passage will encounter 48,000,000,000 cubic miles of the tail.

Prof. Campbell thinks the tail contains not more than a single solid particle or gaseous molecule to the cubic yard. It is a simple calculation to determine that on this memorable journey we shall encounter 265 sextillions of these particles or molecules.

Bon Fire Sets House on Fire.

Sparks from a bonfire set fire to the roof of an unoccupied house on the Lindsay farm on Mountain avenue yesterday afternoon. The borough fire department was notified by telephone and made prompt response. In the meantime a bucket brigade was formed which held the flames in check until the arrival of the apparatus. On the arrival of the department several chemical streams were used and the blaze extinguished. The loss is estimated at $50.

HIGHER RAILROAD FARE

Commutation Rate Between Here and N. Y. 'Tis Said Will Be $7.85.

ALL ROADS TO MAKE ADVANCE.

Pennsylvania, Lackawanna and Erie With Jersey Central to Make Announcement.

An understanding is current among railroad interests that a general raise of commutation rates among the railroads having large suburban traffic from New Jersey into New York is imminent. There was a meeting of representatives of the roads interested in this short haul traffic in the Trunk Line Association offices in New York last Friday.

It is reported that the Jersey Central will announce shortly a slight increase in its commutation rates. According to the story current here, the monthly rate of $7.40 between Plainfield and New York will be raised to $7.85. As there are at least 2,000 local commuters here this would mean an increased revenue to the company of about $8,000 a year.

General Passenger Agent W. C. Hope said this afternoon that no decision had been reached by the Jersey Central officials. He admitted that the matter of increasing the rates is being considered and announced that within a few days a definite statement would be issued. It is expected that the proposed increase will go into effect on June 1.

In the case of the Erie the advance in commutation rates will range from 85 cents to $1.25. Montclair, for example, will have a rate of $6.35, instead of $5.50 as at present. Paterson's rate will be raised $1.00.

The Lackawanna, the Pennsylvania and the Central of New Jersey are also preparing new schedules, which will be ready soon after the Erie's rates are announced. Advances in the case will be, in effect, approximately those decided on by the Erie. Some of the specific rates which will be charged when the new schedule is adopted the as follows: On the Pennsylvania the increase in rate from New Brunewick to New York will be $1, and $1 extra will be charged by the Lackawanna for its monthly ticket from Summit to New York.

The Trunk Line Association is authority for the statement that the increase will not apply to the Erie alone, but that the Lackawanna, the Pennsylvania and the Central Railroad will all fall in line; that as a matter of fact they had recognized the conditions and arranged a new scale which was not yet officially adopted, but which was sure to go into effect. All of the roads bear expense of operating and maintaining a commuters' service, and all of them say they are finding it unprofitable in a greater or less degree. They profess that they would be satisfied, however, if a part of their business could carry itself.

Erie officials say that the increased taxation in New Jersey is responsible for the raise in rates.

BID FAREWELL TO MRS. JOHN JOHNSON

The Sunday-school class at Hope chapel taught by G. Stuart Simons, held a social at the chapel last night for the purpose of wishing bon-voyage to Mrs. John Johnson, who leaves next week for Christiana, Norway. The affair was largely attended by members of the class and their husbands. This will be Mrs. Johnson's first visit home in fifteen years. She will be away until August. Mrs. Johnson has been a faithful and regular attendant at the chapel. During the evening she was presented with a bouquet of carnations by Mr. Simons.

The class also had as its guests G. Herbert Condict, superintendent of the Sunday-school; Rev. and Mrs. L. R. Howard, Frank Rimmer, the Sunday-school treasurer; James Peterson, president of the Men's Club, and the members of the Men's Club, who, holding a meeting in another part of the chapel, were invited to remain at the conclusion of the session.

Games, piano selections, songs and several short stories combined to make a pleasing program, after which refreshments were served. The committee in charge comprised Mrs. Donald McInnes, chairman; Mrs. W. S. Terry, Mrs. F. A. Weber, Mrs. Aaron Snyder, Mrs. George Leigh and Mrs. Gertrude Rittenhouse.

JULIUS DE NONTO GETS A BLACKHAND LETTER

Julius DeNonto, a Somerset street fruit dealer, is in a high state of fear over the receipt of what he alleges is a Black Hand document. A few days ago DeNonto received a letter with a local postmark written in Italian, demanding $500, with a warning that death would follow if the money was not forthcoming. The missive was signed "Manda Nera."

DeNonto is recognized as one of the well-to-do Italians of this vicinity. He has been a resident of the borough for several years, being engaged in the fruit business. DeNonto recently decided to branch out in the barber business, and is having the premises on Somerset street, recently occupied by Frank Hand, the blacksmith, fitted up as a shop. DeNonto notified the police of the letter this morning.

BELIEVE VAN HORNE TO BE THIEVES' VICTIM

In a lonely spot near the links of the Westfield Golf Club, Louis Van Horne, of 23 Johnson avenue, Cranford, was picked up unconscious by the crew of a Main Line trolley car late yesterday afternoon and taken to Westfield. Van Horne is a collector for the Prudential Insurance Company and had left his home early in the morning. When found he had no money whatever in his pockets. His watch was also missing.

Van Horne was taken to the office of Dr. R. R. Sinclair, Westfield. The doctor said the man was suffering from concussion of the brain. There is a deep cut on his face. Mrs. Van Horne was notified. Half an hour later she took her husband home in a carriage.

Last night Van Horne regained consciousness, but was too weak to tell how he met with the accident. The police are in doubt as to whether the man was held up or if he fell from a trolley car. The absence of money in Van Horne's pockets leads the family to believe he was robbed. He will recover.

GEORGE GAYLE DEAD AT AGE OF 75 YEARS

George Gayle, aged seventy-five years, father of H. E. Gayle, the hardware merchant, and a well-known resident of Somerset county, died at 10:20 o'clock last night at the home of his son, 18 Vine street, North Plainfield. Three years ago he was stricken with paralysis and while he was able to move about more or less he gradually failed, and his death was due to a complication of diseases.

Mr. Gayle was born in New York city, near St. John's Park, and at the age of twenty-one years removed to Somerset county, where for about twenty-five years he taught in a district school, traveling from one place to another. He was successful in this. About thirty years ago he removed to North Plainfield and associated himself with his son, H. E. Gayle in the carpenter and place. When the latter gave up his trade and engaged in the hardware business, his father went with him and continued in the business until three years ago when he was stricken by paralysis.

Mr. Gayle was a member of Trinity Reformed church for twenty-seven years and for twenty-four years was the efficient church treasurer. He was a man of strong Christian character and a regular attendant at church services. He was also a great student and had fondness for reading the daily papers, always keeping posted on the happenings of the day.

He is survived by two sons, H. E. Gayle, of this city, and Edward W. Gayle, an architect of New York, and one daughter, Mrs. Charles M. Bennett, of Savannah, Ga. Also a half-sister, Mrs. William J. Allen, of Philadelphia.

The funeral service will be held from the home of the son, H. E. Gayle, 18 Vine street, Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and Rev. J. Y. Brook, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will officiate. The burial will be at Hillside cemetery.

WEIRD WINE WRECKAGE

Joy Ride Ends in Disaster on East Front This Morning Early.

PARTY OF SEVEN ARRESTED.

Trip From the Mountains to This City Punctuated by Incidents Which Have Ending in Police Court.

Joy riding under the conduct of Girard Harris, a youth of seventeen, in which a party of seven young men and women were implicated, came to a sudden termination this morning at about 2 o'clock, when Patrolmen Meyer and Dunlap hastened to the scene of a smashup near the corner of Richmond and East Front streets. Here they found a screaming, shouting crowd of excited tourists, with their machine bucked up against a tree with the axle twisted out of shape and a more or less dazed chauffeur making frantic efforts to back the machine out and proceed.

In the city court this morning Judge William Runyon held the driver of the automobile in $500 bonds for the action of the grand jury, and fined the others five dollars each for disorderly conduct. The fines were paid by a gallant lover of one of the two women in the car. It was necessary for the officers to call the patrol wagon to bring the hilarious bunch to headquarters where they remained for the rest of the morning.

Patrolman Dunlap's statement upon which the real story of the occurrence hinged was as follows: "I was standing," he said, "at the corner of Richmond and Third streets at about 1:55 when I heard a loud crash and shouts and screams loud enough to wake up the entire neighborhood. I ran to the point whence the noise came and found an automobile containing seven people trying to scream their hardest. Many windows in the neighborhood were raised and heads stuck out to discover if possible what the row was all about. I called Patrolman Meyer and he assisted in getting the story from the occupants of the car, all of whom were under the influence of liquor."

Patrolman Meyer corroborated the statement of his brother officer and the judge imposed the sentences as noted above.

William Stoneham, who was a witness this morning, stated that noticing the condition of Harris he offered to bring the party back to town to avoid accidents. His offer was indignantly refused with the result that the car ran into a tree.

Two New York girls were the women in the case and they as well as the men appeared to be under the influence of the wine imbibed at a wedding reception in the mountain.

It was said this morning that besides the accident to the automobile a surrey belonging to the Plainfield Cab Co. was run into and smashed. Altogether it was a lively affair from beginning to end and the wonder is that no bones were broken.

The arrival of the entire party at police headquarters created a stir among the men on night duty. Miss Gladys Lane, a blonde, became suddenly inflicted with fits, whether of anger or chagrin, the officers do not know, and it took all of the smelling salts to be obtained at that hour in the morning to revive her. What complicated matters more was the arrival on the scene of a lover of the blonde young woman, who insisted upon caring for her. A slap in the face, which this morning was characterized as a joke, settled his hash for the time being and the fits were kept going.

Sympathy would have been wasted on the bunch so they were all locked up. They all admitted, excepting Harris, to have been drinking but maintained that none of them were intoxicated. Judge Runyon believed the officers.

The party consisted of Harris, Edward Carthell, Marcus Schmeyer, Louis Matthews, Alice Searles and Gladys Lane, besides George Warren.

Patrolman Dunlap showed his worth by refusing to be bribed when a bundle of the 'long green' was offered him to allow the party to go from the scene of the accident. The attempt to lay the blame for the antics of the automobile on the tarvia recently laid by the street commissioner hardly affected Judge Runyon.

Judge William Newcorn signed Harris' bail bond and the young man was released.

Elizabeth M. McGarrigle.

Mrs. Elizabeth M. McGarrigle died yesterday at her home in Lincoln. She was forty-one years of age. The funeral service will be conducted at St. John's church, at Dunellen, Friday morning at 9 o'clock.

PARK AVE. S.S. TEACHERS DINED BY GEO. R. HALL

George E. Hall, superintendent of the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday school, entertained his officers and teachers at supper Thursday in the Sunday school room and the evening was delightfully spent by every one present.

The room looked especially pretty and the tables presented a very attractive appearance, each carrying a large bouquet of flowers, a favor and a prettily worded card at each plate.

The presentation of gifts to several of the officers caused considerable amusement with appropriate remarks accompanying each gift. Mr. Hall presented to Charles VanWinkle the blackboard artist, a toy camera; to the treasurer, Joseph Hawkins, a tiny bank; to the assistant superintendent, a miniature desk. The pastor received a tiny loving cup, inside of which was hidden a $10 gold piece for his wife. Because of his love for music Mr. Maguire was also presented with a fine bronze statue of a boy whistler.

Miss Maguire received a prettily arranged set of blotters.

Following all this fun, Mr. Hall gave an earnest talk, bearing upon the work of the school; he referred to the splendid opportunities now within their reach; and suggested plans for an enlarged work in every department of the school.

The pastor, Rev. G. R. Maguire, followed with an inspiring talk upon the same subject, assuring the superintendent and the school of his hearty co-operation and loyal support in every possible way.

Nelson Runyon was called upon for remarks and he responded with several helpful thoughts for the future work of the school.

Miss Cora Brodway, a former teacher in the school, recently removed from Plainfield, expressed her pleasure at being present, with the opportunity of meeting her friends in the school.

Every speaker called attention to the great encouragement concerning the future of this fine Avenue Baptist school and all spoke most beautifully of the untiring efforts and splendid work of their superintendent, Mr. Hall, who has always been such an inspiration to his officers and teachers and to the entire school.

Mr. Hall entertained his guests with several fine selections from the Victor machine, which brought the happy evenings entertainment to a close.

Mr. Hall was assisted in the arrangements by Mrs. G. E. Hall and Mrs. Charles Van Winkle. Following were the waitresses:

Miss Marion Hall, Miss Essie Thompson, Miss Viola Hellyer, Miss Emily Runyon, Miss Mary Leveridge, Miss Lillian Cuming.

MAY FLOWER SOCIAL AT VINCENT CHAPEL

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church, a May flower social, combined with a reception to Rev. Dr. and Mrs. C. M. Anderson, was held in Vincent chapel Thursday. The affair was largely attended and a great social success. Those attending were expected to bring flowers or a potted plant and later in the evening these were sold, it being stipulated that not more than ten cents should be charged for a plant. In this way a considerable sum was realized.

The chapel was attractively decorated for the occasion and in the centre of the large room was a May pole, and a number of children being engaged in winding it during the evening's entertainment.

The program opened with a piano selection by Miss Jubilee Rowley, followed with a song by the children, in which the girls, Ruth Linn, Helen Birney, Charlotte Carpenter, Gladys Sherwood, Constance Swackhamer and Hazel Snowden sang a May song, while Elizabeth Hicks was crowned queen of the May. Then followed the winding of the May pole, a chorus comprised of the following singing an appropriate song: Russell Linn, Warren Moyer, Arthur McVoy, Howard Fisher, Roswell Ewart, Charlotte Carpenter, Thelma Dawson, Ella Vail, Jessie Randolph, Margaret Dunavan, Elsworth Runyon and Jack Marchant. The program was concluded with a piano duet by the Misses May and Edith Randolph.

Mrs. M. H. Ewart and Miss Edna French had charge of the entertainment, and Mrs. John Lewis was chairman of the social committee and was assisted by a number of women in the society. During the reception which followed ice cream and cake were served.

EASIER TO HIT WHEN MEN ARE ON BASES

Ty Cobb is proud of his ability to hit the ball safely with men on bases and points with pride to the fact that he has driven in more runs than any member of the Detroit team since he joined the club. In speaking of this the other day the famous batsman said:

"I find it easier to hit the ball with the bases occupied. The pitcher is worried, the infielders are guessing, and when you do hit the ball the flying base runners rattle and disconcert the men who are trying to handle it.

"With men on base I generally lay for the first ball the pitcher hands over. It's dollars to dimes that if he can lay that first one straight over the pan he'll do it, and I soak quite a few of them. The majority of batsmen will pass up the first ball, no matter if it cuts the plate in half, but you'll never get this boy overlooking one of the kind. Nine times of ten I go to the plate prepared to tickle the first ball, if the pitcher lays it over.

"I never take a good, healthy swing at the ball any more. I like to do it, but you can't get anything in the big leagues swinging the willow. The spitball pitchers would make a dunce of you in short order, to say nothing of the boxmen who have mastered a good change of pace. They'll shoot one over with looks that would almost feed you a slow one that comes floating up as big as a balloon. But you are set for the fast one and break your back reaching for the slow ball.

"In the old days the great hitters were Dave Orr, Pete Browning, Jake Stenzel, Delehanty and Pop Anson—big fellows, who swung on to a ball with the force of a triphammer. Bring 'em in one of the big rings today and the artists of modern baseball would make 'em look like jokes.

"You can't grab a wagon tongue down at the handle, reach back and swing halfway around for a curve pitcher. They'd make you look foolish and you wouldn't have enough batting average at the end of a month to get your name in the perspective.

"The great hitters of our time grab their batting sticks a foot or more from the handle and, instead of swinging, aim to meet the ball dush. It's just like the short-arm punch in the prize ring. The long swingers with their terrible hay-makers seldom get the money nowadays. It's the Jeffries and Johnsons with their murderous short-arm punches to the body that invariably bring home the candy. Nothing suits me better than to take a good crack at the leather, but I can't afford to get out of my stride, so I stick to the sure system of just meeting the ball with a half-way grip on my warclub."

Where the Power Comes From.

The water wagon's on its course
Yet is not drawn by any horse,
But something far more tony;
Somewhat gin-rickety it moves,
Amid big schooners full of booze
Drawn by a brandy pony.

MR. SOAG TO ENTERTAIN IN HORSE SHOW WEEK

Paul A. Soag, of New York, who will be one of the principal exhibitors at the Plainfield Horse Show, has leased Mrs. J. S. Schoonmaker's residence on Central avenue for ten days for the steeplechase and horse show week, and during that time he will move out from the Holland House, New York, by the way of Staten Island.

Mr. Sorg will change horses at Perth Amboy, reserving eight horses at Perth Amboy and as many in Plainfield for the purpose. In this way Mr. Sorg and his friends will make the trip daily between Plainfield and New York, as he did between the metropolis and Atlantic City. He will probably have twenty entries in the horse show.

The entries for the forthcoming exhibition are coming in rapidly and the show promises to be bigger and better than ever, approaching an international affair with several foreign entries.

JUDGE I. P. RUNYON WINS KNOTTY CHANCERY CASE

A decision rendered a few days ago in the Chancery Court at Trenton has attracted considerable attention among real estate operators. It was in a partition suit of Thomas E. Gibson, of Trenton, against Jane G. Boyd, formerly of this city, and Judge Isaac P. Runyon, of this city, was attorney for Mrs. Boyd. Involved in the suit was property worth $10,000, and Vice-Chancellor Walker denied Gibson's application requiring the payment of a $200 assessment for brick pavement by the Boyd estate. Gibson was represented in the case by John H. Kates and John H. Backes, of Trenton.

On March 23 the property was sold at a partition sale on which there was an unpaid paving assessment. The property was advertised to be sold free and clear and it was so stated at the sale by Master in Chancery Howard Stockton. The purchaser at the sale, Gibson, inquired if the assessment in question was not a lien. The Master informed Gibson that he did not know, but stated that the property was sold free and clear.

Gibson refused a contract in due time but when it came time to take the deed he wanted to deduct the amount of the lien of the assessment. The Master refused and offered to return him his payment on account of the purchase money. Gibson, however, paid under protest and filed a petition to have the decree of distribution opened and the amount of the lien of assessment refunded to him.

In the suit, the respondents contended that the purchaser knew of the lien of the assessment, and that Master in Chancery Stockton, while presumed to have known it, did not in fact, and that the purchaser did not inform him that it was a lien, but simply asked the question. The point was also raised that Gibson allowed eleven days to elapse after taking the deed before obtaining his order from the Chancellor. The Vice-Chancellor denied his motion and dismissed the order to show cause which had been granted on the ground that the purchaser knew of the assessment and again he did not make timely application.

They were assisted by "Jack Johnson" and "Sam Langford," two negro boys who did some clever dancing, singing and boxing. The quartet was fine and their selections called forth repeated encores.

MRS. MARTHA E. FORCE AGED 73 YEARS DEAD

Mrs. Martha E. Force, aged seventy-three years, widow of Henry W. Force, a member of one of the oldest families in the city, died Saturday at her home, 147 West Front street, following an illness of several weeks. She was born at Short Hills. Her maiden name was Martha A. Holbier. She was married to Mr. Force fifty-one years ago and he died about ten years ago.

Mrs. Force was a woman of rare womanly qualities and was beloved by a wide circle of friends. For many years she resided in New street. Surviving are eight children: Thomas H. Force, Ulysses G. Force, William C. Force, Mrs. A. A. Prudhon, Daniel V. Force, and Miss Lillie Force, of this city; Mrs. W. H. Glidersleeve, of Brooklyn, and Mrs. W. R. Cottrell, of Avon. The funeral services were held from the late home, Monday evening and the burial was at the convenience of the family in Evergreen cemetery.

A Boot Duster.

Devotees of cleanliness, as absolute as can possibly be cultivated, tell us that many deleterious germs may be introduced into our house upon our boots and shoes and recommended the presence that if a decorative addition to the hall, where it should be hung in readiness to remove the dust of those who enter the house. Another argument in its favor is that after walking or motoring men can have their boots dusted and made tidy-looking at the threshold.

SPECIAL ELECTION DATE

Borough to Vote on Bonds for Sewage Plant on Tuesday, June 14.

THE COST LIMIT IS $300,000.

North Plainfield Council Increases Pay of Policeman—Shade Tree Commissioners Appointed.

The Borough Council in a session that lasted about twenty minutes Thursday transacted considerable business which included the fixing of a date for the special sewer election. A resolution presented by Councilman Rogers named Tuesday, June 14, as the time when the voters will be given an opportunity to endorse or reject the proposition to construct a sewerage system at a cost not to exceed $200,000. Borough Clerk Frederick A. Martin was instructed to go ahead and make arrangements for the election. William J. Buttfield, chairman of the Sewer Commission, was at the meeting, but the resolution was passed without any discussion. It is understood, however, that numerous minor details connected with the matter were threshed out at an executive session of the Council which followed the business session.

Chairman Waldron, of the street committee, intimated that his department is getting in line for a number of minor improvements to sidewalk and street conditions. The Council unanimously voted to open Watchung avenue from Mountain avenue to Johnson's drive. This matter has been under consideration for several months and the expense involved in carrying out the improvement is estimated at about $200.

On the recommendation of Mr. Waldron, the street was also authorized to macadamize Regent street between Somerset street and Watchung avenue, and also Somerset place. Property owners on both of these thoroughfares will bear a share of the expense involved in the work. Mr. Waldron also reported that the petition from Harison avenue residents asking that the southwesterly portion of that thoroughfare be sidewalked will be acted on favorably.

Another matter of importance transacted was increasing the pay of police marshals five dollars a month. This will make the salary of the chief marshal at $80 and regular marshals $65 per month. These amounts include $60 appropriations every year for the purchase of uniforms.

Mayor N. B. Smalley appointed Charles Faber and Hughes Fawcett as members of the Shade Tree Commission and his action was unanimously confirmed.

Adolph Bohren was given a permit to erect a tea-room, and two story, combination and dwelling, on the plot situated on the corner of Stone street and Greenbrook road.

Goddard-Benjamin.

The marriage of Miss Gladys Terrance Benjamin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Park Benjamin, to Frederick Worth Goddard will take place on Saturday, June 4, at the home of the bride's parents, No. 276 West Seventh street, Plainfield, New York. Only immediate relatives have been invited to the ceremony, but it will be followed by a large reception. Miss Benjamin will be attended by her sister, Miss Dorothy Benjamin, and her flower girl will be little Miss Mary Elizabeth Goddard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Newton Goddard, and Miss Mary McCall, granddaughter of the late John A. McCall. Mr. Goddard will have Stuart Johnstone for his best man. Mr. Goddard is a son of George H. Goddard, of East Ninth street, and has many friends in this city.

Building Improvement.

Stephen O. Staaij, of West Second street, is planning extensive improvements to his residential property adjoining Trinity Reformed church. The front of the dwelling will be removed and a three-story structure placed there. It will contain two stores on the ground floor and apartments on the second, similar to the arrangement of the Laing building on the opposite side of the street. The addition will be brought out to the building line, conforming to Fred Ivamy's building, which also adjoins the property.

Plainfield's active Anti-Tuberculosis League made a splendid report through Miss Mabelle Phillips at the State convention held in the library at Newark yesterday, where representatives from all parts of the State gathered to hear reports of the fight against the dread disease as it is being waged in different localities. Without a single exception the results, wherever the war is waged, have been eminently satisfactory and in Plainfield especially is this so. The local league is encouraged by the success of its efforts and they have adopted the slogan "No Uncared for Tuberculosis in 1915."

Since the opening of the local pavilion in November, 1909, with a pavilion capable of caring for eight patients interest has been widespread throughout the city in the work. The cost of preliminary work in providing for and erecting the pavilion some $2,500, and after the nurses, cooks and other help was paid it was found that the cost of maintaining the pavilion was about $300 per month. In April, 1909, there was a membership of 67 and today there are 830 active members, made up of all classes. Among the contributions received were two of $20 each from two of the colored peoples' chapels. The total receipts for the year were $5,180.15, a part of which was unsolicited, the Easter Mart of Grace church being responsible for $500.

One visiting nurse, Miss Mary Lahey, has been engaged actively and has visted forty-four patients, five incipient, 19 moderately advanced and 35 in a stage requiring sanitorium treatment, seven of which were received and cared for at the pavilion and all showing remarkable improvement. Delegates were sent to the National Convention at Washington, the State Convention at Trenton and to the Elizabeth Convention in March, all of whom brought home valuable information. The local league memorialized the Plainfield Common Council in the interests of the proposed county sanitoria and also sent delegates to the township meeting at Cranford. In other words nothing has been left undone by the members and the executive committee and officers of the Plainfield Anti-Tuberculosis League to wage a fight against the great white plague bringing such results as were not dreamed possible four years ago when the fight began in earnest.

The present officers of the league are: Acting president, William H. Murray, who was first vice-president, the president, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, having resigned; second vice-president, William Dutcher; treasurer, James P. Murray; secretary, Dr. F. E. DuBois.

At the State convention at Newark yesterday, Dr. Dickinson, of Jersey City, presided and made the opening address giving details of the progress made during the past four years. The nominating committee reported the same list of officers for the coming year and they were all elected. Dr. W. H. Murray and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges were elected to the executive board, representing Plainfield. The treasurer's report showed that $8,289. had been received during the past year and that $7,561 had been expended. $5,000. was received from the sale of Red Cross stamps, $3,000. of which was sent to the National Anti-Tuberculosis Society.

Secretary William Smallwood in his report referred to the two principal gains made during the year. He referred to increased sanatoria and the legislation accomplished. In the latter particular mention was made of the passage of the bill appropriating $10,000. for the State Board of Health. The money for this has not been obtained, but it is hoped for during the coming year. The Smalley bill also was mentioned with applause.

In 1907, there was but one sanitorium in the State, that at Glen Gardner; now there are pavilions and other sanitoria caring for patients in several places. In Hudson County they have beds for 130, and in Elizabeth 8 and Plainfield 8. The total number of beds provided throughout the State is 846. Newark is the best provided for in this respect. During the year 138,000 people have visited the tuberculosis exhibits and have listened to 125 lectures on the subject. 24 visiting nurses have been engaged in active work with the result that in Newark there has been a decrease in the number of deaths from tuberculosis of 180 and in Jersey City a decrease of 125. All departments of the work show increased interest and improvement all along the line.

While it is a fact that the progress made by the patients of the pavilion in this city is considerable, it is also a fact that the society which conducts it as well as hous to house work requires a greater interest to be shown by the public, at large in the magnificent work which is being carried on. If instead of 830 subscribers to the support of the work 2,000 could be found who would voluntarily assume some small responsibility the benefit to be derived could scarcely be estimated.

Under the present conditions only a limited amount of work can be accomplished and the prevalence of the disease in certain parts of the city demands more drastic and effective methods. This can only be accomplished through united effort and persistent work. The society is encouraged to keep on because their efforts have been rewarded with success in the small number treated and while sanitation is being advanced and cleanliness made a part of the work in homes there are so many details to effective protection and prevention against the great white plague that numbers of new members with their small or large contributions could be made the stepping stone to the greatest endeavor in the history of the fight.

Surprised F. C. Barner.

A surprise party was given to F. C. Burner, of Jackson avenue, Wednesday evening, by a number of friends, it being the anniversary of his birthday. Progressive euchre was played and honors were awarded to Mr. and Mrs. Krewson, Mr. Hu and Mr. Saums. At midnight refreshments were served. During the evening there was a program of vocal and instrumental music.

MEN'S ASSOCIATION HEARS ABOUT OREGON AND APPLES.

The lecture given to the Men's Association of the Church of the Heavenly Rest Thursday by J. R. Lynch, of New York, was such a brilliant array of facts concerning the apple industry in the State of Oregon, that it would not surprise the rector, Rev. Cortlandt H. Mallery, if the whole club should pull stakes and light out for the land of apples. The lecture was illustrated by the most alluring stereopticon slides and were well calculated to make the onlookers' mouths water. Mr. Lynch described the industry, which he characterized as one of the greatest in the Northwest, with great fidelity to nature and brought forth frequent applause for the beauty of the scenes.

About sixty members of the club were present and after the lecture they served some light refreshments and discussed plans for the summer festival which will be held on Saturday, June 25, at which time Professor Henderson will be the entertainer in the parish hall and there will be a lawn fete. There will be a baseball game in the afternoon.

Your Evening Scarf.

Make for your evening scarf two little rings of garter elastic to slip the ends through and to form it into a hood shape. They will be a more satisfactory arrangement than the knots at the side of the head. Each tiny garter, so measured that it will tightly surround the scarf and stay in place, is covered with shirred chiffon to match the scarf, and generous headings of the doubled elastic is used, not because it shows, but for the reason that it will longer retain its elasticity.

LARGE FUNERAL FOR ALPHEUS L. MUNDY.

The funeral service of the late Alpheus Mundy, was conducted at his late residence, 92 Carroll place, in New Brunswick, Thursday afternoon. The service was largely attended, several friends and relatives of the deceased from the city and borough being present.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. P. Theodore Peckman, pastor of the First Reformed church of New Brunswick, and a eulogy was delivered by the Rev. John Krantz, of Paterson, a personal friend of Mr. Mundy. The home of the dead man was thronged and the streets were lined with many people who waited for an opportunity to take a last look at one whom all esteemed.

Interment was made at the family plot at Bound Brook. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, among the tributes being a bouquet of roses, sent by the Middlesex County Board of Freeholders of which body of men the deceased was a former member.

The Middlesex County Board, at a meeting yesterday afternoon, adopted resolutions of respect for Mr. Mundy as a previous member of the board.

SAVINGS BANK OFFICERS RE-ELECTED FOR YEAR

At the annual meeting of the Plainfield Savings Bank these officers were re-elected: President, William F. Arnold; vice-president, A. C. Stebbins; secretary, J. C. Pope; assistant secretary and treasurer, H. A. Pope.

The total assets as shown in the report amount to $1,051,028.98, which represents an increase of deposits for the year of $84,722.44, invested in first class mortgages and bonds. The managers are all capable men and the aim of the bank is to do business on safe lines.

Girls and Their Home Manners.

Who has not met the seemingly charming girl who is often described as being "quite different at home." She is quite different in the bosom of her family, because she is too cowardly to display her petishness and bad temper anywhere else. Girls who are pleasant to strangers and irritable and exacting at home are a type to be avoided and distrusted. Home manners should be the test of character, and, although it is easy to dissimulate, exposure will inevetably come in the long run to the girl who keeps her sharp tongue for her own people and silken speech for outsiders.

North Plainfield Twp. Improvement Society Has Big Men as Members.

W. DE LA R. ANDERSON HEAD.

Rev. Dr. Eaton, Louis K. Hyde and Dr. Moldenke Among Members —Women Are Enrolled —President's Speech.

With a membership of one hundred, The Improvement Society of North Plainfield township was formally organized at Watchung Thursday. A constitution and by-laws were unanimously adopted and officers were elected. One of the features of the new organization is that women are eligible for membership.

It was the unanimous understanding among the promoters and members of the new society that the organization will be non-partisan in politics and the chief aims and objects of the society will be to promote civil pride, the progress and welfare of the township, and the best interests of its citizens by social gatherings for the interchange of ideas and suggestions for improvements. The officers elect follow:

President, W. de la R. Anderson; first vice-president, George T. Hughes; second vice-president, Mrs. F. Del. Hyde; recording secretary, Edward F. Pickert; corresponding secretary, Francis E. Bodia; financial secretary, M. H. Cleaves; treasurer, John Mobus; board of managers, Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton; Dr. Richard Moldenke; W. H. Titus, Louis K. Hyde, H. Texier, Mrs. George Schmidt, Charles E. Neier and C. C. Wheeler.

In accepting the presidency, Mr. Anderson said:

"I want to thank you all for the honor you have conferred on me in electing me as the first president of this society and congratulate you for your election of such a representative and capable body of citizens as officers and managers of this society. I wish to assure you that I will give my best efforts to the society in advancing its purposes as set forth in the constitution. I will always be open for suggestions at any time either at my home or at my office in the Babcock building and I hope you will help me and the society by letting me or the proper committees know the good ideas that may come to your minds from time to time. The things that to my mind are the most important to start on are:

"First. That the committee wait on the proper authorities with a request for the immediate improvement of Somerset street and to see if Watchung avenue cannot be immediately pushed through to the borough line.

"Second. That a committee take up the matter of widening, grading and improving the road between Watchung and end of trolley, and to see if some way is not possible to induce the Public Service Corporation to extend trolley and gas to Watchung at the same time.

"Third. That a committee be formed to consider ways and means for town-hall and fire department.

"Fourth A committee to watch the condition of roads and try and stop dropping of loose stone on roads.

"Fifth. Form entertainment committee.

"Sixth. Form committee in nature of police force with idea of preventing unlawful acts and enforcing law and order.

"These, to my mind, are the most important subjects.

"I am confident that this society will develop into a tremendous power for good to the township if we will all put our minds and hearts into the work and each one give up a little of his time for the common good.

The suggestions for committees made by Mr. Anderson were approved and in addition it was decided to name committees on electric light, taxation, and one on legal matters, and the president was empowered to appoint three members for each committee.

The president announced that he would appoint his committees in a few days.

POINTS ON SLEEVES.

After the long sleeves of other days, it is to be hailed with joy by the possessors of pretty arms that short ones are here. They extend to the elbow, or half way between the elbow and wrist, but the stamp of this season is in the length.

There is, of course, the long sleeve for those who insist upon a certain individuality in costume; but this style is not the long unbroken line to which we have been acustomed.

There must be a suggestion of the short sleeve given by bands across the arm, or by deep cuffs or puffs. Trimming can be used in plaque or horizontal lines to cut the long arm line into the divisions that are emphasized in the spring fashions.

Ruffles of pleating and lace are used to edge the short sleeves — in fact, the fullness that is evidenced in all manner of dress is felt in the sleeve construction.

TENNYSON'S KINDLINESS, HUMOR AND SIMPLICITY.

Child-like Candor Characteristic of Great Poet.

Summing up the impressions of that first meeting I may say that three things especially struck me, Tennyson's kindliness, his humor and his simplicity. The prominence of the second characteristic, humor, was, I confess, something of a surprise to me. It was extremely marked in the whole manner, bearing and conversation.

Then as to his simplicity—childlikeness is perhaps a better name for the quality—one can but say that it was phenomenal. Inherent as is this characteristic also in genius of the highest order. I should think that in Tennyson it was present in a degree rarely if ever equaled says a writer in Putnam's Magazine.

In talking with him, the impression was that he was giving utterances to whatever passed through his mind, precisely as a child does, with the same candor—naivete almost—the same engaging freedom from self-consciousness, the same reckless indifference to the effect which he might produce upon his hearers. He did not, as we most of us do in conversation, give his interlocutor half himself, the other half being engaged in speculating as to how far our companion will understand and sympathize with our drift or in holding in remarks for fear it might fall flat, or watering down the other for fear it might offend. He was himself, unreservedly, unconditionally, in everything that he said, whether he was bandying jests with an intimate, or discoursing solemnly on the secrets of nature or the deepest mysteries of being.

The all-star revival of "Jim, the Penman" is presented for the first time in New York city under the management of William A. Brady, Inc., at the Lyric theatre. This piece originally described as "a romance of modern society in four acts," was written by Sir Charles L. Young. Palmer on Nov. 1, 1887.

Mme. Nazimova continues in her production of "Little Eyolf" by Henrik Ibsen, under the management of Messrs. Shubert at Nazimova's Thirty-ninth Street Theatre, where her Spring engagement has developed into one of the most remarkable successes of the season and will undoubtedly be prolonged well into the warm weather. Mme. Nazimova's royal welcome back to New York is not more exceptional than her marvelous impersonation of the character of "Hilda" in "Little Eyolf," which is bound to take rank as the most wonderful of her achievements up to date. The supporting company includes Brandon Tyana, Ida Conquest, Gertrude Berkeley, Robt. T. Haines and Master George Tobin. Matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

The City Theatre, the most beautiful playhouse in Greater New York has in three weeks become an extremely popular place of amusement. It will be presented with the original cast which includes Tyrone Powers, a fine actor, George Wilson, David Glassford, Wilfred Rogers, Edith Crane and Harold Dickens.

ENGAGE AN ENGINEER FOR THE WATER PROBE

Upon the recommendation of the special water commission, of which Councilman F. E. Mygatt is the chairman, James H. Fuertes, of Nassau street, New York city, was engaged by the city at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, Monday, as an engineer to conduct the investigation looking toward the acquisition of an adequate water supply. Mr. Fuertes is an engineer of almost world-wide reputation, according to Mr. Mygatt, who presented his references. He has had charge of important work for New York city, Harrisburg, Pa., Lynchburg, Va., Philadelphia, Pa., and other large cities, and was one of two engineers engaged from the United States to work with two from Canada in taking charge of important work in Canada.

Through Mr. Mygatt, Mr. Fuertes presented an offer of his services last night on the per diem basis. He said that it would require between three and four months to complete his work, and his charge would be $500 for each calendar month of ten days, and $25 for each day in excess of that. The price included all charges for what might be called outside expenses, such as obtaining data or information from outside sources. His charge for field men will be $10 a day and for draughtsmen $5 a day. Mr. Fuertes estimated the total cost of his work to be between $5,000 and $4,000.

Upon the motion of Mr. Mygatt the offer of Mr. Fuertes was accepted. It is expected that he will begin his work within a short time and push it to completion as rapidly as possible.

MANHATTAN COLLEGE SCALPS THE P. H. S.

Manhattan College Reserves visited town Monday and smothered Plainfield High's nine by a score of 13 to 7. Errors and loose fielding were mainly responsible for the defeat. Van Zandt twirled a fine game of ball, striking out ten Gothamites.

Manhattan assumed the aggressive in the opening innings by tallying three runs in the initial round and two in the second and the locals were unable to regain the lost ground. Zeraga and Runyon starred at the bat for the locals. The score:

ADOLPH KOONS FIGURES IN THRILLING RUNAWAY

Adolph Koons, of Harrison avenue, had a narrow escape from being seriously injured in a runaway Tuesday when the milkman's delivery wagon was in front of Oliverio's milk on Rock avenue when his horse became frightened at a passing automobile. Koons leaped into the wagon but he was unable to check the speed of the animal, and the horse continued on a run until Clinton avenue and West Front street was reached.

While making a turn toward South Second street, the wagon tipped over, hurling Koons and his cargo of milk into the street. Koons rolled under the vehicle and the rear wheels passed over him bodily, but luckily he escaped unhurt.

The horse speeded down Clinton avenue until West Seventh street was reached and at that point it was stopped by Jerry Krauss.

DARNING COTTON CASE.

A convenient case for two spools of darning cotton—a black and a white—is made of two similar silk-covered pasteboards. They are oval in shape and so planned as to length that they will fully cover the two balls of cotton.

They are covered with figured silk and faced with plain silk, the two qualities being overcast together along their edges.

Within these two covered oblongs there are placed the two spools. Through their openings there are passed ribbons, which are then threaded through holes punched in the cardboards.

These will hold the spools of cotton firmly in place after the ends of the ribbons are sewed securely to the figured silk and finished with rosettes on the outside of the oblongs.

He was Immune.

An elderly gentleman, traveling in a stage coach, was amused by the constant fire of words kept up between two ladies. One of them at last kindly inquired if their conversation did not make his head ache, when he answered, with a great deal of naïveté, "No, ma'am; I have been married twenty-eight years."

Another Smile.

"What did the sun look like to you when you were in the arctic regions?"

"Well," answered, the explorer thoughtfully, "it resembled an elusive gold dollar much magnified."

AS TO VOTING MACHINES

On Corporation Counsel's Advice, There Will Be no Special Election.

CITY FATHERS TO DECIDE

Mr. Marsh Gives Reasons Why Act Is Unconstitutional—Petitioners Can Mandamus the City if They Choose.

The Common Council at its adjourned meeting, Monday, decided not to take any action on the petition of voters of the first districts of the four wards relative to calling a special election to abolish the voting machines. This decision was arrived at after the reading of an opinion from Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh.

Mr. Marsh takes the position that the act is unconstitutional, although the courts have passed on certain provisions of it declaring them to be constitutional. All of the points, however, were not raised in the test case.

Accompanying Mr. Marsh's opinion was a resolution providing for a special election on June 28 in the first districts of the several wards. Mr. Holt moved that the resolution be adopted. After considerable discussion at the one minute recess, it was decided not to pass the resolution, but to let the matter go by default. If those who petitioned for a special election who are mostly Democrats, care to mandamus the city, such action will throw the matter into the courts for a decision and the Common Council will then order an election if the act is upheld, otherwise no election will be held.

Mayor Fisk when given the privilege of the floor, explained that in conversation with Mr. Marsh yesterday, the latter expressed the hope that the Common Council would not pass the resolution, as in his opinion he did not think the act to be constitutional.

In the opinion of Mr. Mygatt the ordering of a special election now might affect future elections, and inasmuch as the general election in November is an important one, he did not think that the Council should do anything to imperil it. However, he explained that mandamus proceedings are not of a serious nature as would only mean that the city would be obliged to show cause why such an election should not be held. That would mean that the courts would have to decide the question.

Mr. Clay thought the law should be obeyed, while Mr. Buxton said, "let them mandamus if they want to." Mr. Mygatt expressed great faith in the ability of Mr. Marsh and his opinions and he thought it would be wise to let Mr. Marsh have a chance to argue the constitutionality of the act, in case mandamus proceedings are instituted.

Mr. Holt's motion calling for the adoption of the resolution was lost by a six to five vote. Those voting for the resolution were Councilmen Clay, Holt, Frank Randolph, Gloak and Taylor, while Councilmen Buxton, Montgomery, Mygatt, C. C. Randolph, Wilson and Tolles voted in the negative.

Mr. Marsh's opinion follows:

"Respecting the four petitions presented May 2 instant, from voters of the First District of the four several wards of the city praying against the voting machines under Chapter 163 of the laws of 1908, I have already advised the committee on Laws and Ordinances, through its chairman, Mr. Holt, that in form, the petitions comply with the provisions of that act, and that if the several petitions are in point of fact signed by at least twenty-five per centum of the legal voters of said election districts respectively as shown by the registry list for the last preceding general election, (and I am informed that the city clerk has ascertained that such petitions are so signed), the statute makes it mandatory on the Common Council on or before May 16th instant, to order that a special election be held in said several election districts not less than thirty days nor more than sixty days from May 16th instant, to determine upon the retention or rejection of said voting machines and that the Supreme Court in the case of Mara vs. Bayonne, (17 cases), 71 Atlantic Reporter, 1131, held that the statute was not unconstitutional on any of the grounds presented to that court in that case, and ordered by mandamus that Bayonne proceed to hold the election demanded by the petitioners.

"The case was taken to the Court of Errors and Appeals on writ of error, and that Court in a per curiam opinion filed February 28, 1910, and not yet reported, affirmed the judgment of the Supreme Court. The opinion referred to, however, declared that the Court did not find it necessary to adopt in its entirety the reasoning of the court below. The Court of Errors and Appeals did not consider or pass upon any objections except those which were urged in the court below. Two objections only had been so urged, namely: (1), that the title of the act does not express its purpose and object; and (2), that the act is of a private, special and local character and purports to apply only to election precincts or districts within municipality. Both of these objections were held to be futile.

"In a concurring opinion by Garrison, J., it was said:

"In voting to affirm this judgment of the Supreme Court directing the plaintiffs in error to order special elections to be held to determine upon the retention or rejection of voting machines under the supplemental act of April 10, 1908, (P. L. 266), I wish to draw attention to the fact that the plaintiffs in error do not make the point that such supplemental act is unconstitutional as a delegation of the law-making power directly to the electors at the polls; hence the question whether such supplemental act is in contravention of the Constitution in the respect pointed out in Paterson vs. Society, 4 Zab. 385, and in Cleveland vs. Society, 4 Gil. Eq. 246, and in Guinness in this court is not passed upon or considered in affirming the present judgment upon the errors assigned."

"Having given the matter careful consideration, I am of the opinion that Chapter 163 of the Laws of 1908, being the act in question, is unconstitutional on the ground indicated by Judge Garrison; and if that objection should not be sustained, on the further ground not taken in the Bayonne case, that the election provided for thereby is not a poll of the legal voters of the city of a particular district,' namely, the municipality in which the election district of the protesting voters is situate, but only by the legal voters of one or more election districts of such municipality. It will be observed that the election at the present instance would be required to be held by a fraction only of the legal voters of this city, that is to say, not even by the legal voters of any one or more entire wards of the city, but by the legal voters of the election district only in each ward, although those election districts comprise all of the election districts of the city in which voting machines are now required by law to be used. The boundaries of these several election districts were not fixed by the Legislature, they were fixed by ordinance of the Common Council. Election districts so fixed are not, in my opinion, political districts within the meaning of those words as defined in any opinion of our Court of last resort which has sustained any statute delegating legislative powers to municipal corporations; and I am further of the opinion that that Court will not extend the principle of the decided cases so as to sustain a referendum to the voters of a fraction only of a political district.

"Political districts of the State, within the meaning of such cases, are cities, boroughs, towns, townships, counties or other districts the boundaries of which have been fixed by the Legislature and upon the voters within which the Legislature has conferred governmental functions and to some extent, at least, the power of local government. See Taylor vs. Smith, 21 Vr. 101; State, Lydecker, vs. Englewood, 12 Vr. 154; Van Cleve vs. Passaic Valley etc., 42 Vr. 574; Paul vs. Gloucester County, 21 Vr. 445; Booth vs. McGuinness, 7 Atl. 434, and cases cited at page 465.

"Two courses are open to your Honorable Body:

"You are at liberty to decline to order the election called for by the act in connection with the petitions referred to, on the ground that you are advised that that statute is unconstitutional, thereby leaving the petitioners or any other interested parties, if they think the statute is constitutional, to apply to the Supreme Court for a writ of mandamus, on the argument of which, the objections on constitutional grounds above pointed out, and which were not considered or decided either by the Supreme Court or the Court of Errors and Appeals in the Bayonne case, would be considered and decided; or you may treat the act as constitutional until some competent court shall have declared it to be unconstitutional.

"If you decide to adopt the former course, no further action is required on your part at this time. If you decide to adopt the latter view, the proper course is to adopt at to-night's meeting the resolutions which I have prepared and forwarded to the chairman of the committee on laws and ordinances.

"Shortly stated, the grounds on which I base that the act in question is unconstitutional are:

"(1). The act attempts to delegate legislative power to be exercised directly by the electors at the polls.

"(2). EDITOR TALKS ON DRAMA

Dramatists Should Cut Loose from Muck Raking Social Conditions.

SO SAYS MONTROSE MOSES.

Lecturer Deplores Ibsen Influence and Advocates More Healthy Plays by American Authors.

The concluding lecture of the season before the Monday Afternoon Club was given Monday by Montrose Moses in the Grace School auditorium. Mr. Moses is editor of "Everyman," and his deep analysis of social conditions influenced by the modern drama held the close attention of his interested hearers, for he said while the drama represents life it reacts upon life. Mr. Moses gave a historical introduction to his lecture, referring to the miracle plays and the representation of religious subjects in the early drama. With passing mention of Shakespeare and other dramatists, he gave a searching analysis of Ibsen, the Norwegian dramatist, who has wielded a powerful influence on the modern drama.

Mr. Moses deplored the influence of foreign psychology on American dramatists and hoped for a native American drama that instead of reflecting Ibsen's gloom and pessimism would evolve beauty from the common place and the superiority of the American man and woman to surrounding conditions. He suggested that instead of muck raking social degradation, dramatists should delve some star gazing into higher conditions and through the sweetness of life search for truth. He said the American is essentially clean at heart and that play is liked the best in which the hero holds the right of way to his own salvation.

The lecture was preceded by interesting reports from the delegates to the State Federation of Women's Clubs held May 6 and 7 at Englewood. With Mrs. Eugene Hately, the president, Mrs. Leighton Calkins attended the federation meetings on May 6 and Mrs. Charles L. Goodrich May 7. They reported the many good of the meetings to be "conservation."

NOISE NO BAR TO SLEEP IN BIG CITY.

Insomnia Unknown Among Dwellers of N. Y. Tenements.

Is it possible ever to obtain eight or nine hours' sleep every night in the great and noisy city? Surely it is. The man or woman who pretends this is impossible is either a victim of self-deception or a very rare invalid. Let us consider a few cases in New York, the biggest and noisiest city in America. There are living in that city some half-million or more of men who work as day laborers, mechanics, etc., and who sleep as soundly in tenements in the most congested districts as in the equally noisy outskirts of the city.

Any cases of neurasthenia or insomnia among them? Not to any great extent. Of course their hard manual labor gives them a fine appetite, their means are small, and their diet therefore plain, and the good honest fatigue resulting from a day of physical toil sends them swiftly into sleep that restores to them abounding vigor next day.

It is not so long since the eight-oared crew of Columbia University won the intercollegiate championship of all America at Poughkeepsie on the Hudson, and remember that when the crews of this university have finished second in the great struggle, so close up with the leaders that spectators could not tell who had won. Yet these young athletes lived during nearly all the period of training in the busiest, noisiest city in America, and if they had not taken plenty of sleep they could not have made such a splendid showing against the crews of Cornell, Pennsylvania, Syracus, Wisconsin, Georgetown, etc.

Does the strain, the noise, the bustle of life cause young athletes or tropolis afflict these young athletes with insomnia or neurasthenia What a joke!—Harper's Weekly.

CITY FATHERS CONSIDER SOME ROUTINE MATTERS

Mayor Charles J. Fisk at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, Monday night called the attention of the members to a provision of the dog ordinance, which imposes a fine of $3 for the redeeming of dogs at the city pound within seventy-two hours. He recommended that the amount be reduced to $1. The matter was referred to the laws and ordinance committee.

The Mayor also in a communication notified the Council that he had designated three public scales for the weighing of coal, as already published in The Daily Press, and recommended that the question of providing a sealer of weights and measures be considered. The public scales designated are those of Joseph Harrigan, Boice, Runyon & Co. and George O. Stevens.

The Public Service Corporation informed the Council that Tungsten lamps had been installed on East and West Front streets for a month's trial, according to a recent promise.

The Municipal Manager an invitation to attend the graduating exercises of the Plainfield Business College on June 10, at which time Congressman Charles N. Fowler will speak. A box will be reserved for the President and members of the Council. The invitation was accepted by a roll call vote, Voting in the negative being expected to attend. All the members, except Mr. Montgomery, voted aye.

George H. Burgess and others in a petition asked the Council to macadamize Central avenue to the county line, where it joins Road Ending and the Old Rahway road. The matter was referred. The Public Service Corporation notified the Council that one electric light had been installed on West Front street, between Hunter and Clinton avenues, as ordered.

Mayor Fisk appointed George Nichols as permanent member of the fire department and the same was confirmed. Mr. Buxton reported back the petition of Adam Fritz, who desired to lease the old garbage disposal plant, explaining that no arrangement could be made according to the request. The usual appropriation of $100 was made to the benefit of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., for Memorial Day purposes, in accordance with a resolution by Mr. Buxton. Another resolutions by Mr. Buxton and adopted, provided for the establishment of the city pound at the home of W. H. Kiker, pondkeeper, at 176 Everitt place, and John C. Traynor was made delinquent tax collector. He will receive fifty cents for serving a warrant, seventy-five cents for making a levy, fifty cents for advertising delinquents, $1 for selling property, fifty cents for making an arrest and 2 per cent. for collections.

Mr. Holt offered an amendment to an ordinance changing the time of making appointments, from February to January 1, and section three of the ordinance providing for the appointment of officers and tenure of office, was stricken out, as another ordinance covers that point. The amended ordinance was ordered advertised.

Another ordinance offered by Mr. Holt and adopted, repealed five different ordinances not considered necessary. The ordinances so repealed refer to the assessment and collection of taxes, the designation of the city jail, the regulation of automobiles, the appointment and compensation of the overseer of the poor and the licensing of vehicles and sprinkling of streets, etc.

Chairman Gloak of the street committee introduced an ordinance providing for an addition to the storm sewer in Richmond street, and it was passed on two readings and ordered advertised. He also offered resolutions reconsidering the ordinance calling for an issue of street improvement bonds and changing the interest from 4½ to 5 per cent.; also recalling the ordinance providing for an extension of the sanitary system of sewers so that some changes might be made in the streets to be included in the improvement. The amended ordinance was read and June 6 was fixed as the time for a public hearing.

For the Housewife.

The bread pan should be washed out weekly, dried and thoroughly aired by keeping the lid a little way open. Thus the bread will never get a nasty musty taste, and to keep it from becoming too dry place a well-washed piece in the pan. Moisture is given off by the potato, but not enough to cause mildew. When making Swiss rolls, put two layers of newspaper at the bottom of the tin you intend using and cover it with a sheet of white kitchen paper. Don't grease the white paper, but brush the side next to the newspaper with water. The newspaper will prevent the roll mixture from burning, and the moisture makes the paper come off quite easily.

COMMISSION GOV'T IDEA

Galveston Plan is Favored by P. P. A. President for Plainfield.

IN FAVOR OF AN INVESTIGATION

Mr. Depew Explains the Form of Municipal Government and He Suggests It Be Investigated —Officers Chosen.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Protective Association held Monday in the Y. M. C. A. hall was productive of some interesting data relative to the administrative affairs of this city and a recommendation of the governing of municipal affairs by a Commission to be elected by the people. The treasury is in splendid shape and a vigorous campaign can now be inaugurated on any project selected by the association.

All the officers who served during the past year were re-elected and are as follows: President, R. Henry Depew; vice-president, George M. V. Moy; secretary, E. W. Bulkley, and treasurer, Theophilus C. Riley. The executive committee is composed of A. H. Atterbury, Henry C. White, Charles W. McCutchen, David E. Titsworth, Thomas M. Day, D. M. Van Vliet, H. C. De Knatel and A. V. Heeley.

Treasurer Riley reported a balance of more than $1,200 in the treasury. The report of President Depew, a synopsis of which will be found below, shows the work done by the association on the recent water question and vote and the suggestion that the city be hereafter governed by a commission similar to those in vogue in Galveston, Texas, Des Moines, Ia. and other places. The executive committee will appoint a committee to make an investigation into this form of government and in all likelihood a public meeting will be called to hear speeches on the subject. President Depew's report says:

"No steps have been taken to carry out the suggestion in last year's report for the appointment of a committee to work out the various problems connected with the development of Plainfield, but a careful consideration of the daily increasing burden which is being put upon the Mayor and Common Council suggests that a radical change in the method of administering the affairs of the city is necessary.

"While we have seldom been seriously disturbed by undesirable men in our Council, it will become more difficult to obtain men of the highest standard as the increasing amount of labor absorbs more of the leisure and business hours of the members. With the result that as the growth and expansion of the city requires men of greater talent and patriotism, it will be impossible probably to obtain men of equal standing with those we have today and have had in the past. Already the men of initiative in the Council find it impossible to give careful consideration to all of the business and questions requiring attention and an effective and businesslike handling of the affairs of the city will soon require a change.

"The present is a period of evolution and one development of recent years is the establishment and growth of 'The Commission Form of Government,' which was first established in Galveston after the flood and is now in successful operation in that city, Houston, Des Moines and many others.

"Under this plan three or five men are chosen by the whole city (not by wards) and are employed and paid by the people to devote all of their time to the city and are subject to discharge for neglect or improper performance of their duties.

"If this plan were adopted in Plainfield, some of our paid officials and employes could probably be dispensed with and their salaries applied to the expenses of the Commission. The additional expense involved would probably be much more than covered by the saving effected, beside securing results which cannot now be accomplished.

"The citizens would become more interested in public affairs and would be keenly alert to see that they were properly filled. Criticism of paid employes would be freely made, when necessary, though great hesitation is naturally felt about exercising this right toward elected representatives who are giving freely and generously of their time without remuneration.

"We therefore recommend that this association begin a careful investigation of this form of government and its results, with the idea of establishing it in Plainfield, and to that end I would suggest the holding of a public meeting in the near future with speakers thoroughly competent to inform us upon this subject."

HAMBURG TO MERCHANTS

Newark Button Manufacturer Discourses on Country's Business.

THE UNITED STATES LEADS.

Amendment to By-Laws Admits Business Men to Association—A Collation Follows.

Members of the Plainfield Merchants' Association who gathered in large numbers in Coward's hall Monday enjoyed a speech delivered by A. V. Hamburg, of Newark. His subject, "Commercialism," abound d in concise and clear cut aphorisms of the trade conditions of today. The speaker traced his subject from the twelfth century.

The regular business of the meeting was disposed of after considerable debate on the amendment to the constitution which now permits the acceptance of business men who are not strictly merchants. The invitation of A. S. Herr for the association to be present at the graduating exercises of the Plainfield Business College which will be held at the Plainfield theatre on June 10 was accepted. Reports were read and President E. A. Force introduced the speaker of the evening.

Mr. Hamburg said that after the invention of the mariners compass, national and international trade relations were established which were the beginning of world-wide trade which exists today among the nations of the earth. At that time England, Holland, Spain and Portugal led in imports and exports.

Following the War of Independence, the speaker said, the United States jumped into the lead and has remained there ever since. In 1795 a tariff law was established and Boston, New York and Philadelphia were the leading ports from which our products were shipped. Those three cities still remain at the head.

Religious and civil upheavals retarded the progress of the commerce of the nations for some time, but at the settlement of these questions business grew with leaps and bounds until at the present day this country leads the world not only in its production but in the exportation of its products. The speaker declared that deposits in the banks of the State of New Jersey this year amounted to $438,000,000, and last Saturday the celaring house balance sheet showed $1,600,000,000 of deposits.

Mr. Hamburg declared that prosperity was here and nobody could gainsay it. The same conditions prevail in this State as in every part of the union. Where years ago small partnerships were the thing, great corporations have taken their places and are a natural outcome of trade conditions which require immense capital to meet the requirements of a growing business. The American businessman who can stand the drain on his mentality and physique made necessary by the keen competition of present day methods is the one who succeeds and becomes the finest type of citizen.

Co-operation between employer and employee occupied some of the speaker's time. He declared that this co-operation was an absolute essential to business success. The employe who best looks after the requirements of his position is the one who meets with approval and the employer who has regard for the condition of his employees is the the one who gains the respect of the community at large and exerts the greatest influence for good in the community in which he lives.

Other matters of vital interest to the business men were given attention by the speaker, many of the figures and statistics used being revelations to many of the members present. The hearing had by Mr. Hamburg before the Ways and Means Committee of Congress was referred to, and Mr. Hamburg reiterated here what he said at the hearing—a protective tariff based upon comparative wages at home and abroad was the only safe medium. Protection is necessary, he said.

Following Mr. Hamburg's speech a collation was served, to which nearly a hundred members and their guests did justice.

Love and Hate.

Thirst belongs to humanity, everywhere, in all ages; but the white-pine pail and the brown mug belong to me in particular; and just so of my special relationship with other things and my race. One could never remember himself in eternity by the mere fact of having loved or hated any more than by that of having thirsted; love and hate have no more individuality in them than single waves in the sea; it is the accidents or trivial marks which distinguished those whom we loved or hated make their memory our own forever, and with it that of our own personality also.—Holmes.

"The editor must have thought this story was pretty good."

"Why?"

"He declines it with regrets instead of the usual thanks."

OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY OF THE EPWORTH LEAGUE

Observing the twenty-first anniversary of the founding of the Epworth League, a service of special interest was held at the First M. E. church Sunday. The speaker of the evening was Rev. Dr. A. W. Hayes, of the Methodist church, Westfield, who exchanged with the pastor, Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson. Arthur Humble, of the Epworth League, was in charge of the meeting and introduced the speaker after a pleasing soprano solo by Miss Bailey.

Mr. Humble recalled that the Epworth League was organized at Cleveland, O., in 1889, and after passing through the early years successfully is today one of the strongest forces for good among the young people of the world.

Dr. Hayes spoke from the motto of the Epworth League. "Look Up and Lift Up," and from the text, "And Peter Gave Him His Right Hand." He referred to the countless symbols admired by people of all countries, including the American eagle, which he characterized as the symbol of dignity, but in his opinion the greatest symbol, the one that is revered the world over, is the Cross, but if Christ had not been nailed to the Cross, it would have become nothing more than so much wood.

The speaker then went on to explain the great importance of the hand, which he said was the most valuable factor to the world, a marvelous power of communication, which has controlled gases, electricity, the secret of the load stone, which builds the hut and the palace. The speaker referred to the power of the hands of great leaders and what they have accomplished in the world's history. He then made his remarks applicable to the work and progress of the Epworth League, inspiring the members to do even greater things in the future than in the past. The address of Dr. Hayes was greatly enjoyed by the large congregation. The pulpit was decorated with the flag of the Epworth League, while another one bearing the motto and insignia of the organization was displayed in front of the organ.

RAISE MONEY FOR CHURCH RENOVATION

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, made an earnest appeal in his people Sunday morning, the object being to raise by subscription about $6,000 with which to pay for extensive improvements planned for the church. As a result about $1,500 was pledged by means of the subscription cards distributed among the people of the congregation.

The pastor's appeal was made through a unique text, the subject being, "The First Contribution Box." The text was taken from II Kings, 12:9: "But Jehoiada the priest took a chest and bored a hole in the top of it, and set it beside the altar, on the right side as one cometh into the house of the Lord; and the priests that kept the door put thereinn all the money that was brought into the house of the Lord." From this text, which referred to the raising of money with which to repair the temple, Pastor Broek touched the hearts of his hearers and they were led to subscribe generous amounts toward a fund to repair the church, as has already been described. The response was gratifying and it is believed that the amount subscribed yesterday will be largely increased in the near future.

NO 'SANE FOURTH' HERE

The Common Council Pigeon-Holes the Proposed Ordinance.

AFTER A PUBLIC HEARING.

Mayor Fisk and G. W. V. Moy Advocate Its Passage—Councilmen Clay and Mygatt Speak Against It.

There was a decidedly breezy time at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council Monday night when Mr. Holt, chairman of the committee on laws and ordinances, conducted a public hearing on the proposed ordinance to provide a safe and sane Fourth of July by prohibiting the sale of fireworks. There was a large gallery of interested spectators, including several women. The ordinance provoked a lively debate in which Mayor Fisk, George W. V. Moy and Dr. A. F. Van Horn urged its passage, and the speakers were frequently applauded.

Yet, after all the remarks in favor of the ordinance were heard, Councilmen Mygatt, Clay and President Tolles expressed the opinion that it was too drastic and by a six to five vote the ordinance was referred to the committee on laws and ordinances which means that it is a dead issue for this year. This action caused great disappointment. Those who voted to refer the ordinance to the committee were Councilmen Buxton, Clay, Montgomery, C. C. Randolph, Frank Randolph and Tolles, while those who voted in the negative were Councilmen Gloak, Holt, Mygait, Taylor and Wilson.

At the outset of the public hearing a communication was read from the Plainfield Mothers' Association urging the passage of the ordinance. Mr. Holt suggested that it would be wise to change the time for obtaining a written permit for a display of fireworks from thirty days to forty-eight hours, and said that if the ordinance got that far in its passage he would so recommend.

Mayor Fisk was then given the privilege of the floor and made a strong appeal to the councilmen to pass the proposed ordinance. He read all the letters received from the Mayors of the State, together with those from physicians, Boards of Education, principals of public schools and others, which have been printed in the Press, and all of which favored the ordinance.

The Mayor declared that there was only one possible objection to the passage of the ordinance and that was that it would affect the man who sells fireworks. He did not believe that the small profits accruing to the dealer should be compared with the possible loss of life and permanent injury that might result. The Mayor did not think that Independence Day was ever intended as a time to kill people and he forcibly reminded the councilmen that if their children should be so injured they would never forgive themselves for not passing the ordinance.

Mr. Fisk said that the only way to prevent the accidents is to prohibit the sale of fireworks and this he thought the Council should do at this time. He recalled the accidents of the past few years; also the fact that it has always been necessary to establish an emergency hospital at police headquarters on July 4.

Following up the strong plea by the Mayor, Dr. A. F. VanHorn not only endorsed his words, but quoted figures to show the disastrous result of permitting the Fourth of July to be celebrated as in the past. He stated that in the past seven years there were 794 deaths in this country from lock-jaw and 154 cases of lock-jaw in 1909 with 125 deaths. Of this number four were in New Jersey, while there were only 128 cases of lock-jaw from other causes than fire-works. He thought it was up to the thinking citizens to act.

In speaking for the ordinance G. W. V. Moy recalled the accident of two years ago when Charles Geer, of this city, lost his hand by the explosion of a giant cracker. He believed

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 22, 1910.

Topic.—What is it to be a Christian?—Acts xxvi., 9-29. (Union meeting with the Juniors.) Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The question "What is it to be a Christian?" cannot be answered definitely in a single sentence. There are too many phases of the Christian's spirit, life and labors to make it possible to limit them to what we ordinarily call a definition. Webster defines a Christian "as one who professes or is assumed to believe in the religion of Christ, especially one whose inward and outward life is conformed to the doctrines of Christ." This perhaps is as good a human definition as could be given of a Christian in the abstract, but when we come to the Scriptures, instead of finding any one statement that defines a Christian, there are simply various descriptions of the characteristics of a disciple of Christ according to the phase of Christianity which Christ or the apostles desired to set forth. What is it to be a Christian may better, therefore, be summed up in these characters and especially as illustrated in one who is a Christian—for instance, Paul, the central figure of the scene before us.

In this scene Paul is on trial before King Agrippa and his queen and Festus. Paul had been arrested at Jerusalem, taken to Caesarea, tried before Festus, then Felix, but had appealed to Caesar, a right which as a Roman citizen he possessed. Meanwhile Agrippa came to Caesarea and desired to hear Paul, and he addressed the king, queen and Festus. In this defense we have one of the greatest addresses in the Bible, and it is little wonder that after a conference of the judges Agrippa said to Festus, "This man might have been set at liberty if he had not appealed unto Caesar." Paul had simply told the story of his conversion and subsequent zeal for Christianity. Festus declared he was mad because of his much learning and said: Paul denied it and appealed to Agrippa about the prophets and his knowledge of them. Agrippa said unto Paul (A. V.), "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." And Paul said, "I would to God that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost and altogether such as I am except these bonds."

What did Paul mean by "such as I am?" He could only mean one thing—a Christian. Paul was a Christian, and in him and his life we see the characteristics of a true Christian.

1. Paul was converted. On his way to Damascus to persecute Christians he saw Christ in a vision and accepted Him as his Saviour. He was not a Christian in the sense that he tried to reform himself by taking Christ as his example. He was inwardly changed by the power of the Holy Ghost. So must every one be who really is a Christian. Regeneration, not reformation by attempted personal efforts, makes a Christian.

2. Paul possessed the spirit of Christ, "I am crucified with Christ. Nevertheless I live. Yet not I, but Christ, liveth in me." This is an absolute essential of a Christian. "He that hath not the spirit of Christ is none of His." The spirit of Christ does not simply mean an inward desire to follow Christ. Christ must through His spirit dwell in us. "Abide in me and I in you." We must be such as Paul was when he said, "Christ liveth in me."

3. Paul's outward life conformed to that of Christ. This necessarily follows the inward possession of Christ. The inward life determines the outward life of Christ lives in us, if His mind is our mind, His will is our will, we must be like Him in life and character.

4. Paul accepted and believed the great doctrines concerning Christ—His piety, His crucifixion, His resurrection and ascension, His miracles and the doctrine of the atonement in the sense of substitution. He gloried only in the cross and boldly proclaimed that Christ's death there was a vicarious sacrifice for sinners.

5. Paul desired to see all men Christians. "I would to God that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost and altogether such as I am (Christians) except these bonds." Seeking to save others is one of the surest signs that we are saved and are Christians.

His Only Vacation.

In Baltimore the Christian Endeavorers are greatly interested in the work of the Children's Fresh Air society. All of the societies contribute largely to its support, and many of the prominent city Endeavorers are officers in the society.

Some time ago a letter was received at the office of the society which is so good and so full of encouragement for the charity Christian worker that I want to pass it along. Here it is:

Inclosed please find $2 for the work of the Fresh Air society. I remember with much happiness that the only vacation I ever had as a child was given me by this society, and I want to send my mite now to help some other child to get a vacation. I hope the work may go on and that all the children may be sent to the country.

A FRESH AIR CHILD GROWN UP.

So seldom do we get any thanks for the work done among the poorer people, especially work of this kind, that it shows a healthful condition to get such a letter. And, my dear Endeavor friends, it just goes to prove that our Master does not let a single part of our labor spent in His service go without its return.—Alfred S. Day in Christian Endeavor World.

HINTS FOR THE SUBURBAN GARDENER.

Although a trifle late for the ordinary climate, there is still time for the starting of various flowers which are later to be placed out in the garden. A package of seeds, or even a small portion of an ordinary package, planted now indoors will give a good start for this summer and allow you to get the best of your neglectful neighbor. The custom of planting seeds of annuals indoors very early in the spring has grown more each year, and is sure to grow more in the future.

Bring out your dried geranium roots, place them in some rich earth and set where the sun can reach them. You will be surprised to find that you will be several months ahead of gardeners who do not do the same thing, and you will have geraniums in the garden from the very first. For such things the proper method is to plant in pots and not in boxes, because of the resetting in May. Box-raised plants have the disadvantage of having to undergo quite a shock when they are replanted, but if they are raised indoors in pots the entire earth can be sunk into the ground without any danger to the roots.

Many persons imagine that to reset a plant all that is necessary is to dig the plant up and set it in the earth. This is a very grave error, as it sets the plant back a long time. Plants are like human beings; in fact, the theory of evolution shows that animals were once plants. Any and all plants have delicate feelings. The require food and drink just as ordinary mortals, and when you allow a root to dry up or to become injured it is just as though you were to give a human being a sore throat or to tear your own stomach into pieces. Every portion of the root counts, and the slightest injury to that root affects the plant. Therefore, take every care whenever you set a plant unless it is in a dormant state, and even then the change is likely to result seriously even in shrubs or trees.

Now is the time to keep an eye on the San Jose scale, as well as other insects, which will be out in force later and bring about the ruination of your garden or your orchard. Spray your trees with your favorite insecticide. Lime, sulphur or one of the soluble oils will be a good thing to keep away the scale and will also work harm to the aphis and other insects. Where fruit trees are infected with black-knot or cancer, cut away the diseased portions. To stop the peach leaf curl spray the trees with lime-sulphur.

If you have any pruning to do and have not done it, be careful that the sap is not running; if it is, don't prune. This refers especially to grapes, which should ordinarily be pruned before the snow is off the ground.

There is plenty of time before seeds can be sown outdoors, but one sowing should be made in the greenhouse early if seedlings of strong growth and bearing an abundance of flowers are wished for.

Just as soon as the snow has left the ground you must not forget to attend to your asparagus by placing over it a good dressing of well-rotted fertilizer. This same advice applies to rhubarb.

A FURRIER'S HINT.

A furrier says that more fine furs are ruined through carelessness than from any other cause. No garment is guaranteed. The wear depends entirely upon the care taken of it.

This dealer ten years ago made up two coats for different women of the finest sealskin. At the end of the year one returned with the coat in tatters; the other had her coat made over this winter for the third time.

What caused the difference? Lack of care. One woman had done everything but sleep in her coat, while the other and kept hre's in good condition.

For fine fur coats will stand rough handling. Pulling on and off in a hurry, pitching down in a heap when wet, not using hangers or wearing over sweaters or other coats tear the skins.

Heat is the chief foe to fine furs, always hang your coat in a cold room, particularly when wet. To do otherwise will make the skins shrivel and crack.

Be careful in traveling not to put your furs near the radiator. Hang them on outside of seat. If in street cars, you are sitting over the steam-pipe, lift your coat or it may be ruined before the end of the ride.

In choosing furs remember that the finer the fur the less wear you may get out of it. This is particularly true of baby caracul, chinchilla, sable and ermine. Often wearing qualities in inverse proportion to cost.

A stout woman who must count cost cannot afford a fine fur, for she is apt to rub delicate skins into frayed places.

Worth Knowing.

When a splinter has been driven deep into the hand, it can be extracted without pain with steam. Nearly fill a wide-mouthed bottle with hot water, place the injured part over the mouth of the bottle and press lightly. The suction will draw the flesh down, and in a minute or two the steam will extract the splinter and inflammation together.

LOCAL ENDEAVORERS HEARD W. P. HALL SPEAK

The Plainfield Christian Endeavor Societies were largely represented at the twenty-second annual convention of the Union County Endeavor Union held Friday afternoon and evening in the Presbyterian church, Westfield. The society from the Temple Baptist church had a representation of thirty-three, the largest from any one society in the county.

The chief business last night was the election of these officers for the coming year:

President, Purdy F. Benedict, of Roselle; first vice-president, John D. Hood, of Elizabeth; second vice-president, Clarence H. LaRue, of Plainfield; third vice-president, J. Durr Randolph, of Elizabeth; fourth vice-president, Rev. Gordon M. Russell, of Garwood; secretary, Frederick L. Mintel, of Rahway; assistant secretary, Miss Vera H. Day, of Elizabeth; treasurer, Miss Ethel Irving, of Westfield.

The Union county banner was won by the Westminster Presbyterian church society, of Elizabeth.

William Phillips Hall, of Greenwich, Conn., was the principal speaker last night, his topic being "Consecration." Among other things he said that all Christian Endeavorers should be witnesses for Christ. He declared that during his fifteen years of witnessing for Christ, 10,000 souls have been saved. His remarks stirred all the Endeavorers and were listened to with the greatest interest.

The features of the afternoon session included greetings from State Union, by Miss Edna Kelly, of Jersey City; an address, "Plans and Methods," by Chester A. Bradley, Junior superintendent of the Essex County C. E. Union; concluding with a question box. A meeting of the executive committee of the county union was held at 7:15 o'clock.

At the evening service there was an address of welcome by Rev. Dr. W. I. Chamberlain, of Westfield; report of the year's work by Harry F. Brewer, secretary; and following the report of the nominating committee made by Fred S. Benteau, chairman, the officers were elected. State President John T. Sproull, presided during the election of officers. After the presentation of the banner, Mr. Hall made his address and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Dr. Steams.

CONTRASTS IN CO-EDUCATION.

"Experience shows that the differences in the fitness of female scholarship are not so great as in the male," writes a European educator. "There have existed a number of male youthful prodigies in mathematics or musical composition, and a further proof of the greater variability of male children is that the unfavorable abnormalities are also more frequent with the male than with the female.

"Warner has made an investigation on 50,000 children, nearly the same number of each sex, and found that in round numbers 21 per cent. of the boys but only 16 per cent. of the girls are in any way defective.

"The classical country regarding co-education in high schools in Europe is the Grand Duchy of Finland in Russia, a country of very great culture, in which co-education has existed since 1885. An experienced female teacher in one of the oldest schools there says quite openly that boys show more aptitude and inclination for one special subject or another, while girls generally try to study all subjects in an equally careful and diligent way.

"Girls are more easily influenced by suggestion than boys, and it may be a consequence of the greater suggestibility the power of application for work comes more easily to girls than to boys. Walking through the corridors of the Vienna University one may get from the number of lady students that one sees these the impression that there must be a high percentage of female students, but statistics show that there are only 5½ per cent. The fact is that ladies are more regular in coming to the lectures.

"As to work done in single subjects of instruction in the high-school course, we know almost nithing definite about it, I know of no positive information except that coming from the co-educational high schools of Findland. It shows always the better results with girls.

"When we look at that, there is no reason to be adduced against co-education in high schools; the only question is the difference in the ability of the two sexes at the same age. The completion of growth in boys requires a longer time than in girls, adn the difference between the physical condition of boys and girls shows itself very distinctly in their ailments, probably in their mortality."

Genius.

The only difference between a genius and one of common capacity is that the former anticipates and explores what the latter accidentally hits upon. But even the man of genius himself frequently employs the advantages that chance presents to him. It is the lapidary that gives value to the diamond, which the peasant has dug up without knowing its worth.

TELEPHONE COMPANY TO PRESENT NEW PETITION

A representative of the New York Telephone Company attended the meeting of the Fanwood Township Committee Friday and discussed the petition for a franchise that had been filed by the committee at a previous meeting. Nothing definite was done in the matter it being understood that the company will present a new petition at a future meeting of the committee.

The action of the Bucket and Engine Company in purchasing a chemical engine from the Morristown fire department was ratified and $200 was appropriated from the fire company to assist in paying for the apparatus, it being agreed that the company will pay the balance of the cost.

In an effort to eliminate dust on Front street and Park avenue during the coming summer months the committee voted to have these thoroughfares oiled.

FREEHOLDERS INSPECT NEW ROAD REPAIRS

The committee of the Union County Board of Freeholders, of which S. P. T. Wilbur, of this city, is chairman Friday inspected the repairs to the New Providence road, from East Summit to Berkeley Heights. A visit was also made to the Hobart Gap road and orders were given to re-surface this road.

State Commissioner of Roads Col. Gilkyson, and his assistant, Robert A. Meeker, of this city, and the members of the committee will meet on Monday for the purpose of going over the proposed new road which will extend from Westfield to Summit, via Cranford and Baltusrol.

MAGGIE NOISY CREEK CREATES A SENSATION.

She's a Souix Belle and Her Clothes Are Great.

To be sure, the modern Indian girl will not average up in attractiveness to her pretty prairie sister of whiteparentage, but now and again one sees strikingly handsome types, and these have no trouble in securing white husbands, if they want them.

Out on the ranch where she lives her father, Maggie Noisy Creek dresses in an old wrapper and goes barebeaded. But when she drove into town on the day I saw her, in one of those rickety, away-topped pheatons that her tribe affects, she wore a neat white shirtwaist, a wide green necktie, a beaded belt, a blue skirt, and kid gloves, while over her high pompadour was the kind of a hat one saw on Broadway five years ago. This hat was trimmed with large pink bows. When she walked up the street she carried a white green parasol. Her intentions she was evidently very careful of her complexion, which was reddish brown, toned down by a few dabs of powder.

Despite her warring colors, her wild beauty triumphed, and she attracted a goodly share of masculine attention. Other Indian women, not so pretentiously dressed, turned slyly to look at Maggie, just as their fifth avenue sisters turn to look at the newest and most daring cut of princess gown. Some of the women giggled and said things to each other in the Dakota language, which I would have given worlds to understand.

On the Cherokee Reservacion, as on the Souix, there has been much intermarrying of white men and Indian women, and this, too, for a mixture of romance and practicality. Sometimes a plainsman has behaved no better than a European nobleman who ignobly woos an American girl's dollars and not herself. For in the Indian Territory and Oklahoma there are many "savages" of substance, and not a few of wealth.—Everybody's.

A SANDWICH FILLING.

Seed and wash quarter of a pound each of dates, prunes, raisins and washed figs. Shell and blanch half pound of almonds, the same quantity of hickory or Brazil nuts, and a half pound of pecans.

Put a few of the nuts through the meat chopper, then some of the fruit mixture, alternating until all ingredients are chopped. Mix to a paste with juice of two oranges and one lemon or with sherry, and pack in round molds or baking powder tins. Set in cold place until ready for use, slice thin and use on brown bread and butter, or on toasted crackers.

A Handsome Towel.

An especially attractive finish to the hand-made towel is to make a hem two inches deep and hemstitch it double, marking off an oval space in the centre of the hem about four inches long and two inches deep. Have the centre of the oval on a line with the hemstitching. Hemstitch up the oval. Outline the oval in fine featherstitching, cutting away the double thickness so that within the oval there is just a single thickness. In the centre of the oval work an initial or monogram in solid embroidery.

FREEMAN STRAIT FREED BY SOMERSET CO. JURY

After deliberating ten and one-half hours on the evidence in the assault case of G. A. Underhill against Freeman Strait, a jury in the Somerset County Court Thursday brought in a verdict of not guilty. The jury retired at 11:30 o'clock in the morning and it was not until 10 o'clock at night that the verdict was arrived at.

The trial in the Somerset County Court, which was instigated by Underhill, was a continuation of two recent cases tried before Justice Snape in which Starit defeated Underhill. The Underhills and Straits have been in justices courts on numerous occasions with their troubles, but this was the first time that they were given a chance to air their grievances in a higher court, and both sides certainly made the best of the opportunity. There was much conflicting testimony.

The trial this week was the result of an altercation between the two Watchung men which occurred on Saturday night, April 9. Following the faracs Underhill had Strait arrested. At a hearing before Justice Snape the charge against Strait was dismissed. After this trial ended Strait had Underhill arrested on a counter charge, and the latter was held for the grand jury. In this proceeding Strait accused Underhill with attempting to hang him to a cherry tree during a fight on the night of April 9. In the meantime Underhill appeared personally before the Somerset grand jury which returned an indictment against Strait, and the trial that ended last night was the result of this action on the part of Underhill.

The trial occupied four days and it is said cost the county close to $500. Much adverse criticism is held in the borough on the action of these two men in subjecting the county to the expense of trial in trying to settle their differences. One local lawyer declared this morning that it was an outrage and it would be a big thing for Watchung and vicinity if both Underhill and Strait would remove to some other place.

Among the witnesses in the case was Dr. A. H. Dundon, of the borough, who testified that Strait was brought to his office on the night of April 9, in a carriage, with his knee so badly wrenched that he walked with difficulty.

The witness as a medical expert was also asked a number of hypothetical questions as to the length of time it would take a "bump" to develop on Underhill's head after his cranium, protected by a heavy felt hat, had been struck a smart blow with the butt of a whip.

Dr. Dundon scratched his own head, and said: "That is a mighty hard question to answer."

Underhill at this point volunteered the inofrmation that he never had a bump or serious injury on the head as the result of the blow from the butt of the whip with which he charged Strait in the hearings before Justice Snape.

MAKING A PAPER HAT.

In these days of fancy paper costumes a girl should know how to make an effective hat. Tear crepe paper into inch strips the length of the sheet. Take three strands and plait closely into a smooth and even braid.

Cover a wire frame with these braids and face under part of brim with plain crepe paper or muli in the Dakota language, which I would have given worlds to understand.

A gray hat with pink roses, green foliage and dark gray band; a white and red braid trimmed with scarlet poppies, or a braid made of strands of black, white and pink with a fluffy bow of black crepe paper and two shaded pink chrysanthemums will all give stylish results.

AN INTERSTING CRADLE.

One seldom sees nowadays the old-fashioned wooden cradles that used to be such a picturesque adjunct to the nursery.

Modern mothers prefer the light basket varieties, that can be trimmed with muslin and lace, and that are no doubt healthier than the old patterns.

There is, however, one wooden cradle, at least, that is still popular. This is the one that cradled the present German Emperor.

It has also been the cosy bed of all his sons in turn, and is now rocking used for his majesty's grandchildren.

It is very plain in make—just a simple wooden cradle, with the words "He shall give His angels charge over thee to keep in all thy ways" inscribed upon it, but it is a relic very much prized by its imperial owner.

They were setting up the golden calf.

"What do you think of it?" they ecstatically asked the wise man.

"It will look cheap enough when the food barons begin to put up the price of veal," he answered, and gloomily stalked away.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BABCOCK'S GARAGE WILL COST $15,000

A spurt is on in local building circles and contractors are busy figuring on plans for structures that will be erected during the summer season. Perhaps the most important application filed with Building Inspector Doane this year is one from George L. Babcock, who has contracted with Alexander Milne for the erection of what will be one of the most elaborately equipped and commodious automobile garages in the State.

The structure will be built of brick, heated by steam and will cost about $15,000. The plans of the building are now in the hands of Inspector Doane.

The Knights of Columbus have plans to, long contractors for an extension of the Lindsay property on West Front street, which adjoins the First Baptist church. As announced exclusively in the Daily Press a few weeks ago, the lodge has arranged to convert the property into a commodious clubhouse, and the deal is expected to be negotiated next week. In addition to the these projects permits have been granted for the erection of eight dwellings, as follows:

Plainfield Development Company, corner Grant avenue and East Ninth street.

Mrs. Elizabeth Alexander, dwelling at 612 East Third street.

Harry Thain, dwelling on Everett place.

Mary E. Gallup, dwelling at 551 West Front street.

John Hansel, dwelling at 210 Johnson avenue.

C. Peterson, dwelling on Cushing road.

Thomas Cogan, dwelling at 925 West Seventh street.

Y. W. C. A, AUXILIARY HAS NINE NEW MEMBERS.

The R. I. P. S. Club, an adjunct of the Young Women's Christian Association, which is composed of members of the North Plainfield High School, initiated nine new members and elected officers to serve for the ensuing year at a session last night. Those who were added to the enrollment of the club are Edna Dilts, Clara Smith, Mildred Sinclair, Maud Darby, Adelaide Stiglitz, Agnes Decamp, Kathleen Hummell, Helen Edgar and Florence Carey.

The officers elected are: President, Mettie Steiner; vice-president, Margaret Ackor; secretary, Lois Diman; chairman of membership committee, Ruth Welnberger. The club voted to send one member to the summer camp of the association at Silver Bay, Lake George, this summer.

SHOULD BOYS PLAY ON REGULATION DIAMONDS

Is the regulation diamond too large for boys' nines to play on, and could better results be attained by juvenile clubs if they played on smaller diamonds? Here are two problems that have arisen and claim the interest of those who are identified with baseball in circles where boys' teams are conducted.

In a recent conversation with George Listman, physical director of the Y. M. C. A., he expressed himself forcibly op the subject. That official entertains the belief that boys should play their games on smaller diamonds for several reasons.

In the first place it hardly appears reasonable that a twelve-year-old boy should be expected to play ball on a diamond of the same dimensions as used by the big league clubs or adult nines. Under the present conditions the little fellow has to throw a curve ball which the man depried, and found the revolver besides several shells and some cartridges. Judge Runyon thought Moraski a too dangerous character to be at large and sentenced him as above.

FRESHMEN WIN FROM JUNIORS IN FAST GAME.

On one of the fastest class games of the season the P. H. S. Freshmen defeated the Juniors at Crescent Oval Friday, the score being 4 to 3. Van Deventer whiled for the upper class men; Grisley pitched good ball for the Freshmen. For a long time the score stood a tie but when the eighth inning was reached the Freshmen brought in a pretty run. These two classes bray of the best teams in the school and it is always interesting when they get together on account of being so evenly matched.

The line-up:

Freshmen—Guttridge, c; Grisley, p; J. Ricketts, 2b; Carty, 3b; Weber, 3b; Rosenson, ss; Sharpe, rf; Sharkey, cf; Huson, lf.

THE VERDICT.

Puck, a-sitting on the hill,
Spied two lovers by the rill.
Doing things that lovers do
When their love is fond and true;
Just a pressure of the hand,
Flash of eyes—you understand,
Glancing toward the couple, he Cried: "What fools these mortals be!"

Later on he spied a pair—
Strephon strong and Phyllis fair;
Deep affection in each heart,
Yet their ways ran far apart;
He'd no courage for the test,
She deemed coolness for the best.
Puck observed impatiently:
"Oh, what fools these mortals be!
be!"
be!"

I don't know what can be done
For to please this jeering one,
If we do, or if we don't;
If we will, or if we won't;
Spite of her, we play the game,
Still the verdict is the same,
Hard to such a fate to how—
Guess we're all fools, anyhow!

MAN WITH GUN GETS FORTY DAYS IN JAIL

Frank Moraski, a Pole, who bears a strong resemblance to Czogolz, the assassin who murdered President McKinley, was sentenced forty days in jail Saturday by City Judge William N. Runyon for being intoxicated and carrying a loaded revolver. Moraski was arrested on Thursday night by Patrolman Thomas Flatley, who had to play the "hide and seek" game to get his man.

Moraski was zig-zagging down Richmond street casting furtive glances around apparently on the lookout for someone when the officer arrived at the corner of Richmond and Second. Flatley became suspicious and hid behind a tree. Moraski did likewise. Then Flatley moved up a tree or two and the other backed up one. Finally Flatley made a break from cover and collared the fellow before he had time to get away and put him through a severe cross-examination. Moraski said he thought he was in Elizabethport and was looking for an address on Elizabeth avenue.

Patrolman Flatley searched the man after asking him whether he carried a gun, which the man denied, and found the revolver besides several shells and some cartridges. Judge Runyon thought Moraski a too dangerous character to be at large and sentenced him as above.

UMPIRE ROBS P.H.S. IN SOMERVILLE CONTEST

Plainfield High School was defeated at Somerville Saturday by the school nine of that town by the score of 11 to 5. The P. H. S. adherents on their return to town declared that the rank umpiring by Porter, of Somerville, was responsible for the defeat of the locals. Close decisions and everything were given to Somerville.

Terry occupied the box for Plainfield and pitched a steady game. Henderson, who also faced the locals in this city in the first game of the season, also twirled in fine style for Somerville.

Lidgate performed in classy fashion behind the bat and the Fanwood boy also hit the ball hard. Doane led the locals in stickwork. The teams lined-up as follows:

Plainfield—Doane, center field; Van Zandt, right base; Lidgate, catcher; Nash, first base; Runyon, left field; Bristol, second base; Zerega, shortstop; Terry, pitcher; Riffert, right field.

KEEPING ONE'S HAT FIRM.

Before woman makes too strenuous a fight for suffrage she should invent hats that will stay put. Hatpins are a nuisance and ruinous to hats, and not all their beauty makes up for it.

To avoid this nuisance there are numerous substitutes for hatpins, none of which is especially successful.

Now the inventors are making a fight against one of the hatpin evils —tearing of the crown.

One of these is a small tunnel, fastened with a screw into the hat, one end on each side. They are adjusted to the proper angle and the pin is run through at the same spot each time. This not only saves the hat, but insures against unbecoming tilts.

Another invention is a hat comb, warranted to keep the hat firm in a windstorm. It has a low carved front of tortoise shell, gold or silver, and carved sides in coronet shape from flat teeth that are pushed back into the coiffure.

When the comb is adjusted it forms a becoming ornament, yet the hatpins can be slipped through the perforations, reefing hat firmly and preventing it from flattening hair.

TO AVOID KNOTS.

The use of a knot is to be avoided in sewing and not to be tolerated in embroidery.

The accomplished needlewoman rarely finds it necessary to start with a knot, save in gathering or basting. Sometimes a tiny one is slipped under the work, but it will show on right side if material is sheer and makes an ugly lump in ironing.

Two or three over and over stitches taken on wrong side of material is as secure as a knot and much more sightly.

In embroidery there is no excuse for a knot. Two or three tiny stitches taken on outline or in body of work where it is afterward covered will hold any stitches. Knots only tend to an untidy wrong side, which no good embroiderer will tolerate, and make the work rough in laundering.

Back and Forth.

"Dad, why can't we quit Chicago and live in New York, like all our friends do?"

"I haven't made money enough yet, daughter."

"But with these eighteen-hour trains, couldn't you commute?"

Not everyone knows that if the edges of grandfathers are brushed inside and out with shellac and melted solder immediately applied it will be mended as easily as tinware.

Swore Off.

"Why not?"

SCORES "PLEASURE-MAD"

Don't Sacrifice Eternity for Transitory Pleasure, Exclaims Pastor Maguire.

WARNING TO THE PARENTS

"Dancing Classes in Public Places Are Spawning Ground of Hell," Declares Minister.

It was not Governor John Franklin Fort, nor Governor Charles E. Hughes, nor yet Governor Harmon, of Ohio, whom Rev. Gabriel R. Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, had in mind when the topic for his Sunday sermon was announced, but a Governor who was in power when the Apostle Paul was doing missionary work in Cesarea. In mentioning this fact last night Pastor Maguire said: "Disappointment described the feelings of Felix," the subject of the sermon, "and I venture to say that disappointment describes the feelings of some of you rock-ribbed Republicans and you Stand-pat Democrats because I am not going to give you a political harangue. I am not in the political business.

"A large part of my time today has been given up to wearing out the carpet between my study and the telephone answering calls from people wanting to know which Governor I was going to attack. But, as I said, I am not in the municipal reform business and they were obliged to come and hear me to learn the truth. It has been said of our statesmen that each and every one of them has his price, but I tell you that in our legislatures and assemblies and in Congress today there are men who cannot be bought with all the wealth of this and any other world. And thank God for it. Some of our men are incorruptable and were it not so, this glorious country of ours would not occupy its present place among the nations of the earth.

"I am sorry for you who came expecting me to rake over the deeds of some poor misguided politician, but I am glad that you will be able to hear of one man who had the opportunity to save his immortal soul and lost it and that, perhaps, you may profit by the experience of the other fellow.

Mr. Maguire then told of the imprisonment of Paul by Felix, as described in the twenty-fourth chapter of The Acts of the Apostles, taking for his text the twenty-fifth verse. Paul was in prison and Drusilla, the stolen wife of Felix, having heard of it asked of her lover that Paul be brought before her to discourse on the subject of salvation or any other topic which would reveal to Felix his eloquence. But when brought into the presence of the repentant sinner pleading prudence to take care of itself let conscience tell him, "I am an ambassador of Christ and forthwith began a sermon which mightily moved Governor Felix and his consort, but which resulted in Paul's return to the prison cell.

"The story of Paul's encounter with Felix was written for our admonition," said Mr. Maguire, "and I will give you several reasons why they should all be heeded." An exhoration to the parents of Plainfield, such as probably never has been heard by them before, followed.

The practices of parents in neglecting the attributes which God gave them to secure the salvation of the souls of their children, the indifference which parents of the present day show in what their children do along certain lines, the neglect of the little things which with ordinary care could be eliminated from the lives of the young by a few well directed words at the proper time, and how often the fall of the girl or boy is due directly to this negligence of the parent.

"Dancing classes in public places are the spawning ground of hell," declared the minister. "How many unfortunate girls owe their downfall to this special amusement only God knows, but you mothers and fathers know how to prevent it with your daughters. Keep their feet from getting into the slippery places. If you are going to hell for God's sake don't take your children with you," he shouted. "There are things which God will excuse, but not this."

Referring to the pleasure-mad people of the country, Mr. Maguire said, "I feel sorry for the men and women who care for their souls only during Lent. Just think what a good time the devil has during the balance of the year! Nothing to do but cultivate the unthinking and careless into believing that they have nothing to do but seek the things which please them. I tell you that it is wrong to sacrifice an eternity for a transitory pleasure. Felix might have become a good Christian but for his love of pleasure. He would not give up his sin. 'At a more convenient season,' he said, but he was trembling. But he never got the chance. His opportunity had gone and his procrastination caused his death. Poor Felix! Don't any of you let the opportunity pass when it is presented to you. Would you rather spend forty or fifty years in the pleasures provided in this world than spend fifty millions and more of happiness in Paradise?"

The church was filled with an audience that at times was moved to tears and at intervals a titter would run among them at some witty sally of the man in the pulpit. The earnestness of the pastor is unquestionable. Five young people asked for prayers after last night's sermon. Judge William N. Runyon sang a solo as the offertory.

Y. M. C. A. IS WINNER OF SHARP BATTLE

Powerless before the superb pitching of Slocum, Y. M. C. A.'s twirling wonder, the crack Brooklyn Centrals fell a victim to the locals on Crescent Oval Saturday by the score of 5 to 4 in what was one of the prettiest diamond battles waged on the oval and was marked by brilliant plays on both sides.

Although beaten the visitors excelled Plainfield at the bat, nine hits to five, but on the other hand the locals played an errorless game while there were six misplays credited to Brooklyn.

Slocum was the "whole show." The youngster fanned eighteen out of thirty-two batters who faced him. In the first and second rounds he whiffed the first six batters. In the third and fourth innings he fanned two in each round. One fell a victim to his curves in the fifth, three more in a row in the sixth, one in each the seventh and eighth. In the concluding round he was just as strong and added another pair of victims to his string. Hand accorded Slocum perfect support behind the plate.

While Plainfield secured only five safe swatettes off of Hult the bingles of the visitors aided the locals materially in their run getting. Stover led at the bat for the locals registering three of the five bingles The score:

Y. W. C. A.'s on a Jaunt.

Twelve members of the Young Woman's Christian Association enjoyed a walk over the mountains on Saturday afternoon. In the vicinity of Moldenke's castle the party encountered a shower but this failed to dampen the pleasure of the occasion. Shelter was secured in a ravine on the northern slope of the mountain. With a foliage of trees as a roof the picnickers built a fire, boiled a pot of coffee and enjoyed their luncheon. When the sunshine appeared the young women turned homeward. Next Saturday afternoon a walk will be taken to South Plainfield.

Will Organize Cadet Corps.

There will be a meeting at the First Baptist church Friday night of those interested in the organization of a cadet corps. The plan is to form two companies, one for the young men and another for the boys. Robin Brown will be the drill master, assisted by J. D. Macnab and Louis Matlack. Later on it is proposed to organize a bicycle corps. Friday nights will be reserved for drilling, and steps will be taken at once to secure uniforms.

THREE STRAIGHT FOR THE SOUTH PLAINFIELDS

South Plainfield made it three in a row Sunday when the Middlesex boys defeated the St. Mary's nine of Stony Hill by the score of 7 to 4. Although the Saints were padded with Scotch Plains players they failed to threaten, the chances of the "Southerners" after the fourth round when South Plainfield secured a 6 to 1 lead.

The fourth inning proved to be the Saints' Waterloo. With two out Scholler walked, stole second, and scored on Franklin's two-bagger. Ramsberger followed with another double, which scored Franklin. After Powers got a "life" Captain Mullen shooted the ball for the third two-bagger of the inning, scoring Ramsberger and Powers. Moran ended the inning by grounding out to first base.

Conahay and Franklin did excellent work in the box for the "Southerners," each having seven strikeouts. After Fuch, the Stony Hill pitcher, was knocked out of the box in the fourth round, he was succeeded by Hand, who did fine work despite the lead against him. Mullen caught a fine game for South Plainfield, not a Stony Hill man stealing second. The lineups:

N. P. H. S. TROUNCES BOUND BROOK HIGH

"Just like stealing candy from a baby." That was the comment made by Professor Phelps after the baseball tragedy enacted by the nines of the North Plainfield High and Bound Brook High on Hyde Field Saturday afternoon. The borough's athletes trounced their opponents to the tune of 22 to 4. That's all.

Everybody seemed to hit the ball. In the twenty-two hits recorded by the boroughites, four of the swats were doubles and one a triple. Townley and Stine did splendid battery work for the North Plainfield nine. Frezza and Clark were in the points for the visitors.

WILLIE DEEGAN BACK IN THE GAME AGAIN.

Scotch Plains defeated Bound Brook at the latter place on Saturday by a score of 3 to 2. Willie Deegan, the old Plainfield pitcher twirled his first game in three years for the Scotch Plains team and held the hard-hitting Bound Brooks to four hits. Deegan was very effective after the first inning, when he passed four men and forced in a run.

Special Meeting of Classis.

The Classis of Newark will meet in special session next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the North Reformed church, Newark, to examine for ordination Rev. Royal A. Stout. He will be graduated from the New Brunswick Theological Seminary on Thursday, the graduation exercises being held in the First Reformed church, New Brunswick, at 7:30 o'clock in the evening.

LOCAL BALL PLAYER INJURED IN GAME.

Frank Evans, of Arlington avenue, while playing with the Clinton nine, at the latter place, on Saturday, fractured his left wrist, which will necessitate his retirement from the diamond for several months. Evans sustained the injury on a slide to home base, on his journey from third base.

Evans without doubt is the prize hardluck player in this vicinity. Early last season he met with injuries in a game which placed a prohibition on his playing the greater part of last season.

SOMERVILLE A WINNER IN THE TENTH INNING.

The new Somerville baseball team opened the season on Saturday by winning a ten-inning contest from the Whitehouse Club by a score of 2 to 1; both teams played snappy ball. An error by Grimes in the sixth gave the visitors their only run. Henry Albert, of Scotch Plains, was behind the bat for White House.

PLAINFIELDS SERVES CROW TO FLEMINGTON

A luscious meal of crow was served up to Flemington's aggregation of ball tossers in their own ball yard by our gallant Plainfield athletes on Saturday afternoon. Score 6 to 2.

It was a mournful procession of Flemingtonites who made their way to the supper table after the battle. One individual who couldn't understand why the Hunterdon Braves were squelched was Zeke Spittlehouse, the town constable. "B'gosh, I can't for the life of me understand how you fellers did it," is what he said to Warry McLaughlin after the game.

On the other hand there was great rejoicing in the Plainfield contingent over the victory, until the supper table was reached. The inclement weather gallants headquartered, was dead sore. He lost two plunks on the game, and to get even, he served up two-ounce portions of beefsteak, coffee minus the spoons, and some half ripe radishes, to the victors and loud cries for more was the trip. A few strawberries, to celebrate, topped off the scanty meal. There was much growling on the supper score thereof.

Here is the story of victory. It was delayed until the ninth spasm, but it counted just the same. The score was 2 to 2 when the locals started the aggressive. Matters assumed a dismal hue when Nelson, the first batter, flied out to Chathers. Warry McLaughlin poked the ball way out to centrefield against the fence. It looked as if the sphere was going to drop on Pickle Mountain in the distance, but Zanetti got in under it—but alas! he muffed it —and gave McLaughlin a "lifer" on the middle sack. Boyd was put in the game to run for Warry, and Schott advanced him home on a cracking single to right field. Schott advanced third, and when he tried to score on Lidgate's tap to second base, Adams perished at the plate.

Lidgate, who was safe on first base, reached third on singles by Martin and Boyd. With the sacks all occupied Barnes pasted a high fly straight for left field, and when he muffed and all three Plainfielders romped home, making the score 6 to 2. Barnes ended the round by popping out to Rothfuss.

Plainfield set the pace in the run getting line in the fourth by tallying two scores. Harter and Carlstrom received free transportation by Warren and were advanced on Nelson's sacrifice, and then Warry McLaughlin smacked the globule to center garden and Harter and Carlstrom scored. McLaughlin died on the bases as Schott and Lidgate were easily retired.

A couple of wildcat chucks in the fifth session permitted the Hunterdon county boys to tie the score. Hampton, the mute first sacker, opened the runfest by flying out to Carlstrom. Chathers walked. Applegate fanned. Parker was safe on Lidgate's muff, and Chathers also made third on the misplay. While the latter was going to third Nelson threw wild to Harter and Chather scored. Harter retaliated by returning a crazy chuck to Nelson, and this opening gave Parker an opportunity to tally. After the fracas Warry retired the enemy by fanning Warren.

McLaughlin pitched splendidly for the locals, striking out ten men and holding the opposing side down to two measley hits, one of which was an infield scratch. Carlstrom, the new acquisition at shortstop, performed in fast style. Brit Martin and Schott earned a lot of handclasps from the bleacherites and grandstandees for their sensational contributions to the game. The score:

TENNIS DOUBLES WON BY WORLD'S CHAMPIONS

Harold H. Hackett and Frederick M. Alexander, the national lawn tennis champions at doubles, defeated on Saturday Carleton R. Gardner, the Californian, and Edgar W. Leonard, Harvard's former intercollegiate champion, in fast sets at the courts of the Plainfield Country Club. Brilliant tennis marked the work of the experts which was applauded by a large gallery.

Through the first and second sets Hackett and Alexander led their opponents by their swift and accurate volleying, playing with dash in their rallies. The Californian played well, chopping across court and facing the champions repeatedly. On his side of the net Hackett did most of the playing, and was not approved to be still suffering from the cold which has been annoying him for the past week, leading him to cough after every rally.

Leonard came into the third set with an irresistible spurt. He used a cut serve to advantage and worked so well that the score following it had the champions on their mettle. The pair won this, the only set of the match.

William B. Cragin acted as umpire and was assisted by W. L. Righter, A. D. Beers, John King and R. S. Gough, linesmen. The following is the summary: Hackett and Alexander won 6-4, 6-2, 5-7, 6-1.

MANY ENJOYED GOLF AT THE COUNTRY CLUB

The large field of golfers attracted to the links of the Plainfield Country Club, Saturday, shows that the game here is growing in popularity. Through the day the course was thronged with players, some taking part in the weekly competitions, while others were playing merely for the exercise and general pleasure. The recent rains put the course in especially good condition and the greens are almost equal to mid-season.

In the morning the boys' handicap was continued, the points being won by Reginald Rowland, L. S. Church and E. A. Walbridge. Their scores: Rowland (scratch) 109, 6-103; L. S. Church, 104, 0-104; E. A. Walbridge, 107, 0-107.

A large number of players competed for the Spring Handicap cups. In Class A, the point winners were W. T. Glenney, Clifton Wharton, Jr., and Charles Murphy, Glenney returning the low score of 69. In Class B, the point winners were L. R. Hopton, George S. Clay and C. M. Church, all posting low scores. The leading scores in both classe follow:

Class A—William T. Glenney, 76, 7-69; Clifton Wharton, Jr., 87, 14-73; Arthur Murphy, 84, 8-76; S. H. Hibbard, 85, 9-76; S. H. Patterson, 92, 15-77; J. A. Lane, 95, 15-80.

DUNELLEN WINNER IN A BATTING MATINEE

In a game that bristled with terrific slugging on both sides Dunellen's crack ball nine cadie across the line a winner in a game with the Jersey Central team on Saturday afternoon by the score of 10 to 6. The Dunellenites slapped the leatherette with a vengence all through the game and outbatted their opponents fifteen swats to thirteen.

The battery work of "Smiling Jimmy" Montross, in the box, and Benny Dodwell behind the rubber, was one of the features of the game. Montross, although he allowed the railroaders to gauge his delivery for thirteen bingles, he was steady in pinches. In the fifth round, with three on the sacks, he used his speed ball, and retired Meehan, the principal slugger of the Jersey Centrals, on a weak grounder to the infield. (Handclaps for "Jimmy.")

Miller, the Dunellen shortstop, leaped into popularity by his timely batting. He was a veritable demon with the willow and during the fray fetched his batting average by cracking out four healthy bangs. Giles at second base also played a creditable game.

Eilers and Meehan, of the Central R. R. aggregation, also did some tall executing with the stick, the former getting a quartet of hits and Meehan three. Dunellen fans were highly pleased over the victory and predict another triumph for their favorites when they tackle the Plainfield Y. M. C. A.'s next Saturday. The score:

FIVE-GAME SERIES IS CARDED WITH SOMERVILLE.

The local baseball season will end in a blaze of excitement. On Saturday the Plainfield management arranged a five-game series with Somerville, Plainfield's ancient enemy. The first game will be played Saturday, September 17, and the four remaining contests will be decided on the following Saturdays.

Local fans are sure to welcome this bit of news. The only regret is that there is a long wait for the games. Contests in past years with Somerville have been marked with keen excitement and the coming series is sure to arouse the old time rivalry.

WILD WEST SHOW GOOD; MAY BE REPEATED

A genuine wild west show and circus was given by young residents of West Seventh street Saturday afternoon, before a small, but none the less appreciative audience on the property of J. H. Greene, Jr., 609 West Seventh street. The total proceeds of the affair, $5, has been sent to the treasurer of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society of Plainfield and North Plainfield. It is possible that the affair may be repeated next Saturday for the benefit of the local boy camp conducted by the King's Daughters.

The boys who took part in the circus derived as much fun from it as the spectators. The program included a pitched battle between cowboys and Indians, the rescue of the little Dunellen maiden, Miss Marion Greene, from the cruel clutches of the blood-thirsty savages; acrobatic stunts, wrestling matches and toe dancing by little Miss Greene. It goes without saying that all the performers scored in their respective parts.

Among those taking part were Charles Greene, Clarence Skiff, John and Henry Hammann, Carlton Moore, Parker and Putnam Newell and Miss Marion Greene. A. C. Penn, Jr., will make his debut next Saturday afternoon in an acrobatic specialty.

HIGH SCHOOL THESPIANS

Senior Class Pupils in "As You Like It" at Local Theatre.

A CREDITABLE PERFORMANCE.

Miss Frances Newell as Rosalind and Fred Loizeaux as Orlando—Greeted by a Large House.

The presentation of Shakespeare's comedy, "As You Like It," at the Plainfield theatre Saturday night, by the senior class of the Plainfield High School, was a pretentious effort and worthy achievement. The young women and men to the number of eighteen that comprised the cast, acquitted themselves creditably and it was a thoroughly appreciative audience that witnessed the production.

Nearly everyone in the cast was line perfect and the acting was good throughout. Miss Frances Newell, as "Rosalind" scored a hit. Her interpretation of the part left scarcely anything to be desired for an amateur. She never faltered once in her lines, while her acting bore a charm that won for her much applause. As the peasant boy, she was natural and graceful and displayed a fight-hearted spirit so true to the story.

Miss Meta R. Pennock, as "Celia," daughter of Duke Frederick, shared the honors with Miss Newell. She gave an excellent interpretation of her part and several times was accorded applause.

Fred D. Loizeaux, as "Orlando;" Miss Grace Woolson, as "Adam," servant to Oliver; Frank Arthur Putnam, as "Oliver," brother to Orlando; William H. Bullock, as "Touchstone," the duke's jester; Miss Edna Cole, as "Le Beau," courtier attending Duke Frederick; Theodore Hamilton, as the peasant youth; Miss Celestine Waldron, as "Audrey," a country wench; Miss Mary Radford, as "Phoebe," a shepherdess; Clifford Vail, as "Corin," an old shepherd, and "William," a country lout, and Alan Overton as "Charles," Duke Frederick's wrestler, were all exceptionally good in the leading parts. There was only one thing lacking and that was more confidence and spirit on the part of some members of the cast.

Others who deserve special mention for their work include Miss Lila P. Duy, as "Silvius," a young shepherd, who was in love with "Phoebe" and Howard C. Runyon, as the "Duke."

The cast was elaborately costumed and the play was handsomely staged. Praise is due S. B. Howe, Jr., who coached the young people for the production. The young theatre plans were generously remembered by the beautiful floral offerings, altogether the performance was a notable one in school circles. The cast.

Orlando, Fred D. Loizeaux; Adam, servant to Oliver, Miss Grace Woolston; Oliver, brother to Orlando, Frank Arthur Putnam; Charles, Duke Frederick's wrestler, Alan Overton; Rosalind, Miss Frances Newell; Celia, daughter of Duke Frederick, Miss Meta R. Howe, Jr.; Frederick, the usurping duke, Howard C. Runyon; lords, Harry Brick, John Kenney, Russell Miller, Lester N. Sutton; peasant youth, Theodore D. Hamilton; Corin, an old shepherd, Clifford B. Vail; Silvius, a young shepherd, Miss Lila P. Duy; Duke, living in banishment, Howard C. Runyon; Amiens and Jaques, lords attending the banished duke, S. B. Howe, Jr., and Theodore D. Hamilton; foresters, Harry Brick, John Kenney, Russell Miller, Lester N. Sutton; forest maid, Miss Ruth Klein; Audrey, a country wench, Miss Celestine Waldron; Phoebe, a shepherdess, Miss Mary Radford; William, a country lout, Clifford B. Vail.

The executive committee comprised the following:

Business managers, Harry Brick and Fred D. Loizeaux; stage manager, S. B. Howe, Jr.; property manager, Mr. Bostwick; program committee, William H. Bullock, Miss Katherine Moynihan, Theodore D. Hamilton; faculty directors, Miss Daisy T. Day and S. B. Howe, Jr.

This is how it occurred, said Mr. Blatz: "In the setting was fifteen eggs, all right, and on the first day of the setting the hen laid another egg, making sixteen eggs in all."

Mr. Blatz was accompanied to Wakefield by his wife and Miss Alice Beauteaux, of the borough, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Texier, of New York, formerly of this city.

FETE DE MAI IS READY

Spectacle for Tomorrow, Friday and Saturday Will Surprise Many.

PAGEANT IN CITY PARK.

Floral Dances and Other Unique Features to Mark Effort to Help the Playground Commissioners.

There is nothing more sure than that the "Fete de Mai," which is now ready for the approval of the public will eclipse anything heretofore attempted in this city. Programs may come and go, but the life of youth will go on forever. Premature judgment on some acts of the Legislature naturally call the "people" to protest, but it will be a difficult matter to find anyone who will be willing to raise his or her voice against the pageant which is now arranged for tomorrow, Friday and Saturday. The fete will be in aid of the Playgrounds for the children of this city ought to have the support of everybody, whether they are parents or not.

In the opinion of those who have had experience in laying out the plans for just such things for the children in other cities, there is no more effective way of improving the physique and moral condition of our boys and girls.

From the present outlook the grounds will be crowded from the beginning of the fete until the last vestige of the debris is removed. It will be just as well to remember that the tickets sold for any particular evening, for special reserved seats will be replaced to the best of the ability of the management in case the weather prevents the attendance on the nights for which the tickets have been purchased. Mrs. Lewis E. Waring and Mrs. William B. Tyler are the chairmen of the pageant and Mrs. Howard Colby will be the queen.

CAMP COMFORT FOR BOYS

Rev. George A. Warner Makes Plans for Summer for Choir Boys.

GOOD TIME PROMISED ALL.

Boarding Place to Be a Health Building Endeavor—A Lesson in Practical Christianity.

Rev. George A. Warner, the energetic rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, has about completed arrangements for the boys' camp at Hedges Lake, N. Y., in the foothills of the Green mountains and the Berkshire hills. This will be the fifth summer that the choir boys and some of their friends have spent two or three weeks in "Camp Comfort."

Friends of the boys, church people generally, and personal friends of the rector are contributing sufficient money to see the boys through two weeks of camp life. The boys themselves, about twenty in number, raise about $70 each year by giving an annual concert in which they are assisted by artists of ability who offer their services free.

This year the concert will be held tomorrow night the hour 8 o'clock and the place Holy Cross parish house, adjoining the church. Miss Lohrke, of East Orange; Fred Scanlan, of New York; F. B. Ball and James Vail, of this city, will assist. Miss Lohrke has been heard in solo work here before. Mr. Scanlan is a well-known New York violinist. Mr. Ball is inimitable, it is said, in coster songs, and Mr. Vail an exceedingly versatile pianist. The choir will render the usual number of glees and choruses and an opportunity to hear Mr. Pope, the baritone of the choir, who is a favorite with the people, will be afforded. Mr. O'Brien, choirmaster, has charge of the concert.

Boys who are so fortunate as to be members of the Holy Cross organization are overhauling their fishing tackle, preparing the camp pack and living in anticipation of the trip up the Hudson. The boys leave Plainfield on the afternoon of June 26 by the Citizens Line steamer for Troy, where they disembark and take the train to Shushan, N. Y., and thence by farm wagon or shanks mare to camp.

It will be of interest to Plainfielders generally to learn that Mr. Warner after bringing his choir boys safely home to Plainfield, will return with several boys already entered to become inmates of Camp Comfort, and maintain a boarding camp for boys, some of whom will stay the balance of the summer and some for a few weeks only. Several of the parents of well-known families in both boroughs have availed of Mr. Warner's plans, have seized the opportunity to place their boys in a summer camp under Mr. Warner's care.

Being questioned by a reporter of this paper, Mr. Warner said: "Yes, I'm going to be summer camp business for the balance of my summer vacation. I have camped every summer for seven years past. The experience I have had and some adaptability in managing the youngsters, suggested the idea that I might continue my vacation in the camp and at the same time be of service to those who wish a summer or part of a summer for their boys in the out-of-door life such as we live. The camp is accessible by good automobile roads, and parents are to be welcomed to the camp's hospitality. We have cottages and several water-proof canvas tents, cots for the boys to sleep on and every convenience for a safe and well conducted camp, possessing the advantage of being within reach, it is different from the Maine camps in that one is not obliged to send their boys so far from home.

"No, I have done no advertising, but have several boys whose people have heard of my plans and asked to send their youngsters. I have plenty of room for others but at the rate applications I've come in presume I will be obliged to limit the number. I take boys from eight to sixteen years of age and it is no more expensive—perhaps not as much so, as the average run of summer camps. We live well and generously, with all the fun incident to camp life and have as few rules as possible.

"Yes, I will be glad to send you while we are there some account of the camp life that may interest home people."

BUSINESS COLLEGE EXERCISES PROGRAM

Professor A. S. Herr has secured an array of talented speakers for the annual commencement exercises of the Plainfield Business College, which will be held in the Plainfield theatre, Friday night, June 10.

In addition to Representative Charles N. Fowler, who will address the graduates on "Your First and Highest Duty," speeches will be made by former Mayor William N. Saunders, Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Mayor Newton B. Smalley and Professor H. C. Krebs. The invocation will be offered by the Rev. Gabriel R. Matthews, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church.

A meeting of the graduating class was held last night when the details for the exercises were completed. There are twenty-two pupils who will be awarded diplomas. Persons desiring reserved seats for the occasion can obtain tickets by making application to Professor Herr at the college.

PUBLIC INTERESTED IN INDIGNATION MEETING

General interest is being taken by the public in the indignation meeting to be held at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium on Friday night as a protest against the recent action of the Common Council in voting not to call a special election for the purpose of giving the voters an opportunity to express themselves as to whether voting machines should be retained or abolished.

The meeting will be called to order at 8:15 o'clock and the indications point to a large audience. Several addresses will be made by citizens who are interested in the matter and an opportunity will be afforded to all who desire being heard on the subject.

The claim is made that the Council has not legal right to prevent a special election. These citizens are interested in a movement to force the Council by mandamus proceedings to have an election.

Concert and Conundrum Supper.

A concert and Conundrum supper will be held at the Calvary Baptist church, Thursday night at 8 o'clock. Prof. and Mrs. James Bolling will appear at the concert and all are urged to hear the "Solving of the Negro Problem," by Mrs. James Ross. This will be the menu for supper: Confused Cackler, Unruly Member, The Father of Our Race, Just Grown Up, Staff of Life, Fruit of the Vine, Elevated Felines, What Makes Plainfield the Richest Spot on Earth, The Pastor's Habit, Backbone of History, China Cordial, Costly Cosmopolitan Conglomeration. Rev. G. W. Bailey is pastor of the church.

Miss Louella Harris to Sing.

Miss Louella C. Harris, formerly soprano soloist at the First Baptist church, will sing there next Sunday for Miss Ruth Harris, the present soloist, who has gone south to attend the wedding of a relative. Miss Ruth Harris plans to make her home in Plainfield during June and July.

MUSIC TREAT AT Y.M.C.A.

Grace P. E. Church Choir Gives Evidence of Ability in Vocal Art.

TWO WEDDING HYMNS SUNG.

Chester Chamberlain and Raymond Manley Sing Splendidly—

Orchestral Numbers

Well Played.

Before a large and fashionable audience the male choir of Grace P. E. church, directed by S. Frederick Smith, gave its first concert last night in the auditorium of the Young Men's Christian Association. The concert was in the nature of a celebration of the first anniversary of the formation of the choir and delighted the audience, not alone because of the character of the selections, but because of the spontaneity of feeling with which the various numbers were rendered and the fine tonal qualities of the singers.

The choir was admirably assisted by the orchestra under the direction of Martin A. Korff. Dr. Leonard Waldo and his daughter, Miss Ruth Waldo aided materially to the pleasure of the evening.

Master Chester Chamberlain, boy soprano, won unstinted applause and a hearty encore for his singing of "Swallows." This boy's phrasing and control are wonderful and an occasional slip from the key can be overlooked. The beauty of his voice showed plainly in the duet "Love Divine," in which William Talamy sang the tenor and Dr. Waldo played an obligato on the 'cello.

Without doubt the concert of last night will reflect credit on Mr. Smith, who has faithfully trained the young voices and reached the present high standard of excellence. The best of the chorus work was shown in the two wedding marches. Many of those in the audience feeling the influence of the music which they remembered as a part of their own wedding celebrations, while perhaps there were others who have hopes in that direction. Master Raymond Manley's alto singing was commented upon by many. The boy has a voice of quality which will some day be heard as tenor.

The work of the orchestra was specially fine in Leybach's "Fifth Nocturne" and Loesch's "King of the Forest," the concluding number. The program follows:

Part I—Overture, Titania, Hildreth, Y. M. C. A. orchestra, M. A. Korff, conductor; chorus, March Eccossaise, Gounod, chorus and orchestra; quartet, No Shadows Yonder, Gaul, Master Chester Chamberlain,

METHODIST PASTORS CONFER WITH BISHOP

Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church; Rev. C. S. Kemble, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, and Rev. Ora J. Shoop, of Grace M. E. church, held a conference at Elizabeth, yesterday with Bishop W. F. Anderson, who presided at the last session of the Newark Conference, with a view to planning ways and means for more effective work among the Plainfield and North Plainfield churches.

The conference was in line with the work that the Methodist Social Union has taken up in this city. The plan is to hold evangelistic services here in the fall and the question that has not been decided yet is whether the local ministers or an evangelist will take the lead in the services. There has been some talk of securing Rev. Dr. Henderson, of Brooklyn, to conduct the services. He was here a few years ago and accomplished a great work. Details for more effective work will be considered by the representatives of the local Methodist churches.

WESTFIELD'S BOARD OF TRADE BANQUET

Many Plainfielders attended the second annual banquet of the Board of Trade at Westfield last night, the principal speakers being former Governor Edward Caspar Stokes, N. G. Besler, of this city, vice-president and general manager of the New Jersey Central; Assemblyman Lloyd Thompson; W. C. Hope, general passenger agent of the New Jersey Central, and Mayor Albers. W. E. Tuttle, Jr., president of the board, was the toastmaster.

The train which brought Mr. Stokes was delayed. He was met at this city by Charles Codding and W. E. Tuttle and taken to Westfield in an automobile.

Mr. Besler explained that the reasons for raising commutation rates was because of the increase in wages granted the company's employes. During the evening a 130 word telegram was received from the president of the Plainfield Board of Trade, in which he "knocked" in his characteristic style. He implored the board "not to be too respectable as was the case in Plainfield, but to be serviceable."

The dinner, one of the best ever served at a public affair at Westfield, was in charge of De Molli the West Front street caterer. The menu and service was satisfactory in every way.

"SILLY" SAYS UNCLE DAN

Tart Comments on Fowler Letter Made by Two He Attacked.

HAMILTON KEAN CAUSTIC.

Congressman's Effusion Depicts "the Excesses of a Furious Mind and Unrestrained Brain."

Branding as silly many of the statements made by Representative Charles N. Fowler, in his open attack upon United States Senator John Kean, State Treasurer Daniel S. Voorhees and other politicians, Mr. Voorhees said yesterday that for the present, at least, he would make no statement regarding the charges of Mr. Fowler. He added that he had not had an opportunity to read Mr. Fowler's open letter in its entirety, but after doing so would decide whether or not to make a formal reply.

Mr. Voorhees said that he did not wish to be brought into any controversy at this time, nor did he wish to reply offhand to the utterances of Mr. Fowler. On the contrary, he said, he would take as much time to deliberate as Mr. Fowler had before making his answer. Incidentally the State Treasurer ridiculed the idea that Speaker Cannon, Senator Kean and himself were co-conspirators in a movement against Mr. Fowler. Strange as it may seem, Mr. Voorhees said that Senator Kean had never mentioned Mr. Fowler in speaking with him.

The personal and political animosities between Senator Kean and Mr. Fowler are well known and the conversation of the State Treasurer indicated that Mr. Fowler is regarded as a "dead subject" between the two.

When asked regarding the denial of Mr. Fowler that he had said he would not again be a candidate for Congress when he secured the nomination in 1908, Mr. Voorhees said he did not know that such a statement was a matter of common knowledge. He was rather surprised last night when informed by a prominent Morris county politician that he and several others had been present when Mr. Fowler made the statement.

Mr. Voorhees disclaimed that there was any deal on foot to prevent the renomination of Mr. Fowler, declaring that it had always been the policy of the Morris county leaders to yield to the wishes of the delegates from Union county. Further than this Mr. Voorhees said he would make no further statement at this time.

"John Kean is a candidate for re-election to the United States Senate.

"All statements to the contrary are unwarranted and untrue."

So spoke Hamilton F. Kean, the senior Senator's brother, when seen by a reporter at his office, 30 Pine street, New York city, yesterday.

"Senator Kean is at Washington attending to his duties," he continued. "He has not read the Fowler letter, and I am sure that if he ever does he will not dignify it by a reply.

"The letter is so scurrilous that it furnishes its own answer. It voices the working of a turbulent and well-night disordered mind, beset by ambition and narrowed by impending defeat.

"It goes to the extreme of disreputable argument, and halts only when anger is appeased and invective is exhausted.

"In its original it must have been a masterpiece, depicting the excesses of a furious mind and unrestrained brain, but, chastened by later thought, it assumes the unaccustomed garb of respectability, which partly but not wholly, obscures the proficiency of the acknowledged champion word-scavenger of the land."

Mr. Kean says a formal statement as to his brother's candidacy will soon be issued. This statement will, however, be silent as to Congressman Fowler.

JACKSON AGAIN IN TOILS

Accused of Assaulting Patrolman Charles Anderson Last Night.

RELIGIOUS FANATICISM CAUSE.

Negro Who Served Brief Term in Jail Defies Local Police—Arrested After Struggle on Street.

After a hard fight in which a blackjack or any other arm would have proved futile in subduing an infuriated negro, William Jackson, who has had at least one taste of the prison fare in the county jail, was landed in a cell at police headquarters last evening by Patrolman Chas. Anderson. Nothing but the superior strength of the policeman prevented his strangulation by the gigantic negro. For lack of witnesses the hearing in the case this morning was adjourned until tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Jackson was arrested after a struggle by Patrolman Tobias Nolan on July 29 last year and after a trial the burly colored man was sentenced to a term of imprisonment during which it was supposed that he would be under observance of the physicians who are experts in insanity cases. For some reason which cannot now be explained Jackson served but twenty days of the sentence and was turned loose upon the community.

Last evening while Patrolman Anderson was on duty on Central avenue the negro said something which irritated the officer and practically challenged him to fight. Anderson told Jackson to be careful of what he said, but in an instant found that the colored man had seized upon the opportunity to do something and was ready for it. Gripping Anderson about the waist the negro attempted to throw him to the ground and partly succeeded and in the melee Anderson's trousers were torn and his entire uniform rendered a heap of blue rags.

Both men fell to the ground and a mighty struggle ensued. Jackson trying to bite the policeman and the latter trying to stop the assaults on his person. At this juncture Edward Britton came to the assistance of the patrolman, only to meet with resistance from Sam Bolden, a barber who has a shop on Central avenue. The barber will probably be arraigned before Judge Runyon tomorrow for interfering with an officer in the discharge of his duty.

Jackson exclaimed at the top of his voice that although he was not Jesus Christ he was just as powerful and defied the whole police department to arrest him. It is to the credit of the officer that he did not hesitate to arrest the man who openly defied his authority. It is also safe to say that a repetition of Jackson's offense will not be probable in this city.

Y. W. C. A. SECURES COOKING INSTRUCTOR.

Miss Wilson, a graduate of Teacher's College, Columbia University, as well as a writer on cooking subjects for the Woman's World and The Pictorial Review, has been secured as instructor of the cooking classes at the Young Women's Christian Association which will be inaugurated in October. Classes will be conducted on Tuesday and Wednesday in the mornings, afternoons and evenings.

Miss Wilson has had a wide experience in the work and she comes here highly recommended. Miss Wilson also gained considerable experience in other large institutions.

Miss Emma F. Egel, of Lincoln, is interested in a plan to erect a suitable chapel at Lincoln for the use of the Union Sunday school at that place. Already a considerable sum has been subscribed.

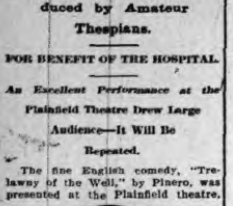
PINERO PLAY PRESENTED

Trelawny of the Wells Produced by Amateur Thespians.

FOR BENEFIT OF THE HOSPITAL.

An Excellent Performance at the Plainfield Theatre Drew Large Audience—It Will Be Repeated.

The fine English comedy, "Trelawny of the Well," by Pinero, was presented at the Plainfield theatre,



Charles H. Lyman
As Sir William Gower.

Friday night by local talent, without question it was the most pretentious undertaking in amateur circles here and by far the greatest achievement. There was not even a semblance of the amateur about the production and it was given with a finish that would do credit to a Broadway performance. The cast was so uniformly good that every member shared in the honors of the evening. There was a capacity audience and the enthusiasm displayed suprred the members of the cast to do their very best, which they certainly did in every detail.

The setting of the play was true to the story, including two handsome oil paintings and a hand-organ from the original production, loaned by Charles Frohman. Not a single detail was omitted in the costuming typical of the early sixties, the period of the play.

The whole play centers about "Rose Trelawny," the part assigned to Miss Louise Saunders and to say that she was unusually good in the role, but mildly expresses the work of this talented young woman. She scored heavily throughout the entire performance and she together with other members of the cast were repeatedly recalled at the conclusion of each act. Miss Saunders seems to have reached a point in her career that leaves nothing to be desired in her work in amateur theatricals.

MRS. HENRY C. WHITE

The part assigned to Miss Saunders in this play is that of an actress, somewhat of the gypsy type, and she is given unlimited opportunity to display a care-free spirit that was so delightful. She fitted the role perfectly. Accustomed to the life of an actress, which she inherits from her parents, nothing appeals to her but the desire to appear before the footlights.

The play opens at Mr. and Mrs. Telfer's lodgings, at No. 2 Brydon Crescent, Clerkenwell, England, in May and here surrounded by her many friends, "Rose Trelawny" is betrothed to "Arthur Gower," Fred C. Patterson. William L. Saunders is capital as "James Telfer," and while seated around the table, he gives a fine bit of acting in announcing that "Rose Trelawny" is to leave the stage and eventually become the wife of Mr. Gower. The latter tries to make a speech, but fails and sits down amid wild applause.

Miss Saunders is then called upon for a speech and she interpreted the lines so well that round after round of applause greeted her. In this first act the appearance of Judge William N. Runyon as "Tom Wrench," is made, and the audience was quick to show its appreciation. The part is so different from anything in which he has appeared before, but he scored a hit from the start. He is perfectly natural and his interpretation all that one could desire. As a playwright trying to produce plays he has his troubles. No one wants to undertake the task of backing him, but he feels sure he will succeed.

MRS. A.M ABBOTT

After the betrothal of "Rose Trelawny" to "Arthur Gower," she goes to the home of "Sir William Gower," in Cavendish Square, where she is to be received by his family. The change does not appeal to her and Rose finally invites her gypsy friends to come and see her. A merry time follows and "Sir William Gower," *Charles H. Lyman, and his house*hold are awakened to find that Rose is entertaining her friends in a way that is displeasing. He drives them from the house in a terrific thunderstorm that has been raging for some and go back to the stage, and here she is again given a fine opportunity to display her talent.

The third act finds Rose and her friends again in Brydon Crescent in December. Rose having become so cultured by her visit to Sir William Gower's house that she no longer displays her ability to act and is finally dismissed from the "Wells" theatre. This is a great disappointment to her, but the visit of Sir William Gower to her home brings about a better understanding between them. Just prior to the visit of Sir William Gower, Imogen Parrott, of the Royal Olympic, Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell appears with a proposition to produce one of Tom Wrench's plays and there is great excitement. Another disappointment is in store for it is learned that the man who is to back the production died. Sir William Gower overbearing the plans, decides to lend his aid and back the production This announcement is received with great joy by Tom Wrench.

Sir William Gower now believes that he has judged Rose wrongly and takes a liking to her, but has not quite decided whether he wants her to marry his grandson. Sir Arthur Gower, whose present whereabouts is not known.

However, it is decided to put on the play and the fourth act shows a stage rehearsal, and the climax of the play is reached. Rose is to take a leading part in the play and Tom Wrench has arranged to have Sir Arthur Gower take an important part with her, using this as a means for bringing the two lovers together.

Sir William Gower comes to the rehearsal and while there is dumbfounded when he sees his grandson walk on the stage and assume a part in the play. He learns that his grandson has been on the stage and he finally consents to his marriage to Rose, and everything ends happily.

Mr. Lyman, as Sir William Gower, is delightful in the part and he shares the honors with Rose in a way that wins the audience. He is so natural as the vice-chancellor, that one can scarcely realize that the role is being played by an amateur.

Others who scored in their several parts were Mrs. Alston M. Abbott, as "Avonia Bunn;" Alston M. Abbott, as "Ferdinand Gadd;" William L. Saunders, as "James Telfer;" Mrs. Laurens H. Van Buren, as "Mrs. Mossop," a landlady; Mrs. Henry C. White, as "Mrs. Telfer;" Miss Louise Curtis, as "Clara de Foenix;" Mrs. Harry L. McGee, as "Miss Trafalger Gower;" Laurens H. Van Buren, as "Augustus Colpoys;" Hugh S. Jarvis, as "Mr. Ablett;" a grocer; Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell, as "Imogen Parrott;" Miss Ray Hooley, as "Miss Brewster," and a maid, and William R. Cock, as a butler.

The appearance of Edward Sheldon in the play as "Mr. Mortimer," was of double interest. This noted dramatist and playwright was seen in the last act, where he is assigned a part in Tom Wrench's play, and the audience was quick to recognize him as he came on the stage. As "O'Dwyer," prompter, William T. Pelletier was capital and he convulsed the audience with his mirth-provoking lines. His identity was so concealed that scarcely anyone recognized him at first.

The play is just filled with comedy parts and is delightfully acted. It was produced under the direction of Fred C. Patterson, of New York, and under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital and for the benefit of the hospital. Those whose efforts added largely to the success of the production include Henry Crofut White, stage manager; Lemuel W. Serrell, in charge of stage settings; Mrs. Charles H. Lyman, prompter, and William L. Saunders, general manager.

The complete cast:—

Tom Wrench, William N. Runyon; Ferdinand Gadd, A. M. Abbott; James Telfer W. L. Saunders; Augustus Colpoys, Laurens H. Van Buren; Rose Trelawny, Miss Louise Saunders; Avonia Bunn, Mrs. A. M. Abbott; Mrs. Mossop, a landlady, Mrs. Laurens H. Van Buren; Imogen Parrott, of the Royal Olympic, Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell; Mrs. Telfer (Miss Violet), Mrs. Henry C. White; O'Dwyer, prompter at the Pantheon, W. T. Pelletier; Vice-Chancellor, Sir William Gower, Kt., Charles H. Lyman; Arthur Gower, Fred C. Patterson; Clara de Foenix, Miss Louise Curtis; Miss Trafalgar Gower, Mrs. Harry L. McGee; Captain de Foenix, Clara's husband, Harry L. McGee; Mr. Ablett, a grocer, Hugh S. Jarvis; Charles, a butler, W. R. Cock; Miss Brewster, maid, Miss Helen Ray Hooley; Mr. Denzil, Maxwell Evarts Perkins; Mr. Mortimer, Edward Sheldon; Mr. Hunston, William T. Gleason.

At the conclusion of the play, members of the cast were generously remembered with floral gifts by their many friends in the audience. The presentation of the flowers was reserved to the end so as not to interrupt the progress of the play. The second and last production of the play will be given tonight when another capacity audience will be present.

WANT THE FLAG HONORED

Tuesday, June 14, Will Be 133rd Anniversary of Its Adoption.

AN APPEAL IS ISSUED.

National Flag Association Makes An Address to the People Through Patriotic Societies.

The Mayor and the officers of local patriotic societies have been sent circulars by the American Flag Association, a National organiastion, calling attention to the fact that Tuesday, June 14, will be the 133d anniversary of the adoption of the Stars and Stripes as the flag of the United States. The association urges co-operation to secure the widest possible observance of the day this year.

The circular reads:

"On the 14th day of June, 1777, Congress enacted: 'That the Flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be thirteen stars, white, in a blue field, representing a new constellation.' The number of the stripes having been increased by the admission of new States, the possibilities of the Nation's future development dawned upon our fathers, and the original thirteen stripes were unchangably restored by act of Congress on April 4, 1818, when it was enacted: 'That from and after the fourth day of July next, the Flag of the United States be thirteen horizontal stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be twenty stars, white, in a blue field, and that on the admission of a new State into the Union, one star be added to the Union of the Flag; and such addition take effect on the fourth day of July next, succeeding such admission.' Since 1818 twenty-six stars or sovereign States have been added to the Union, making forty-six in all.

"The Flag has become more and more the symbol of a mighty Nation. Carried to the utmost parts of the earth, it has been thrown to the breeze proclaiming liberty, and Americans cannot fail of a feeling of pride and satisfaction, nor restrain the swelling of patriotism when we contrast the meaning, in far distant lands, of ours and other Flags displayed together.

"We respectfully appeal to the Governors of all States of our land and to the Mayor of each American city, to herald the coming and celebration of Flag Day, June 14, 1910, by proclamation; we call upon every public officer, every teacher of the youth of our land, the editors of all newspapers, the daily instructors of the youth of our land, to call public attention, to arouse enthusiasm, and to provide for public exercises and general celebration of the day.

"We earnestly exhort our citizens to join in making Flag Day an event, and its celebration in 1910 a great event. Let us, from one end of our land to the other, fling the Stars and Stripes to the breeze on June 14, 1910. May it greet the rising and salute the setting sun, and float all day long from every church edifice, school and building, public and private and however humble, throughout the entire land."

The association suggests the following program for the salute to the flag in the public schools:

"At a given hour in the morning, the pupils are assembled and in their places in the school. A signal is given by the principal of the school. Every pupil rises in his place. The flag is brought forward to the principal or teacher. While it is being brought forward from the door to the stand of the principal or teacher, every pupil gives the flag the military salute, which is as follows:

"The right hand uplifted, palm upward, to a line with the forehead close to it. While thus standing with palm upward and in the attitude of salute, all the pupils repeat together slowly and distinctly the following pledge:

"'I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the Republic for which it stands,

"'One nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.'

"At the words, as pronounced in this pledge, 'To my flag,' each one extends the right hand gracefully, palm upward, toward the flag until the end of the pledge affirmation. Then all hands drop to the side. The pupils, still standing, all sing together in unison the son 'America' —'My Country 'Tis of Thee.'

"In the primary departments, where the children are very small, they are taught to repeat this instead of the pledge as given for the older children:

"'I give my head and my heart to God and my country,
One country, one language, one flag.'

"In some schools the salute is given in silence, as an act of reverence, unaccompanied by any pledge. At a signal, as the flag reaches its station, the right hand is raised, palm downward, to a horizontal position against the forehead, and held there until the flag is dipped and returned to a vertical position. Then at the second signal the hand is dropped to the side and the pupil takes his seat.

"The silent salute conforms very closely to the military and naval salute to the flag.

"Principals may adopt the 'silent salute' for a daily exercise and the 'pledge salute' for special occasions."

EMPLOYES GET DAMAGES

Three Verdicts Against S. W. Rushmore Under Ackerman Liability Law.

FOR INJURIES AT THE PLANT.

Total Amount Awarded by Jury $5,186—C. A. Marsh Counsel for Plaintiffs—An Appeal To Be Taken.

The trial of the damage suits which terminated at Elizabeth Thursday in verdicts against S. W. Rushmore for $5,186, was remarkable in two respects. Three cases, the plaintiffs being Jim Di Nizio, Michael Topack and John Tobin, were tried together at the same time and by the same jury, and the suits were brought under the Ackerman Employers' Liability act.

The accident, as reported in The Daily Press at the time, occurred October 9 last in the Rushmore Dynamo Works. It was caused by an explosion of a gas producer or the water top which is the cover of the producer, and resulted in flame and gas being blown about the faces, hands and forearms of the three men who were engaged in cleaning the furnace of the producer. The three men were taken to Muhlenberg Hospital. Most of the skin of their faces, ears, hands, wrists and arms where burned sloughed off and and new skin formed, leaving a few scars on their faces and ears and considerable discoloration on the skin of the hands and wrists.

Each of the three men retained Craig A. Marsh. Mr. Rushmore retained Vredenburgh, Wall and Van Winkle, of Jersey City. The trial occupied three days before Judge Vail. The questions in the case were whether Mr. Rushmore had exercised proper care to provide a safe place for the men to work in and a reasonably safe gas producer; whether he or his superintendent failed to ex*ercise proper care in keeping the* aparatus inspected; whether the men were guilty of contributory negligence, were injured in consequence of an obvious risk which they assumed when they accepted their employment, and whether it was an inevitable accident for which no one was liable. There was the usual conflict of evidence. It was shown that Mr. Rushmore had paid the men eight or nine weeks' wages after the accident and had paid their hospital bills, he claiming all the while that he was not liable and was acting from motives of kindness to his men.

The main difference made by the Employers' Liability act in these cases was that the defendant would be liable even if the negligence proven was that of defendant's representative, who had the duty of seeing that the plant was kept in proper condition, whereas under the old law, the doctrine of fellow servant; might defeat the plaintiff in that case.

The jury listened intently to the arguments of counsel and the court's charge, apparently realizing that retiring rendered verdicts in favor of the plaintiffs in all three cases, giving Topack, $1,130; Tobin, $2,000 and De Nizio, $2,056.

VINCENT BARKLEW.

Plainfield, July 28, 1835.

ISAAC COLE, Printer, near Plainfield, N. J.

In July, 1835, there were circulated around the then village of Plainfield and vicinity posters, of which the above is a facsmile, notifying the public of a new stage line from Plainfield to New York by the way of Elizabeth Town Point. The route of the line was from Plainfield to Scotch Plains, to Westfield, to then called Elizabethtown, there were no intervening villages between Westfield and Elizabehtown. The headquarters for the stage line in Plainfield was at the corner of Front and Somerset street now occupied by Gloeckner's saloon.

Plainfield at that time contained about one thousand inhabitants and places of worship as follows: one *Baptist, one Methodist, one Presby*terian and two Friends' meeting houses. There were also two seminaries and one academy. The academy was located on the spot now occupied by Leal's Schoool. The building was partially burned in the year 1835, what remained of the building was moved across the street; was built over and is now two small stores.

There are now over thirty-five places for worship in the city and borough. Between Scotch Plains and Sebring's Mills there was one bridge that crossed Green Brook and that was the stone arched bridge at Somerset street. At the present time there are over fifteen iron and cement bridges crossing the same stream.

Plainfield contained two hotels, and a third hotel was opened about 1839 on the corner of Main street and Uncle Reuben Ayers' lane, now corner of Front street and Park avenue. It was operated by John Ayers and was called the Railroad Hotel. Reuben Ayers' lane ended at Second street before the railroad entered the village. The stage line was in operation about three and one-half years until the Elizabethtown and Somerville Railroad entered Plain*field on Thanksgiving day in the* year 1838. L. E. B.

Offers have been made to Mr. Muir who was assistant city editor of The Daily Press when he was stricken blind a year ago, by prominent vaudeville booking houses. He has been asked to appear at Elizabeth, Perth Amboy, Jersey City and Trenton. His plans, however, will prevent his acceptance for the present at least.

All good Elks are requested to meet at their hall at 7:30 on Monday night.

Assistant Cashier Resigns.

Frank Rowley, the druggist, who has been assistant cashier at the Borough National Bank since its organization, has asked the Board of Directors to relieve him of the duties that he may devote his whole time to his drug business. As soon as a successor to Mr. Rowley can be secured his wish will be granted. DUTCH ARMS ENTERTAINED BY LITCHFIELD TRIO

*The Neil Litchfield Trio entertain*ed the members and women friends of the Dutch Arms in Trinity Reformed Sunday school room Friday night and those present will remember with pleasure their two hours of enjoyment. Mr. Litchfield's monologue was a source of continued merriment, but with his wife and daughter, Miss Florence Litchfield, added, the combination is irresistible.

Mrs. Litchfield performed wonders with the violin, the most striking feature being the story of the "Volunteer Organist.' In telling this exceptional tale Mrs. Litchfield imitated the organ chords of "Nearer My God to Thee" with the four strings of her instrument. The story was well told and the music charming.

Mr. Litchfield among other things recited Rudyard Kipling's "Gong Djeen" and did it well. His monologue and the recitation of "The Old Red Cradle" together with some clever impersonations occupied two hours, every minute of which was enjoyed.

The Litchfield Trio were obtained through the efforts of Harvey Thorn, who unfortunately could not be present to hear them. The members entertained their friends after the exit of the professional people and a general social time was had.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 29, 1910.

Topic—Is ours a Christian nation?—Ps. xxxiii, 8-22. Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The only answer that can be given to the question "Is the United States of America a Christian nation?" is that it is. To say that a nation is a Christian nation does not mean that every citizen of that country is a Christian, nor does it mean that there are no adherents of other religions within its bounds. The Chinese empire is Confucian, so far as religion is concerned, but multitudes of its people are not followers of Confucius, but are Buddhists, Brahmans and Christians. So it is to a greater or less extent with all nations. But the United States in numbers, in the character of its government, in its history and development, is by far more Christian than China is Confucian or India is Brahman. It is more distinctively of one particular religion (Christianity) than perhaps any other nation in the world.

1. Numerically our nation is a Christian nation. The recent religious census gives the total membership of Christian churches as about 33,000,000. But actual membership in the Christian church does not begin to include the entire number of our people who are Christians in heart and in belief. Every actual church member represents on an average between one and two who are Christians in preference to any other religion, so that within a few millions of our population, and they representing unbelief rather than faith in any other religion, all the people are professors or advocates of Christianity. No other religion has any numerical hold upon our nation.

2. Our nation, from a historical standpoint, always has been Christian. Christian people established our nation, fled them here from tyranny and persecution abroad. In all their struggles and dangers they put their trust in God, and He blessed and helped them. In all great national crises we have depended upon the God of Christianity. Moreover, today, in peace as in time of war, in quiet as in storm, our nation goes steadily on advancing in Christian civilization.

3. In the basic principles of her government our nation is Christian. God's name may not be written in the constitution of the United States, but it is plainly written in the character of that immortal document. If not written in the constitution it is stamped upon our coins, and when a popular president decided to omit the motto "In God We Trust" the people demanded its restoration, and it was restored. None but a Christian nation would have taken such a vigorous position and compelled its opinion to be regarded. The laws of our states are practically Christian as well as the vast majority of our officeholders. No atheist could be elected to any important office in our land. Robert G. Ingersoll was once under consideration as a candidate for governor of New York, but his party dared not nominate him because of his agnosticism. Some time later he sarcastically asked, "What good has Christianity ever done anyway?" A clever elderly lady at once replied, "It kept Robert Ingersoll from being governor of New York." That was a great good at least.

4. The attitude of our nation toward foreign missions demonstrates that it is Christian. This nation surpasses all other Christian nations in its foreign mission benevolence and activities. America is looked upon by the world as the greatest force for the evangelization of the heathen nations. "Evangelize America and through America the world" is a common slogan. Let us speed the day when America shall be absolutely Christian. Let every Endeavorer be a good citizen and not neglect to avoid the duties of citizenship. Let not extent of territory, the fast increase and possession of wealth, the advance of commercialism, be the basis of the proud exclamation "I am an American," but rather let it be the increasingly assured fact that this is a nation "whose God is the Lord" and ours a "people whom He hath chosen for His inheritance."

BIBLE READINGS.

Mark ii, 1-5; Ps. ii, 18; cxlvii, 20; Prov. xiv, 34; Matt. xvii, 24-27; xxii, 15-21; Rom. ix, 1-5; x, 1-4; xiii, 1; I Tim. ii, 1-3; Heb. xi, 8-16.

Value of New Schemes.

The "model Endeavorer" will not be afraid to start new schemes. Christian Endeavor from its beginning has been a series of new starts and new schemes. Its religious and secular life are so interwoven that you never know what a new plan will accomplish. Some Endeavorers took possession of the pastor's study while he was away on his vacation and completely renovated it, putting in a new carpet, desk and chairs. Of course the pastor preached better after his return. The young people were interested in the place where the sermons were prepared and, of course, in the sermons themselves, and the final result was a revival. New work springs from new work.

A Voice From Galatia.

After nearly fourteen years of waiting the school and church building at Yozgat, in Galatia, Turkey in Asia, were erected a short time ago. The leader in this work is Rev. G. H. Krikorian, the Armenian Christian Endeavor pioneer, to whom many years ago published in Turkey Christian Endeavor literature which was suppressed by the timid authorities. Many young people's societies contributed to Mr. Krikorian's enterprise, and the American board kept the funds until the recent change in the Turkish empire made building possible.

SECOND BASEMEN ARE HARD HITTERS

Second basemen have been the best average batters in the big leagues for more than a decade. It is the popular belief that the outfielders are the sluggers. So they are in many cases, but there are three fielding jobs to one second base position.

Take almost any squad and you will generally find the second baseman as high a hitter as any two of the gardeners, and in some instances better than all three. This has come to be such a uniform fact that all keystone players are falling into line.

One of the greatest batters of the last ten years is Nap Lajoie, of Cleveland. When he was with the National league, he was renowned as a slugger and the same is true since he has joined Cleveland. He probably is the best known of the hard-hitting second basemen, having led the batters in certain years.

It seems that the better a fielding second baseman the man is the better hitter he is. Johnny Evers, of the Cubs, ranks among the leaders of the former world champions. He has hit well over .300, and always is feared by the opposing pitcher. For a slight chap, he is a demon batter.

Take Collins, of the Athletics. He was one of the sensations of the last season, both in hitting and in fielding. He is one of the latest examples of the rule, and a fine one to boot. He gives promise of even greater things. Then there is Delehanty, of the Detroit Tigers.

It was in a large measure due to his work toward the tag end of the season that the Detroits copped the American League pennant. His batting and fielding boosted the stock of the Michigan bunch. When he was the star batter with Johnson, the pitcher, they formed the best pair the Nationals possessed.

Speaking of Delehanty, who was formerly with Washington, brings to mind the fact that there are other St. Louis players who have been or are now with the Browns or Cardinals, who illustrate the fact that second sackers are usually handy with the stick. The latest example would be Byrne, of the Cardinals, who have secured Miller Huggins from the Cincinnatis.
